Dear Colleen,
We are pleased to know that Mennonite Church USA has received a grant to digitize the print files of Gospel Herald and The Mennonite.

You have our full permission to digitize all issues of The Mennonite and make them available for free, with full-text access.

Best wishes in this important endeavor.

Sincerely,

Rather than give up their beliefs, our ancestors gave up their lives. The above picture taken from the Martyrs' Mirror, 1938, shows Leonhard Keyser, a Bavarian martyr, on the way to execution, 1527. In those days they won the sympathy of many of the common people, but were persecuted by the governments. Today our government shows us much mercy. But have we by our lives won the esteem of many of the common people?

"THINGS HONEST . . ."

In a recent Sunday school lesson we were exhorted to "Provide things honest in the sight of all men." Paul asks us to be very sincere and consistent in our beliefs and conduct, so that others who disagree with us will have to accept us as genuine. This is a big challenge to us as a peculiar people in these days. A federal hearing officer who was to test certain C.O.'s stated in his introduction that his task was to ascertain the sincerity and consistency of the men in question. Most of us would have expected him to mention the word "sincerity," but he included "consistency." Our total behaviour must be consistent. It is not enough to try to be sincere in one great belief.

In 1943, as the bombers drone, machine guns rattle, and tanks plunge forward, the people at home will heave and push behind the great war effort. Taxes will be higher, the material things of life will be scarcer, and casualty lists will continue to come in. Man will turn a searching eye upon his fellow man to note his behaviour. What if he finds insincerity and, above all, inconsistency?

As Christians we are to be Christians through and through. Our earliest ancestors in Switzerland, Germany, and Holland were so. Note in the following quotations what manner of Christians they were:

Heinrich Bullinger, the successor of Zwingli, in Zurich, and a bitter opponent of the early Swiss Brethren said of them:

> Those who united with them were by their ministers received into their church by rebaptism unto repentance and newness of life. They henceforth led their lives under a semblance of a quite spiritual conduct. They denounced (in Christian professors) covetousness, pride, profanity, the lewd conversation and immorality of the world, drinking and gluttony.

In another book he had to admit that "the people are running after them as though they were the living saints."

A historian, who was an opponent of our faith, wrote scarcely seven years after the beginning of it:

> They soon gained a large following, and baptized many thousands, drawing to themselves many sincere souls who had a zeal for God. For they taught nothing but love, faith, and the need of bearing the cross. They showed themselves humble, patient under much suffering; they brake the bread with one another as an evidence of unity and love. They helped each other faithfully and called each other brothers.

A Roman Catholic theologian, in a book entitled, Against the Terrible Errors of the Anabaptists, says:

> Among the existing heretical sects there is none which in appearance leads a more modest, better, or more pious life than the Anabaptists. As concerns their outward public life they are irreproachable. No lying, deception, swearing, strife, harsh language, no intemperate eating and drinking, no outward personal display is found or discernible among them, but humility, patience, uprightness, meekness, honesty, temperance straight forwardness in such measure that one would suppose that they have the Holy Spirit of God.

Another Roman Catholic author wrote concerning the Hutterian Brethren:

> They call each other brethren and sisters, they use no profanity nor harsh speech, they do not swear, they do not use weapons, and in the beginning they did not even carry knives. They are not intemperate in eating and drinking, they do not wear apparel which indicates wordly show. They do not go to law before the magistrates; they bear everything in patience, as they pretend, and in the Holy Ghost.

A Reformed historian wrote in 1720 about the Mennonites of the lower countries:

> Their external life and walk are, as is generally known, highly praised by many, and it is verily true that through their good life they attract much attention. They are very friendly and unassuming toward all people. When others owe them money, they will settle in some way rather than go to law. One does not hear of them that they use profanity or swearing, or that they quarrel among themselves. And whatever occasion demands, they show a zeal against all immorality.

Wolfgang Capito, Zwinglian reformer of Strasburg, wrote in 1527 concerning the Swiss Brethren:

> I frankly confess that in most Anabaptists there is in evidence piety and consecration and indeed a zeal which is beyond a suspicion of insincerity. For what earthly advantage could they hope to win by enduring exile, torture, and unspeakable punishment of the flesh? I testify before God that I cannot say that on account of a lack of wisdom they are somewhat indifferent toward earthly things, but rather from divine motives.

Thus did opponents and enemies of our faith look upon our ancestors when their Christian life was warm and full. Can we expect similar statements from those who are our opponents today?

As we face the difficult year of 1943, we can, perhaps, look for no better way of providing "things honest in the sight of all men" than the example of our ancestors. May the "faith of our fathers" take on a new significance in the time of tribulation.—rw.

"THAT'S GREAT"

On January 10, 1943, three years will have passed since a body of men—the late Brother E. L. Harshbarger among them—from the peace churches came before President Roosevelt. They laid before the President their concern for a satisfactory program for conscientious objectors. In the half hour conference they also outlined to him "a detailed plan of action in case of national crisis." The President's reaction to this definite plan was, "That's great, I'm glad you have done it. This is getting it down to a practical basis. It shows us what types of service the conscientious objector will do without fighting. Excellent. Excellent."

This definite plan that was presented to the President has developed into the present Civilian Public Service program. (Source: The Mennonite, January 23, 1940)

1943 THIS YEAR 1943

ARISE! SHINE!

ONLY A FEW BRIEF days separate New Year from Christmas. Should anyone ask us to diagram on paper our thought (or shall I say "feeling") concerning New Year, what a variety of Pictures there would be!

To me, looking back across the years, life stretches a road through long valleys and heights. Each Christmas forms a height; each valley is a year. In every valley's lowland stands the Cross, deep bedded in the soil from which it rises graceful, lofty—spreading its arms far across the valley in prayer for its souls, rising upward still to touch the dome of Heaven that there may be a way to enter in.

Before descending down into the valley of this New Year, let us pause one moment yet upon the height of Christmas passing so quickly from us.

Christmas is a season of light. Christmas and light cannot be separated. They are more than comrades—they are one in essence. Light is Christmas. Christmas is light. Heaven's Light was sent to earth to lighten every man. This act imposed upon the heart of earth so transcending all finite conception, has become to us our Christmas. Though we cannot comprehend the love of God as it manifests itself in its fullness through the gift of the Son, we can yet come as came the Shepherds and receive the Light as Heaven gives to us the understanding for it.

Because the birth of the Babe of Light was with outward manifestations of light, we still build up for ourselves a "Halo of light" about each Christmas day. Too soon, however, we forget that "the glory of the Lord" which fell upon the Shepherds on that night, faded again into darkness; the song of the angels died away in the distance and the star shone only until its mission was fullfilled, but the Light!—The Light remained!

And I? What have I left if, like on that first Christmas night, my "halo" which I have created about the manger passes away? What have I left when I must put out the candles and lay away the glittering, shimmering things that spread a glory all round? If "the true Light which lighteth every man" came in all and through all to my soul, the Light of Christmas will remain to bless me through the year.

If! . . . This if makes all the difference in the dawning of a New Year's day for the valley of another year lies spread before each pilgrim in its dark uncertainties. If I have the Light within, I shall descend into the darkness unafraid for the Light shall illuminate the way through the valley's changing scenes.

If! . . . O should my soul, by grace, have received into its chambers the illumination of the Christ in the holy season just passed; should the desire for the Light have been strong enough within my breast to lead me as it led the Shepherds and the Wise men for from that which filled thoughts and hands on other days; should I have knelt before Him, worshipped Him and received Him in joy and gratitude—then shall my soul as it descends into the valley of the New Year, not only be alight with Light but it shall throb with the Spirit. I shall go traveling through the year, through its highlands, through its lowlands, praising and glorifying God as once the Shepherds and the Wise men traveled through Judea's rugged lands.

To praise, to glorify God, is to let the Light shine forth. The Light is not given to us for our own soul's warmth and joy alone, but it is given to be shed abroad into earth's darkness. Is there darkness? Futile question! We know there is—thick darkness, deep and sullen.

As we leave the Light of Christmas and descend into the valley of another year, may the Voice of the Almighty shake our very being as it speaks again.

"Arise! Shine! For thy Light is come." —Joanna S. Andres

—Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio: Sunday, December 20, was a full day for some of our young people and also for the pastor, Rev. A. C. Schultz. At two o'clock in the afternoon was the broadcast of the young people. This time the mixed chorus gave a half hour program of Christmas carols. This is a weekly program over W F I N, Findlay. The regular time for this broadcast is four o'clock. In a very impressive ceremony took place the wedding of one of our sons, Howard Amstutz and Meta Sorenson of Sidney, Montana. The wedding took place at four o'clock and was an open church wedding. Both parties are graduates of the Moody Bible Institute. In the evening the Bluffton College Choral Society gave its fortieth rendition of Handel's "Messiah." A few of our peole took part in this.

—Civilian Bond sales as of December 17 were $602,050. Of this amount $505,800 was subscribed to by Mennonites.

C.P.S. Camp briefs: On December 10, 1942, a total of 5,302 boys were in Civilian Service. Of this number about 40 per cent were Mennonites. Men in C.P.S. camps have given over six hundred dollars to the war sufferers' relief fund of the M.C.C. This money came through Sunday Schools or from occasional fasts for this cause. C.P.S. Camp, No. 60 at Lapine, Oregon, has been opened by the M.C.C. A carload of boys from Denison, Iowa and Weeping Water, Nebraska, together with a carload from the Fort Collins and Colorado Springs camps in Colorado, and the Hill City camp in South Dakota comprise the personnel of the new camp. The camp's work is under the Bureau of Reclamation. Brother Rufus Franz and Jacob Goering are director and assistant director respectively. Brother Arthur money came through Sunday Schools or from oc- Wiebe is dietitian, and Sister Mary Duerksen is nurse-matron.

—Brother A. S. Bechtel, Hanston, Kansas, writes, "The blizzard of last Saturday night, December 26, disrupted the church service schedules out this way. It is nothing new for us to miss out when mud or snow come along. . .It seemed strange not to have The Mennonite come last week. We eagerly look for it and usually read the "jottings" first of all. That is where we get the church news mostly. It will be interesting to learn about the filling of the present existing vacacies in pulpits. There are quite a number of them, I believe—Second Mennonite, Beatrice; Bethel College; Eicher, Noble, Iowa; Wayland, Iowa; Kingman, Kansas. (There are a number of others in addition to the ones mentioned.)

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: This church is observing the annual week of prayer, January 3-10. " 'Objectors Risk Death For U.S.' This is the headline of the Des Moines Sunday Register of December 13. Under it is an article on the C.P.S. Camp at Denison, Iowa, telling of its work in a very commendable way and announcing that some of the boys had volunteered to be subjects in medical experiments at the University of Illinois. The article also includes quite a number of pictures of the camp. One picture features Willard Friesen, one of our members, making a lamp for a Christmas present. This article is a gratifying recognition of the fact that these boys are far from being cowards but are willing to serve their God and country by laying down life if need be so long as they may be true to their conscience." (Could someone send a copy of this paper to The Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas?)

—Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas: Approximately 90 pounds of dressed chicken and 60 pounds of cookies and coffee were sent to C.P.S. camps for Christmas. "The pastor (J. E. Kaufman) served the Bethel Mennonite Church, Waka, Texas, with baptismal and communion services on December 6."

—East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa. "Although people slander these boys (C. O.), yet we are glad that this our 'Free America' still recognizes their convictions. Let us remember that America is the land of the free. Freedom of conscience is one thing that we can still enjoy." "The C.P.S. offering amounted to approximately $70. You are doing splendidly in supporting this work. Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Unruh are interested in an undenominational church in southern Illinois. Mr. Unruh may be a candidate for the church. The Ladies Aid is planning to send some good used clothing to the Napier Church, where Rev. and Mrs. George Gregor are ministering."

—For the church bulletin: "The M.C.C. has ascertained that about fifty cents per month or $1.50 for the next three months, December 1, 1942, to March 1, 1943, will be required per member to meet all C.P.S. camps expenses."

—West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kan.: The church sent 115 pounds of clothing to Akron for relief. From the bulletin, "Let us do what we can in the matter of buying government civilian bonds. By doing this we may show our loyalty and appreciation for our government."

—The Missionary News and Notes, a monthly paper published by the Women's Missionary Association of the General Conference and edited by Mrs. R. A. Goerz, has a subscriber's list of 6,285. Mrs. Gerhard Friesen has charge of the German department in the paper.

—Churches which have adopted the 100 per cent subscription plan for either The Mennonite or the Bundesbote are: Tabor Mennonite, Goessel, Kansas; Goessel Mennonite, Goessel Kansas; West Zion Mennonite, Moundridge, Kansas; Zion Mennonite, Elbing, Kansas, First Mennonite, Newton, Kansas; First Mennonite, Beatrice, Nebraska; Second Mennite, Beatrice, Nebraska; First Mennonite, Hillsboro, Kansas; Alberta Community, Portland, Oregon; Menno Mennonite, Lind, Washington; Bible Mission, Chicago, Illinois; and the Wisner Mennonite, Wisner, Nebraska. MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE LORD'S ACRE

There are many rural church young people's groups which are very inactive except for the stated meetings for worship and discussion at regular intervals on Sunday afternoon or evening. There are many deeds of Christian service which such groups could render if they had the vision and the enthusiasm.

What Has Been Done

In looking around one finds most interesting illustrations of such service projects that have been carried on by zealous young people who wish to go a step beyond discussing their Christian faith. The young people of the Second Mennonite Church at Beatrice, Nebraska, started with three interested members to meet with their minister once a week to discuss ways of strengthening and demonstrating their Christian testimony. The group grew to a size of forty members including young people from the Church of the Brethren, the Christian and the Methodists. Out of their discussions and devotional life came the decision to help a needy family repaint and repair its house.

Another illustration of an effective church young people's project is found among a group of Mennonite young men from Michigan. One evening in the spring of 1938 while this youth group was seated around the kitchen table of one of their farm homes they decided to organize the Huron Missionary Farm Club. It was a cooperative endeavor to raise funds to support various missionary causes. The project called for the rental of two acres of land from one of the farmers to raise sugar beets. Ten young men ranging in ages from sixteen to twenty-one, planted, thinned, hoed and harvested the beets. The job required over 150 man-hours of labor besides the teams and tractors required for the work. A net sum of over one hundred dollars was realized from this venture. The plan was continued and expanded in following years. The money was used to support a mission in Flint, Michigan.

What Needs to Be Done

Everywhere and always there is need for help. Christians should be be alert to these needs and ready to respond with material help as well as with sympathy and prayers. Today all true Christians will want to give and share sacrificially. A sad and impoverished world needs the healing hand of God. We who profess to be His followers and disciples must spread His love and help. In addition to the established activities of the church such as educational institutions and missions there are demands today for funds and service for reconstruction and peace. Among the Historic Peace Churches the need for support of C.P.S. camps is great. We must meet our quota. We dare not fail. The Mennonite Church is on trial. If we fail her today it will be too late tomorrow.

Mennonite Young People ought everywhere to act unitedly toward meeting the needs of the hour. Why not follow in the footsteps of others in appropriating an acre or two or five as "God's Acre" and using the project or its equivalent in cash for the support of God's work? This kind of project would be more fun than work if entered into with a wholehearted Christian spirit. A few hours a week by eight or ten young people could do great things for God and their fellowmen in the time of need.

congratulated for promoting in such a manner this part of the educational work of our conference.

—In a letter to the churches of the Northern District, A. W. Friesen, Chairman of the Peace Committee, calls attention to two articles. The first, "Another Problem" in The Mennonite of December 8. Secondly, "Britain's Volunteer Guinea Pigs" in Reader's Digest of January, 1943.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa., The First and Second churches recently sent 210 pounds of clothing for relief. The First Church divided its White Gift into three parts for C.P.S. camps, nurse at the home for the aged, and for the Spiritual Council for Relief.

—Watch Night Service—A four-hour watch night service was conducted in Memorial Hall at Bethel College on New Year's Eve. About sixty friends were present. The old year slipped out and the new year was ushered in while all those present were kneeling in prayer. Earlier in the evening, games, refreshments, hymn-singing, and a candlelight and resolution ceremony were held.

—The Bethel College Faculty New Year's Retreat was held in Memorial Hall on Sunday afternoon, January 3. These services, held regularly for several years, have been sources of great spiritual blessing. With the thought that it is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness, Bethel College seeks the prayerful concern of its friends during its current efforts to keep "the bushel off the candle."

—The Intermediate C. E. society of the West Zion Church, Moundridge, Kansas, had a social on the evening of December 31, followed by a watchnight program.

—The C. E. Society of the Salem Church, Dalton, Ohio, had its December social in the form of a banquet. The social committee sold tickets for the price of thirty-five cents.

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, Calif., has five organized societies, Junior, Junior-Intermediate, Intermediate, Young People, and Adult. They number approximately 140. Except for the summer months when the young people's groups are combined, each society carries on its own program.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbert A. Regier, Los Angeles, California

JANUARY 9—"When thou prayest," Matt. 6:6a.

The Lord Jesus is taking it for granted that every child of His is going to pray, for He says, "When thou prayest." But every Christian that is really spending time with his Lord has long ago discovered that it is one of the hardest things to do, for to pray means to take time, and it seems so often that we have time for every thing else but prayer. It has been said, "Our laziness after God is our crying sin. No man gets God who does not follow hard after Him, and no soul follows hard after God who is not after Him in early morn."

JANUARY 10—"Enter into thy closet," Matt. 6:6a.

The Lord Jesus, being the man of prayer that He was, knew all to well of the battles the praying Christian faces. The demands of the new day never seem so pressing as they do when we fall upon our knees before God——Oh, the voices that then make their bid for a hearing. You must, therefore, shut yourself in with God and Him alone. How we need to learn to remain on our faces before Him until we, through His strength, have overcome every barrier, and thus are able to say, "I met the Lord!"

JANUARY 11—"And when thou hast shut thy door," Matt. 6:6c.

The "Family Altar" is one of the greatest needs of the American home. But in all its importance, it can never replace that time in which the individual is alone with God. "And when thou hast shut thy door!" That calls for special training of the mind. It is possible to shut the door of our room and have our mind still far removed from God. God, however, can hear only the prayer of the one whose mind is wholly stayed on Him. We need to give heed to the word of Paul in Col. 3:2, R.V., "Set your mind on the things that are above, not the things that are upon the earth."

JANUARY 12—"Pray to thy Father which is in secret," Matt. 6:6d.

We need to enter into a new recognition of the fact that when we pray we are to be actually speaking with God. For in prayer there are only two involved, God and you. Notice the prayer life of Daniel, (Dan. 9:3, 17) "And I set my face unto the Lord God. . . . Now therefore, O our God hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake." He enters God's presence. He lays his case before God, and when he is through praying, God knows the thing that He desires, for he prayed not for the ears of man to hear, but that God might hear and answer.

JANUARY 13—"And thy Father which is in secret shall reward thee openly," Matt. 6:6e.

It is impossible to over-emphasize the need for that quiet waiting upon God in the secret place. One reason why so many of God's children do not make more progress in their Christian life is because they are not at ease when they are alone with God. As a result they are left without a testimony in the presence of others. Oh, how much is missed by not being more with Him! But having been hid away with Him, He will see to it that we shall be rewarded openly. That does not necessarily mean that it will take place in this life—perhaps, we must wait until we stand before Him! But our Lord will not forget. Note I Cor. 15:58.

JANUARY 14—"Thou wilt keep him in perfect peace, whose mind is stayed on thee: because he trusteth in Thee," Isa. 26:3.

What a challenging trust when all about us we are constantly witnessing the very opposite in the lives of those who know not Him, whom to know is life eternal. The child of God knows that he is at peace with God, because Romans 5:1 says, "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ," He is at rest, for Phil. 4:7 says, "And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus." May our minds therefore be constantly stayed on Him.

JANUARY 15—"Then the Lord . . . touched my mouth," Jer. 1:9.

How often things would be different in the relationship of man with man, if we as God's children would, as did Jeremiah, wait for the touch of God's hand upon our lips. So often we are guilty of the thing James warns against when he said, "Out of the same mouth proceedeth blessing and cursing. My brethren, these things ought not so to be." Let our constant prayer be, "Set a watch, O Lord, before my mouth; keep the door of my lips," Ps. 141:3.

JANUARY 16—"I press toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus," Phil. 3:14.

So many in our day live as though they have done God a tremendous favor by receiving Jesus Christ. They seem to forget that the acceptance of Christ is but the beginning of the Christian life. Paul made the Christian's walk his constant concern, for listen to I Cor. 9:26-27, "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly: so fight I, not as one that beateth the air: but I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection: lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway," May Wesley's prayer also be our prayer, "Lord, let me not live to be useless."

PRISONERS OF WAR

By Marie J. Regier

Received Into a Catholic Mission

About five o'clock we arrived in Hsin Hsiang. We wondered where we would stay for the night. To our surprise and delight the truck stopped in front of the Catholic Mission. We were very cordially received and given the best of treatment. Though plain and not very large, the room is clean. We have a room to ourselves and we get splendid food, something of a German flavor. While there are some twelve Catholic priests and one Catholic sister interned here, there are also a German sister and two Chinese ones here. They can take care of us, and the German sister is free to come and go as she pleases. There is also a German Catholic Father who can come at will and do things for us.

We may not leave the compound, but we can walk around outside. There is also a roof garden where we can walk and have a look over the whole place. We have roll-call each morning and each night. We eat at nine (old time eight), at one, and five-thirty. And just now we found out that we also get tea. . . . We do not know how long we are going to stay here. In Kai Chou we were told that we were supposed to go on to Peking from here, but here they had not been told; so I do not know.

Dec. 12—Yesterday morning when we came down for roll-call, I noticed that no one said anything. Later in the morning when we met up on the roof garden, everyone greeted us very friendly; then Father ———— said, "You must think we were very glum this morning. No one greeted you, but it is one of our regulations that we have our morning meditations, and we do not speak to anyone until after we have eaten." So I thought here was my chance. I asked whether sometime we might join them in their worship service. "Why yes," the father said, "we would be glad to have you. I did not mention it before because—well you know one sometimes doesn't quite know about those things, but since you mention it—also any time you would like to go into the little chapel you are welcome." It is a lovely little chapel with a Chinese note in it. The little "ting" which contains the crucifix is Chinese—both in its architecture and its coloring. Also the flowers which decorate it are Chinese paper flowers. The red of the benches also is Chinese red. About three o'clock in the afternoon the Father called me to tell me that there would be a little vesper service in about five minutes if I cared to attend. It was all singing or chanting, mostly singing. I loved it.

Ein Advents Lied

Dec. 17—Each morning we sing, "Ein Advents Lied aus dem Gesangbuch mit Noten." Would that the world sang them! It seems so depressing to think that practically the whole world is now enmeshed in this terrible war. One feels like saying with the prophets of old, "Oh Lord we have sinned. Our sins have brought this upon us. Lord have mercy upon us and forgive us all our transgressions." What infinite patience God has with us poor human beings to have stood us so long. What love to still go on with us!

There are short vesper services every day now until Christmas.

Back to Kai Chow

Dec. 31—This morning we started out trying to get ready to go. We went up and down the streets a lot piling up rickshaw fees, before we finally had a traveling permit and had made a trip to the bus station only to be reaffirmed that the bus did not go until January 3. Then we found a big box at the officers' station which had been sent us from Kai Chou. This takes us back to Christmas eve. A few days before we had written a letter to the officer in Kaifeng asking if we might not be sent home where we had our belongings. Some of the officials came and told us that this letter could not be sent. We could not go, but they would bring out any things we wanted. So we wrote down lists of things we wanted. Thus far nothing had come, and we hoped that now since we were going home it would not come. But here it came after all. But as much as we can see it seems to be mostly old letters and papers. Eventually we got in touch with the interpreter, and he was willing that we go with him. But he was delayed today because two of the wounded had died, and there had to be different matters attended to.

A Night in a Japanese Hotel

So we are spending the night in a Japanese hotel. We sit on the floor on cushions on a matcovered floor. My typewriter is on a little low table. Near us is a charcoal stove which keeps us comfortably warm. In one corner is sort of an altar with two round loaves of bread—evidently a little shrine. A pretty Japanese girl had been serving us tea, tending to the fire and bringing us clean nightgowns and padded kimonos.

We spent Christmas differently than we have ever spent it before, and now we spend the last day in the year differently than we have ever spent it before. Tomorrow we expect to go back sure, though we are prepared not to find our home as we left it. However "Bis hierher hat der Herr geholfen"; er wird auch weiter helfen. We will perhaps have to arrange our manner of living differently after we get back in order to make our dollars reach as far as possible.

Addition to my Diary—April 28, 1942

Last fall one time I went into the city with one of the Bible women to visit in the homes of Christians. We visited a mother whose hand had a terrible boil on it. She couldn't even be up, it was so bad. Her daughter and husband were living with her. The husband had been able to get a job in the city. The couple had formerly been quite happy, but now the man had taken to smoking opium, and the young woman was just at wit's ends. She had been interested in the gospel, had attended instruction classes once. Her mother was a Christian. But now one evening she brought two ropes and suggested to her mother that they both hang themselves. But the mother said, "No, that would not be right," and she dissuaded the daughter from doing it. We tried to comfort them and point out to the young woman that God sometimes tries our faith. She said, "Yes, I used to know that, but I had forgotten. I thought that God did not care what happened to us." They seemed to appreciate very much that we had come. The case impressed me very much. I put it down on my prayer list, and I don't think I have missed a day praying for this young woman and her husband.

Some time after we, came back from Hsin Hsiang we received the good news that the husband had stopped smoking opium and that he had admitted that he had certainly wronged his wife and mother-in-law. That was certainly happy news. I asked whether he was open to the gospel. It seemed that they didn't quite know. I continued praying.

Last week or so the mother came over to see us. Her hand had healed completely, though the fingers are still a bit stiff. She said that her daughter had been baptized and had taken her first communion. She had suggested to her husband that she tell him some Bible stories. He listened and said, "I believe I want to believe your Jesus too."

I still continue to pray, but I certainly praise God for what has taken place thus far.

The various groups worked out several church programs in unison. Each has its own budget for its program. However, at joint meetings $45.50 was raised the past year. Of this $27 went for C.P.S., $11 for the California C. E. Union, $4.40 for the Ernst Harder Fund, and $3.10 for General Conference Young People's work. Reuben Bergthold is superintendent of the C. E. societies.

—Elmer Janzen, Bethel student and son of Rev. and Mrs. B. H. Janzen, Lehigh, Kansas, left for the C.P.S. camp at Downey, Idaho, in the month of December.

—Bulletin, Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: "Are you a reader of The Mennonite? The church paper should be in every home. We urge you to subscribe if you do not now have it. New subscriptions are $1.00, renewals $1.50 per year." (This is a worthy example of what pastors can do to put one of our church papers in every Mennonite home.—Editor)

—Bluffton College: Rev. John Esau, local evangelist, addressed students and faculty people on December 18, during the regular chapel hour. He built his talk around the sixteenth verse of the third chapter of John, giving the passage a special Christmas and evangelistic emphasis. Brother H. W. Berky, instructor in chemistry at Bluffton College, who was confined to his home for several weeks because of illness, has now resumed his work. Paul Stauffer, instructor in speech at the college underwent an operation for appendicitis recently. He is making a normal recovery.

—The First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, faced certain problems. Three committees were asked to make investigations along their particular lines of activity and then to report to the church council, which in turn will report to the church at a special congregational meeting. Furthermore, the church council meets monthly to consider church matters. In this way a fairly large number think through church problems intensively and are able to offer their particular insights.

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: The new year book is to contain the addresses and telephone numbers of all resident and non-resident members (The editor hopes to receive one). The church now has a bulletin rack in which to keep important literature for church work, so that it is always available and in a place where it is kept neat and in order. In it is literature concerning civilian bonds, C.P.S. camps, relief, and copies of the General Conference stand on peace and war. The ladies shipped 150 pounds of garments and comforters to Canada for relief.

—The American Civil Liberties Union in a letter to the war manpower commissioner, Paul V. McNutt, has suggested that the five thousand C.O.'s now in public service camps be drawn upon for agricultural and hospital work as an aid in the solution of the manpower problem.

WORKING IN A MENTAL HOSPITAL

(The following is an excerpt from a letter written by Lowell Hershberger, who is working in the Duke Hospital, Durham, North Carolina)

I can tell you with assurance that I will like it here. The work is fascinating, and there are opportunities for an endless number of desirable things here. There are seventeen C.P.S. men here now, and three more are coming. We are divided into two units, one for the Neuro-Psychiatric Ward, and one for the Operation Rooms of the hospital. I am the latter one. Our duties are more exacting than tedious or menial. We are working eight hours per day six days a week, and our duties are not endless although they seem to be so when one attempts to put them on paper. Briefly, we call for patients in the wards, bring them to the operating room designated, fix them up on the operating table in the position and manner required for the particular operation, be on call in the operating room during the operation, return the patient to the ward, clean the room for the next operation, etc. We are training under old attendents now, and will be expected to take over completely in a couple of weeks. The only information we receive is the name of the operation, the name of the patient, his location in the hospital, and the time to call for him. From this we are expected to know how to set up the patient on the operating table with all the necessary gadgets, etc.

We wear a regular intern's uniform (distinguished by a green diamond on the sleeve) with white skull caps and masks—and helmets and goggles when the operation is under ultra violet rays as most of them are. The operations run from brain operations to gory ones like collapsing a lung where three ribs are removed through a long incision. I have been on the ward only two days and have seen fifteen to twenty such operations.

NOT HOPELESSLY HANDICAPPED

"I cannot bring myself to believe that our children are hopelessly handicapped because they take baths in washtubs in front of the kitchen range, read by the light of kerosene lamps and sleep in unheated bedrooms. They're never going to be miserable because of physical inconveniences. Perhaps the best thing we can give them, in a world where possession of material things becomes ever more precarious, is a tough-fibered indifference to discomfort, and no desire at all for soft living." —Quoted from the book, We Took to the Woods, by Louise Dickinson Rich.

C.P.S. CAMPS

Assistant Directors' School a Success

Brother Henry A. Fast reports that the school for Assistant Directors was satisfactory to Selective Service System, the National Service Board, and the church agencies.

Important in the school's sessions were the interviews with the officials of Selective Service System. Capt. Fisk, Major McLean, Mr. Olson, and Col. Kosch were thorough and helpful in their presentation of the government concerns in regards to camp safety measures, food problems, medical needs, work hours, etc.

A highlight of the school was the session when General Hershey discussed problems relative to the many phases of the camp program. The General seemed to be quite understanding and his contribution was very much appreciated.

Mental Hospital Units Functioning Smoothly

After visiting the four mental hospitals (Staunton, Va.; Farnhurst, Delaware; Marlboro, N. J.; Norristown, Pa.) Brother John H. Mosemann reports that the Mennonite units appear to be serving satisfactorily.

The boys find the work challenging and worthy of their best efforts. Though the work hours are usually long, the boys seem to appreciate a type of work which permits them to be of service to unfortunate people.

Without exception the hospital superintendents speak well of the quality of service the boys are performing. Public relations are favorable.

Religious life committees organized among the boys are arranging for the spiritual life needs of the assignee group.

About the Canadian Conscientious Objector

1. One hundred boys from Eastern Canada were recently called to National Park service in Alberta.

2. Brother Edward Gilmore of the Brethern in Christ Church has been appointed Spiritual Director to the camps in British Columbia.

3. Brother J. B. Martin and E. J. Swalm are spending four weeks in a tour of C.O. camps. This tour will include personal interviews, preachings, and contacting government officials.

4. The forty boys who are engaged in forestry work at Chalk River, Ontario, are served over weekends by nearby ministers.

5. Three more Civilian Fire Fighters have landed in England. —November 25

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

PEACE SERIES FOR JANUARY

Bible Reasons for Being a Christian Objector (C.O.)
Matthew 5:38-48

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "O Master let me walk with Thee" No. 223; "O brother man fold to thy heart thy brother" No. 229. 2. Reading of leading topic, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Roll call to be answered by scripture passages on love, peace, and goodwill. 4. Offering for C.P.S. camps.

II. Leader's Introduction:

We are convinced that God requires of us that we refrain from going to war. We can not enter the army or the navy as combatants, nor as non-combatants, for the purpose of the whole army is to function as a war machine. We claim to be followers of Jesus Christ. The Bible teaches that He came to save and not to destroy men. We cannot kill, because He taught us the value and the sacredness of all human life. He lived a life of helpfullness, of love, of service, of goodwill. He gave us an example and bade us follow Him. He commanded us to love, and war does not foster love. He went about "doing good," and I cannot do good by killing others in war.

War is contrary to the teaching of the Fatherhood of God. The Bible teaches that God causes the sun to shine over the bad and the good, rain to fall on the just and the unjust, and that He is is desirous not of the death of the sinner, but that he repent and live. He so loved the world that He gave even His only begotten son to save them.

Jesus, who says that whosoever sees Him sees the Father, tells us to love our neighbor as we love ourself. That means that I will do my neighbor no harm, either by taking his life or by destroying his property. It means, further, that if I love him truly I will do all that I can in various ways to be helpful to him. The Civilian Public Service program offers opportunity for helpfulness, and the Christian Objector can practice the teachings of the Bible by sharing in it.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. "Those That Take the Sword Shall Perish" Matt. 26:52. 2. "The Meek Shall Inherit the Earth" Matt. 5:5. 3. "Children of God Are To Be Peace-makers" Matt. 5:9, Heb. 12:14, Rom. 12:18. 4. "Christians are to overcome evil with good" Romans 12:21 Matt. 5:39-40. 5. "Christians In Relation To Their Enemies" Matt. 5:44, Prov. 25:21-22, Matt. 5:39, Mark 11:25-26, Rom. 12:14, 20. 6. "Christ's Example " I Pet. 2:21,23. These topics are to bring out the Bible reasons for being a ChristianObjector to war.

1. In what way do Jesus' words, Luke 6:46. "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" apply to the waging of war? 2. May the Christian use force under any circumstances? 3. What proof have we that the way of life that Jesus recommended works? 4. Is suffering a necessary part of his way of life?

V. Facts for Study.

The Bible teaches: 1. "Thou shalt not kill." War takes life. 2. The infinite value of the human soul Mark 8:36, 37. War brutalizes and destroys the finest qualities of the soul. 3. To love our neighbors, Luke 10:25-37, and that means those who may be downtrodden and underprivileged and in need of help in one way or another. 4. To love our enemies, Matt. 5:43-44, and not to maim and kill them and their children. Jesus does not make any modifications, for His followers this is a direct command. 5. To forgive those who tresspass against us. Mark 11:25-26. This and only this certifies that we are children of our Father which is in heaven. Forgiving includes that we will do no harm to the person or people who have wronged us or to their property. 6. We are bidden to follow in Christ's steps, I Pet. 2:21, 23, and not to retaliate evil with evil, but to suffer willingly. 7. Christ's whole life was one of love and kind acts and we are to be minded like unto him.

If we are followers of the Master we will have faith in the efficacy of His way, the way of love and service and suffering. We will trust that that is the way to overcome the world. We will walk in that way by faith and not always by sight. We will be sure that His way will lead to life eternal, and we will be constrained to walk in it and will have peace in our souls.

VI. Illustration:

John Muir told a story of a living example of the atonement which he heard among the Indians of Alaska. There had been war all summer between two strong tribes. One old chief saw that unless it stopped soon and his people had a chance to lay in their winter supply of berries and salmon, they would starve; so he went out under a truce flag to ask the chief of the other tribe to stop and go home, telling the reason. The other chief said his tribe would not stop fighting because ten more of his men had been killed than of the enemy. Then the chief said to him. "You know I am a chief. I am worth ten of your men. Kill me in place of them and let us have peace."

VII. Food for Thought:

What price are we willing to pay to witness of the gospel of peace?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JESUS WINNING SOULS

John 4:27-42

The whole account of Jesus and the woman at the well and the sequel as recorded in our printed lesson is of much interest and importance. These verses need to be read carefully to get the setting of our lesson. Christ's promise to give "the living water," of which we may drink and never thirst, thrills one's soul. We may well voice the woman's eager reply, "Give me this water, that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." Also Christ's declaration that God is a Spirit and desires spiritual worship and can be worshipped anywhere is of large practical consequences. It opens the way for evangelization and worship wherever man is found.

Christ the Personal Evangelist

We do not find a more instructive account of soul-winning anywhere in Scripture than we have in our lesson. Jesus when teaching had a more practical aim than merely to impart truth to others. He purposed to lead His hearers to act upon that truth. Jesus spoke to the woman and told her truth of the highest importance, but His chief object was to win her for God's Kingdom. He began His conversation by speaking about water (vs 71), the thing uppermost in her mind at the time. His statements and promises (vss. 10, 14) aroused her curiosity and created a desire for the water which Jesus offered to her. Jesus referred to her unsavory past and convinced her that He was a prophet. He finally revealed to her that He was the long-expected Messiah. (vs. 26).

Jesus' Disciples marvelled that He spoke with the woman. They saw only a Samaritan woman. He saw a needy, and we believe, hungry soul. She forgot all about her empty water-pot (vs. 28). The "living water" was already beginning to spring up within her and she hastened to tell the men—her associates—about Jesus and His message to her. She excited their curosity and led them to come to see this teacher.

Jesus needed food to sustain His physical life, yet there was something more important to Him. To do the Father's will, to do His work, that was His meat and of that He had been eating while speaking with this woman (vss. 32, 34). Helping souls into the kingdom gave a sense of satisfaction to His heart, just as food gives satisfaction to the body. Jesus saw the fields ripe for a spiritual harvest. The conditions were favorable. The coming forth of the Samaritans from Sychar to meet Christ was an evidence of this ripeness. We need to look upon the fields right at home and also abroad, which may appear so unpromising, as Jesus looked upon the field of Samaria.

Jesus made much use of personal evangelism—dealing with individuals. It was His chief method. Series of evangelistic meetings—formerly used much more widely than now—have much to commend them. Experience shows, however, that those who most need spiritual help do not attend such meetings. They need to be supplemented by personal work with individuals wherever there is opportunity to speak to and with them. Jesus did not wait for the Samarian woman to come to hear Him speak. Many today who need Christ so greatly will never find Him if we wait for them to come to the church. We must either bring them to the church or else go to them, take the church to them. We will not be likely to do this unless our hearts share in Christ's yearning for the lost. Methods of soul-winning are important, but a yearning heart is needed most of all.

Rewards of the Soul-Winner

The wages are joy of soul, the satisfaction because of having helped others, and an eternal reward, spiritual labor for others will result in the enrichment of one's soul. There is great satisfaction in seeing others turn from ways of worldliness to lives of Christian living. Many Samarians believed on Jesus (vs. 39), a notable example of effective testimony. Our witnessing is of the utmost importance. Many more believed when they heard Jesus. He had a receptive audience. He convinced them that He is the Christ.

What opportunity do I have for evangelism?

What evidences are there that the fields round about us are ripe for a harvest now?

When may we decide that a person is a hopeless case?

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Paso Robles, California

As a church we are thankful for the things we have been able to do with the Lord's help in our home church. A much-appreciated self-regulated gas furnace has been installed to replace the wood heater. In March we purchased copies of the new Mennonite Hymnary. These we enjoy very much. These projects were instigated by the Y.P.C.E. The Ladies Aid presented a new communion set to the church. Before the building restrictions came into being, the men of the church, with the help of a plumber, made other necessary improvements. We are now looking forward to having our meeting house painted both inside and outside. This may sound as if the writer were bragging on what we have done. Please, do not take it as such. I only hope it will inspire others to do the same. One should take as much pride in his church home as one does in his own home.

In case any young men from any of the churches are ever sent to Camp Roberts, California, one of the largest camps in the United States, please inform them that this church is just thirteen miles south on United States Highway 101. Rev. C. Hege is the minister. A number of boys have attended church here. However, usually they do not know of this church before it is almost time for them to move on again. —Corr.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Delft, Minnesota

"The Lord is my Shepherd, I shall not want." Truly, we in this country have much to be thankful for to our Heavenly Father and also to our government. We still are enjoying so many privileges; do we appreciate them enough?

In October Herman Friesen was ordained as evangelist at a Sunday morning meeting. Brother H. H. Quiring spoke in the German and Brother John Bartel delivered an English message and had charge of the installation. Brother Friesen is attending Northwestern Seminary in Minneapolis.

Our congregation had a harvest home and mission festival on November 29. Brother John N. C. Hiebert, returned missionary to India, was the guest speaker for the day. His messages were very interesting and inspiring, and we felt greatly blessed. A fellowship lunch was enjoyed at noon.

Due to the fact that our congregation will now organize as a separate organization from the Mountain Lake Bergfelder Church, we have adopted a new name for our church. "Immanuel Mennonite Church" was the name receiving the largest number of votes at the annual business meeting held December 3. Sister Theodore W. Nickel was elected correspondent for The Mennonite and Sister John Bartel correspondent for The Bundesbote. D. J. Goertzen was re-elected as deacon. Communion services were held the last Sunday in the year.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Pandora, Ohio

We had two meetings which were led by representatives of the Howard, Pa., C.P.S. camp. The one was sponsored by Ralph Sommer and Ralph Hernley, camp director. The other meeting was under the auspices of Charles Suter, educational director of the camp, who showed interesting slides of camp life. We have three members in this camp. They are Ralph Sommer, Charles Suter, and Lawrence Hilty.

Other recent visitors in the pulpit have been: Brother P. A. Penner, who showed his colored motion pictures of his work among the lepers of India. Wilhelmina Kuyf, home from China on her first furlough, inspired us with her message. P. J. Baehr, formerly of China who gave an interesting Thanksgiving message sponsored by a ladies' Sunday school class. Solomon Caulker, a native of Africa at present a theological student of Bonebreak Seminary at Dayton, Ohio, who spoke at a large union service of all the churches.

The ladies' and girls' missionary societies sponsored their annual missionary auction sale of food and linens at Thanksgiving time at the school building. A sum of $222 was raised for missions at this sale.

The Lend-A-Hand Class of the Sunday school sent Christmas gifts to thirty-five Indian children of our Oraibi, Arizona, mission station. The church choir, under the direction of Sister James Suter, gave its annual presentation of the Messiah on December 27. —Mrs. S. W. Steiner, Corr.

BERGFELDER MENNONITE CHURCH

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

Rev. C. N. Hiebert and Rev. Albert Schultz from Butterfield, Minnesota, spoke at our annual harvest festival. Brother H. H. Quiring delivered the Thanksgiving message. Our hearts were lifted in praise and moved to greater zeal in serving our Lord.

Brother Arnold Schultz from Bluffton College conducted a series of Bible study meetings in November. We were, indeed, strengthened in the faith through his sound preaching and deep understanding of God's word.

Our pastor, Rev. August Ewert, who has faithfully served us for the past year, has consented to serve another three years. Pray with us for God's blessings upon his work.

The young ladies of our Mission Society sent boxes of peanuts, cookies, etc., and literature, including a New Testament, to all the young men who are in the service of our country.

—Assistant Corr., Mrs. Jacob F. Schultz

PACIFIC CONFERENCE REPORT

The Pacific District Conference of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America was privileged to hold its forty-third session in the First Mennonite Church at Colfax, Washington, June 18-21, 1942.

This privilege was granted us by God, even in this time of war. The conference theme was, "Holding Forth the Word of Life," Phil. 2:16. The conference consists of seventeen churches, of which fifteen were represented by their own delegates, and two by proxies. The total church membership is 2,878. The program was carried out almost to the dot.

At the Minister's Retreat, Thursday forenoon, Rev. King presided in the absence of Rev. P. A. Wedel. (1) Rev. P. A. Kliewer in his topic emphasized the fact that we are to be "going Christions" "Go ye," not "sitting-still Christians." (2) Rev. Saltzman stressed the thought that the minister is a shepherd. (3) Spiritual growth may be promoted where there is spiritual life, by proper nourishment, fresh spiritual air, proper exercise, etc.

The Worker's Retreat, Thursday afternoon, was led by Dr. Langenwalter, and the three subjects that are on the program were ably treated.

The conference work, proper, began Thursday evening. After a song service, Rev. Aron Wiens led in the devotional exercises. Then the delegates and guests were very heartily welcomed to the conference at Colfax by Rev. W. H. King, the home pastor. Miss Emma Ruth gave the response in her capable way. Special music by the Colfax church followed, then the conference sermon. The vice president, Rev. D. J. Unruh, read the scripture lesson and led in prayer, and our president, Rev. Homer Leisy, spoke on John 6:1-14. A few of the thoughts expressed are: "Christ has given us an abundant supply. Why are so many under-nourished? (1) Because of a lack of transportation. (2) We failed to apply our abundance.

"We have the open Bible. Have we made it the rule of our life? Have we given it to others?—Daniel of old stood firm. He went to pray in his house. It's easier to stand with both feet on the walk, than to be with one foot in the mud. Paul stood firm. Are we willing to stand? If Christ is supreme inside, defeat is impossible. Let us gather up the fragments and give them to eat"

The delegate certificates were then read, and the following committees appointed: Committee on complimentary votes: Rev. E. J. Miller, Elmer Widmer, and Rev. Aron Wiens. Committee on Resolutions: Rev. Arnold Regier, Miss Emma Ruth, and Rev. P. A. Kliewer. Auditing Committee: Rev. J. P. Glanzer, Rev. Chris Ummel, and Julius Franz. Memorial Committee: Rev. Earl Salzman, Rev. P. D. Unruh, and Rev. D. J. Unruh. Nominating Committee: Rev. S. S. Baumgartner, Oregon; Marvin Linscheid, Idaho; Rev. M. M. Lehman, Washington; and Dr. J. H. Langenwalter, California. Budget Committee: All Officers. Tellers: No. 1, Maurice Wedel, Lorena Toevs, and Gwendolyn Ummel. Tellers: No. 2, Mrs. Herbert Franz, Laverne Linscheid, and Ernest Roth. Mr. L. J. Horsch was appointed as a member of the Business Committee for this session, as two members were absent.

On Friday forenoon Rev. Baumgartner conducted the devotional exercises, reading Psalm 103. A season of prayer and a few songs followed, and Rev. Leisy spoke briefly on Psalm 103.

The secretary's report of last year was read in part and adopted.

Complimentary votes were given to Mr. A. E. Bohrer, assistant camp director of Cascade Locks, and to Rev. Paul R. Shelly, a minister of the Eastern District Conference.

Our Field Secretary, Miss Emma Ruth, reported good work and growth in the various kinds of work:

"The Sunday Schools are growing and are doing more efficient work. Two mission Sunday Schools in unchurched communities were reported.

"Week-day Bible Classes were tried in Reedley; child evangelism classes were held in Los Angeles; the largest number of D.V.B. schools was reported, and fine cooperation in the support of the Bible school in Dallas.

"Our Christian Endeavor societies are working on. In spite of the war conditions the largest number of C.E. societies and ten Junior C. E. societies were reported in our conference district.

"This is the first year in which we can report a retreat in every state, with a total attendance of 274 young people of high school and college age. The annual Sunday school and C. E. conventions were canceled in all states except California due to difficulty of transportation.

"The Young People's Committee Work has helped to create a feeling of unity and cooperation among the young people of our district, and a new loyalty to the church and its program through the projects that have been carried out.

"The Worker's Exchange has been issued seven times and sent to five hundred interested workers." The report was adopted as read.

The Auditing Committee reported: "We have audited the treasurer's report and find it correct and very, very satisfactory." The conference accepted this report. Our treasurer, John C. Jantz, reported:

Balance on hand 5-1-1941	$ 18.28
Income 5-1-41 to 6-15-42,..............	$3138.55
TOTAL	$3156.83
Paid out 5-1-41 to 6-15-42	$2650.32
Balance on hand 6-15-42	$ 506.51

Further, we still owe on our parsonage in Portland, Oregon, $2483.56. Brother Jantz urged a reduction of this debt, now!—while times are good! The following resolution was passed: "That we reduce our Pacific District Conference debt $283.56 by next payment, so that the balance of debt will be only $2,200.00 by July 1, 1942." Brother S. S. Baumgartner reported that all legal papers have been handed over to the custodian of the trustees. By a resolution the treasurer's report was adopted as read, and a rising vote of thanks was given to our treasurer.

The Evangelization Committee reported that they had been privileged to give counsel and financial assistance to six of our churches, and made the following recommendations which were adopted by the conference:

1. At Newport Brother P. D. Unruh received the assistance of twenty dollars per month the past year from this conference, and the committee recommends to continue this aid and kindly requests the Newport church to compensate its pastor according to its ability.

2. At Deer Park, Rev. Wiens received twenty dollars assistance per month from this conference, and the congregation pledged to do what they can. The committee recommends to continue this aid to Rev. Wiens.

3. The Alberta Community Church at Portland, Oregon, is growing. Fourteen young souls were received into the church by baptism in 1941. A teacher-training course was given and nine members received diplomas.

4. The Grace church at Dallas, Oregon, is now self-supporting and has assumed all obligations toward the support of its minister and toward conference projects.

5. Albany, Oregon, received fifteen dollars per month from the Home Mission Board and ten dollars from this conference. The committee recommends to continue this aid.

6. Winton, California, now receives forty dollars per month from the Home Mission Board, ten dollars from this conference, and ten dollars plus rent for the minister, from the church. "We recommend to continue this aid."

7. The committee recommends that someone be sent to the Newport, the Deer Park, and the Winton churches once a year for the purpose of evangelization, Bible study, and general helpfulness for at least a week at each church.

8. A new project has been opened in a schoolhouse about twelve miles from Winton, by Rev. Joel Koehn. He reports an attendance of twenty-eight to thirty-five. In order to help the undertaking the committee allowed Brother Koehn a gift of fifty dollars.

9. The E. M. B. brethern at Salem, Oregon, asked the committee for aid. These, together with some of the other ministers, considered the case, but under the present troublous conditions with building materials frozen could not undertake the project.

Resolved to adopt the report of the Evangelization Committee as a whole.

A Bible Study was given by Rev. Frank Manning in "The Person and Work of the Holy Spirit."

On Friday afternoon Rev. E. J. Miller gave the report of the Educational Committee, and they made the following recommendations:

1. That every Mennonite Church strive for a Mennonite or Christlicher Bundesbote in every home, and give the following suggestions for carrying out such a project: (a) A plea from the pulpit; (b) appoint a special person in charge to approach each church family and ask them for a subscription; (c) make use of the articles which appear in the Mennonite in Sunday school, C. E., and from the pulpit.

2. That the churches become better acquainted with the C.P.S. work throughout the General Conference, and particularly within our district conference through visitation, the subscribing to camp papers, by inviting representatives of these camps to speak in the churches if possible, and by such practical projects as making camp kits, sending cookies, reading materials, etc.

3. That the churches of the Pacific District promote the sale of Peace Certificates and Stamps.

4. That the ministers of each church keep in touch with activities of Congress and urge the writing to senators and representatives regarding bills which affect the moral and spiritual welfare of our nation. Of particular interest at present is the Shepherd Bill S-860 which would bar the sale of liquor and prostitution in and around military camps.

5. That we as a committee may work on a curriculum for a uniform service training program in this district conference.

6. That the family altar become a part of every Mennonite home.

7. That the young people of our district be encouraged to attend our own Mennonite schools and colleges.

The conference adopted the report. Rev. Paul Shelly brought greetings from the Eastern District Conference which were gratefully received.

A few choruses were sung for a change and for rest. Then we had a short recess to permit the ladies to come and take part. Also a solo was sung by Brother Julius Franz.

Here a Bible study followed on the topic: "Marks of the Spirit-Filled Life"; (1) in service, by P. D. Unruh; (2) in tribulation, by J. P. Glanzer; (3) in times of material prosperity, by Marvin Linscheid.

On Friday evening the Ladies' Missinary Society gave us a very good program. (Some their secretary may report.)

Saturday morning, after the usual devotional exercises, the business of the conference was continued. Brother P. A. Wedel had sent in his resignation from the business committee, and the conference resolved: "That we do not accept the resignation of Brother P. A. Wedel."

Resolved: That we send greetings to Rev. Edgar Toevs, Aberdeen, Idaho, expressing our regret upon his leaving the work in our conference, and wish him well in his new field of labor.

Here Brother L. J. Horsch reported, among other things, on Bethel College: 1. The income of Bethel College from endowments and students' tuition is not enough to carry on. It needs and receives donations. 2. The faculty of Bethel College is well qualified by experience and training. I believe that collectively we have at Bethel as consecrated a Christian faculty as has any college in America. Furthermore, I doubt if there is another faculty so willing to give itself and its means, to the institution with which it is associated. 3. Bethel College has also suffered a loss in the number of students through the draft. Students have shown a greater interest in spiritual matters than usual. The graduating class of '42 had members from China and Canada as well as from the United States. During the discussion which followed it was brought out that Bethel has done two things: It has paid its debts; it has made good. The conference resolved: That we adopt the report of Bethel College as read.

Brother Horsch also reported on the work of the Peace Committee. The United States government uses its right of conscription of manpower. But being a democracy, it also recognizes the rights of small minorities even to the extent of respecting conscientious convictions of individuals. For these the C.P.S. camps are erected and maintained. The M.C.C. provides the administration of the camps. Since we pay the bills, we can administer the affairs of the camps. We in our conference still need a peace committee. The conference should create one. The conference adopted the report as given. Then resolved: That we appoint L. J. Horsch chairman of the Pacific District Peace Committee and impower him to appoint two other members for one year. The brethern John C. Jantz and Arnold Regier were appointed.

The Young People's Committee now reported and made the following recommendations:

1. That we continue our support of Ernst Harder as he attends school in our colleges.

2. That we continue our support of the C.P.S. camps: (a) That each church sponsor a visit of a pastor to our C.P.S. camps; (b) That we continue our contributions for literature for these camps; (c) That churches make themselves responsible for supplying the necessary clothing for the boys in C.P.S. camps—for one or more of their own or for an adopted one; (d) That each young people's group keep in touch with the boys in all camps through correspondence and through a young people's church paper.

3. That we appoint a committee to investigate the possibilty of placing another worker in the migrant camps of Oregon or Washington and contact the churches of Oregon, Washington, and Idaho to determine the interest and the extent of their support of such a worker.

4. That we encourage the formation of young people's fellowship groups, having regular meetings, in all such churches where there is no young people's Christian Endeavor society.

5. That we promote an exchange of retreaters between the different states of our district. The report was adopted as read.

A memorial service was now held in which Rev. Salzman read a portion of Scripture, Rev. D. J. Unruh spoke on the memories of those who have gone before, and Rev. P. D. Unruh led in prayer.

The election of officers now followed with these results: By acclamation were elected: Field Secretary—Miss Emma Ruth, Bethel College Representative—L. J. Horsch, Treasurer—J. C. Jantz, Secretary—F. F. Jantzen. By ballot: President—D. J. Unruh, Vice-president—Earl Salzman, Member, Business Committee—Earl Eyman, 3 years, Member, Business Committee—Homer Leisy, 1 year, Member Education Committee—E. J. Miller, Member, Evangelization Committee—J. H. Langenwalter, Trustee—A. J. Richert.

Rev. Frank Manning now gave a Bible Study on "In What Ways Can We Grieve the Holy Spirit?"

On Saturday afternoon Rev. Homer Leisy conducted the devotions. The results of the election were reported as given above.

The officers placed the following budget before the conference. Budget for 1942-1943:

Field Secretary	$125.00
Taxes	75.00
Newport	240.00
Deer Park	240.00
Peace Committee	100.00
Portland	420.00
Albany	120.00
Miscellaneous	315.00
Workers' Exchange	120.00
Winton	120.00
Educational Committee	25.00
Total	$1,900.00

The conference adopted the budget.

A message had been received and was placed before the conference, stating that there was an opportunity to have Dr. A. Warkentin visit all Coast churches after the California Retreat. The conference voted to take the opportunity and asked Rev. S. S. Baumgartner to arrange the itinerary for him.

The following resolutions were made by the resolutions committee and adopted by the Conference. Resolved that:

1. We are very grateful to our Heavenly Father for the many blessings He has bestowed upon us during the past year and the rich feast that He has prepared for us at this conference. His grace has been manifested in that such a good representation from nearly all of our churches was able to attend this session in spite of the present conditions. In this time of stress and world upheaval we have been encouraged to go forth proclaiming the good news of salvation in our conference theme: "Holding Forth the Word of Life."

2. We wish to thank our host church, the Onecho Mennonite Church of Colfax, Washington, for its hospitality and friendly reception. We shall not soon forget the Washington hills with their beautiful grain fields flowing in the breeze. Nor shall we forget the generosity of the kind people of the church and this community in opening their homes and providing such bountiful meals.

3. We express our appreciation to the Business Committee and officers of the forty-third session of the Pacific District Conference who have prepared the program with its clear and definite emphasis on evangelism; for the challenge that has come to us from all of the speakers to a closer walk with our Lord and Saviour and to manifest a clearer and more definite testimony of the faith in our lives. May we continue this testimony through our churches in our communities.

4. We express our regrets that Rev. Philip A. Wedel was not able to attend this session and instruct the secretary to send him greetings from this conference.

5. We voice our appreciation and thanks to the Eastern District Conference for its greetings and instruct the secretary to send a reply to our sister conference, wishing it God's richest blessings in its service for our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ. We enjoyed having Rev. Paul Shelly, now of Aberdeen, Washington, bring this word of encouragement and to have him with us during these days.

6. We encourage our churches to support the program of the C.P.S. camps with their gifts and prayers, and instruct the secretary to send a letter to the directors of each of our camps in California expressing our deep interest in the work.

7. We instruct our secretary to write to the President of these our United States to express our gratitude for our Christian freedom, the open Bible, the opportunities to proclaim the Word of life, and for the privilege granted us to be true to our Christian convictions.

8. We thank Mr. and Mrs. Frank Manning of Ukerewe Island, Tanganyika Territory, East Africa, for the inspiring messages that were brought to us throughout the session. We wish them God-speed on their journey in fall.

9. We are grateful to have Rev. and Mrs. Chris Ummel and Gwendolyn in our midst and to have learned to know them personally. They have been a great blessing to all. May our prayers continue with them in their work in the migratory camps at Shafter, California.

10. We appreciate having Mr. Albert Bohrer, assistant director of the C.P.S. camp at Cascade Locks, Oregon, at our conference. His presence has given us a deeper appreciation of the sacrifice which our boys are making in our camps, and he has given us an insight into the problems which our camp staffs face.

11. Whereas our brother F. F. Jantzen has received word of the accidental death of his brother-in-law, Gerhard Wiebe of Beatrice, Nebraska, during this conference session, we extend our sympathy to Brother Jantzen in his sorrow and pray that God's sustaining grace may be very real to him.

12. It is with deep regret that the conference has learned that Rev. Edgar Toevs has accepted a position that removes him from active participation in the conference activities. Realizing the circumstances under which this severance has taken place, we wish him the Lord's richest blessings in his new field of service.

The Second Mennonite Church of Paso Robles, California, invited the conference to hold its next session, 1943, in their church. The conference voted to accept the invitation.

A quartet sang "The Little Brown Church In the Wildwood."

The recreation period now followed. The Onecho Church had arranged two different routes, and the conference delegates that chose to take them were taken out.

On Saturday evening Miss Emma Ruth conducted the famous Saengerfest. It seemed as though all that took part enjoyed it immensely.

An address was given by the minister of the Methodist group at Onecho.

Sunday school and Church services on Sunday forenoon were arranged by the local church.

In the afternoon the chairman, E. J. Miller, conducted the opening exercises; Arnold Regier read a portion of Scripture and led in prayer. Then Mr. Leland Goodell from Cascade Locks Camp gave us a sacred concert, and Albert E. Bohror a talk on "Relationship of C.P.S. Camps to Mennonite Beliefs."

Sunday evening we had a young people's program, an address by Rev. Paul Shelly, closing remarks by the conference president. Thus, the day of blessing and feasting came to a beautiful close.

A CHURCH BIRTHDAY

*By Melvin Gingerich

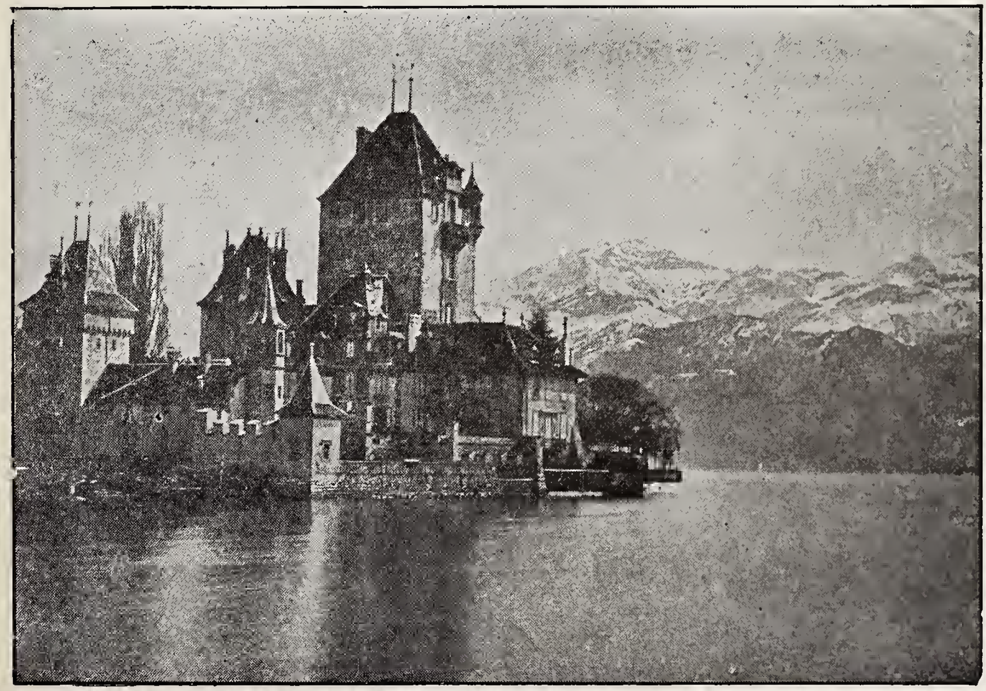
God's people in Old Testament times recognized the value of commemorating events of importance in their history. Modern nations make use of this same practice. On Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays and on Independence Day the citizens of the United States are reminded of events in their historic past. They believe that through the observance of these holidays, the attention of the people will be directed toward the ideals and achievements of their forefathers and thus loyalty to prized traditions and principles will be fostered.

In Protestant circles we have recognized this principle in our observance of Easter and Christmas. It may well be asked if we have made the greatest possible use of this principle. One of the Mennonite bodies in considering this problem has taken action to place in its official family almanac the dates of important events in Mennonite history so that its people may often be reminded of the faith of their fathers.

An event of great significance in the history of our church and in the history of Protestantism occurred in the third week of January (probably on the twenty-first) in the year 1525, four hundred eighteen years ago. The event took place at Zollikon, a village on Lake Zurich, in Switzerland. There on that day the Mennonite Church was born!

There were present at that meeting fifteen brethren who had been meeting on previous occasions for Bible study. Earlier, they had been enthusiastic followers of Zwingli, the church reformer at Zurich, but when it became clear that he intended to make only those reforms that the state officials would approve and that it was his plan to establish a Protestant state church, they could no longer follow him.



LAKE OF THUN

The Mennonite Church was born in Switzerland, the land of beautiful lakes and snow-capped mountains, in January, 1525.

In a number of disputations between the Zwingli group and these others who were now parting company with him, the brethren argued against a state church and for a congregation made up only of voluntary believers who were baptized upon a personal confession of faith in Christ and who were living in "newness of life." They rejected infant baptism, for infants could not have faith and decide to join a body of believers. The state can not be authority in matters of faith, said they, for the only authority is the Word of God.

Furthermore the brethren insisted that all warfare was sinful and that the Christian overcomes evil with good. They also refused to take oaths because Jesus had taught against it. They did not believe that a Christian could hold public offices because this involved the use of the sword in enforcing laws.

The leader of their group was Conrad Grebel, a young man trained in the universities of Basle, Vienna, and Paris. His influence can be recognized from the account below, written by one of their historians some years after this described memorable meeting of the third week of January, 1525.

"Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz, and others came together and found that there was among themselves agreement in faith. They realized in the sincere fear of God that it was firstly necessary to obtain from the divine Word and the preaching of the same a true faith which worketh by love, and then to receive the true Christian baptism upon the confessed faith, as the answer of a good conscience toward God (I Pet. 3:21), being resolved henceforth to serve God in all godliness of a holy Christian life and to be steadfast in affliction (persecution) to the end.

"And it further came to pass, as they were assembled together, that great anxiety came upon them and they were moved in their hearts. Then they unitedly bowed their knees before God Almighty in Heaven and called upon Him, the Searcher of all hearts, and implored Him to grant them grace to do His divine will, and that He would bestow upon them His mercy. For flesh and blood and human forwardness did by no means lead them to take such a step, for they knew what would fall to their lot to suffer and endure on account of it.

"After they had risen from their prayer, George Blaurock arose and earnestly asked Conrad Grebel to baptize him with the true Christian baptism upon his faith and knowledge. And entreating him thus, he knelt down and Conrad baptized him since there was at this time no ordained minister to administer this ordinance. After this was done, the others likewise asked George to baptize them. He fulfilled their desire in the sincere fear of God, and thus they gave themselves unitedly to the name of the Lord. Then some of them were chosen for the ministry of the gospel, and they began to teach and keep the faith."

This baptismal service, then, is recognized as the meeting in which the Mennonite Church had its origin. The world, however, was not yet ready to grant freedom of conscience and the principle of separation of Church and state. The authorities, therefore, began to persecute this group and in a few years thousands of their members met the death of martyrs. This wave of persecution drove some of the brethren to the east of Switzerland where the Hutterite movement had its origin among their numbers. Others went into south Germany to find a refuge.

The movement also spread down the Rhine Valley into the Netherlands. There became converts to the new faith, but they faced serious difficulty because of their unwise leadership. In time, however, a man appeared who saved the movement from ruin, organized it, and gave it new life and stability. It was a great day for the church when this man in 1536 renounced the Catholic church and joined the brethren. So able was he as a leader, that his followers were called Mennonites, because they were of those who believed the doctrines that he, Menno Simons, taught.

The Mennonite church thus had its origin in Switzerland. Most of the Mennonites east of the Mississippi have this Swiss background. Later the church spread to Holland where Menno Simons gave it leadership. A large proportion of the Mennonites west of the Mississippi have this Dutch background and are descended from these Dutch followers of Menno Simons.—North Newton, Kansas

Brother Melvin Gingerich is professor of history and government at Bethel College. His book, The Mennonites in Iowa, is considered an outstanding example of how the history of Mennonite communities ought to be written. Brother Gingerich writes the weekly column "On My Desk" in the Mennonite Weekly Review and is co-editor of the rural life page in that paper. He is also serving as co-editor with Brother A. Warkentin of a revised edition of Who's Who Among the Mennonites which is to appear in 1943. In the December, 1942, issue of The Palimpsest, a magazine published by The State Historical Society of Iowa, there is a very interesting article on the "Mennonites in Mount Pleasant" written by him. This sould be of particular interest to the Mennonites at Beatrice, Nebraska. It may be had from the aforementioned society at Iowa City for ten cents a copy.

Branches of Public Service

Boys in the Mennonite Civilian Public Service camps spend over forty hours each week in some kind of work for one of the Government Bureaus or Services. Here is a list of the different Government branches in which Mennonite boys are now serving:

Soil Conservation Service No. 4, Grottoes, Virginia; No. 5, Colorado Springs, Colorado; No. 18, Denison, Iowa; No. 20, (Sideling Hill), Wells Tannery, Pennsylvania; No. 22, Henry, Illinois; No. 24, Hagertown, Maryland; No. 25, Weeping Water, Nebraska; No. 33, Fort Collins, Colorado; No. 40, Howard, Pennsylvania, Forestry Service: No. 8, Marietta, Ohio; No. 28, Medaryville, Indiana; No. 31, (Placerville) Camine, California; No. 35, North Fork, California.

National Park Service: No. 39, Galax, Virginia; No. 45, Luray, Virginia; No. 55, Belton Montana.

Mental Hospitals: No. 44, Western State Hospital Staunton, Virginia; No. 58, Deleware State Hospital, Farnhurst Delaware; No. 63, New Jersey State Hospital, Marlboro, N. J.; No. 66, Norristown, Pa.

A LETTER FROM ORAIBI

December 11, 1942

Almost two thousand years ago the angels sang, "Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men." Can we say that the peace of which the angels sang is really on earth today when practically the whole world is at war? Let us refember that the true peace comes through our Lord Jesus Christ. "Therefore being justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ." Rom. 5:1. It is not a peace among nations of which Paul speaks here. The sinner who is at enmity with God is like the troubled sea and cannot rest. "There is no peace saith my God to the wicked." Isa. 57:21. No words can describe the horror that the unsaved sinner will know when he dies and goes to face God. Therefore, when "God sent His only begotten son into the world," He made it possible for man to receive His peace through faith; for there is peace in believing. Rom. 15:13.

At this time before Christmas we find that many of you think of those in the mission fields. We express to all of you our gratitude for your cards of greetings with your tokens of love and friendship.

This fall Rev. A. E. Krieder was here for the special evangelistic meetings. His messages were very helpful to the Hopis. Rev. and Mrs. Charles Girton from a faith mission at Lupton, Arizona, held meetings at Hotevilla. Two high school boys accepted Christ there. They need your prayers, especially, because of the fierce opposition there. Then I went to Moencopi where we conducted meetings for four days. Two women who had not lived Christian lives there since they left the government school reconsecrated themselves to the Lord. Three young men from Oraibi began to think seriously when they were drafted into the army. Before they left home each one individually accepted Christ as his saviour. Let us remember them during this Christmas season as they face the trials and temptations of army life.

We shall again give forth in song and Word the Christmas story. On the evening of December 20 we expect to have a Christmas vesper program. On Christmas eve we shall have our usual Christmas Sunday school program. In the forenoon of Christmas Day we shall have our Christmas worship service.

With our Oraibi mesa people we hope to have the Sunday school program in the afternoon of the twenty-fifth in Puhumana's house. Though her house is small we are indeed grateful for her open door for Sunday school and sewing classes since the burning of the mesa chapel.

May God grant that here and everywhere sinners "believe in the Son of God" that the peace of God may reign in their hearts. Only thus can there come lasting peace among the nations of this world.

Mr. and Mrs. John P. Suderman, John Mark and Edith Elsie. (The foregoing letter was received January 7.—Editor)

How We Celebrated Christmas, 1942

By Jacob H. Janzen

It began with the first Sunday in Advent when mother fixed the Advent wreath around the chandelier in the parlor and lit one candle on it, signifying that this was the first Sunday in Advent. Then everybody went to church where the Sunday school gave a sort of a preview of the treat that was awaiting us when Christmas Eve would be here. A collection was taken up to provide funds for the proper celebration of that momentous event. The proceeds were good.

What happened at home the second Sunday in Advent I do not know, except that probably at night two candles on the wreath were lit. I was then in British Columbia where I had also been on the first Sunday but I had still been instrumental in arranging the meeting for that Sunday, and so I knew even on the West Coast what was happening at home.

I returned for the third Sunday in Advent. Besides the usual morning service on that day, the young people's society had its program at night. At the close of this everybody enjoyed a lunch in the basement of our meeting house. Our young people on that occasion remembered their fellow young men who are now serving King and country as best as they can according to the promptings of their conscience. Christmas presents were prepared and sent out for those in service. Those who were permitted to come home on leave but who did not get the reduced fare that is being granted to men in uniform were given funds to help them to pay their fare.

We older fellows from Russia have been in service ourselves and know what leave means to a soldier, or any other man in service, and therefore helped, as best we could, to make the trip home possible even for those who are serving in far, far away in British Columbia. We had the satisfaction of having them in our midst at the celebration in church and at the lunch afterward.

I spoke to the congregation on Psalm 91:9-16, pointing out the many blessings of the Lord and the wonderful care and protection that He had afforded us so far, and which would be ours in the future if we continued to trust in Him.

The fourth Sunday in Advent was the climax of our celebrations. Our church choir sang its wonderful songs and filled the evening proclaiming the gospel in song. I had spoken in the morning on Isaiah 11:1-4 and continued my sermon in the evening, taking for my text Isaiah 61:1-4. Again lunch followed, and Christmas presents were distributed among those present.

In the ensuing week Christmas greeting cards began to come in, first in a trickle, then in a stream, and finally in a real downpour, and try as we might, it became technically impossible for us to reply to all of them.

But it warmed our hearts to hold in our hands again the evidence of the love of so many toward us who wanted to keep in touch with us and to show us that they were still our co-pilgrims homeward. In the house secrecy was in every nook and corner. One could hardly walk in one's own house without being reprimanded for trespassing on forbidden territory. The mail brought packages with the notice "Do not open until Christmas," and the nearer Christmas Eve drew, the more tense grew the situation, and the more childlike we ourselves grow in our expectations. And finally Christmas Eve was there, and we gathered in the church where the students, big and small, showed us what they had learned through the period from spring until now—their cheeks ready to burst from health and genuine natural color. Close to one hundred such youngsters were seated before us and recited their little or great poems, sang their songs and told us the old, old story of the birth of the Christ child and of God's, our Father's, love.

I am not exactly a youngster any more and should be left out of such programs. But they called on me to say a few words in conclusion, and I spoke briefly on John 6:68-29. Where, indeed, should we go from Christ who has spoken to us His eternal Word of Life even tonight through these children and young people? We resolved to remain with Him who had blessed us in so many wonderful ways, although we never deserved it. Praised be His holy name!

Then on the first day of Christmas we read I John 1:104 and contemplated the obvious in Christ's coming to us, as it is evident even now in the love that prevails among mankind in spite of war and general hatred. We held the evidence of that love as it concerned us in our hands in the form of greeting cards and presents thoughtfully selected for us. At such occasions it is not hard to believe in the God who is love.

But this year, even here in America, we had the privilege of celebrating three days of Christmas as we used to in dear old Russia. On the second day, the Feast of Stephen, we took as our text Acts 7:54-59 and saw that God's love surrounds us not only on great holidays but also when everybody is against us. Then it is much harder to believe in God who is love. If we have followed the leading of the Holy Ghost, we will behold Him as eternal love even in the hour of death.

Sunday, the third day of Christmas, brought us close to the Lord, who according to John 6:47-51 presents himself to us as the daily bread that is with us not only when great joy seizes our hearts or when the shadow of death is upon us, but every day as we need Him, like the daily bread which we must have many times every day.

Now we are again prepared to meet the every-day life with its ups and downs and to walk the path upward until we reach our destination at the right hand of our Father, where we shall be with Christ forever and ever.

My good wife and I thank all who have remembered us this Christmas. We assure you that we too have thought of you and that we are praying for you. Forgive us for not being able to reply to every token of friendship and love individually; this is technically impossible for us as I stated before.

We love all and wish you, The Mennonite, its editor, and its readers a very happy New Year and a blessed pilgrimage home until we meet where our Lord and Master Jesus Christ awaits us. —Yours in the Lord, Eliese and Jacob H. Janzen, 164 Erb Street West, Waterloo, Ontario, December 28, 1942.

RELIEF

Upon receiving some layettes and quilts from the Mennonite Clothing Depot, the minister of a large London church writes, "There is a great deal of poverty in this district and the needs of our people have been aggravated by severe bombing. . . . The layettes are far superior to anything we have ever been able to give before. And the quilts are peculiarly precious as representing the work of your own hands. God bless you all; this gift is a heartening expression of our fellowship in Christ.

Brother Peter Dyck, one of our workers writes, "May I once again send a most heart-felt vote of appreciation to our women who make such excellent quilts and comforts which it is our privilege and joy to distribute."

The M.C.C. spent a total of $139,940.73 for relief in the fiscal year of 1941-1942. This included the value of clothing shipments.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

KNOW YOUR COMMUNITY

Russel Conwell, the famous minister of the Baptist Temple in Philadelphia a generation ago, became widely famous for a lecture he delivered throughout the country hundreds of times. The title of the lecture was "Acres of Diamonds." The popular moral to this address was that people everywhere had golden opportunities in their own homes if they but looked for them and recognized them.

A Young People's Project

It is a significant fact that both in the week-day and Sunday schools we spend practically all of our time studying from books about distant places, ancient times and long ago but very little if any about the home community during the present time. We assume that there is no need of studying our own communities because we know all about them. This is not true. Most people know very little factual knowledge about the areas immediately around them.

It would be a splendid project for young people's groups to study their own communities. To find out how many families are residing within a given area, the number of adults and children, the length of time they have lived there and other factors that help one understand the people as individuals and the community as a whole. One would want to know how many of these people belong to church. How many attend church regularly? What is the attitude toward church on the part of those who do not attend and why don't they show an interest in the religious life of their community?

Why Make A Study

A local community study carefully planned and equally carefully carried out would be most revealing. It would throw new light on that which now seems so familiar. It would reveal problems existing that people had never before imagined. It would disclose possibilities for new lines of Christian service previously not seen. It would provide an opportunity for acquaintance with people who had formerly been strangers. No finer initial contact for the church could be made than through such an approach. The way to self-improvement is through self-examination and self-criticism. The same holds true for an institution like the local church and the community. The original idea of the Mennonite Church was as a holy community; a brotherhood; a community of saints. A study of ourselves from the community angle would disclose to us more clearly how far we are from being holy communities or small working models of the Kingdom of God as Menno Simons taught his followers to be.

1943 - THIS YEAR - 1943

"Draw Out Thy Soul"

NEVIL SHUTE in his Pied Piper has portrayed to us a type of compassion for which the world has always stood in need of. He lets a man, ripe with age, walk through the pages of his book in the path of a devastating war that leaves behind it the shattered ruins of life without and within. The author allows his hero to gather a few "fragments" out of the ruins and to bring them through compassionate love and utter self-forgetfulness to a safer shore. Fittingly and so true to human nature, Nevil Shute leaves him at the end of the journey in full contentment—content because he had nothing! He had spent himself.

Not only in a period of war is there need for compassionate love but this need is ever present with the human race. Perhaps alone in the Garden of Eden, before sin entered its gates, can we point to two souls to whom, for a period of life, the thirsting and longing of the human soul remained unknown. They had no need of compassion. Since that brief time, history has written a story of the race so dramatic in all its acts, so tragic through its scenes that the Heart of God intervened and sent a Redeemer. In Him the dying race received again the gift of Hope and Light and Life.

We who have taken into our hearts the Gift that came by divine compassion to still the hunger of our soul, must exercise compassionate love unto the many who long for One whom yet they do not know for this hunger lies innate in the human soul. The Creator, Himself, placed it there that by this hunger His creation might return to Him.

God's commandment to us is:
Draw out thy soul to the hungry, satisfy the afflicted soul. Isaiah 58:10.

Each soul is on a quest to still its inner hunger. Too often it seeks to find its satisfaction at the table of material blessings or from the shelves of wisdom. Good to remember are the first brief scenes in the act of the human drama in which God intervenes with His gift of the Christ. A dynamic change occurs in the souls of the few that received Him gladly. Instead of hunger their hearts held full satisfaction and joy. They were satisfied by Him, the Christ.

In a time of war there is an unusual amount of physical hunger and pain that challenges the multitudes to share material gifts, to put forth every effort to alleviate the sufferer. Far greater! Oh could we but sense it! Is the hunger and the pain in the souls of men intensified, too, where the hand of war has left its tragic wounds. Would to God that at the beginning of another year we might be given a vision of the sea of souls that cry to us for help. Would to God that as a multitude we might arise to answer the call. Surely, now is the time for the Church of God to put on a heart of compassion and to go out among the hungry, ministering unto their needs, for are they not again as sheep having no shepherd? They seek anew the meaning of life in chaos and darkness; the light of faith amid their shattered hopes. Once Christ spent all to break the Bread for us who hungered so. Love's compassion was so strong! shall we not rise to spend ourselves that some might be fed?

I need not travel far to find a hungry soul. I may find one even within the walls of my own home. Few are those who have made the Bread of Life their constant satisfaction that every hunger of the heart is stilled in Him. On every hand there are those in need of love, of kindness and thoughtfulness; there are those that hunger for sympathy and understanding, for confidence and trust. And, oh, the burdens that need burden-bearers! And oh, the souls that need the Bread of Life!

To us who would follow the Man of the Cross, the voice of the Almighty calls again:
"Draw out thy soul to the hungry, satisfy the afflicted soul."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbert A. Regier, Los Angeles, California

JANUARY 17—"Finally, my brethren, be strong in the Lord, and in the power of his might." Eph. 6:10.

Every provision that has been made for the Christian has been made with one end in view "That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works." God desires His child to be strong, and His word to Joshua still stands, Josh. 1:9, "Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the Lord thy God is with thee withersoever thou goest." I Cor. 2:5, "That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God." "My brethren, be strong in the Lord!"

JANUARY 18—"Put on the whole armour of God." Eph. 6:11a.

God never violates the rights of man's free will. Salvation is for "Whosoever will." This principle also applies to the provisions God has made for the Christian's life—we'll be no stronger than we desire to be, for the desire of man rules over the will of man. This fact, however, does not keep God from exhorting man to lay hold of His divine provision, and His provision is a spiritual armour which is able to withstand every assault that the enemy of soul may wage against us. But many of God's people have gone down on "faith's Battle field," because they have never obeyed His command to, "Put on the whole armour of God."

JANUARY 19—"For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against... rulers of... darkness." Eph. 6:12.

The greatest battles that are being fought are not those upon the battle fields of this world, but rather those that are raging in the human heart. Just because a person accepts the Lord Jesus as personal saviour does not mean that he is now through with the devil. Some one has expressed it well by saying, "If the devil can not keep us from accepting Jesus Christ, he will try to make us satisfied to live on the outskirts of our Christian experience." "Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day."

JANUARY 20—"Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." Eph. 6:14a

It is ever increasingly more evident that God does not want us to fall defeated before the enemy. "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth." Now truth is the band that girds up and keeps together the flowing robes, so that the Christian soldier of the Cross may be unencumbered for action. Note Ex. 12:11. Jesus said in John 14:6, " I am the truth." In John 17:17, "Thy Word is Truth." And in I John 5:6, "The Spirit is truth." Thus the spiritual loins of the Christian being girt about with the Lord Jesus, the Word of God, and the Holy Spirit, certainly Satan will find it impossible to attack there.

JANUARY 21—"And having on the breastplate of righteousness." Eph. 6:14b

The breastplate was provided to protect the front and shoulders. And thus a good soldier of the Cross needs a "breastplate," but his is to be a breastplate of righteousness. In Jer. 23:6, we read, "The Lord (is) our righteousness." Also in I Cor. 1:30, "But of Him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us... righteousness." With the Lord Jesus then as our "breastplate of righteousness," it will be impossible for the devil to thrust in his dart of condemnation. Oh, what marvelous provisions of grace.

JANUARY 22—"And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Eph. 6:15.

If the Christian soldier is going "to stand," then his feet must be shod. Now this denotes two things, (1) He must not give way to weariness, for it would mean defeat. (2) He must be ready to impart to others the Gospel of Peace, which, is threefold. According to Rom. 5:1, we must first make "Peace with God." This brings us "Peace from God," Phil. 1:2. As a result we have, according to Phil. 4:7, the "Peace of God." How is it with you, dear Christian friend? Can you with Paul say, "I am ready to preach the gospel to you."

JANUARY 23—"Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." Eph. 6:16.

It is no uncommon practice for a bandit to snatch some innocent victim and hold that one in front of him as a protecting shield against the flying bullets of law enforcing agencies. So it is with the Christian—he is urged to use the "Shield of Faith" as a constant source of protection against the fiery darts of the devil, which are continually directed against him. But who or what is that shield? Listen to Gen. 15:1, "Fear not, Abram: I am thy shield." And faith is the Christian's only means of laying hold upon God as saviour and protector.

JANUARY 24—"And take the helmet of salvation." Eph. 6:17a.

In I Thess. 5:8, Paul says, "But let us, who are of the day, be sober, putting on. . .for an helmet, the hope of salvation." Now the helmet is for the head, and the head of course is the seat of the mind, which, when it has laid hold of the sure gospel "hope" of eternal life through Jesus Christ, will not receive false doctrine, or give way to Satan's temptation of despair. God does not want His children to be armed with an uncertain hope, but with a "know-so salvation."

JANUARY 25—"And the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God." Eph. 6:17b.

Let us immediately recognize that it doesn't say that the Bible is the sword, for the Bible is more than that. The Bible is the armory of God containing many swords, for every statement of God is a "two-edged sword," (Heb. 4:12), striking some with conviction and conversion, and others with condemna-conviction and conversion, and others with condemna-spun theory or human arguments that brings conviction to the human heart, but rather the word of God as wielded by the consecrated Christian in the power of the Holy Spirit. Let us truly arm ourselves with His Word, that we may wage a winning battle to the glory of God.

Test For the Sunday School Teacher

1. What is my work as teacher?
2. To whom am I responsible for this work?
3. Does it have a rightful place in my life?
4. Am I growing in efficiency through the study of the books in the training course for the Sunday school workers?
5. Do I heartily cooperate in all the plans of my superintendent?
6. Do I notify the superintendent a day in advance when compelled to be absent?
7. Do I keep correct records?
8. Do I communicate with absentees each week?
9. Do I send birthday cards and letters?
10. Do I give at least an hour's study to my lesson each week?
11. Am I so familiar with my lesson that I can leave my teacher's textbook at home on Sunday morning?
12. Do I visit in the homes and keep the parents informed about the work?
13. Do I set a fine example of Christian living and faithful performance of all obligations of my church?
14. Do I spend much time in prayer for my work and for the pupils entrusted to my care?
15. Do I plan and pray for the conversion of my pupils?
16. Do I radiate the Spirit of Jesus Christ?

"May God help me to know that I may teach; and help me to live that what I teach shall count."

LITTLE THINGS

"I am done with great things and big things, great institutions and big success, and I am for those tiny invisible, molecular moral forces that work from individual to individual, creeping through the crannies of the world like so many soft rootlets, or like the capillary oozing of water, yet which, if you give them time will rend the hardest monuments of man's pride."—William James

WORK AMONG CHILDREN

Swift Current, Saskatchewan

With thanks to God, the giver of all good and perfect gifts, we look back to the work done among the children during the summer vacation period. From a human view point we need to consider the work this year as carried out under more difficulties than in former years, because of the crop failure last fall. However, that does not limit God and, in spite of it, we came through well with our finances.

Thirty-one individuals were willing to go and work among the children. Approximately 315 children were taught God's word in our summer Bible school. Since the work in this district is carried on by the Swift Current Bible School, almost all the teachers came out of this school. We are grateful for others who also were willing to lend a hand. Since we are indebted to the Lord for all His grace we need to say, "Praise the Lord for all His goodness." At all times, we need to be diligent in effort and in prayer, so that the work may progress still more.

Children's and Young People's Camps

Another phase of our work among the young people in our churches, is the work in the children's and young people's camps. We find a suitable place, where it is convenient to be secluded with the different age groups for a week, to study God's Word. Such a place is sought along a stream where the children can bathe as part of their recreation. As soon as such a place is secured, written invitations are sent to all the surrounding church groups. Everyone who comes to these camps or retreats is to bring his own bedding and is asigned space in one of the tents. A small payment is made which insures three meals per day.

In the forenoon and afternoon sessions the different Bible and religious subjects are taught. In the evenings evangelistic messages are delivered, and the group furnishes choir and quartet and also instrumental music appropriate for the occasion. Miss Aganetha Fast, missionary from China, was with us one afternoon and shared many interesting things about the work in China.

One hundred twenty-seven were registered for this retreat. Many others, such as parents or friends, visited the camp in the afternoons, evening sessions, or on Sunday. We are grateful for all interest and support given for this work in gifts or prayer. May the Lord reward and repay such persons for their help.

Young People in Relation to Conference-wide Efforts for Christ and the Church

By Helen Hiebert Mueller *

Since its organization, the Young People's Union of the General Conference has had as its purpose the realization of "A United Mennonite Youth in Christ." First, to be Christ-centered; then, to be united. Stimulating the interest and enlisting the efforts of young people to work toward this unity is a responsibility which rests jointly with local, district, and union leaders. These leaders must all work together, realizing that each organization is an essential part of the others.

In order that we may get a clearer idea of the functions of the local group, the district organization, and the Young People's Union, we want to see what has been done, what is being done, and what might be done. I. What has been done? What has been done in the Western District? Since its beginning, in 1893, the Western District C. E. Convention has shown an interest in missions. In the early convention records, mention is made of offerings received for home and foreign missions. Recently there are recorded more specific projects.

The General Conference Young People's Union is relatively young and has only begun its activity. In the way of past projects there is little to report. However, in both the district and the Young People's Union the thought that has been paramount is that of loyalty to Christ and the Church. II. What is being done now? At our district C. E. Convention in July we adopted as projects for the year, (1) the support of C. P. S. camps; (2) the support of Ernst Harder; (3) a mission project in South America, to be designated by the M. C. C; (4) a war relief project, to be designated by the M. C. C; (5) home and foreign mission projects, to be selected, and contributions to be made as each society is able; (6) the support of district and union young people's work. Of equal importance with these resolutions which call for financial help, are those which have to do with the mental and spiritual development of young people. Our local societies were encouraged to form study groups using the "core course" arranged by the M.C.C. for our boys in C. P. S. camps. It was also suggested that each society should find some way of keeping up contact with the boys in camp.

The common ground on which all district young people's organizations meet is that of projects. In every district several goals are set up to guide young people in their living and in their giving. The use of the prayer calendar and young people's standards are special projects of several districts. At least half of the six districts in the General Conference have as one of their projects the support of C. P. S. camps. In every district one or several retreats are held each year. Most district organizations are now contributing something toward General Conference Y. P. work. Several are helping to support Ernst Harder while he is in school in the states.

The projects which are sponsored by the Young People's Union are: (1) the use of the standards; (2) the promotion of the Follow-Up System—something which the individual districts have not put to universal use; (3) distribution of prayer calendars; (4) apportionment for the general Y. P. U. fund—one dollar per year per society in each district; (5) support of Ernst Harder; (6) contributions for home and foreign missions; and (7) war relief and C. P. S. This fairly well covers anything the various districts have undertaken to do. III. What could be done? It is an old saying, and true, that a chain is no stronger than its weakest link. So, too, perhaps, we may have to judge our youth organizations—local, district, and conference groups.

What, then, can we do to strengthen and build up our young people's work?

What can the local group do? First of all, it must furnish worthwhile programs. Since programs seem to be the backbone of C. E. societies, they should be more than mere entertainment. Discussion meetings, study groups, and panel discussions are worthwhile; visiting speakers, young people from other near-by groups add interest and inspiration to meetings which are in danger of becoming drab. In addition, each society should take up convention projects. There is specifically one thing which should be the work of local organizations: that is keeping up contact with boys in camp. Letters sent regularly, cash for incidental expenses, home town papers, church bulletins, books, periodicals, The Mennonite, The Tidings—remembering the boys in such ways will let them feel that our interest in them and in their welfare is genuine. Activity of a local organization in this sphere may go even farther. When a Mennonite father says to his son—and this is an actual occurrence—"No, you can't go to a C. P. S. camp; I'd have to support you there. You go to a military camp where you get paid."—then it is time for the young people to rise to the occasion. Then they should say, "We'll see that you're taken care of. We may not be able to pay you army wages, but we'll see you through if you'll only live up to your convictions." And think of the thrill young folks would get out of doing a thing like that!

The district and Y. P. U. might jointly do some things. The coordinating of administrative routine is essential. In this the Union and all districts will need to work together. Centralization, a sympilfying of methods, the elimination of "red tape" will help us toward the unity and coordination which we so sorely need.

Another important matter is that of getting acquainted with young people of other districts. Here we are, working for the same cause, holding to the same high ideals, following common interests—and we don't know each other. Why not have a young people's directory which gives information about leading young people from every district? Why not correspond with those in other districts who are doing over there what we are trying to do here? An exchange of retreat leaders is an excellent thing which has been tried. Might it not be well to have an exchange of retreaters also?

The choosing and training of leaders for conference work is something in which young people are involved. Youth may volunteer its service, but talented, promising young people should also be recruited by ministers, Sunday School and Y. P. workers. When certain young people show special aptitude and enthusiasm for a particular type of work, their talents and abilities should be fostered, and they should be given every opportunity to serve in their field of interest.

Of the many lessons youth must learn, an important one is cooperation with young people and with older people. Our goal is the same; methods sometime differ. We must be willing to learn from those who are older and more experienced than we. The Union constitution describes that organization as "an auxiliary of the General Conference." This implies subservience, and the willingness to be of help to the General Conference when we are needed. Young people's work is the training ground for church and conference work, and we young people must not permit it to become an end in itself.

At the Western District C. E. Convention in 1904, Rev. C. E. Krehbiel made the following statement (this is a free translation from the German record): "Impulsive youth desires to conquer the world. This enthusiasm of youth must not be stifled, but it must be directed into the proper channels. This is the work of the young people's organization." And it is a task to which we must today give our talent, our strength, and our devotion.

Finally, let us remember that at the center of any Christian enterprise is our willingness to be used of God, our willingness to put to use the power He has given us. A great evangelist to students throughout the world, has said, "O Christian, if you have the will as you have the power, you can win the world for Christ." God has given us the power. Will we use it?

JESUS THE GREAT PHYSICIAN

John 5:2-17 Read chap. 5

Healing for the Body

A successful physician does all he can; he uses his best knowledge and understanding to effect cures. In reality, however, he only makes conditions as favorable as possible for nature to do its work. He uses his skill in applying nature's remedies. The most skillful physician can not effect a cure in every case. Jesus, the Great Physician, never lost a case and was able to make all who believed in Him altogether whole. He was deeply moved by human illness, suffering, helplessness, and sin. None came to Him for help in vain. At times He sought the ailing and helpless ones. Sometimes He saw a poor sufferer who would gladly welcome a cure but who felt that there was no cure possible.

Jesus sees one of these in our lesson, by the pool of Bethesda in Jerusalem. Bethesda means "The House of Mercy." In this pool appeared much of the mercy of God to the sick and diseased (vs. 4). In our world of misery we need many Bethesdas. Many afflicted lay in the five porches by the pool. How many are afflicted and helpless in the world today who are unable to help themselves! We are all spiritually impotent, blind, halt, and withered. Only the Great Physician can heal us. The people believed that an angel stirred the waters, but the ailing ones were left to themselves to get in. Jesus offers Himself to us, but we must accept Him if we would receive the healing offered to us.

Jesus sees one whose affliction is especially pitiable. The man's condition was hopeless from our human standpoint. This is a true picture of man's spiritual helplessness. Jesus saw the man, understood his condition, and directed a tender question to him (vs. 6), this to express His own pity for him and to arouse faith and expectancy and secure his consent. The man's answer revealed his heart's longing. He had no one who cared enough to help him into the waters. He had been disappointed so often that he had begun to despair. So frequently the poor and helpless have no friends who are willing to help them. So few really care for the souls of the spiritually poor.

Jesus commanded him to do what he had not been able to do for these many years. Faith was needed to obey. Jesus' words were a command to the disease to leave the man; He also gave him power to do what he was bidden to do. He must rise up and walk and take his bed with him, showing that the cure was complete. His cure was immediate. He felt the power of Christ's word healing him. So Christ heals the believing sinner. The proof of our spiritual cure is our rising and walking in newness of life. We can not doubt that in many cases today God answers the prayer of faith for bodily healing. Repentant drunkards, drug addicts, servants of sin find instant deliverance through the power of Christ.

Healing of the Soul

Healing for the soul is of far greater value than bodily healing. Our souls will live on throughout eternity. It was more needful for the impotent man of our lesson to heed Christ's words of verse 14, than it was for him to be healed physically. Jesus saw it necessary to give this caution, for it is common for people to promise much when they are sick and then after fully recovering, to forget all in a short time. Jesus the Great Physician could and still can heal the soul as well the body. He is here in the person of the Holy Spirit and is still at work in the hearts and lives of people. We all need healing for the soul. Christ brings balm to the mind as well as to the soul. He delights in helping those who love and serve Him.

In how far are physical ills the result of sin?

To what extent may we rely upon prayer for the cure of bodily ailments? What do you think would be the result if God should stop working among humanity for a single day (vs. 17)?

At the Sunday school business meeting on December 13 all the officers as well as the twenty-four teachers of the Junior department were elected. The adult classes elected their own teachers the following Sunday. At least two hundred children took part in the program given Christmas eve. An offering for missions netted $1,810.00. Rev. Walter Georing, our pastor, emphasized in his sermon on Christmas Day that the Wise Men sought the Christ Child and worshiped Him. Are we constantly seeking Him and giving our hearts to Him? The most precious gift was the Christ Child, and the most important gift that we can give is our hearts. The combined choruses gave the Christmas cantata, "Holy Night of Memories," on the evening of Christmas Day. Jacob J. Goering led the singing.

Our Christian Endeavor Society had charge of the worship services on the morning of December 26. Due to bad weather the attendance was small. There were no services on December 27 because of a real blizzard.

The year of 1942 was closed with services. We observed communion on New Year's Day. Certainly, to fellowship together around the Lord's table and to commemorate His suffering is a fitting way to start the new year.

Our C. E. society had a fellowship banquet in the basement as a close for the old year and a beginning for the new year. Dr. Bittinger of McPherson was the principal speaker. Those present reported an inspirational and up-lifting evening. The first Sunday morning message of the year was brought by Roland Georing, a ministerial student at the Hartford Seminary.

Christmas vacation brought home a number of students, teachers, a few C.P.S. boys, and others. We were glad to have them with us, and we owe them our support and prayers in the future.

Our Ladies Mission and Aid Society remembered all boys in camp with a box of nuts and candies. Funeral services for Mrs. P. J. Strausz were held on January 5. —Harold H. Goering, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

In looking over the past year we have many pleasant memories to "digest."

The Pacific District Conference, held here in June, was the outstanding event with so many fine inspirational contacts. The Frank Mannings from Africa gave very challenging reports. Such reports make us feel very humble about the very small part that we play in the missionary effort. The Chris Ummels, who are missionaries to migrants in California, represented the home mission work. Their reports were also very stirring. "The harvest is plentiful and the laborers few." The final afternoon of the conference with a vocal concert by Leland Goodell, surely, left us "lifted" by his wonderful rendition of "The Lord is My Shephard," "The Lord's Prayer," and several other numbers.

On Thanksgiving Day Rev. King preached on "The Christian and Thanksgiving." The offering on this day amounted to $907.00. In addition to this offering $125.00 was taken in by the Women's Missionary Society. This last amount is to help the Bethesda Leper Home in India to add to their dairy herd and is to help the Grace Children's Home at Henderson, Nebraska, to buy furniture for their new home. About sixty-five persons enjoyed a bountiful dinner in the basement.

Because we felt an urge to meet, the missionary society did not take a vacation during July and August. Quite a little sewing has been done for the Grace Children's Home. A Christmas box of dresses and stockings was sent to the Indian mission at Oraibi.

The C.E. societies meet at 1:30 on Sunday afternoons in order to conserve rubber and gas. Fern Waltner is president of the Senior society, Gladys Aeschliman of the Juniors, with Mrs. King superintendent of the Juniors. The Juniors are studying South America and its missions as their project. The second Sunday of each month is wholly devoted to that study, and is sponsored by our Methodist co-worshippers, as that is "Methodist Sunday."

To take the place of the mid-week prayer meeting, Brother King has outlined a study in the book of Romans. Each Sunday he assigns us a chapter to study. In this way it is more united. A prayer circle to be held in individual homes between 7:30 and 8 o'clock each evening is also a part of the program. Prayer is the greatest power by which we can fight this tremendous struggle. Are we making America worthy of God's blessing? —Mrs. Alvin M. Rubin, Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Summerfield, Illinois

Our pastor, Rev. E. Basinger, is convalescing from a very serious operation. He entered the Barnes Hospital at St. Louis, Missouri, on November 20. Through the grace of our Lord and Master he was permitted to come home on December 20. He is getting along nicely and is preparing to take charge of his church on January 10. During his absence Rev. Wilbert Cannon, a ministerial student at McKendree College, had charge of the services.

We have installed a modern furnace in our meetinghouse.

Brother Donald Baer was chosen as deacon to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Brother Dan Hirstein, and Brother Gus Ruth was chosen to fill the vacancy as assistant superintendant of the Sunday School. —Mrs. P. H. Berger

BRUDERTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillsboro, Kansas

Shortly before Christmas thirteen Mennonite churches in and around Hillsboro collected a truckload of food which was sent to the C.P.S. camp at Colorado Springs. After Christmas another load was collected for the Fort Collins camp. The Vogt Grocery truck made the deliveries.

In order to save gasoline and tires, the Brudertal Church has had some of the regular Sunday evening meetings on Sunday afternoons. The members bring lunch, which they enjoy together in the church basement.

A group of young men left for C.P.S. camps on December 26. Randolf Penner, a member of our church, was in the group We had a farewell for him at his home on December 25.

IMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Los Angeles, California

We have experienced a year of rich blessings. Souls have been saved and others have been drawn closer to the Lord. Members were added by letters of transfer and by baptism.

On the evening of November 1 the Woman's Missionary Sewing Society conducted their annual missionary program. The guest speaker was Mrs. H. M. Coen, a recently returned missionary from Africa who works under the Sudan Interior Mission. She had a very inspiring message. Our society shipped 170 pounds of clothing to the M.C.C. for war relief.

During November Rev. Frank E. Davies of the Bell Friends Church conducted an interesting series of evangelistic meetings.

To date, eight of our young men are serving their country, and others will leave in the near future. The eight are: Irvin Richert, Franklin Wiig, Virgil Hall, Elmer Rand, Dan Kroeker, Herbert Kroeker, Fred Klopfenstein, and Melvern Pankratz.

The church choir rendered the Christmas cantata, "The Christmas Oratorio." Our regular quarterly communion service will take place the first Sunday of the New Year. On January 10 a church dinner was served in the basement, and the annual business meeting was held after it.

We are in a world of strife, but we are not of this world. Therefore, we hope that the peace of God may fill your hearts throughout the new year.

—Mrs. F. H. Regehr

BUTTERFIELD MENNONITE CHURCH

Butterfield, Minnesota

Greetings with Psalm 103. During the past year our God held his protecting arms over us, and we trust Him for the coming year. A change has been made in our Sunday school. The first Sunday of this year a Junior Sunday school started meeting in the basement. Mrs. B. J. Rempel is the superintendent. The young people have a separate class which meets in the balcony. The adult class remains in the auditorium proper, all in one large class. Our pastor is the teacher.

Our aged couple, Uncle Daniel Hubins, passed their sixty-fourth wedding anniversary on New Year's Day. They rejoice in the Lord who has kept them so wonderfully through all these years.

The winter has been cold, and at present we have much snow. The weather during the past spring and summer was very favorable. We had enough moisture and sunshine. Crops were very good. We thank God for all our material blessings, but above all thanks be to God for his unspeakable gift, Jesus our Lord and Saviour.

—Mrs. Ted Linscheid, Church Secretary

IN MEMORIAM

LUDWIG A. BEER, son of Jacob Beer and Anna Lehman Beer was born in Canton Bern, Switzerland on November 17, 1860, and he passed away at the Bethesda Home for the Aged, Goessel, Kansas, on November 10, 1942.

In the spring of 1883 he came to this country. Two times he returned to his native land for a visit.

In young manhood he united with the Mennonite Church at Bluffton, Ohio. Since his occupation took him from place to place he did not take his membership out of this church, even though he had very little opportunity of attending services there. Many years ago he requested the privilege of participation in the Holy Communion of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, which was granted as a privilege for life.

For many years he served as colporteur of the Mennonite Book Concern, and he was therefore known in most of the churches of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America, especially so, in those of the Middle West. Thousands of religious books and Bibles were sold in the homes, where they exerted and will continue to exert a good influence. This good work he carried on till age and health conditions prevented its continuance.

In February, 1939, he entered the Bethesda Home for the Aged, Goessel, Kansas, and here he found a permanent home for his last days. Under the good care in the home he enjoyed fairly good health and made himself useful where he could. Some weeks ago he began to fail with heart trouble, and at times he suffered considerable distress, but would soon rally again. During the last three days of his life the suffering was more intense, but he found comfort and strength in the Lord, and was assured of security in Him.

Two sisters who live in Switzerland and one brother, Jacob J. Beer of Columbus Grove, Ohio, survive him.

Upon his request his remains were laid to rest on the cemetery of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas. Funeral services were held on November 13 at the Bethesda Home for the Aged and at the First Mennonite Church of Christian with Rev. P. P. Wedel in charge.

JONATHAN P. L. GRABER was born near Freeman, South Dakota, on December 11, 1888, the son of Peter Graber and Elizabeth Graber, nee Gering. He attended Freeman Junior College for several terms. On June 28, 1908, he was baptized by Rev. Joseph Kaufman, and received into the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church. On April 25, 1915, he was united in marriage with Fannie Kaufman. To them three daughters were born, Grace, Della, and Faye.

In 1932, he submitted to a serious operation. At the time, the attending surgeon diagnosed the ailment as cancer. However, it has since been definitely ascertained that it was not cancer, but an equally fatal disease known as Lympho-Blastoma. Shortly after this operation, upon the advice of his brother, Dr. B. P. Graber, he went to Chicago where he received radium treatments by eminent physicians. For some time it seemed that the deceased might again regain good health, but the deadly disease continued its destructive work. A little more than a year ago, recurring pains became so severe that he was compelled to seek once more the help of doctors. His brother-in-law, Dr. E. J. Kaufman, took him to Rochester where he received a very thorough examination which definitely revealed that he was suffering from Lympho-Blastoma, a rare disease. More radium treatments were advised, and the deceased submitted to such treatments for some time, but apparently without results. On November 5, he was forced to go to bed. All that human skill and kindness could do was done for him, but death could not be denied this time. He died on November 20, in the circle of his faithful wife and daughters, to whom he said "Meet me up there."

The deceased, in his lifetime, was a great admirer of nature, and he was never more content than when surrounded by the great wonders of the universe, not constructed by human hands, but by the Creator himself. In his home can be found many stuffed birds and animals, his own handiwork. He was a hard worker, a good husband, and a loving father.

He is survived by his wife and three daughters, and a son-in-law, also his aged mother, two brothers and four sisters.

Joel Amstutz, March 16, 1879, to December 17, 1942, was born in Allen County, Ohio. He was the son of Abraham and Anna Amstutz. He was married to Caroline Diller, who with five children suvives him. The children are: Kathryn and Paul of Bluffton, Odula and Leland at home, and Mrs. Esther Penza of Cleveland.

CLEOPHAS NEUENSCHAWNDER, aged eighty-five, member of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, died December 17, 1942, following an illness of diabetes. He is survived by his wife and five sons. The sons are: Calvin of Lima, Hiram of Cincinnati, Harry of Oxford, and Frank and Levi of Pandora. Two surviving brothers are: Jeff of Woodburn, Indiana, and Dan of Bluffton. Three sisters who survive him are: Anna Gillion of Bluffton, Indiana; Elizabeth Flora, Gates, Oklahoma, and Adena Burkholder of Bluffton, Ohio.

DAN J. HIRSTEIN, son of John and the late Mrs. Katherine Baer Hirstein, was born December 13, 1893, and died on December 22, 1942. While he was young his parents moved to a farm about three and one-half miles southeast of Trenton, Illinois. In 1919 he married Frieda Berger, his now bereaved widow. Their children Ethel, Edith, and Gerald, were injured in the accident which caused the death of their father. He was a farmer. In early youth he became a member of the Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois. He served as deacon for a number of years and was assistant Sunday school superintendent. He is survived by his aged father; two brothers, Sam who resides on a farm southeast of Trenton and Edward of Galconda, Illinois, and one sister, Mrs. G. W. Ruth of Summerfield.

JACOB E. REMPEL was born in Marion County, Kansas, March 31, 1885, and passed away on December 18, 1942. In 1911 he was married to Maria R. Duerksen, who passed away in 1918 leaving him with five small children. In October 1919 he was married to Liese Balzer. They enjoyed wedded life for twenty-three years and were blessed with two sons and a daughter, Erna, who preceded him in death. Mourning him are his wife and his children: Frieda Unrau, Hilda Holman, Mariann Dyck, Waldo, Lula Dyck, Lloyd, and Paul. He was a member of the Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas. He served on the church council.

Have You Not Read?

God's Holy Word the Bible true,
Was meant for all: for me, for you;
And Christ to everyone would say,
"Have you not read my Word today?"

We read so much of this and that—
A lot of meaningless chit-chat,
And of't in evil ways we're led
Because God's Word we have not read.

How can we grieve our Savior so,
To spurn the truth that we should know;
And starve our souls, when living bread
Is found in Him—Have you not read?

—Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas: Due to the blizzard we could not hold our annual church business meeting on December 29. Mrs. Jacob Dirks passed into the great beyond on December 8 at the Bethel Deaconess Hospital. One daughter, Sister Sara, survives. Several sisters of the "Naehverein" did some mending for the C.P.S. boys of Colorado Springs. The clothes to be mended were brought by Brother and Sister Menno Martens when they came home for their Christmas vacation. Twenty of our young men are now in the service of our government.

—Brother L. J. Horsch in sending in the report for the fourth quarter writes, "I always utilize the bank in this work. I am not a skilled bookkeeper. This is a laborious task for me. I am convinced, decidedly so, that the General Conference needs a central treasury located at Newton with a paid treasurer who can keep all the books for each board and committee, making payments only upon orders from the respective board or committee. That is a detail that can be worked out later. The principal item is to centralize our widespread, spider-web-like system we now have. In fact, I feel that the individual who is employed as treasurer could also act as a statistician and even a secretary.

—Brother L. H. Linscheid, pastor of the Bethany Church, Freeman, South Dakota, writes, "We had our annual church business meeting on December 28. It was decided to drop our church bulletin. . . in view of the fact that we are launching on a heavy financial program for 1943. Efforts will be made to reduce and cancel, if possible, the parsonage indebtedness. We will try to get The Menno-

The election resulted as follows: deacon, John W. Tschetter, trustee, Jacob T. Gross; secretary, Joseph A. Wallman; educational committee, Mrs. Richard Waltner. The pastor was re-elected for a three-year term."

—Brother J. J. Plenert wrote on December 30, "We have had rain since Sunday evening, and it has rained continually and is doing a good job right now. We are happy that it has not been snow in that amount. It has not been so cold with all the rain for which we are grateful. One day when it rained and froze, the street became like glass."

You will gain more from the expositions if you become thoroughly familiar with the psalm before coming to the service." "The service of worship Christmas morning was very well attended in spite of inclement weather, gasoline rationing, and a program on the previous evening. We wish to commend the faithfulness with which this custom, which is so largely forgotten in the world at large, is kept alive in this church. Surely, the birth of the Christ child should be honored with more than a big dinner." A group of young pepole sang carols for the shut-ins at Christmas. Brother and Sister Jacob G. Krehbiel celebrated their golden wedding anniversary quietly at home on January 1.

—The bulletin of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., for December 18 had a very striking illustration on the cover page. In the center of the picture lies a beautiful, large Bible. Projecting from underneath it is a copy of The Mennonite. Peeking from under both of these is a copy of The Missionary News and Notes. To the right lies a volume containing our articles of faith. On it lies a church history. To the left of the big Bible lies a Christian Sunday School Quarterly, the church bulletin, and a "Through the Bible Study" pamphlet. Underneath it all are the words "Have You Not Read" from Mark 12:10. What a contrast this is to homes where the visitor's eye first falls upon certain well-known picture magazines and pages and pages of "funnies." —Bulletin, Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: Under the heading "Our Boys In Service," thirty-five are listed as being in C.P.S. camps. Of these thirty-three are church members and two are not. (Remember that the baptismal age in this church is at a considerably higher age level than in many other churches.) Of seventeen boys in non-combatant or regular service, eight are church memebrs and nine are not. (This church has a much better loyalty to the peace teachings of Christ than many of our churches.—Editor) The Young Women's Mission Society is continuing its study of India. Eighty-three persons were received into the fellowship this past year through baptism. There was a net increase of seventy-four members. The total membership on January 1, 1943, was 822. The total offerings in 1942 were $14,708.49. In 1941 they had been $8,159.92. "It is of interest to note that A. P. Ratzlaff reports that he sold 82 Bibles and 6 New Testaments during the year. A total of 430 Hymnaries, including the 375 for the church were also orderd and sold by him. Mr. Ratzlaff makes it a practice to order all his books and material from our own Mennonite Book Concern." (Berne, Indiana)

—The Annual Report of the Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon, is very interestingly and neatly done. The church now has a membership of sixty-one. On December 16, 1943, it will observe its fifteenth anniversary. Some points of emphasis in the past year have been: 1. Family altars. 2. Relief work as carried on by the M.C.C. 3. Responsibilities as a church. The church is seeking to become more and more self-supporting. Graphs on the back cover show that while Sunday school attendance fell off a little from 1941, the Sunday school offerings reached an all-time high. Church attendance shows a continued increase. This little mission church provides a copy of either The Mennonite or the Bundesbote for each family.

—First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: Used Sunday school picture cards are being sent to our mission station in Arizona. The ladies mission societies intend to sew aprons and hem towels and tea towels for the C.P.S. camps. Used feed sacks are being utilized. The church now issues a four-page bulletin.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa. will celebrate its fiftieth anniversary on February 8. Rev. A. M. Fretz was the first pastor. He is still living, and two of the original twenty-seven charter members are still living. The anniversary will be observed with a week of meetings conducted by Brother J. E. Hartzler.

—The Third Quarterly Conference of the Eastern District will be held in the Zion Church, Souderton, on January 18.

Eastern District makes this request to all pastors and correspondents of the district: "In order to have the Eastern District church news appear together under one head, please send your material to me as soon as possible. Probably you have only a line or two, but by including these few lines from the different churches we will have interesting reports." (Brother Nyce has sent in some good reports. Will you help him with news items.—Editor)

—The Newton (Kansas) Community Chorus presented "The Messiah" by Handel on January 3. Walter H. Hohmann was director, and Violet Miller was the accompanist.

—Deep Run Mennonite Church, Deep Run, Pa. The church council meets quarterly. It is made up of the trustees, the deacons, the Sunday school superintendent, the president of the C.E., and the pastor. The missionary society sent 350 pounds of clothes to the M.C.C. office.

THE SUPPLEMENT

In this paper you will find the fourth supplement for this year. It gives a report of money received by six treasurers of our General Conference during the fourth quarter of 1942. Furthermore it indicates the total amount received from any church during the year, and it states the average per member giving of each church for the year. It also gives the report of the Executive Committee of Mission Societies for the last quarter. Because of a lack of space some of the reports are completed in the main part of the paper.

The last three supplements, including this one, differ in size from the first one which was roughly 6x9 inches. The change was made because of postal regulations. However, the present size is very convenient for filing.

The supplement was born at the General Conference session of 1941. The Board of Publication recommended to the conference: "Since the reports of offerings take up so much space in our church papers, we recommend that, beginning with January, 1942, these be published quarterly in supplement form in the English language and sent out with each of the papers." The conference adopted this recommendation.

The supplement is easy to use. In about two minutes grandmother or Johnnie, who is in the fourth grade, can find out just how much money their church sent in to the six treasurers mentioned. First, they find the district to which their church belongs. Second, they think of the name of the church and then find it in the alphabetical listing. Next they move their finger from left to right across the sums to the total for the quarter and finally to the figure which tells how much money their church sent in per member during that quarter. In the fourth supplement, of course, they find the per member giving for the year and the church total for the year.

May the supplement be an encouragement to each reader. If a church has sent in only a small amount, yet has done its very best for Christ, then it has no reason to feel ashamed. Remember what Jesus said about the widow's mite.

May those with outstanding records be mindful of the fact that they could only give as they did because God made it possible for them. This report does not indicate the ability to give. However, it does give a clearer picture of the stewardship of our churches than has been available heretofore. —rw.

SMALL FOXES

By Ted Schmidt

Once again by the grace of God we have stepped over the threshold into a new year. Once again we must formulate our plans for the coming months. . . . The following are a few of the resolutions that might have been made:

1. Get up ten minutes earlier on Sunday morning in order not to be five minutes late to church.
2. Leave my chewing gum outside the church rather than under the bench or in my mouth.
3. Treat my quarterly as a help rather than as a nuisance.
4. Use my tongue during the discussion period of the Sunday school rather than during the sermon.
5. Sleep in my bed on Saturday night rather than in the church pew on Sunday morning.
6. Put on my wraps after the closing prayer rather than during the last song, when there is so little elbow-room.
7. At the close of the Sunday school period, observe the American rule of "Keep to the right" on the stairways rather than the English custom "To your left."
8. Help that Hymnary to do its part in enriching the morning service rather than let it and myself sit idly by.
9. Follow the sermon rather than the clock.
10. Have a few windows opened to let in some of the fresh air that God has given us so plentifully in the out-of-doors.

The foregoing suggest a few of the smaller things that make up our church life, but how they mar the efficiency and effectiveness of the great things when there are too many of them. For is not the small incorporated in the great? How many of the small foxes (Song of Solomon 2:15) that mar our church life will we be able to keep away from us this coming year?

The E.R.B. and the M.C.C.

At the last annual meeting of the Emergency Relief Board of the Mennonite General Conference, the chairman of this board was delegated to write a brief statement of the relationship between the Emergency Relief Board, E.R.B., and the Mennonite Central Committee, M.C.C. Since The Mennonite and other papers often refer to both of these committees, and since both committees have any similar activities, it was felt that our supporters might find such a statement helpful.

The Emergency Relief Board is a General Conference committee whose purpose is to recieve and expend funds for emergency relief wherever such help is needed. Among our own churches it aims to give relief only on the recommendation of local ministers or deacons or other responsible officials of our churches. The committee will, however, receive applications from any one, but it aims to investigate each case, so as to spend the funds entrusted to it wisely, and give aid only to such people as really deserve help. Indiscriminate giving often does more harm than good; besides, it may use funds which may be needed much more urgently by someone else. It is also assumed that our congregations will take care of their own local cases in so far as this is possible, reserving the funds of the Emergency Relief Board for special cases where available help is insufficient or where other help cannot be secured.

The Mennonite Central Committee is composed of representatives of a number of different branches of the Mennonite and Amish churches. This committee was formed in 1920 when our brethren in Russia needed our aid. Much work was done in feeding the hungry there, as well as in bringing many to the United States and Canada.

When the Spanish war, and later, the second World War created a refugee problem, and hunger stalked over Europe, the M.C.C. took up the challenge of service and again is aiding the needy. Besides serving in Poland, France, England and India, the M.C.C. is also helping the Mennonites in Paraguay. In all this work a large number of Mennonites and Amish bodies are cooperating whole-heartedly. The Emergency Relief Board is represented on the Mennonite Central Committee by the chairman, I. W. Bauman, and the treasurer, P. H. Unruh. The latter also serves on the executive committee. Most of our relief work in foreign lands is done by the Emergency Relief Board through the M.C.C., because this cooperative method is more economical and efficient than what any individual board's efforts could be. The two boards are, however, independent, and cooperation is on a voluntary basis. In brief, the Emergency Relief Board serves General Conference churches independently but cooperates with the M.C.C. in foreign relief.

Besides relief work, the M.C.C. also has charge of camps for conscientious objectors in this war. The Emergency Relief Board contributes to these camps only in cast of emergency relief like in any other cases. The camps are supported by contributions which are given by individuals and churches specifically for that purpose. The Emergency Relief Board will, however, receive and expend funds which are designated by the donor for relief of the men in such camps.

Support of the emergency relief program of the church has been fine, and our prayer is that this work may continue and receive our consecrated support in the future. As the war goes on, more and more people will need our aid. As Christians, we can serve them "in the name of Christ," the spirit in which these committees work and serve.

Result of Resolution

At the fall session of the Western District Conference, held October 21-22, 1942, the following resolution was passed:

> "Resolved, that we appreciate the privileges we are enjoying under our government, the considerations it is giving us in our peace convictions, and that we instruct the conference secretary to convey this to the President of the United States."

The Secretary of the Western District Conference sent the resolution to the President of the United States and received the following letter:

The White House
November 6, 1942

Herbert E. Miller, Secretary
Western District Conference,
General Conference Mennonite Church of North America,
Deer Creek, Oklahoma.

My dear Mr. Miller,

The President has asked me to thank you for your courtesy in letting him have the resolution embodied in your letter of October thirtieth. He wants you and the members of your Conference to know that he is most appreciative of the thoughtfulness which prompted the adoption of this resolution by the members of your Conference.

Very sincerely yours
M. H. McIntyre
Secretary to the President

Brother Ted Schmidt, author of "Small Foxes" on page 1, has for many years been superintendent of the Sunday school of the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska. The 1942 Year Book gives the enrollment of this Sunday school as 919. Brother Schmidt has two brothers who serve as ministers in Oklahoma. They are August of Meno, and Rudolf of Ft. Cobb.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"THE REAPER"

This is Brother Arthur Li (Kuang-ming). This man, we feel, is very much our own. In him we have an example of what God's grace has done in our mission. When the missionaries first saw him, he was a little, orphaned boy with boils all over his head. He was given the opportunity of going to school and receiving a Christian education. Now he is one of our most able church leaders. His wife, who is one of our school girls, is no less so. They have a gracious family of four sons and two daughters. The oldest son taught vacation Bible school this summer.

Brother Li takes his responsibility as a sacred trust. When the war struck the city of Taming and the constant air raids terrified his little flock of children very much, he was very much concerned as to whether his duty lay with his family or with the church. Prayerfully he sought to know God's will in this matter. "How can I know when a scripture promise is the mind's wishful thinking or whether it is God's definite leading for me?" He asked rather wistfully one day.

He took his family farther inland. However, while enemy planes roared overhead nearly every day, he came to the city to conduct the Wednesday night prayer meeting and the Sunday service. He covered this distance of fifteen miles with his bicycle. Returning home the same day, he rode thirty miles each day that he went to the city. Even when enemy planes roared overhead he continued with the lesson of the day. The song "In the hour of prayer, Jesus plead for me" became very precious to him.

With sickle in hand, he stands here ready as a "reaper." The above picture is symbolical of this earnest laborer. "The harvest is plenteous, but few are the laborers, pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest to send forth laborers into His vineyard." To this challenge we hear Brother Li respond, "Here am I, send me. " Pray ye therefore for the Laborers of our needy General Conference field in China. They are now under a great burden of responsibility.

WILHELMINA KUYF VISITS

Missionary Wilhelmina Kuyf is scheluled to visit the Kansas churches during February. Before this time, beginning with January 17, she is to visit churches in Illinois, Iowa, and Missouri. She comes fresh from China and will be worth hearing.

The following itinerary is incomplete, but the rest of the churches in Kansas will be visited on the way to Oklahoma.

Mennonite Fellowships in Cities

*By Karl Baehr

We of the Chicago Mennonite Student Fellowship know that the fellowship idea for young Mennonites in cities is grand, for we have experienced the most stimulating and rewarding fellowship imaginable for the past three and a half years. It has made us better Christians and better Mennonites.

We were happy to learn recently that two more such fellowships have been established, one in New York and one in South Bend and Mishawaha, Indiana. We present here some facts about our Chicago Fellowship with the hope that such groups will come into being in other cities.

Our fellowship is loosely organized. We have a chairman and a secretary-treasurer. We set our time and place of meeting at each fellowship gathering. Our programs are also arranged from meeting to meeting. Cards are sent to approximately fifty members (there is, of course, a turnover in membership and attendance). At each meeting we have a devotional period, followed by a short business meeting (to decide the place, time, subject for the next meeting, etc.). Then we turn to the program of the evening. At the end of the meeting simple refreshments are served, and an offering is taken. This money has been sent in for relief and the C.P.S. program.

In brief we have held the following types of meetings:

1. Outside speakers.—We have tried to make use of our Mennonite leaders who come to the city. We have had two meetings with Dr. M. C. Lehman on relief work in Europe; Dr. Ed G. Kaufman led a discussion of the problems and the great possibilities of a Mennonite seminary; we have had a session with Dr. Ernest E. Miller of Goshen, and Dr. L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton, on the relation of our Mennonite colleges to the war and the C.P.S. program; Dr. Henry Fast gave an illustrated (movie) lecture on the Mennonites of South America; Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander gave us an understanding of the work of the Home Mission Board of the General Conference; Rev. Donovan Smucker, then midwest secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, talked on the pacifist witness of the historic peace churches. As one with a Mennonite and Brethren background, Kermit Eby, executive secretary of the Chicago Teachers Union, stimulated our thinking on the values and the limitations of Mennonitism.

2. Speakers from our own group.—Dr. J. Winfield Fretz, when he was a member of our Fellowship, discussed Mennonites in Chicago and Mennonite mutual aid. Mrs. Anna Neufeld spoke vividly on Mennonitism in Russia, including a description of the revolution. I have presented a study of secularization among the Mennonites.

3. Discussion meetings.—The following are some of the topics we have discussed: Mennonite History (using Dr. C. Henry Smith's book), the Principle of Non-Resistance, Mennonites and Rural Life, Youth Problems among the Mennonites, the C.P.S. program. In each of these meetings individuals have given prepared talks to serve as starters for the discussion.

4. Entertainment.—During the summer months we have picnicked in various Chicago parks and visited points of interest. On one such occasion Dr. Paul Voth conducted a tour through the Garfield Park Conservatory, which contains the largest collection of tropical ferns and plants in the United States. We have also had musical programs with members of our own group performing: Mr. Herbert Baehr and Mr. John Thut. We have also had one party evening, spent in playing wholesome and stimulating games.

Our program for the coming meetings will be as follows: The next meeting will center around a study of Mennonitism in Chicago. We shall call in the leaders of our Chicago Mennonite missions and together tackle the problem of Mennonites in Chicago. We should like to make a study of what has happened, and what is happening to Mennonites who come to Chicago. We know that few join our Mennonite missions.

Succeeding programs will be discussion meetings revolving around the six booklets prepared for the C.P.S. Core Course. We want to keep up with the educational work of the C.P.S. program.

One of our group after the last meeting said, "It is this Mennonite Fellowship that makes our stay in Chicago tolerable." We can certainly say that we have found God and the spirit of Christ in this group. Could this be one answer to the perplexing problem of young Mennonites in cities becoming lost to Mennonitism?

—Karl Baehr, Chairman of the Chicago Mennonite Fellowship, is the son of Brother and Sister J. P. Baehr, Newton, Kansas. His wife is the former Anne Ruth Ediger, daughter of Brother and Sister J. B. Ediger, who are our missionairies to the Cheyenne Indians of Oklahoma. Brother Baehr is a graduate of Chicago Theological Seminary. He is now studying for his Ph. D. degree at Chicago University, while also serving a church at the same time. His major field of study is the secularization of the Mennonites. In this study he centers upon the breakdown of Mennonite non-conformity and the adoption of worldliness. Brother Baehr won the State Peace Oratorical Contest while a student at Bethel College. Upon graduation he was elected to the Order of the Golden A.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

HISTORY OR HERITAGE

Why History?

In recent years there has come to be a great deal of emphasis laid on the study of Mennonite history. It is a very encouraging sign and should by all means be continued. No religious body can have a great future unless it knows and understands something of the past. Christians will want to know how their faith was preserved for them and who preserved it. They will want to know the story of how their particular church and other churches came to be. They will want to know about important dates, significant events, and pioneering forefathers. They will not be satisfied until they see more clearly the events, the factors, forces, and faces of the past from which the present has come. This is illustrated in some of the earliest writings of the Old Testament and in some of the latest in the New. See for instances such chapters as the twenty-fourth of Joshua and the eleventh of Hebrews in which the writers of those chapters entreat us to the long look back into history. In each case it was to help men understand the present better.

History Not Enough

But the study and understanding of history is not enough; we must also know and understand our Christian heritage. In fact, if a choice is to be made, the latter is to be chosen. The heritage is the essence or the heart of the past. It is the deeper inner meaning of the past. One might say it is the soul of the past, whereas history might be likened unto the body. My concern is that when our various church groups undertake to restudy and rediscover church history they do not stop there. Dates, names, places, and events are bare and meaningless unless they are accompanied by a knowledge of the inner faith.

A Goodly Heritage

We may heartily say with the Psalmist 16:6 "Yea, I have a goodly heritage." Our heritage is indeed a rich and a blessed one; we must not live off the reputation of our forefathers who created it. Our task is to understand it, appreciate it, and cultivate it so that our children and all mankind may come to share in it. The sense of belonging to a fellowship of martyrs, a brotherhood that has seen thousands of its members suffer and die that the truth might be witnessed to in every generation is indeed a precious privilege.

But the one important thing is that we know what our fathers and brothers in the faith died for, that we feel with them so great a concern for the Christian life and the gospel truth that we could and would do the same if called upon to do so. The Mennonite Church has a challenging message today: An evangelical message; a command to live a high and holy life, the refusal to conform to a sinful world, the way of love and sacrifice in time of war as always. This is our history, our heritage, and our herald for tomorrow.

A New Challenge to Bethel College

On January 7 Bethel College received a gift in the amount of a little over twenty-four thousand dollars as a bequest of the late Elizabeth M. Watkins, of Lawrence, Kansas. Gifts in such amounts do not come every day to a small college such as ours and words cannot express our gratitude to Mrs. Watkins and to those who had anything to do with making this gift a reality. May Bethel College prove worthy of this consideration and perpetuate the good work and name of Mrs. Watkins by using this gift in the highest interest of future generations.

Being in the midst of our campaign to raise funds for current budget and debt liquidation, this gift is a great encouragement to the constituency of Bethel College even though it cannot be used for debt reduction, but is set aside for the purpose of the much needed library building, if and when such building can be constructed. This expression of confidence, therefore, comes as a new challenge and will serve as a stimulus to everyone concerned to do his utmost not to let the institution suffer financially during these critical times and in gratitude make his own contribution for the current budget and debt liquidation all the greater so that Bethel College might become debt free before too long.

WHO AM I?

By Amanda Friesen

Who am I?
I am the mother tongue
I am useful in my place.
Sometimes
I am the Devil's tool.
He uses me
To stir up strife in churches,
To promote discord,
To provoke family arguments,
His laugh is heard
When I quote scripture
To evangelize.
He knows
Your neighbors and mine
Will never be saved
As long
As you permit me
To bar from their ears
The message
Of salvation.

"Call Unto Me"

IS PRAYER THE KEY to power? Does the individual's prayer life constitute the barometer of his spiritual fervor? We need not seek long to find the answer to this question for it is found within ourselves. We are our own criterion. How well we know that prayer is the secret of power. It is a characteristic of the thoughtful heart to travel back into the past in order to relive the moments of its spiritual joy when the flow of divine power entered in times of earnest prayer. From such jaunts the heart returns to present paths with the determination to launch out into a deeper prayer life that the future may be better than the past. It also knows that its gardens withered at times when the rainless seasons came—rainless because it had ceased to pray.

If prayer unlocks the divine reservoirs of power to the individual spirit-life, then prayer is also the avenue of power in the life of the church at large.

Once Christ put His finger upon the sins of the churches of Asia, then still so young in years. The one He rebuked for having lost her first love to Him, another for her false teachings, a third for her imperfect works, and still another for her lack of zeal. Should He come again to speak His judgment to the Church now grown to more than nineteen hundred years of age, what would He say? Would He, perhaps, place His finger on its lack of power to witness unto Him and say to us: "Ye have not because ye ask not?"

We marvel at the power of the first church at Jerusalem to whom "the Lord added day by day those that were saved." Of course, it was the Lord that added, but it was the Church that was the conduit for His power. Of this church it is said, "they continued stedfastly . . . in prayers," . . . "and the multitude of them that believed were of one heart and soul." If this could be said of the Church of Christ today, there would be more light and less darkness; there would be more power, dynamic power to overcome the Evil One within ourselves and the nations.

It is not for us to criticize the state of the church, not would that profit her. Let us rather cast our eyes about within our own small temple house. Are its walls still standing firm and strong, or are there ruins waiting a rebuilding? Is the incense of prayer raising as sweet savor to the throne of God or has even the glow among the ashes burned too low? Is His dwelling a place of His abode where still His glory dwelleth? Oh, that again, like once in old Jerusalem, His Church scattered through all the earth and the temple house of our own soul would shake with the power of the presence of God, because we called unto Him!

God's will is done through prayer. His great redemptive plan for all the earth has need of us. Not that He is unable to carry His plans out otherwise, but in love He has chosen us to be laborers with Him. Even Christ wove the pattern of the cross into redemption's loom by prayer. The Father's will was imputed to Him by prayer, and by prayer came His power to fulfill it.

Would that to each of us would come the vision of potent prayer which has its roots imbedded in the soil of human need. From which it rises to bloom in fragrance near the heart of God. May the wounds inflicted on the body, mind, and soul of earth's millions in the present struggle move the Church of Christ, each individual, to seek the throne of grace in intercession's prayer. May the voice of the Almighty come to us through every day of this new year, saying unto us:

"Call unto me, and I will answer thee,
And show thee the great and mighty things,
Which thou knowest not."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Wilbert A. Regier, Los Angeles, California

(Marks of the Spirit Filled Life)

JANUARY 26—"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." Acts 2:4.

In the Book of Acts we find two truths especially emphasized. First, that the Holy Spirit has come into the world as a person to be the abiding one within the life of every Child of God. Second, that as a result of His indwelling, we as Children of God are now to witness "of" and "for" Christ in the power of the Holy Spirit. Our concern as Christians then is not whether we really possess the Holy Spirit, for that fact is plainly established by the Word, but whether the Holy Spirit possesses us! Now there are distinct fruits which witness to the reality of this fact, which we shall consider in succeeding days, but today let us ask ourselves: "am I controlled by 'self' or by the 'Holy Spirit'?"

JANUARY 27—"And the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls." Acts 2:41b.

Spirit filled witnessing is bound to bring results, for when we honour the Holy Spirit, He will in turn carry out His special work in relation to the sinner. "He will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment." We will never do a thing for God, as long as we only look at ourselves. The minute, however, that we are willing to look away from self, and look unto Jesus Christ, that minute the Holy Spirit will begin doing in us that for which He came: "he shall glorify me (Christ)." And the Saviour's promise stands, "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

The Holy Spirit, when given the right of way in the life, produces a lasting work—half-heartedness is not the fruit of the Holy Spirit, but stedfastness is! The Holy Spirit further produces, not nibblers on the Word but feeders on the Word. The Spirit controlled Christian is one who is hungry for the truths of God's Word, and thus does not limit his feedings to Sundays alone, but daily feasts upon the bread of life. And feasting leads to fellowship, and fellowship leads to communion, and communion leads to prayer. N ote Acts 2:42.

JANUARY 29—"And all that believed were together, and had all things common: and sold their possessions and goods, and parted them to all men as every man had need." Acts 2:44-45.

Not only did they recognize their oneness in Christ Jesus, but they further recognized the fact later taught by Paul, I Cor. 12:25-26, "That there should be no schism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suffer, all the members suffer with it; or one member be honoured, all the members rejoice with it." Such selflessness and carefulness for others will always be seen when the Holy Spirit is truly in control. Then the material must bow to the spiritual. The Holy Spirit's motto ever is, "others"!

JANUARY 30—"And they continuing daily with one accord in the temple." Acts 2:46a.

"They continued daily in the temple. . . they ate with gladness and singleness of heart . . .they praised God." The more the Christian yields to the Holy Spirit, the deeper will become his sense of worship. And the more time he gives to really worshipping Him, the more he will discover the Lord Jesus as the giver of all that He has. I often wonder how our Saviour must feel when we ascribe to ourselves that which He entrusted unto us. The Holy Spirit, when yielded to, opens our eyes to the glories of Christ, and when our eyes behold Him—our heart and lips give way to adoration, praise and prayer.

JANUARY 31—"Praising God, and having favour with all the people," Acts 2:47a.

The world is the first to detect unreality in the lives of Christians. These early Christians, however, were a respected company of people, because the world at large was compelled to admit that they were manifesting supernatural fruit. So often Christians today come into disfavour as a result of their continually seeking to defend their doctrine and forgetting their God given duty. They grew in favor with the people as they served the people. But to serve people does not mean to compromise doctrine. Let us, therefore, truly put Christ first in all our devotion and service, and Christ will be magnified, and being magnified, will draw the people unto Himself.

"What Do Ye More Than Others?"

This question of Jesus bears careful thought in a day when nearly everyone is making sacrifices. Nearly everyone is driving less and going slower, conserving foods, and saving fuel. Many do it because they have to do it.

But as Christians, "What do ye more than others?" As Mennonites we may answer, "We do war relief and maintain C.P.S. camps. Others have sporadic interest in relief work—we carry on a continuous relief program. Others are helping to destroy life—we are helping to save it. Others are "loaning" money to the government. This we can and should match by buying Civilian Bonds. But more than that, we "give" our money to C.P.S. without expecting either principal or interest in return. This is our "second mile" or our "second cloak." God forbid that we should do less than others. We must do "more" and do it for Jesus sake. —Erland Waltner

Jesus the Bread of Life

John 6:8-14. 30-35 Read chapter 6

Two Great Miracles, vss. 1-21

A large multitude of people followed Jesus to the far side of the sea of Galilee, because they had seen the miracles of healing (vs. 2). Jesus was moved with compassion for them. He always sees our needs and yearns to help us. The great miracle of the feeding of the five thousand was performed close to the Passover time (vs. 4). This is the only miracle recorded in all four Gospels. This miracle is a landmark in the life of Christ. It marks the time of his greatest popularity with the people. They were ready then to acclaim and praise one who could help them physically. It is so today.

Jesus inquired of Philip as to how they could buy bread enough to feed the large number present (vs. 5). He wished to try Philip's faith (vs. 6). Philip's answer shows that he looked for the needed supply only in the ordinary way. His faith did not go beyond that. We too are tempted to trust Christ no further than we can see. Andrew informed Jesus as to the entire stock of food on hand (vs. 9). The lad probably was following the company of Jesus and his disciples. Andrew believed it worthwhile to mention this to Jesus and was willing that the people should have this, as far as it would reach. He did not consider Christ's power to increase the food.

The barley loaves were small, round, flat cakes, coarse, and the food of the poorest people. The fish were probably dried or pickled. Jesus is orderly in all that He does. So here there was no confusion. Jesus gave thanks to God for food at all times. We should never fail to do this. He gave of the small supply to the disciples and they to the people and it increased in a mysterious way. Probably no one present saw it increase. It was not spectacular. The small amount given to Jesus sufficed to satisfy the large multitude, as it came from His hand. Jesus teaches us that we shall not waste God's blessings of food. The remaining fragments were to be carefully gathered together and used later. This miracle convinced the people that Jesus was the prophet whose coming was foretold in Deut. 18:18.

The people were ready to make Him their king by force (vs. 15). He went up into a mountain alone to pray. The disciples had entered a small ship to cross the Sea of Galilee. Jesus came to them toward morning, walking on the water. This was a miracle just as truly as the feeding of the multitude.

Jesus Speaking to the Multitude, vss. 22-35.

The people again sought Jesus on the next day and finally found Him in Capernaum. Possibly many among them were anxious to be fed again. Jesus says so quite plainly (vs. 26). Many, many people of today seek Jesus, hoping to receive temporal blessings from Him. . . He tells them to work for the food which endureth unto everlasting life (vs. 27). He declares that the great work which is needed on their part is to believe on Himself, the one whom God has sent (vs. 29). This declaration holds true today just as really as in Jesus' day. He here virtually declared Himself to be the Messiah.

In spite of the miracle of which they had partaken on the previous day, they asked Jesus for a further sign in proof of his claim (vs. 30). They point to the manna, given, as they assume, by Moses (vs. 31). This manna which sustained the entire Jewish people for many years, was a greater miracle, they felt, than feeding five thousand for just one meal. The Messiah, they reasoned, should do more than Moses did. Jesus declared that the manna was the gift of God, not of Moses. He implied too that the manna was not the true bread from heaven. He declared Himself as the true bread, the bread of God, which came down from heaven (vs. 33). He came to give life—not the physical life for a life-time only—but to give spiritual life for eternity. Such giving of life is not attended by any spectacular sign. Christ, the true bread, both gives and sustains the spiritual life of all who will partake of Him. Continued partaking of Him means the constant satisfaction of the deepest longings of the soul. This means spiritual growth, soul strength, protection for mind and heart. This means contentment and peace of heart.

Civilian Public Service in a Mental Hospital

Harry W. Hertzler

C.P.S to many has meant only a sense of frustration because of the postponement of deeply cherished ambitions or selfishly made plans for their lives. To others, their call to C. P. S. has been something merely to be endured "for the duration." However, I believe the number of these has greatly decreased, and many of these have joined the third group, who look upon their call as a means of real service. Some who have even gone so far as to volunteer for C.P.S. may well challenge the attitudes of most of us.

Nineteen volunteers for state hospital work left Grottoes camp on August 19 to take up their new duties at the Western State Hospital in Staunton, Va. Within a few days, all but a few of us were placed as attendants on the hospital wards in charge of the patients, while a few have outside maintenance jobs. We were able to adjust ourselves very quickly to this new work, and soon became accustomed to the hospital routine.

To understand the nature of our work it is necessary to know a little about the patients. Here we find an endless variety of minds in different stages of depreciation. Voices call to some from the air, noises and bright colors annoy many, trivial incidents send some into uproarous laughter, many seem unable to retain their thoughts, but send them forth continually in all sorts of vile and abusive language, and others just sit mute all day. Inherited mental weakness, worry, accidents, disease, and plain wearing out of the brain are responsible for their condition. Undoubtedly, sinful living is the cause of the condition of a very large number of those with whom we work.

We can think of the patients as being divided into three main classes, according to the severity of their affliction and their ability to adjust themselves to normal living. First are those who with proper care and treatment can be returned to their homes as useful members. Included among these are acoholics, mild syphilitics, and many with only mild or temporary derangement. While here many of them are employed doing much of the necessary work and even taking positions of responsibility. The second group, being unable to adjust themselves to home conditions nevertheless can work under supervision in the orchard, dairy, kitchen, grounds, and on the wards as valuable assistants in keeping the administration of the hospital running smoothly. One, if let go, might forget where he was going and wander absent-mindedly away, another might follow the imaginary voices calling him, another make himself a general nuisance by petty thievery, and general irresponsibility, and still another endanger others by sudden fits of anger. The third class of patients is the deteriorating class, those who are gradually on the decline and must be cared for as they slip downward. Most of these know enough to feed themselves, go to bed, get up, and take orders, many have lost their habits of personal care, and many are bedfast.

For one who is interested in human nature the work holds many interesting experiences. To see the things that a disordered mind will do to a man, to hear the stories and imagined grievances of the patients, and to study their reactions to different kinds of treatment, and to match wits against them provides an education in human nature. Patience is often tried, and a generous store of this virture will not come amiss in taking care of these patients. Kindness toward them has its results. One patient, who ordinarily would come and stand by me when I called him, one morning would not pay any attention to me and fought me off when I attempted to gain his attention. In order to do with him what I wanted it was necessary to pin his arms to his sides. I could not understand what was the trouble until somebody volunteered the information that he had been struck by another patient just a few minutes previous, which made him afraid.

I am sure that few of us expected to find our work made easier or our hours of labor shorter on detached service. Our work day is fourteen hours long with only time enough off to eat our meals. Every three or four days we have off from about 1:30 in the afternoon until 6:00 a. m. With a small group here we cannot expect to enjoy the advantages of group gatherings such as Sunday morning and evening services, mid-week prayer meetings, various evening study classes, outdoor work and recreation, and the quietness and peace of the woods and mountains such as we enjoyed at our former camp. Consequently, our own private devotions become more important as a means of individual spiritual health, and inner quietness and peace must offset the confusion and unrest around us. Occasional visits to Mennonite communities in the two counties of Augusta and Rockingham provide much needed relaxation and spiritual refreshment. Evenings often allow the association of a number of us together in song.

And now we may well ask the question, "What of our Christian testimony in this institution?" It is important to us as C.O.'s that we realize fully that our profession of nonresistance is only one part of a fully rounded out Christian life, and that a positive and forceful peace testimony is dependent upon a real Christian experience. Here we meet daily the superintendent, doctors, nurses, patients—each a part of a community of nearly 3000 people, all in a very small area, besides many people in the adjacent city of 15,000. Daily contacts are numerous, opportunities for conversation many, and questions often asked concerning our expectation of being taken by the draft. A painter, new to the hospital, coming on the ward to paint beds, asked me, "When are they going to draft you?" This naturally called for an explanation on my part and an opportunity to leave a testimony with him. Many like him are here for only a few weeks or a few months and then go home. Many times our conversation brings to light differences. The bowed head at meal-time, courtesy and politeness with fellow employees, kindness to patients, and a constant living testimony all give silent witness to those around us.

"Warn the unruly, comfort the feebleminded, support the weak, be patient toward all men." This in a few words, sums up our work with its many opportunities for service to others. These are among the "sick and the afflicted and the oppressed everywhere" that we so often, perhaps thoughtlessly and mechanically, pray for the Lord to bless. Are we not the means of his blessing to others? Our prayer is that we may use every opportunity to be a real blessing and service to others in our work here.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

THAT INNER VOICE: Ps. 32:1-5; Kings 19:9-13
No. 2 of Series on Peace.

I. Worship Service: Songs: "I am Thine, O Lord" No. 475; "I would be true" No. 207. 2. Reading of leading topic, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Offering for Missions. 4. Consecration service.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Throughout the history of mankind God has spoken to man through his conscience, the still, small voice within him which he cannot escape, and whose urgency and persistency is one of the most potent forces in his life. When Adam and Eve had sinned in the garden of Eden, when Cain had killed his brother, when David listened to the prophet Nathan that inner voice accused them of sin. Today as the world is at war this inner voice is making itself heard within many calling them to repentance for their sins, sins of commission and sins of omission which have brought on this war.

Our hope for better days ahead lies in heeding this voice, turning about face, not in madly going in the way which leads to destruction of spiritual and material values. If greed, and lust for power, if self-seeking, and indifference, lack of intelligent sympathy with the needs of other people, failure to proclaim and live the gospel of love and peace and generous compassion has brought present conditions upon us, then let us repent and mend our ways. Let us not selfishly take the fattening jobs in the defense industries indifferent to what such a course on our part may do to those against whom such activity is directed. If we have been indifferent about living the gospel of love, let us do so now, giving of time and means for a relief program including both friend and so-called foe. Let us heed the still small voice, if God would speak in us and then through us, may we become good transmitters.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Voice of conscience speaks. Lk. 15:17-20.
2. God speaks to Elijah. I Kings 19:12.
3. Active consciences. John 8:6b-11.
4. Exhorting to conscientious living. I Tim. 4:1

IV. For Discussion:

1. In how far will our conscience demand that we share our convictions on peace with others?
2. How and when does God require of us to be peace-makers?

V. Facts for Study

There was a time during the Crusades when men and even children were urged to go to wrest the Holy Land from the heathen with the impelling war cry: "God wills it." Today in not altogether dissimilar manner, our youth and our older men are urged to fight for "The Four Freedoms." In an unparalleled drive even the women are recruited for production for winning this war. Many, very many, of our Mennonites are lending a hand to keep the war machine rolling. Is all this consistent with following Christ, or is there a still, small, warning voice?

In bygone years many Mennonites have heeded the command, "Thou shalt not kill," and have refused services in the armed forces which demanded killing. Today many realize that a follower of the Jesus "who went about doing good" must also express such a life in ways of service and good will in wartime and have found a means for doing so through the Civilian Public Service Camps. The work of relief and helpfulness to peoples of all nations also offers an avenue.

Is this all that following our Master requires of us? Will there be an added responsibility possibly included in becoming "peace-makers"? Will we be required to go as Nathan went to expose sin, the sins that lead to war and the sin of war even in the high places? If we are convinced that war is sin, and that our nation is loading upon itself guilt and destruction of warring against other nations, will it be the next step in Christian growth in grace and Christ—likeness to warn as best we can, and to proclaim another way? Will such action bring suffering to us, and yet be effective in producing results?

There was a time when Jesus forbade his disciples to tell others that he was the Messiah—but there came a time when he himself in the face of impending death proclaimed his sonship.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

HOSPITALITY

The main thing in Christian hospitality is kindness, and the main thing in kindness is love. We know most of what we have learned about love from studying the life and teachings and example of Jesus. When he was on earth he showed people how to use love in everyday life. Our forefathers in the Mennonite Church believed the true Christian should try in every way to follow as closely as possible the way Jesus lived and taught. This resulted in trying to love all men and being kind to them. When we show kindness to people who visit us in our homes we call it showing hospitality. Sometimes we have strangers call in our home, sometimes people call whom we don't like very much. If we show such people hospitality we may win their friendship and respect and lead them to want to follow Jesus. Perhaps we in this way "let the beauty of Jesus be seen in us" as we sing in a little chorus.

Topics to discuss and questions to think about:

What is Christian hospitality?

Is there a difference between Christian and non-Christian hospitality?

How can we show greater hospitality than we have been showing?

Would you be willing to show as much hospitality to strangers? To Chinese and Japanese? To Mexicans? To Negroes? To rich people? To poor people? As to your friends?

How can we help our church show greater hospitality to visitors?

What does the Bible say about this subject? See: Romans 12:13; I Tim. 3:2; Titus 1:8; I Peter 4:9.

Suggested Scripture Reading: Genesis 18:1-8, a model of hospitality.

Suggested Poem: "The House by the Side of the Road," by Sam Walter Foss.

Suggested Hymns: (The Mennonite Hymnary).

WHY THE BIBLE NEVER BECOMES OUT OF DATE

Isa. 40:8. I Pet. 1:22-25

The Bible is still the world's best seller. Many thousands of books come from the printing presses of the world each year, but only a few of them have large sales and come out in many editions.

The Bible is the most popular book, millions of copies are sold. The Bible is now printed in over 1,100 languages and dialects.

Why is there sulh a demand for this book? It satisfies every need. Excerpts from a poem explain this.

The Sufficing Bible

When I am tired, the Bible is my bed,
Or in the dark, the Bible is my light,
When I am hungry, it is vital bread
Or fearful, it is armor for the fight.
When I am sick, 'tis healing medicine,
Or lonely, thronging friends I find therein.
If I would work, the Bible is my tool,
Or play, it is a harp of happy sound;
If I am ignorant, it is my school;
If I am sinking, it is solid ground,
If I am cold, the Bible is my fire;
And it is wings, if boldly I aspire.

—Amos R. Wells

"What to Read"

When things look blue, read Isaiah 40.
When tempted to do wrong, read Psalm 139.
When discouraged think over Psalm 23.
When you have responsibility, read Joshua 1.
When friends forsake you, read I Corinthians 13.
When friends forsake you, read John 14.
When you travel carry Psalm 121 with you.
When you have sinned, read I John 1, Luke 11:1-13, Ephesians 31.
If you have been bereaved, read I Corinthians 15.

The Question Bee

(1) How does the Bible explain to us the plan of salvation? (2) Who is the real author of the Bible? (3) Why is the Bible different from any other book? (4) Into how many languages and dialects is the Bible now translated? (5) What is the quiet hour? (6) Why are regular family devotions necessary?

The Prayer List

(a) Pray definitely for soul conversion among our Juniors. (b) Let our light shine that others may see Christ in us. (c) Faithful to the reading of the Bible. (d) That each Junior set aside a certain time each day to read the Bible.

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: During the summer months we were very fortunate to have with us the I. W. Bauman family from Bluffton, Ohio. Their service was a great spiritual blessing. Since their return to Bluffton College we have been served by Rev. Claude Hobson, a congregational minister from the neighboring town of Olds. He brings the message at 9:45 each Sunday. He also does some pastoral work which we appreciate highly. He was to serve us until we could secure a permanent pastor. We are very happy to report that Rev. E. S. Mullet, Nappanee, has accepted our call and expects to be with us June 1. A victorious 1943 to all readers of The Mennonite. —Corr.

—The Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, has decided to adopt the 100 per cent church paper subscription plan. Ronald von Riesen, the pastor, recently helped some of his members butcher. He reports that he enjoyed it. Perhaps, he came home with a "liverwurst."

—Brother Franz Albrecht, pastor emeritus of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, celebrated his sixty-seventh birthday on January 10. His daughter, Dora, who works in the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, reported that he had been able to go outside a little on that day but that generally he is very much confined to the house.

—Bluffton College: Ernst Harder from Philadelphia, Paraguay, was elected president of the International Relations Club to succeed Donald Hester. Ernst is a sophomore this year. The first semester will end January 23; the second one begins on January 25. Herbert Oyer, senior and ministerial student spoke at the first chapel of the New Year. Brother Oyer is from Bluffton. An M. C. C. sewing room has been started on the campus. Members of the Peace Action Club have cleaned a vacant room in the basement of the Science Hall. After cleaning the windows and scrubbing the floors and wooodwork they moved some furniture into the room. The project is being carried out in cooperation with the Mennonite Missionary Society. Sister J. S. Schultz is serving as chairman. It is planned to have room open for sewing on Saturday afternoons.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "Parents, what are your children reading? Does their Sunday reading diet consist mainly of the 'funny papers'? Encourage them to visit our church library and check out some books to read on Sunday afternoon and evening."

—The C. P. S. quota for December 1, 1942, to February 28, 1943, is $1.50, or fifty cents per member per month.

—Brother Phil. A. Wedel, Secretary of the General Conference, wrote on January 5 from Aberdeen, Idaho: "Henry Dalke passed away shortly before Christmas at the age of a little over seventy-five. At present we again have a funeral before us. The mother of Missionary Paul Wenger passed away on January 2. Her son Paul is en route to Aberdeen from Roaring Springs, where he is pastor of a church. Her name is Sister Michael Wenger nee Rosina Welty. She leaves her aged husband who celebrated his eighty-ninth birthday last November. All the other children live here at Aberdeen."

—Brother J. M. Lichti of Sanger, California, is quite ill and is a patient in the hospital at this time. So says the Upland bulletin for January 10.

—Bulletin, Upland Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "Next Sunday morning after the morning service there will be a pot-luck fellowship dinner in the basement. The council will have charge of arrangements somewhat as folows: Devotionals by Rev. Salzman; the deacons will have charge of the coffee; the trustees will set the table; representatives from the Missionary Society and S.O. Circle wil serve the coffee; the president, vice-president, treasurer, S. S. superintendent, and C. E. superintendent will wash the dishes." The annual business meeting followed.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Since September 15, 1942, seven persons have contributed $101.40 to the Book Fund of the church library. Frances Ewy is fully classifying and rearranging the books. More good books for children are to be purchased. The catechism class is scheduled to meet at 6 o'clock, Sunday evening.

—Parents and other visitors who find it possible to stay on the Bethel College campus over night are urged to contact the Public Relations Department. We have a list of homes with spare bed rooms where guests are always welcome free of charge. —W. E. R.

—The choir of the Hoffnungsfeld Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, gave the cantata "Yuletide Memories" on the evening of January 10. Melvin Stucky directed. Reynold Weinbrenner brought the message in the morning. This church has no pastor at the present time. A new basement has been put under the meeting house, and other remodeling has been done. This church, being the mother church of the Eden church, is the oldest church in the community.

—The Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas, has given a call to Brother Lester Hostetler to give his full-time service to it for a period of three years, beginning March 1, 1943. Brother Hostetler, who is now serving on the faculty of Bethel College, has accepted the call.

—A young man in a C.P.S. camp reported some time ago that he had been in the camp fifteen months and that he still awaited the first letter from his pastor.

—Bethel College Bulletin: "An Academy at Bethel College?" This is the headng of a note which reads, "With the prospects of a serious decline in college enrollment the suggestion has been made to reopen the Academy. The college administration would be glad to hear from those who would welcome such a move." The bulletin also reports, "A number of faculty members assisted in an old-fashioned butchering day on the college farm on December 31." "Brother P. J. Wedel is very busy writing the history of Bethel College, a volume which he hopes to have ready by fall of 1943 when the college will celebrate the fifty-fifth anniversary of the laying of the corner stone." "Helen A. Penner is in charge of a welfare work program in Wichita under the auspices of the Relief Committee of the Western District Conference. Assisted by other students she makes a trip to the city once wekk."

CORRESPONDENCE

SECOND MENNONITE CHURCH

Paso Robles, California

Greetings to all in the name of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ. "Hither-to hath the Lord helped us." This is our testimony as we face the New Year.

We were very glad that Dr. and Mrs. P. A. Penner found it possible to make us a visit after the Retreat this summer and assist in the ordination of another of our young men, Lubin Jantzen, on August 23. Dr. Penner showed the pictures of the work in India that safe evening, which enabled us to see another of our members, Aron Jantzen, at work on the field. Mrs. Penner spoke to a specially called meeting of the Missionary Society, and together they visited in as many of the homes as possible during their brief stay.

In the evening of September 18 we were all invited to the wedding of Phyllis Ruth Claassen to Louis Bergman, both members of our congregation. After the reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Claassen, the young couple left for a brief trip which took them into the high Sierras. They are now living on and operating the Bergman's Dover Canyon Ranch here in Willow Creek, and taking an active part in the work of the church. Mrs. Bergman is also the California representative to the Pacific District Young People's Committee and is chairman of that committee.

At the suggestion of the second vice-president of our California Executive our Christian Endeavorers are getting out a little newspaper entitled "Oak Leaves from Back Home" to be sent to members on the mission field, away at school and in the service. The first number was sent out shortly before Christmas to a list of twenty-one.

There are now ten of our young men in the service, but so far only three have left the home shores. Alvin Bergman is "somewhere in Alaska" and undoubtedly knows what real cold weather is. Word recently came to members of the family that Walter Fieguth arrived safely at his appionted destination across the Pacific and Edgar Fast, in the Signal Corps of the Navy has been heard from from several points in the same general direction.

The E. H. Schroeder family are happy at this time in having two of their children home on visits. Oscar who is a mess sergeant at Camp Robinson, Ark., is enjoying a brief furlough, and his sister, Marie who is under appointment to the Sudan Interior Mission, is awaiting the opening of the doors to her chosen field of service in Nigeria. This is the same field in which her cousin, Dr. Richard Jantzen, is already serving. Marie spoke to us of her call and of the way the Lord is leading and providing, in the morning service on December 27 and also spoke briefly to the Ladies' Missionary Society on January 4.

This year our Christmas program was held in the afternoon of that day, so as to enable those living at a distance to be present at both the morning service and the children's program with one trip. The children had been practising their songs since some time in November and those present enjoyed both music and recitations. The following Sunday afternoon the young people gave a program consisting of Christmas songs and readings. An impromptu quartet and duet added to the interest of the meeting.

Rev. and Mrs. Harold Coen, missionaries on furlough from Nigeria, came over from Wasco on their way to Los Angeles, to tell us of their work among the Moslems in that country. They hope to return to their work when their furlough is over some time next summer.

Our young people are continuing their work in the Jail and Hospital at San Luis Obispo, our county seat, though the groups are necessarily somewhat smaller these days.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH

Enid, Oklahoma

God in His great mercy has again permitted us to cross the threshold into a new year. To Him we offer our praise for the blessings which we as a church have enjoyed during the year 1942.

Our average Sunday school and church attendance has been good during the past year. Three new members were added to the church. Several boys from our church families have entered into service for their country. They are Victor Unruh, Wallace Janzen, and Elmer Unruh. Undoubtedly others will be called in the near future. Thus far we have been able to meet our quota for the C.P.S. camps.

On the last of October, Mrs. H. N. Harder, wife of our pastor, returned to her home after having spent eight months in a Clinton Hospital. We are happy to report that her condition is improved. She is now taking a complete rest which is essential to her full recovery. The condition of Mrs. Eva Koehn, who has been in ill health for quite some time, remains about the same. Brother Fred Koehn is recuperating from a major operation which he underwent in November. In December, Brother Dave Jantz had the misfortune of injuring his vertabrae while at work. Though in a cast, he is able to attend the services.

Rev. J. J. Regier, pastor of the First Mennonite church in Burrton, Kansas, conducted evangelistic services for us from November 16-23 inclusive. Mrs. Regier assisted him with the musical part of the services. We were richly blessed by their ministry to us.

All departments of the church cooperated with the Womens' Mission Society in contributing clothing and funds toward the purchasing of new clothing for European relief. This project came to a climax with a Christmas Candlelight Service, sponsored by the Mission Society, on the evening of December 9. The spirit of Christmas and of Giving was brought out impressively throughout the evening. At the close of the service, all the clothing was brought together and packed, after which a dedicatory prayer was offered by the pastor, Rev. Harder. The 107 pounds of clothing were shipped to Akron, Pennsylvania, from where they were sent to European relief centers.

Our Christmas program was rendered on the eve of December 24. A very enjoyable and impressive Watchnight Service was observed New Years' Eve. The service began with a program led by Brother A. Theodore Mueller, who acted as chairman for the evening. As guest speaker we were privileged to have Rev. John Boosinger, a student pastor from Phillips University. Briefly and emphatically he stressed two points. First, he said that the world today is in a storm, thus it is of vital importance that we remain calm and hold fast to that faith and anchor which we have in God. Second, he emphasized the necessity of consecrating our lives to God, admonishing us for the coming year to be as "clay in the potter's hand." A period of social fellowship in the church basement followed, after which we had another program in which everyone participated, and finally closing with a candle-lighting consecration service.

Said the Psalmist, "I will go in the strength of the Lord God." This is the secret of our usefulness for the year that lies ahead. May God help us not to fail Him or men in this critical hour of world need. —Marion Ewert, Corr.

WEST ZION MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundridge, Kansas

Greetings to all readers of The Mennonite. In his annual report to the congregation Rev. W. F. Unruh pointed out that the central activity of any church should be that of evangelism. During the last week of October our minister and several lay men cooperated with other churches in the community in a week of lay evangelism. This was previously reported in these pages, This was followed by a week of evangelistic services with Rev. D. C. Wedel of Halstead bringing messages of inspiration and challenge to those who love the Lord. The Sunday School is also doing a great deal along the line of evangelism. The minister is at present instructing a large catechism class. In a survey it was learned that there are twenty-six children in Moundridge, who attend no Sunday School. Junior Endeavor teams have been visiting in these homes, inviting the children to Endeavor meetings. It is hoped that they will eventually be led into the Sunday School and the Church,

The Sunday preceding Thanksgiving was observed as a harvest festival. The morning service was devoted to missions with Mrs. P. A. Penner bringing a missionary message and Rev. A. E. Krieder the sermon. In the evening Rev. P. C. Hiebert brought a message on relief, dealing with conditions in Europe, that really touched the heart. As a fitting climax to this day of blessing Dr. Herbert Schmidt showed pictures taken on his trip to the Mennonite Colony in Paraguay. The substantial offerings received proved that these messages touched the purse strings as well as the heart.

The annual business meeting was to have been held December 27, but a Kansas blizzard very effectively postponed it until January 10. A fellowship dinner was enjoyed before the business meeting.

The young people of the church enjoyed a watch night social at the pastor's home on New Year's Eve. The New Year was ushered in with a worship service. What a splendid way in which to begin the New Year!

NOTE: The Board of Publication Report for the fourth quarter again consisted entirely of church contributions. However, one church could not be placed in the regular list because the editor received the wrong or insufficient information. In the report received by the editor this contribution was listed as Mennonite Church, Intake, Montana, $16.42. I am sorry that credit cannot be given for this in the regular manner.—Editor. The total received was $332.08.

The Changeless Christ

*By Mary Becker

We are living in a world of change. This is evident to everyone. There seemingly is nothing that remains unchanged. We need only to consider a few factors in this changeable world in order to be fully aware of this fact.

Nature is changeable. Yes, beautiful as our world is, it is ever changing and changeable. Every year nature goes through a complete cycle of four different seasons—winter, spring, summer, and autumn. At one time of the year the trees are bare, and the ground is covered with snow; at another the trees are beautiful with thick, green foliage, and the ground is carpeted with a soft covering of green grass. And, not only does nature change regularly every year according to certain fixed laws of God's universe, but constant changes in earth's surface and composition also take place. The study of geology would reveal this fact to us. These and other illustrations of change in nature which might be cited prove the fact that nature is not changeless.

Science is changeable. The laws of science, of course, are fixed laws; but the knowledge of science changes. All we need to do to verify the changeableness of science is to look at the section on science in our public libraries. Books that were the latest in scientific research and findings twenty-five years or even a decade ago now are on the shelf covered with dust, for later discoveries have completely outmoded them.

The science of medicine and surgery is changeable. Textbooks in medicine are ever superseded by newer ones as new discoveries are made in the causes and treatment of disease. Even the human body changes, for scientists tell us that every seven years all of the cells of our body have been replaced by new ones. A constant transformation is going on.

Nations and political orders are changeable. "Kingdoms rise and wane" as we sing in the song "Onward, Christian Soldiers." The old nations of antiquity are no more. Those nations which once were the world empires—Egypt, Assyria, Babylonia, Persia, Greece, and Rome—have all passed from the scene.

The present nations of the world are in a state of change, and no change perhaps is so evident at present as this. We need only to compare the present map of the world with one of ten years ago, or even with one of two or three years ago, to be impressed with the changeableness of the political world. And, as we look at conditions at present, we cannot help but feel that mapmakers will have to continue changing the appearance of their drawings.

Yes, we are living in a time and a world of change. But even though there is change and insecurity and instability all around us, although > "Crowns and thrones may perish

> Kingdoms rise and wane,
> (But) the Church of Jesus
> Constant will remain;
> Gates of hell can never
> 'Gainst that Church prevail;
> We have Christ's own promise,
> And that cannot fail."

What is it that gives us who constitute the Church of Christ this confidence? It is our changeless Christ. One of the most comforting verses of Scripture is found in Hebrews 13:8: "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today, and forever." In this world of change and chaos we who have Christ need not share the pessimism and hopelessness of the world, for we have the one changeless One with us and in us. We can look into the future with confidence and joy, for we have "Christ in us, the hope of glory," "from eternity to eternity the same." And we can claim the promise which this changeless Christ has given to us: "Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world."

He is the same today as he was yesterday. The power of Jesus Christ in our community, our nation, the world, is just as great today as it was when he walked the shores of the Sea of Galilee nineteen centuries ago. His power is still the same as it was when he spoke peace to the angry waves. His heart is still moved with compassion as it was when he saw the multitudes who "were as sheep without a shepherd." His invitation is still resounding across the centuries to the weary and sinsick of our own day: "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And must we not say that his heart is still filled with indignation at the injustice, hypocrisy, and unrighteousness which prevail today as they did in his day and upon which he pronounced such bitter woes? His intercessory prayers are still uttered as they were nineteen hundred years ago: "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." "Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me." His hands are still extended in blessing with the words: "Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you." Yes, he is the same today as he was yesterday.

He will remain the same tomorrow. No matter what tomorrow may bring, we can enter every tomorrow with this assurance: We have a changeless Christ.

In what way is he changeless? Let us briefly consider the following: (1) He is changeless in his character, and (2) He is changeless in his purpose.

(1) He is Changeless in His Character

We have already touched upon this point when we considered Christ's being the same today as he was yesterday. Some of the attributes of his character are his love, his power, his majesty, and his justice.

His love is changeless. His coming into the world was prompted by love; it was an act of love. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." This love is one of his attributes which will never change.

His power is changeless. Although we are inclined to feel that his power does not seem to be at work in the world in a manifest and evident way at present, still his is "the power and the glory for ever and ever," and some day "the son of Man will come in great power and glory."

His majesty is changeless. Even though he seems to be dethroned in the world today and even in many churches, yet some day he will be King of kings and Lord of lords. And in the mind and purpose of God this is as if it were already accomplished—"The kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ." Some day every knee will bow and every tongue shall confess that Jesus is Lord. Then, no matter who the rulers of this world's empires are, no matter how much power and authority any of them try to hold in their grasp, every one will have to recognize that there is a higher Power to which they must bend. Other would-be conquerers have had to acknowledge their weakness and his strength. Napoleon, after experiencing his final defeat, acknowledged his weakness and Christ's power when he bore witness to the fact that Alexander the Great and he and other worldly conquerors had risen to power and then were no more, while Christ, the lowly Nazarene, without any weapons of earthly warfare, was still going forth conquering.

His justice is changeless. We have a God of holiness and justice, and this attribute will some day be vindicated. God is a God of love, and he is also a God of justice and holiness. In His love he has prepared a way for us to come to him and have eternal life, but if we refuse to accept this provision we bring upon ourselves his justice. While we are living in the time of grace, we can accept him as our Saviour; if we refuse, we still have to meet him as our Judge. He is changeless in his justice.

(2) He is Changeless in His Purpose

What is his purpose? What was the purpose of Christ's coming into the world? He had only one purpose: "The Son of Man came to seek and to save that which was lose." "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly."

That is Christ's changeless purpose. When he left this earth, he passed on this purpose to his followers when he said: "Go ye into all the world and make disciples of all nations." "Go . . ." "As the Father hast sent me so send I you."

These went out and lived out the purpose of God. However, as the centuries progressed, we often find this purpose of God obscured and almost obliterated as the Church became interested in other things besides the purpose given it by Christ. But again and again this purpose was reborn. Martin Luther revived it in the church of the Reformation. Under Wesley it again experienced a revival, and under many others.

Has the Church of today retained the purpose of Christ? Does its ministry go to the heart of the purpose of Christ, namely to win precious souls to him? It can be done only if we who constitute the Church of Christ make his changeless purpose our

Foreign Mission Board To Meet

The annual meeting of the Foreign Mission Board is to be held in Newton, Kansas, February 17-19.

A number of difficult problems await solution. However, the board is not discouraged, especially, in view of the prayerful and faithful support from the churches and mission friends in the past. We are confident that we can also depend upon this support for the solution of the present and coming problems. Over $100,000.00 was contributed to foreign missions in the past year. This is the first time in twelve years that this has happened. This fact indicates that the prayers must also have increased. We request with thanksgiving your continued prayers for the coming board meeting.

One of our main problems is that of finding the best, new, open doors for missions to take the place of those which are now closed in China. We are thinking of Africa and South America as possibilities. We have begun to make plans for Africa, and we have begun to make inquires about South America. But nothing definite has so far been decided.

Inquiries have come in in regard to Brother P. A. Penner's intinerary work. The doctor has ordered for him a time of complete rest. Just how much he will be able to do after this rest, and how soon, the doctor has not yet stated, but hopes that it may be some time next month, February. If so, he plans to visit the Middle District Conference.

—In the name of the Board, P. H. Richert, Sec.

"Let the Lower Lights be Burning"

This song we have sung for many years. I have felt a bit critical towards it; why "lower"—the light of Christ is "higher" not lower. Recently our brother Pastor S. Phillip, the evangelist, and I walked to distant villages on a Sunday morning to visit our Christians. After we had visited several groups in their dilapidated condition of life, he turned to me and said, "These our Christians are the low despised lights in rural India; yet they are the lights pointing India's people to Christ."

I said "yes," and kept quiet, because I know the weaknesses of our brethern. After a while my mouth involuntarily opened and I said, "Yes, let these lower lights be burning, and 'the dimly burning wick will He not quench' (Isa. 42:3)." Even though we have to go around the village today, or through the residential section of the elite of India's society in order to find our Christian brethren, yet there among the lowly, the fire of Christ is burning; and we are confident that it will spread into a great fire of spiritual enlightenment to all of India's people.—J. Thiessen

A STATEMENT OF FAITH

The following statement of faith, adopted by the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America in session at Souderton, Pennsylvania, August 17-22, 1941, as recorded in the minutes of said session on pages 37 and 161, was recommended by the college faculty and adopted by the College Board of Directors on November 19, 1942, as also the official statement of faith of Bethel College and is a part of the contracts signed by the faculty members.

"Accepting the full Bible and the Apostolic Creed: (1) We believe in one God, eternally existing and manifest as Father, Son, and Holy Spirit. (2) We believe in the Diety of Jesus Christ, 'the only begotten of the Father full of grace and truth,' born of the Virgin Mary, in His perfect humanity, His atoning death, His bodily resurrection from the dead, and His personal triumphant return. (3) We believe in the immortality of the soul, the resurrection of the dead, and the future state determined by divine judgment. (4) We believe in the divine inspiration and the infallibility of the Bible as the Word of God and the only trustworthy guide of faith and life. (5) We believe a Christian is one saved by grace whose life is transformed into the likeness of Christ by His atoning death and the power of His resurrection. (6) We believe that Christ lived and taught the way of life as recorded in the Scriptures which is God's plan for individuals and the race, and that it becomes disciples of Christ to live in this way, thus manifesting in their personal and social life and relationships the love and holiness of God. And we believe that this way of life also implies nonresistence to evil by carnal means, the fullest exercise of love, and the resolute abandonment of the use of violence, including warfare. We believe further that the Christian life will of necessity express itself in non-conformity to the world in life and conduct. (7) We believe in prayer as fellowship with God, a desire to be in His will, and in its divine power. (8) We believe that the Christian Church consists of believers, who have repented from their sins, have accepted Christ by faith and are born again, and sincerely endeavor by the grace of God to live the Christian life. (9) We believe in the brotherhood of the redeemed under the fatherhood of God in Christ."

"The Jews kept the seventh day holy. The real Christian keeps seven days holy. Every day and the work of every day are sanctified in Christianity."

"Victorious Faith Brings Divine Healing"

The following soul-stirring experience came to Rev. John P. Bueckert, Gretna, Manitoba, R. R. 5, as he was doing some visitation work as Elder in the northern part of Manitoba that is inhabited by Mennonites.

Four days were spent with the Nordheimer Church at Winnipegosis and Fork River. Twelve candidates had been in catechism instruction for some time. Now ready for baptism, some seemed a little young, being only fifteen or sixteen years of age, but since there was a real live spirit of devotion in the group it seemed best to proceed with the program. Eleven of the souls were present at the church and were baptised. All these accompanied me and some others to the home of a sick girl, aged fifteen years. This girl had been in bed for nine months already, but because of her victorious faith she made such an impression on me as I had never experienced before. She gave testimony with great joy and liberty of what the Lord had done for her and what the Lord meant to her. In her testimony she made only a few remarks. Tears trickled down her cheeks, but her face radiated the glory of true salvation. She had no complaint to make about her condition, but on the contrary she declared herself as being quite satisfied if this was her lot, saying that in all her experience the Lord was so near and precious to her, saying, "I do not know what my Saviour's plan is for me, but the Lord wants me in this state, and I am comforted to know that this is the Lord's will for me."

During the period of instruction, the catechism pupils would always go past her place where Rev. Corn. Janzen would always hold another brief period with her in the circle. In those periods and now she had so many questions and statements to make. Her great delight was music and singing, As long as health permitted she always sang heartily with the others; she also played the mandolin.

On her baptismal day she was too weak to help in the singing; she could not even sit up for the act of baptism. The doctors had given her up and said the best they could do was to give her relief. (Some time later she wrote as follows to Rev. Bueckert)

"On the twenty-third of July, at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon my mother and sister carried me out into the fresh air. I could not walk. My Bible lay open before me, and I read, Mark 9:14:-27, the healing of the demoniac. My back was so tired and I did not feel good at all. About 7:30 p.m. they carried me back to my bed again. The desire to live had almost fled from me. Still I prayed to my Saviour. Then I opened my Bible again, and behold, my eyes fell on Matt. 8:1-15.—the story where Jesus healed three persons. I was almost besides myself! Why could it be that my Bible would always open itself at such passages?

"At that moment a voice said to me, 'Stand up and go to your mother.' I could not believe it. Then I prayed to my Lord for more strength to believe. Naturally, I would like to be well, but the Lord wants to use me when I am sick. Then the thought came—if these are His thoughts for me and I have been sick long enough, then I would want to do as He willed it. Perhaps, he wanted to bring glory to His Name by a divine healing! But how can I remain true to my Saviour when I am well, this and other questions shot through my mind. Satan tried hard to make me doubt. But my Saviour is stronger than Satan, and He strengthened my faith. I stood up and took a few steps and returned to my bed. Again I had to pray for strength to believe. With the Lord's help I got up again, walked and am well!

"Oh, how wonderful are the thoughts and ways of our God for us! What wonderful things He has done for me."

Later on in the same letter she said, "I am convinced, if I would have had the opportunity of choice, I would not have chosen as wisely for myself as my Saviour provided for me. I am so glad He is my Saviour, and that He has always been so loving to me. Oh, how He loves and how good and true He always is."

One can hardly suppress tears of joy at such a glorious experience. Let us all praise God more and thank Him for His goodness.

Yours for victory in Christ,
—A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

IN THE MAIL

A beautiful Christmas card with the following written in: "In appreciation of the paper that comes weekly into our home to inspire, to inform, to cheer, and to lift out of the drab of every day. You have done great things to The Mennonite." —Hillsboro, Kansas.

Keeping in Touch

The Mennonite is a very welcome visitor to my house each week. I enjoy reading it so much and especially since I am so far away from all my people and all Mennonites, too. It helps me to keep more up to date with all the happenings in our church and conference." —Elisabeth Voran, 507 North 9th Ave., Phoenix, Arizona.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SECRET SOCIETIES

During the latter part of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries secret societies flourished in this country. This was especially true of lodges in the cities. The National Grange is the only genuine farmer's organization that comes under this heading, and it is a result of the wave of popularity that secret societies enjoyed during that particular era. In recent years many lodges have died, and secret societies generally have faded in popularity. Most rural Protestant churches have steadily opposed secret societies. Mennonites have never openly tolerated them in official sessions, but in the last decade or two individual churches have not disciplined members for joining lodges, granges, and other secret organizations.

Attractiveness of Lodges

The chief points of attraction to these societies were economic security, fraternal associations, and co-operative efforts. The lodges held regular meetings at stated intervals which provided opportunity for fellewship. There are those who were especially attracted by the ritual, ceremony, and pageantry characteristic of all secret organizations. Practically all lodges paid sickness and death benefits to their members and often aided them when distressed otherwise. This is especially true of the Masonic Order, the most powerful of all lodges even today. This was a point of great attraction to people generally, including Mennonites and other Christians. In the case of the Grange the chief attraction was that it provided an organization for farmers to discuss their problems and, in cases, organize buying and marketing agencies. The Grange never paid sickness or death benefits as a matter of policy.

Why Mennonites Object

The chief objection among Mennonites to these secret societies has been the secrecy of the organizations. They felt that it was unbiblical for Christians to belong to organizations where much of the activity of the organization was carried on in secret. They felt that the whole of a Christian's life should be free and open with nothing hid. Another reason for opposition is that membership in these organizations implied being "unequally yoked with unbelievers." In many instances this was, and still is, the case. Some people substitute the lodge for the church claiming that they can be just as good Christians in the one as the other. This view is of course unacceptable to the most devoted Christians. Secret societies are primarily concerned with the welfare of their own members and not with the salvation of a lost world.

A Lesson To Be Learned

What a pity that men in the church should turn away from her for fellowship and for help in time of trouble. Is this not the very area in which the church should most vitally function? What else does the term brotherhood mean? Did not Jesus tell us to "love one another as I have loved you"? Did not Paul tell the Galatians, and therefore us, that Christians were to "bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ"? If our churches are really true brotherhoods they will lose few members to secret societies. For there is no other society whose members are so closely united and so warmly affectioned one toward another as is the society of Jesus. No other has its members so intimately cemented together as that society which is permeated by the warming influence of divine love. Secret societies may be opposed by laws, rules, and chuch discipline but a better way seems to be for the local congregation of Christians to discharge its responsibility so well that these socities are unnecessary.

C. P. S. Camps

A recent order from Colonel Kosch of the Camp Operations Division has extended the work hours of boys in camp to 5:00 p.m. on Saturday. Previously work hours ended at 12:00 noon.

On the front page of the January 7, 1943, New York Times there appeared a comprehensive accurate, and understanding story regarding the conscientious objector. In this article it was pointed out that handling of the C. O. in World War II has been on the whole satisfactory and "beyond expectation."

There are now twenty-three Mennonite C. P. S. camps, counting the five hospital units.

As of December 17, 1942, a total of 2,190 Mennonite boys were in C. P. S.

A release from the National Service Board for Religious Objectors dated October 31 indicates that over 120 different religious groups have one or more members who are in Civilian Public Service.

A number of C. P. S. men are serving in health and sanitation experiments in hospitals and laboratories. Considerable publicity has been given to them for their service as "guinea pigs."

A number of camps report that classes meet regularly for training in relief and reconstruction methods.

Leaders of the hospital units are as follows: Landis C. Martin, Western State Hospital, Staunton, Virginia; D. Paul Miller, Delaware State Hospital, Farnhurst, Delaware; Donald J. Liechty, Hawthornden State Hospital, Macedonia, Ohio; Loris Hagegger, New Jersey State Hospital, Marlboro, New Jersey; Kenneth Weaver, Norristown State Hospital, Norristown, Pa.

Reports from mental hospitals tell of needs for a variety of labor: attendants, stenographers, orderlies, laboratory and social service internes. Personnel needs at some hospitals are very acute; in some cases, the labor force is nearly 50 per cent below strength. Many hospitals offer some sort of a training course to prepare the boys for their various jobs.

"Blow Upon My Garden"

Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south;
Blow upon my garden,
That the spices thereof may flow out.
Let my beloved come into his garden,
And eat his precious fruits.
—From the Song of Solomon

IN A RECENT BROADCAST, the Song of Solomon was pronounced to be the greatest love poem ever written. If literary critics have acclaimed its beauty of thought and style, how much more should we, who have been chosen by the divine Bridegroom to become a part of the Bride, hold precious this song which in its deeper meaning is a picture of Christ and the Church in their love one to another. In it we find that the Bride's one desire is toward her Bridegroom, her one fear that He might return and find her lacking in the fervor of her love and in her works. Heedless of her own comfort, she calls for the winds to blow across her gardens that the spices thereof may flow out and that the fruit may yield.

Is the Church of Christ in need of this same prayer today? Does she need the winds of God's chastising love lest her gardens grow too weak and too unfertile to bring forth blooms and her fragrance and her seeds cease to flow unto the world to satisfy the heart of Him who chose her for a helpmate in the building of the Kingdom home within the souls of men? He left to her the sharing of her fragrance and her seed, but is she doing it? Has the time come for her to call upon the winds? Is she strong enough to disregard her own comforts because, above all, she would have the Christ find fruits within her gardens when He returns?

As nature's winds are necessary to the life and well being of nature's world, so are spiritual winds necessary to the life and well being of the spirit-world.

Trees that have rooted themselves in the path of nature's elements, afford a most interesting study. I remember a family of shrub-oak on a lawn of a Rocky Mountain home which sat, as though it were, on the lap of a mountain slope. No doubt, a mother oak farther up had been forced to give up her seeds to a raging wind whirling past her and over her through the ragged ravines. He had dropped the seeds on the brief plateau and they had rooted and grown there even before a lawn was sown around them and a home graced the plateau. Perhaps the builders, seeing the courage of the years in the gnarled, tough fibers of the oaks, had left them there and patterned their home around them. There they stand, still an easy target for every storm that sweeps at times with fury down the canyon beds upon them. They stand because through the years they bent under the whip of the winds and the bending made them strong.

Nature's winds have various missions: they toughen the fibers that learn to bend; they fertilize pollen that there may be yields; they bring the rains and the change of climates. The north winds lay the beauty of the frosts upon the gardens and break the seeded pods to take the seeds for scattering; they cause the trees to shed their leaves, lest hanging on too long, they die. Nature cannot follow her normal life without the winds. Neither can the Church of Christ live a normal spirit life nor my own soul without God's winds whose mission to the heart is much the same.

It was because of persecution that the first century church was scattered abroad and believers were added to her throughout all Asia. We marvel at the power of her word of testimony but was it not because the winds of testing were strengthening her fiber and scattering her seed? They were the instrument of God to plant the Church throughout the world.

Have God's winds begun again to blow across the gardens of His Church in the present world crisis? Is it time for her wheat to be sifted from her chaff? Do her pods need to be broken that there might be multiplied fruit? Does her fragrance lack richness and strength? And what about my own garden plot? Let me go down the terrace steps into my soul and walk through its length and through its breadth that I might see it as it is. Is it in need of winds?

What if the winds, the stronger winds should blow this year, in years to come if we but trust the Heart that sends them and, trusting, learn to bend and bear.

This year, so young as yet in its beginning, could it but give to us a deeper love for Him who gave Himself to woo the Church,—to woo our sinful souls. Could it but find us wanting only Him. Oh could it teach us to say at any cost:

> "Awake, O north wind; and come, thou south;
> Blow upon my garden,
> That the spices thereof may flow out.
> Let my beloved come into his garden,
> And eat his precious fruits."

RELIEF

Gratitude for Dr. Schmidt's Services

A brother, P. Klassen, of the Fernheim Colony, expresses to Brother O. O. Miller the thanks of his people for the services which Dr. John R. Schmidt gave to the Paraguayan Mennonite Colonies.

Brother Klassen writes: "Last Sunday we bid farewell to Brother John Schmidt, our doctor. Many visitors had assembled for the occasion to press his hand for the last time. The hall, which you know well, was crowded. This fact is proof how much the Colony appreciated him. In fact he was of great significance for us. Shortly before leaving he saved the life of a young man who had an attack of appendicitis. Through an emergency operation he was saved."

Observations from Paraguay

Letters from Brother Vernon Schmidt, dated December 7 and 15, indicate that Brother Schmidt is spending time in the Chaco with the Menno and Fernheim colonies as well as giving time to the Primavera and Friesland colonies.

Following are observations which Brother Schmidt records: The Friesland colony has a very good cotton crop this year. Other crops are also good. . . The hospital in the Primavera (Hutterite) colony may be finished by the end of March. . . Clothing needs for the colonies are chiefly for boys and girls between the ages of six and twelve.

For the Fernheim Hospital

For the support of the hospital in the Fernheim colony, the Western District Tidings announces, young people of the Mennonite Church in the Western District are giving ten cents per member. This figure has been set as a goal for each donor to the project.

Thank You

Brother and Sister Milton Whiteman, Birney, Montana, wish to announce through The Mennonite that they desire to thank all who so kindly remembered them during the Christmas season with Christmas greetings and prayer.

Central Conference Activities

Rev. Wm. B. Weaver, Editor
Danvers, Illinois

In this first edition of Central Conference happenings we begin the new venture of exchange of news items with the General Conference. We welcome this way of getting better acquainted with you and your conference program. The editor of this news welcomes any suggestions from you as readers as to what you would like to know about our work.

Facts About Our Conference

The membership of our conference is 3,322. The number of churches is 23. One of these is at Columbus, Kansas, and one at Aurora, Nebraska. There are four churches in northern Indiana and the remainder are in Illinois. About seventy-five per cent of our membership lives within a radius of forty miles from Bloomington, Illinois.

We have two city missions: one at 6201 Carpenter, Chicago, and the other at 1001 North Adams, Peoria, Illinois. We also have one distinctly rural mission at Comins, Michigan. Our foreign mission work is in the Belgian Congo under the supervision of the Congo Inland Mission Board. Our institutional work is the Old People's Home at Meadows, Illinois, a Mennonite Hospital at Bloomington, Illinois, and Bluffton College at Bluffton, Ohio.

Our publications are the Christian Evangel and a Year Book. These are given to better acquaint the readers of the Mennonite as to the activities we are to report.

We are glad to report that Dr. and Mrs. Merle Schwartz have arrived on the mission field in the Belgian Congo and are located at the Mukedi Station. This is the only medical missionary on our field. We have four stations in the territory of the Congo Inland Mission. Charlesville, Kalamba, Nyaga, and Mukedi. At these four stations there are now twenty-four missionaries. In the thirty-two years of our work we have had only one physician on the field. Dr. Rudolph Unruh served under our board from September, 1931, to March, 1936. Dr. and Mrs. Schwartz were sent to the field in 1941, but their ship, the "Zam-Zam," was torpedoed and they were compelled to return to America. We rejoice that in the second attempt they arrived safely in the Congo and now are on the field.

The one distinct loss in 1942 in our conference, which we feel very keenly, was the death of Rev. Emanuel Troyer. He was our full-time field secretary. His large vision and effective leadership meant much to the progress of our conference program. But in January, just a year ago, by advice of physicians, he resigned his work and on June 11, 1942, he passed to his reward. Rev. Allen of Goshen, Indiana, is now our field secretary.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By John Graber, North Newton, Kansas

(The Twenty-third Psalm)

FEBRUARY 1—"The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." Ps.23:1

What condescension on the part of God! He is willing to call Himself man's Shepherd. But there is also another implication in this phrase; a true shepherd must have a flock. God has His own flock. Jesus said. "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me." Man is not born into this world as belonging to God's flock. The natural man is spoken of in Scripture as a goat or a wolf. Thus, in order for one to belong to God's sheepfold something must be done. Figuratively speaking, the goat must be turned into a sheep. This is where the new birth enters. Through this experience God transforms the moral basis of the human soul. Christ said, "I am the door, by me if any man enter in he shall be saved." Have you entered?

FEBRUARY 2—"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters." Ps.23.2

The Oriental shepherd led his flock to the places where the grass was high and thick. The sheep were never compelled to bite the bare ground. To the believer the "pastures" is the Word of God. Jeremiah exclaimed, "Thy words were found and I did eat them; Thy word was unto me the joy and rejoicing of mine heart." There is no need for us to starve our souls, when the Great Shepherd has so abundantly provided for His flock. After the sheep had fed in the green pastures, they were led "beside the still waters." There they would rest with perfect contentment. The "still waters" suggest peace and serenity. The Christian's peace is Christ Himself. Eph. 2:14. Yes, there can be peace in the individual heart, even in this present world of confusion.

FEBRUARY 3—"He restoreth my soul." Ps. 23:3a

The word "restore" here means to "refresh" or to "quicken." Many times some sheep would wander from the fold. Oft these straying ones would get caught in a thicket and break a limb or be torn by some ravenous beast. It was always the kind shepherd that brought them back. Likewise, God must often use disciplinary measures when we wander from His presence. Prov. 3:11-12. The sheep that loved their shepherd dearly followed close by his side. How close do you and I follow the Good Shepherd? It is only when we are close by His side that we can know the glory of His presence, see the beauty of His face, and hear the sweet sound of His voice.

FEBRUARY 4—"He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake." Ps. 23:3b

There were many paths in the wilderness where the shepherd would lead his sheep. Often they would come to a fork in the road. Several paths were leading away from this crossing. Which one were they to take? If the sheep would have been left to their own choice, they would probably have taken the path that appeared the most fascinating. But this path could have proved to be injurious, for the sheep knew not what lay beyond. The shepherd, having traversed this way before, knew the right path, and he led them hence. In the Christian's experience oft times there are paths to be chosen. He must simply submit to the will of the Great Shepherd. He has gone before, and knows the way.

FEBRUARY 5—"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for Thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff they comfort me." Ps. 23:4

The phrase, "The valley of the shadow of death," does not mean that death is exclusively referred to by the Psalmist. But rather, other stages in the journey of life may also be designated as such. Possibly, a more clearer translation would be, "The valley of shadows." David is fully aware of the fact that such experiences are to come in the life of the child of God. But the consoling truth to him is the fact that "Thou art with me." Mention is made of the rod and the staff. The rod was used to protect the sheep, and the staff to guide them. Certainly, in Christ's keeping we are safe. John 10:27, 28.

FEBRUARY 6—"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: Thou anointest my head with oil: my cup runneth over." Ps. 23:5.

The scene changes at this point. The analogy changes from a shepherd and his flock to that of a host serving his friends. David pictures himself being seated at God's banquet table and the Lord being his host. The anointing oil and the overflowing cup are mentioned here. These were some of the luxuries which only the rich could afford at their feasts. Only too well are we reminded of the super-abundant blessings which come our way. The apostle exclaimed, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who hath blessed us with all Spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Eph. 1:3

FEBRUARY 7—"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Ps. 23:6

The Psalmist in this last verse sums up the great truths which he has uttered in the preceeding verses. For the present life, goodness and mercy like two guardian angels are to follow our footsteps. We need God's mercy to blot out our sins and His goodness to supply our needs. For the life to come, God's presence is to be enjoyed forever. David means to tell us that we are to have the consciousness of the Lord's presence in this life, but some day, upon leaving our abode in this world, we are to realize it in its fulness.

Mennonite Consciousness

I was very happy to see you draw from the Martyr's Mirror in the last issue of The Mennonite for material. In my own experience, an appreciation of the rich heritage of the Anabaptist movement has done a great deal in giving me vision and devotion to our people and what they represent. I feel ever more strongly that we Mennonites have something in our heritage that should demand ever more of our devotion and energy.

It seems to me that The Mennonite is doing a very vital piece of work in giving emphasis to just this. I wish to express my appreciation for your efforts in that direction. A strong and vital publication effort should do much in maintaining the fellowship in our church.

For some time now I have had the privilege of worshiping and having a fine fellowship with other branches of our church. It has been most interesting and inspiring in observing the customs and traditions of the church.

I have been amazed at the strong Mennonite consciousness of the Lancaster County Conference. These folks are deeply appreciative of their heritage it seems to me. Menno Simons, Grebel, Blaurock, Mants, etc., are on the minister's tongues frequently and familiarly. The folks seem to know their heritage.

This last Sunday the bishop of this region said something which was particularly thrilling. He was making announcements at the end of the service. He said that our people were known historically as the "Stille im Land" or "Quiet in the Land." During these times when pleasure driving is banned, food and fuel rationed, it might be wise to be especially aware of this heritage of ours, to make every deed we do reflect the religion we profess, to be especially willing to go the second mile. I felt the few words he spoke were most challenging.

It is indeed thrilling to observe the keen Christian spirit of brotherliness that is so evident in our churches these days. We, who are in C.P.S., have been reminded of this frequently with the little deeds the churches have done for us. Out church sends us hectographed letters which does an amazing amount in keeping us in touch with the group at home. It turns our thoughts to them, perhaps unconsciously, but in the long-run it certainly is helpful. I pray that this deep sense of fellowship and rising church-centeredness in our lives may continue into the so-called normal period which will eventually come.

Again I wish to express my appreciation of the effort of The Mennonite in maintaining our fellowship.

—Sincerely, Esko Loewen.

A College Student's Meditation on Psalms 16, 42, and 63

*By Frances N. Ewy

This meditation is from the viewpoint of youth. Of youth which is just beginning to take on the responsibilities of life and to take its place in the world. Experience in living is meager as yet, and the future right now seems dark and stormy. What to do and what to prepare for are questions of reality. Demands are made on all sides. Some are asked to give up their present mode of life for something new and strange. Others are asked to give up, at least temporarily, their plans and goals for the future. At a time when we are stretching out to take our first steps in the world, limitations of all kinds are put on. These are unnatural and confusing. They hinder youth from giving the best that it can give.

It is then that youth begins to think long thoughts about life and its meaning. What are we here for? What is the highest goal we can strive for? With changing standards and ideals, youth wonders what is of permanent value.

Then with troubled mind youth turns to the Creator of this world. With expressed or unexpressed desire it seeks God. This desire is just as real and vital as that of the deer that pants for water. In this troubled picture God is like a light in the night.

Frances Ewy is a member of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California. She is very active in Sunday school, C.E., and daily vacation Bible school work. Lots of hard work on a fruit ranch near Reedley is a part of her experience. Should you visit the farm, she and her brothers might invite you to a wiener roast back of the house. Undoubtedly the main impression that you would get is this, that throughout all the varied experiences of youth she emphasizes the "one thing needful" like Mary did, (Luke 10:42).

Youth yearns for God like David did in his songs I yearn for God in body and soul. I thirst for Him like a land without water, dreary and dry. I have seen Him through man and nature and have glimpsed his power and majesty. I shall think of him as long as I live.

I will link up my life with God. He shall become my first interest. I will seek out his meaning of life and live rather than exist from day to day. I will use the life he has given me, and the mind with which to think, and the world of great opportunities.

The individuals I look up to as ideals will be true followers of God. The ones who have caught his spirit and are living accordingly. They will help to serve as my inspiration and pattern. I will not allow my attitudes to be altered by those whose first interests are temporal.

To think God's thoughts after him will be my object in life. He will by my motive, He will be my impulse and He will be my way of life.

I thank God for His encouragement, for His standing by and helping when things seem very dark. With Him so close I cannot fail.

And now, that I have felt God, my heart and soul no longer feel heavy but rejoice, for I feel secure. God will never leave me. His loyalty and interest is everlasting. He is the true way of life.

Who Are the Happy?

Look at life closely and you will discover that they are a motley crowd. They are not always to be found amoung the well to do, or the people with the most leisure and security. The most beautiful houses are not always the happiest homes. Neither are the strong and the robust always happy. Happiness appears in strange and unexpected places--among invalids, the poor, the despised, the dispossessed. We have seen happiness among the incurables, the blind, the homeless, and those burdened with loss and grief. It is often found in abundance in humble cottages where the furniture and board is of the simplest. All this seems paradoxical as if happiness could be found among the unhappy. But it really amounts only to this, that happiness has its source within. We have imagined that it comes from without as a result of pleasant environment and money and the things money can buy. True happiness is a bi-product. One had better not set out to seek it directly. It is ours as a result of right thinking and right feeling and right living. The Son of Man had nowhere to lay His head, but His soul was filled with the joy the world cannot give nor take away.

SKILL FOR SERVICE

Jacks of Many Trades—Masters of Some

Some one has called the Civilian Public Service camps "reservoirs of manpower." A survey of the questionnaires filled out by the boys in camp shows that they come from dozens of occupational backgrounds. From blacksmiths to barbers, from clerks to carpenters —the variety is an almost endless one among the 2,400 campees.

The majority of boys in Mennonite C.P.S. camps come from farm or rural background. Other high-ranking vocations are carpentry, truck driving, mechanics, and painting. In addition to these there are sprinklings of bricklayers, well drillers, glass cutters, boiler makers, welders, miners, landscape architects, cabinet workers, interior and exterior decorators, draftsmen, electricians, bakers, butchers, plumbers, milk testers, poultrymen, linotypists, and paperhangers.

Among the boys with professional experiences, teaching and clerical work rate foremost. Other professional fields are journalism, photography, and salesmanship.

Over one hundred boys have college degrees in a wide range of academic fields. About one out of every ten boys has attended a Mennonite college or school at some time or another.

Finding Their Niche

Civilian Public Service is gradually becoming more diverse. This permits a more efficient use of skills and aptitudes. From the very beginning of C.P.S., boys with specialized skills were, as much as possible, used in work for which they were qualified. I.e., camp offices are staffed with boys of clerical experience; camp garages use the mechanics; educational directors are in most cases former teachers. The government technical agencies in many cases are using boys in surveying, drafting, and office work.

Chief among the new skills acquired in camp are those connected with the kitchen and the laundry.

In the growing program of C.P.S., boys are permitted to indicate their desired form of service. When these forms of service open, boys who have qualified as campees and who have proper skills are given consideration for a transfer to this work. Sometimes the transfer involves going from one camp to another, sometimes to a mental hospital to serve as attendant, secretary, or kitchen aid, sometimes to an administrative office as secretary or office assistant.

Toward a Purpose

In all the camps, hospital units, and detached services, boys are developing skills and accumulating much valuable experience. Through the educational program boys can become proficient in typing, shorthand, woodworking, and leathercraft.

Many campees are preparing for greater service they feel some day they can give. This service may be in better citizenship as Christian workers in their home communities. For many there is the growing challenge to prepare in skill and in spirit for Christian service to humanity, especially in the critical period of the post-war world.

To our interested young people we wish to send greetings:

Judging from the contributions which have been sent in, we know that there must be many interested and active young people's workers. Somehow we would like to send a word of encouragement and appreciation, and will take this opportunity to do so.

Your General Fund contributions have especially been helping to support the editing of the "Mennonite Youth" pages and the distribution of Fellowship Prayer Calendars. We trust that you are taking advantage of these services by reading The Mennonite and using the calendars in your devotions.

Several districts have also sent special project contributions for foreign missions, for the support of Ernst Harder, and for medical work in Paraguay. These have been forwarded as designated. Others have sent commendable reports on project work. May the Lord bless and use the gifts and givers in His service. Some mission doors may be closed, but others are open, and as we have therefore opportunity at home or abroad let us support the spreading of the Gospel of Christ for it is the power of God unto salvation. We may be tempted to become discouraged because of present conditions, but what are ten, twenty, or even fifty years compared with thousands and thousands of years—even eternity—with Christ our Saviour, surrounded by the glories of heaven such as cannot be described in words. Thus above all, may we have the desire to be found faithful to Him in whatever paths of service He may lead.

Respectfully submitted,
Dorothy Dietz

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

February 7, 1943

JESUS AFFIRMS HIS DEITY

John 8:12, 25-36, 56-59; Read 12-59

What Jesus taught about himself is of the utmost importance. "The surpassing excellence of his character and conduct, the uniqueness and abiding worth of his teachings, the marvelous nature of his deeds, and his resurrection and ascension into heaven, all convince us that his witness concerning himself certainly is true." See also 8:14. Jesus declared in our lesson that He is the divine Son, sent by the Father, and being such He can be the Redeemer of the world and our Savior from sin.

The Light of the World, vs. 12

Jesus was in the treasury of the temple (vs. 20) and close by were two very large golden lamp stands on which hung many lamps which spread their light widely. Perhaps He pointed to these as He made one of his most marvelous assertions (vs. 12). These words, coming from His lips, impress us as being the simple truth. Nineteen hundred years of history have proved that Christ has given light such as has come from no other source. He is the Fountain of light, enlightening the life of every one who wills to receive Him. He follows Him as a person follows a light in a dark night, and shall not stumble in the darkness. We must follow Christ, the Light, believe in Him, walk in the newly-awakened spiritual life. As one sun is sufficient for the whole earth, so Christ alone is the light of the whole world.

The One Sent by the Father, vss. 25-30

Christ claimed that He had been sent to earth by the Father and that He spoke the words which the Father willed (vs. 26). His words were of divine authority, and are for the whole world. He was sure the Father would bear Him out in all that he said. The Jews failed to understand Him. He declared that after they had crucified Him, the events would convince them that He was really the Son of God, as He claimed to be (vs. 28). God, the Father, revealed to Christ whatever He needed to know. Jesus enjoyed the constant help of the Father who did not leave Him to go his way alone (vs. 29). The child of God may always be certain of His presence. Christ claimed that He lived an absolutely righteous life, always pleasing to the Father. Our faithful and godly living will win His unreserved approval. His call to us to follow Him obediently is a guarantee that He will be with us so long as we endeavor to do His will.

The Liberator From Sin, vss. 31-36

Jesus lays down this fixed rule that only those who continue in his word can be recognized as disciples (vs. 31). Mere belief in Him is not enough. We must also put his teachings into practice. This will show that we are really his disciples. Through continuing in Christ's word we shall come to know all the truth that is needful and profitable for us to know. This truth of Christ's word will make us free from everything that would interfere with a victorious Christian life, and especially from sin's bondage (vs. 32).

Jesus pictures a life of sin as a bondage (vs. 34). Whoever willfully commits sin, chooses the way of wrong-doing—even though he be Abraham's seed—is the servant of sin. Many millions are so enslaved to wrong habits that they are unable to give them up by their own power. Sin's bondage is so much worse and the servitude is very real. The sinner can not lift himself to a spiritual plane of living. Jesus declares that He is the Emancipator from such bondage to sin. They who are the slaves, servants of sin, can not be true members of God's household. Christ can set men free and they shall be free indeed. This is what mankind needs. This is a divine work. The fact that Christ can emancipate the slaves of sin is a proof that He is indeed the Son of God.

The Eternal Son, vss. 56-59

Christ's claim that the Father sent Him into the world is proof that He existed with the Father before He was sent. Jesus declared that Abraham rejoiced to see the time of His stay on earth. He believed the promises that were given to him and rejoiced in anticipation of their fulfullment. Possibly, the fact was revealed to him in Paradise as it was to Moses and Elijah. Jesus declares that very definitely "before Abraham was brought into being, I exist" (vs. 58). Jesus never came into being at all, but existed before Abraham, before creation, or from eternity. Verily Christ exists eternally, without beginning or end. He lives, He knows, He understands, his power is available for us. There is no middle ground for our belief concerning Christ and his claims.

Mennonitism in Chicago

On November 23 the Mennonite churches and missions of Chicago celebrated the thirty-fifth anniversary of the Chicago Mennonite Sunday School Convention. On December 6 one of the Mennonite churches celebrated its fiftieth anniversary; during that same week our own church celebrated its twenty-fifth anniversary. Is the Mennonite Church in Chicago a living factor? May I in answer to this relate my own personal experience.

In 1920 I came to Chicago as a young man to enter one of the technical schools of the city. With me I had the addresses of several of the Mennonite churches. On the first Sunday that I was in Chicago I went to one of these churches; I was warmly welcomed and made to feel at home. My school was quite a distance from the church, but during my youth we had to drive many miles to church and we were used to this.

At this church I heard messages of power and vital faith. I also heard from time to time messages from various leaders in the Mennonite church who came through Chicago. Practically all of the foreign missionaries of the Mennonite church preached in this church. Also many of the teachers of Mennonite schools were heard in this place. Moreover, I was given work to do here which kept me interested.

During these years before I became a minister I had occassion to meet people in various walks of life. Many expressions in regard to Mennonites were made. Most of these were of such a nature as to make me feel appreciative of the heritage I had. During this time I also attended the Mennonite Sunday school conventions which were held quarterly. All eight Mennonite missions took part. Some six different branches of the Mennonite church were represented. All this time I was subject to the atmosphere that we find in the non-religious schools, offices, and factories. Did these surroundings or the city life in general tend to break my loyalty to the Mennonite church or the Christian Church. The answer is a positive "no." The reason, I was in contact with the church.

City life tends to test your Christianity, perhaps, more so than rural life, but it can also strengthen your Christian life if there is a church to help you and if you are willing to be helped. Many people come to the city and never attend the church for one reason or another. Very often the falling away from the faith has happened already before they came to the city. Those of us who lived in Mennonite rural communities such as McPherson County, Kansas, know of ever so many farmers and business men in the small towns who come from Mennonite heritage but who now have lost all interest in the church.

We admit that the rural atmosphere is the more wholesome and also hope that many more will be induced to stay on the farm. However, let us notice that all findings indicate that many of our own people are leaving the farm and going into other lines of work, some in small towns but others in the larger cities. The point then is to keep the church alive in the city and to help these people to make contact with the city church. During my time in the city I have seen young people come to the city here for a few years of study, not always in Bible schools but in other schools; they attended the church here, received new life or interest, and went to their home communities to serve the church with new zeal.

I am reminded of the issue that we used to be confronted with in regard to the German language. We were told, ever so earnestly, that if we lost the German language we would lose our Mennonite culture and our Mennonite religion. By now most of us believe that we can keep our faith even if we lose our language. And not only that, but we have found it necessary to preach in the American language if we wish our children to keep the faith.

In the same manner, we believe that if we want to keep our faith alive and our church growing we will have to work in those places where the people are, and not where they have been. If the economical conditions of our time bring about a change in the manner of farming that will make business people out of farmers, then we must work among business people to keep the church in a growing state. If there should be a change so that people will again turn more to private farming (and we hope there will be), then we will have to work among these people.

From one who loves the country but sees the need of the city.—John T. Neufeld, Mennonite Bible Mission own. The world, men and women everywhere, are watching and waiting and looking for that purpose in your life and in my life. The world is dying because too many of us who bear his name have lost his purpose. Someone has said, and this is a terrible indictment for the Church: "The reason the world does not take the Church more seriously is because the Church does not take Jesus more seriously," (Christian Advocate). May his purpose be reborn and become evident in our lives.

Thanks be to God that we have a changeless Christ—"Jesus Christ the same yesterday, today, and forever"—who remains changless though everything in this world is unstable and insecure, who remains changeless in his character, who remains changeless in his purpose.

A Strong Chain

*By Allen M. Fretz

Rev. A. M. Fretz of the Deep Run, Perkasie, Pennsylvania, church in his sermon on December 27 took to illustrate the thirteen lessons of the last quarter the twelve links of a strong chain with a ring at one end and a hook at the other end.

Faith in Christ as our personal saviour, the beginning of the Christian life, we are justified by faith, we have access by faith into the grace wherein we stand, by faith we rejoice in the hope of the glory of God. This is the golden ring of the first lesson, followed by a link of loyalty to Christ. Comments: In this condition is growth in Christ.

Link two, lesson four, reminds us that we are "Come-outers," and intend to shun all evil, or we have to give account to the great judge; this is link three. Now we have four lessons on the family with four links that cannot be broken. They are sure and strong. The comments, which were timely and highly applicable, cannot be fully given except on lesson six of November 22, which was previously illustrated on the blackboard with a circle entitled "The Happy Family." The circumference of this circle is made up of: "The Power of Love," "Mutual Devotion," "Reverence for God," This has a link ready to hook to an active church (lesson nine). This was illustrated with a larger circle with the words "The Active Church" written in it. Appropriate comments were made on this.

The next two lessons on the Church were illustrated with squares on the board. In the middle of the first square was written, "The New Life." The upper line meant "Risen with Christ." One side meant "Put on the New." The other, "Put off the Old." The bottom, "Ruled by Christ."

The next square was called "The Value of the Church." The upper line, "Salt of the Earth." One side, "Honor and Love Where Such Belong." The other, "Light of the World." The bottom, "To Caesar, Caesar's, To God, God's." (The main emphasis must always be upon what belongs to God, must it not?—Editor)

The eleventh link in the twelfth lesson, the birth of Jesus, reminds us of the fact that we need a saviour at the end as well as at the beginning of life and that there can be no perfect family or church without Christ. The closing lesson, "Dynamic Christian Living" is the strong hook to which our own life may be hung.

Allen M. Fretz is, as far as the editor knows, the oldest active pastor in our General Conference. On October 13, 1942 he entered into the sixtieth year of the ministry. This period he had prefaced with twelve years of Sunday school work. On December 12, 1942, he entered into the nintieth year of ilfe. He is at present pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Perkasie, and also Elder of the Deep Run Church. Other churches in the Eastern District which he has served are: Zion, Souderton, Allentown, Springfield, Pottstown and Bowmansville. In his younger years he helped conduct revival services in western New York and Canada. In 1882 he was a nominee for the state legislature. During the winter of 1869-70 he was a student at the Wadsworth, Ohio, Mennonite Seminary. He has been married three times. During his many varied services he is reputed never to have moved further than twelve miles from his home community. Brother Fretz helped give birth to The Mennonite. The following appears in the Conference minutes of 1885, "Bro. A. M. Fretz impressed the Conference with the need of an English church paper and laid before Conference the prospectus of 'The Mennonite' prepared by himself and Bro. N. B. Grubb..."Brother Fretz contributed many articles to the paper in the early years.

WINDOW STICKERS

Window stickers to show that you have given to War Relief and Civilian Service are now available. This 4x5½ inch sticker has the cross, clasped hands, wheat, and dove of peace seal of the M.C.C. in the center of it. Above the seal in bold letters are the words "WE GIVE." Below the seal in smaller letters are the words "Through our Church." On one side of the seal in still smaller letters are the words "To War Relief," and on the other side are the words "And Civilian Service." The coloring is blue and red against a white background. It is an attractive sticker.

Church pastors or treasurers should order these stickers in quantity from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania. Church members should not place individual orders for these for many individual orders would compel the M.C.C. to spend a lot of money on unnecessary postage and mailing. Let the pastor or treasurer order these stickers. They should do so promptly. Each church can estimate how many they will need. It is suggested that churches then distribute these stickers through a plan similar to that used with the certificates. The message on this sticker is also available on a window card of the same size. Perhaps, some may prefer the card.

IN MEMORIAM

MARIA GROSS WALTER, daughter of Wilhelm Gross and Maria Mendel Gross, was born in Huttertal South Russia, in 1849. Later she moved to Johannesruh with her parents.

She was baptized by Rev. Peter Wedel in 1865. In 1866 she was married to Joseph Walter. This union was blessed by twelve children, six sons and six daughters. Two of the children preceeded her in death in their infancy. A little more than a year ago her daughter, Mrs. Peter Mandl, died.

In 1879 she came to America with her husband and older children and they made their home on a farm near Freeman, South Dakota. Here she lived with her family until her husband died in 1918. Shortly after this she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. A. A. Wollman, in Freeman. Here she remained until her death.

She was a member of the Neuhuttertal Church and led a quiet godly life. She passed away on January 4, 1943. (She was the grandmother of Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz of McPherson, Kansas).

CORRESPONDENCE

LEHIGH MENNONITE CHURCH

Lehigh, Kansas

We repainted and repapered the interior of our church building in November. The proceeds were donated by the Ladies Aid.

We feel quite fortunate to have had the privilege of having had church services every Sunday of last year, except December 27 when we had a violent snow storm. Elmer H. Janzen, son of our pastor, B. H. Janzen, left for the C.P.S. camp at Downey, Idaho, before Christmas. On January 3 we observed the Lord's Supper.

Throughout the year the Ladies Mission Circle and the Mary Martha Circle have sewed for the M.C.C. Camp packs have been made for the C.O.'s of our church. More clothing than usual has been mailed for relief this fall. Thanks be to God from whom all the means and kindness is given for men to work with. —Mrs. F. G. Unruh, Corr.

WOODLAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Warroad, Minnesota

Dear Editor and Readers,

Psalm 119: 105. "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path." Jesus is the light of the world and if we have Jesus in our hearts we need not be afraid, for we have a light that shines far enough ahead so that we can see to walk. We need not be in the dark.

On New Year's Day, in the forenoon, communion services were held in our church. In the afternoon, at the Dave Fast home, the brethren of the church held their annual business meeting, while the sisters had their sewing circle meeting. At the business meeting it was decided to subcribe 100 per cent for either The Mennonite or the Bundesbote. The various treasurers gave their annual reports, and an election of officers was held.

Mrs. C. I. Krahn, secretary and treasurer of the sewing club, gave a report of the business during the year. It was decided to prepare a kit to have ready for whoever is called from our church to go into service at a C.P.S. camp.

We had been planning a new and larger church building, but since the law prohibiting building was passed, it was decided to do the next best thing, namely, to remodel the present building and to build it larger so that it will serve our needs. The brethren are finishing the inside of the church building and further improvements are to be made in spring when the weather becomes nicer.

On New Year's Day, occurred the marriage of Deidrich Unruh, son of Brother and Sister John J. B. Unruh, to Wynona Dick, daughter of Brother and Sister Deidrich Dick of Alsen, North Dakota. The young couple is making their home on a farm they rented in the Warroad vicinity. May God's richest blessings be theirs through the coming years.

ALEXANDERWOHL MENNONITE CHURCH

Goessel, Kansas

We have experienced a year of rich blessings. We were privileged to meet for Sunday school and church service every Sunday except when services were called off on account of snowstorms or muddy roads. During the past year twenty-six young people were baptized and received into the church; four members were received by church letters; eight died leaving our membership at 927 at present.

We had the privilege to hear Dr. John Schmidt, who spent over a year in South America, report of his work among the Mennonites in the Chaco. In the evening of December 20 the church choir gave a Christmas program. Shortly after Christmas we had a blizzard which changed many plans. There was no church service on December 27. December 29 had been set as the date for our annual church meeting. The storm tore many telephone wires, and so there was no communication for some time. Since electricity was cut off the church could not be heated and the annual meeting was not held. New Year's Day was observed as a day of prayer for our nation and its leaders. On January 9 the annual church meeting was held. Dinner was served to all present. The food was brought by those attending the meeting and prepared and served by the women.

The reports given by the various committees were interesting and encouraging. Rev P. H. Unruh, who has been sick for some time, was also present to give his report. We are grateful that he is feeling somewhat stronger and hope he will soon recover. Forty-two young people have been called into service; this includes two nurses and the boys in C.P.S. and government camps. A pastoral letter was sent to those in service at Christmas time as a token that we as church members think of them. On account of bad roads and in order to save gasoline and tires the Alexanderwohl Church had its prayer meeting programs on Sundays of January 10, 17, and 24. Instead of the sermon we had two topics, special music, and prayers by church members who had been asked to serve by the program committee. In this way these prayer meetings are better attended.

—Katie Wedel, Corr.

PULASKI MENNONITE CHURCH

Pulaski, Iowa

The church held its eighty-second annual business meeting on January 11. (From the enclosed newspaper clipping the editor gleans that Victor Swartzendruver was elected chairman for the new term and that besides the usual offices found in most churches this one has some others. These are listed as: Junior deacon, Secretary of Pulaski District of Mennonite Aid Plan, and Valuators of Aid Plan.)

While the travel restrictions at present will not likely permit the annual get-together and retreat meetings of the Iowa churches, arrangements are to be made as usual for the June evangelistic meetings here which have long been included in the Pulaski yearly calendar. Brother E. A. Sommer, our pastor, who became our shepherd last May after eight years in the pulpit at the Middlebury, Indiana, church, will assist in locating a suitable minister to lead these meetings.

Out of some fifty young men of our church registered in the several age groups of the Selective Service Act, three have thus far been called to regular service and another member expects to be assigned soon to a Civilian Public Service camp. Our treasurer's report for 1942 shows a total of $266.20 collected and remitted to the C.P.S. program.

At the reorganization period each year we look back in gratitude for the efforts which have here been blest through four generations of community life. We look forward feeling keenly each passing year the obligation and responsibility to keep the light shining for Christian culture. With all of our imperfections may these efforts help to bring the day "when all the world shall give Him birth, and men may yet have peace on earth." —V.E.S.

The plan is set so that students need not withdraw their membership from home churches, but will at the same time be able to consider themselvs members of the local church while in Bluffton. Brother Smucker also urged students of other denominations to associate themselves with the other Bluffton churches in a similar way, if possible. College films available for church groups and other organizations: Six hundred feet of motion picture film and fifty colored kodochrome slides, showing scenes of the Bluffton College campus and activities, are available for use by churches and other organizations. Arrangements for use of this material can be made through the office of the president. Coming vesper programs: On Sunday afternoon, February 14, Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, president of the Community Service Inc., Yellow Springs, Ohio, formerly president of Antioch College, formerly chairman of the T.V.A., and author of The Small Community, will address college and community people in the Ramseyer chapel. On March 7 Rosa Paige Welch, colored mezzo-soprana from Chicago, will give a concert of sacred music. Dan West, member of the Board of Christian Education in charge of peace work, a United Brethren, (Should it be Church of the Brethren?), will speak on April 4. On January 15 the faculty held its regular monthly discussion concerning special student and faculty religious problems. N. E. Byers led the discussion on the problem of leading students into a fuller comprehension and understanding of their religious convictions. He stressed that reason as well as revelation should be the basis of religious belief. A War Relief Committee has been appointed to plan for relief to students affected by the havoc wrought by the war at present, and after the war is over. The committee is under the leadership of President Ramseyer. Student representatives from each of the four classes and Sister Edna Ramseyer and Brother Irvin Bauman, faculty members, are the others who compose the committee. Projects which have been proposed are: donation of blood to Red Cross, sewing and collecting unused articles of clothing for the Mennonite Central Committee and the Red Cross, folding gauze, assisting the local rationing board, and instituting a first aid course, especially for college students. The committee also plans to make a survey of this type of work done in various Quaker, Brethren, and Mennonite colleges in other localities.

Winning The Peace

One can hear and read much today on the subject of winning the peace which is to follow upon the end of the present war. The allied nations, they tell us, won the first World War and then lost the peace that followed. Evidently many intelligent people are devoting serious thought to the question of how to make a more just and more lasting peace than was made after the armistice that ended the first World War.

Numerous plans and ideas are being put forward already for winning the peace; plans for an economic and political set-up that will make possible a better world in which to live. It is predicted on all hands that there will be very great changes as a result of the present world-wide upheaval; changes that will affect the lives of all peoples in many ways. It is therefore the open season for all those who think they are competent to devise a plan whereby men and nations can live together indefinitely in peace and harmony. One hears of "new orders," "charters," "freedoms," and various and sundry theories which are to be the blueprints for the utopia which is to be. It is not our purpose to examine and compare these projected plans for what men call a better world. Though differing in some respects, they are nevertheless in other respects all quite similar. It is these similarities that interest us as Christians particularly.

These projected plans for winning the peace reveal the fact that some men firmly believe themselves to be quite competent to shape their own and the world's future along just and right lines. There is no manifested acknowledgment on their part that men are dependent on any Person higher than themselves for the creation of a better and happier world. All the projected plans appear to be based on the naive assumption that men through their collective reason and intelligence are fully competent to bring about the utopia they desire. If there were manifest in these proposals any sincere confession or intimation of man's innate selfishness, of his sinfulness and moral perversity, any suggestion that men must seek for and yield themselves to the guidance of an Intelligence and a Will higher than their own, then the Christian believer might be inclined to take more stock in these plans which are talked about so much. As it is, it appears that men are setting about to build another tower of Babel, a project which can only result in more confusion and failure. The crucial weakness in these efforts is the fact that men leave God and His purposes out of their thinking and planning. God's will for man as revealed in the Scriptures and in Jesus Christ they either respectfully ignore or scornfully reject. It is the Christian's conviction that no plans can really succeed in that direction which are not based on faith in God and obedience to His will.

There is another respect in which most of the heralded plans of men for a better world are similar. They are at bottom selfish and material in their outlook. The assumption is that the scope of human values and interests is limited to this earth and the things that are in it. Whether it is those who would destroy certain political empires and create others in their place, or whether it is those who are determined only to hold what they have, the peace aims are invariably limited by material things and earthly horizons.

The greed for material things crops out in all the proposals for a so-called just peace. Those who talk of freedoms to be established seem to mean primarily the freedom to be comfortable and unmolested in the unlimited enjoyment of material things. They ignore the greatest of all facts, that the souls of men cannot live by bread alone, nor yet on such purely earthly fare as freedom, liberty, economic opportunity, and the rest of the things men claim to be fighting for. As Jesus told the people long ago, men need bread from heaven more desperately than they need material food. To be satisfied and happy, they need the spirit of Christ in the heart, the spirit of service to fellow men, the spirit of sacrificing for God's kingdom, the spirit of devotion to One who transcends all human and earthly things and the values men attach to them.

The United Nations profess to be fighting for the preservation and the extension of certain freedoms. Even these freedoms, it is to be feared, in most people's minds reek with materialistic self-interest and sordid selfishness. They are of the earth earthy. They cannot by any means satisfy the deepest hunger of men's souls. It is perhaps impossible to convince the average American citizen that material plenty and comfort, automobiles, electrical appliances, and luxuries are not the most important things to live and work for. Like the Laodiceans, American Christians too generally imagine themselves rich and well supplied—except when rationing boards keep from them the quantities of some articles which they imagine they need—and they are not even aware how miserable and poverty-stricken they are spiritually.

One wonders what will be required to teach us the lesson that faith in God is more essential than motor cars, that salvation in Christ is a greater treasure than stocks and bonds; that doing the will of God as revealed in Christ is a better sustenance than luxurious foods; that sacrificing for the welfare of others is more satisfying to the heart and mind than the enjoyment of unlimited creature comforts and the "freedoms" of which men talk so much.

What is the Christian's duty in the midst of this humanistic and materialistic thinking about winning the peace? His testimony by word and by life should be a rebuke to all plans and programs which propose to win the peace apart from doing the will of God. He should demonstrate, for all the world to see, the fact that there are more important things to live for than material comforts. He must make men conscious of the existence of spiritual values as over against those that are purely material. It is his opportunity to exemplify the sacrificial spirit of Jesus Christ as over against the spirit of grasping for more creature and selfish enjoyments.

Christians must magnify the heroism there is in simply doing the will of God through giving willing and humble service for the welfare of their fellow men and of their country. Our government graciously gives conscientious Christians the unique opportunity for doing such service in place of joining in the nation's war effort. The young men in the C.P.S. camps and the brotherhood that supports them are in a position to render a service, to give a pointed rebuke to the materialistic efforts to build a better world without doing God's will, and to make men conscious that there are higher values in life than mere creature comforts.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

(Since the editor has only a limited amount of time to give to this part of the paper, there will sometimes be little or no material on certain contributors. By no means is the importance of an article to be judged by what appears about the contributor or fails to appear about him. To find out about a person one must often dig into books, papers, make telephone calls and interview other people. When information is not readily accessible or when the time is limited, the write-up must necessarily be short. This service is rendered because many of the readers seem to appreciate an introduction to a writer, even though that introduction be scant. FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"I Was Hungry, so I Stole"

In front of our school blacksmith shop lay a long iron bar which was to be used to make small pickaxes for our school farm. One morning the bar was gone. It was about sixteen feet long and of considerable value in these days.

So I made a noise about it and had it announced far and wide that the bar had been stolen. One of our Christian brethern went out to buy cattle feed. He happened to find out that a certain village smith had some cattle to sell. Our brother went to him and offered to buy what he needed. The smith said, "No, I must sell a large amount because this evening I have a chance to buy an iron rod, and the fellows demand cash for it."

Our Christian was at once suspicious; so he waylaid those who were to bring the bar. And sure enough, the thieves came right past him with the bar, which our brother identified. But he did not say a word to them, but he recognized the thieves.

Our brother came running to the mission station to report. It was about midnight now. But Dr. Dester offered his car and I took this brother and two more borthers to the police station. The police was at once ready to go to that village where the "transaction" took place. The thieves were caught and handcuffed.

A few weeks later the trial took place, to which I, of course, had to go. The thieves admitted that they had stolen. Then the judge asked the older one of the two, "Now, you are a farmer, why did you commit this thieft?"

The man stood weeping before the judge and said, "I and my family were hungry, so I stole. For two years our crops have failed entirely and we have nothing to eat."

I thought of Jean Val Jean in Victor Hugo's Les Miserables. A wave of pity came over me, and I almost was ready to ask the judge to let the man go free. Yet thieving is so common in India and property so insecure that I felt that after all the law should take its course. So the thieves went to jail for four months. Yet God has given enough food on this earth so that no one needs to go hungry. Do we have a Christian duty to help solve this awful curse of lack of distribution of the essentials of life?

—John Thiessen

BOARD MEETS

The Foreign Mission Board will hold its annual meeting in Newton, Kansas, February 17-19. A number of difficult problems await solution. One of the main ones is that of finding new, open doors for missions to take the place of those which are now closed in China. The board requests support in prayer.

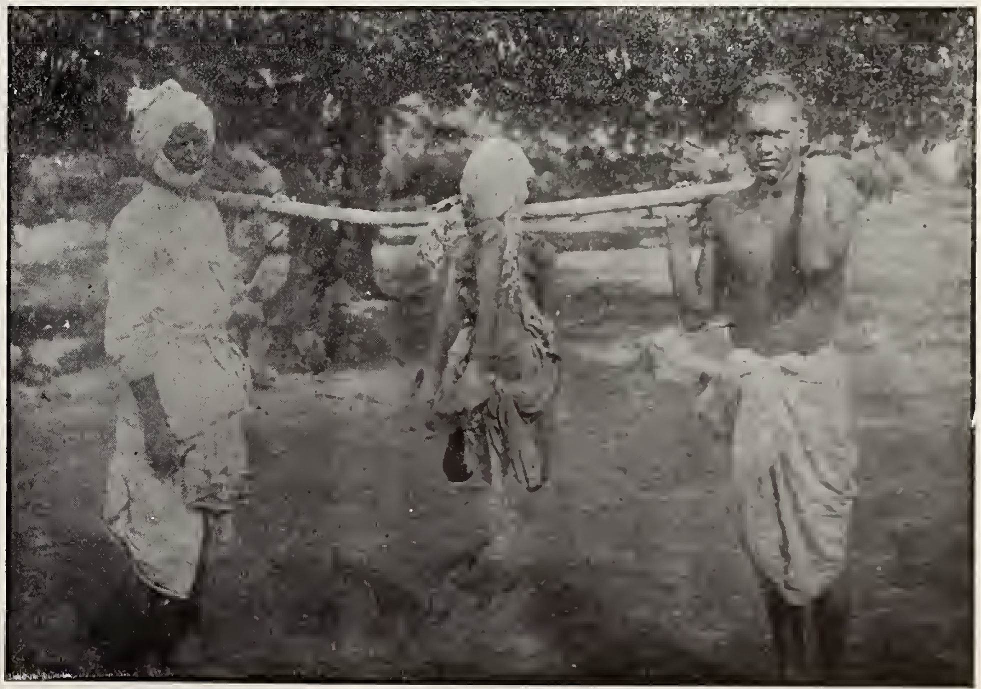
asked to accept the position of resident doctor. Here he worked until he was called to go to South America. He sailed in June, 1941, and gave fifteen months of much-appreciated service. Relief work is close to his heart. Right now he is serving as health director at the University of New Mexico at Albuquerque.



THIS WOMAN STARVED TO DEATH

The years of 1899-1900 were years of famine in India. The location of our own mission field had not yet been decided. Brother and Sister P. A. Penner were staying at the Old Mennonite mission. During his stay there Brother Penner took the above picture. This picture is, therefore, one of the very first ones sent from India to appear in our church periodicals.

Civilian Public Service in Other Countries

By Cornelius Krahn

Our great and momentous project of Civilian Public Service had its roots in similar activities in others countries. Genuine Christ-like Mennonitism does not negatively profess non-resistance, but is positively engaged in service. If we check in our history we find that the positive side has not always been dominant. Too often our forefathers looked for a place of refuge where they could lead undisturbed, isolated lives. In cases like that they seemed to overlook the fact that they were called by God to be "the light of the world" and "the salt of the earth." One of the reasons for the frequent migrations of our people was their desire to live unto themselves. We find an example of this in the recent migrations of conservative Mennonites of Canada to Mexico. However, we are well aware that many other causes are decisive in migrations like that.

Extremes

Almost all Mennonites in European countries have gradually given up their isolated position. They have adjusted themselves to their respective communities and countries. Their motto is "To share all privileges with fellow countrymen means to share all obligations." They have changed their former stand of non-resistance to that of resistance. By dropping the prefix "non" they have not established positive and Christ-like Mennonitism. They have simply fallen from one extreme to the other.

Unarmed Ships and Contributions

But let us turn to pages of our history that give illustrations of our people going the second mile and giving also a cloak when a coat is asked for. Throughout the sixteen, seventeenth centuries, and a part of the eighteenth the Mennonites of Europe considered armed defense, personal or national, an action for which members must be excommunicated from the church. During the seventeenth century many Mennonites of Holland were shareholders in the large fleet owned by the Dutch East Indies Company. Also many owned or had shares in fishing fleets. Because of pirates these ships were commonly armed. However they decided that no member was permitted to be a shareholder of an armed ship. On the other hand, these Mennonites always made large contributions to the welfare of their country by supporting public, educational, and philanthropic institutions, of which many were founded by Mennonites. Also they are known as pioneers in relief work in foreign countries.

Transformation of Swamps

When some Mennonites from Holland, during the sixteenth century, settled along the banks of the Vistula River in Prussia and under grave sacrifices and hardships transformed it from a swampy waste to a profitable farming country, they not only found a place where they could worship God freely, but they also performed a great positive public service to their fellow countrymen.

Fire-fighting and Gilders

Here are a few illustrations of how the Mennonites of Prussia served their country in times of emergency. The city of Danzig was besieged in 1734. Annals relate that the Mennonites living in Danzig saved the city from complete destruction by performing herioc deeds as fire-fighters. During the Napoleonic War Danzig and the surrounding communities, in which many Mennonites lived, suffered severely. The Mennonites of the suburbs of Danzig alone contributed 40,000 gilders for reconstruction work. The other Mennonites in Prussia, too, freely contributed money, horses, linens, etc., for public service. All this was in addition to the annual payments the government required of the Mennonites in lieu of military service. Thus we see that the Mennonites from the time of their building dikes and levees to reclaim the land along the Vistula River up to modern times have rendered indispensable public services to their country.

Helping the Sick and Wounded

Similar testimonies can be quoted from the history of the Mennonites in Russia. A Russian author relates the following incidents from the Crimean War in 1854. We quote: "Simferopol was crowded with people who were ill. . . . And what did the people of the Molotschna Colony do about it? They took to their colony 5,000 wounded and sick in order to care for them. They gave them food, shelter, and medical care according to the doctors. prescriptions. The women and girls considered it their sacred duty to serve as nurses, to bind the wounds by tearing up their own linens, and to provide for the suffering as for members of their own families. They refused pay from the government for this service, accepting only doctors and medicines. . . .They counted it not too great a sacrifice that a number of their own people lost their lives by coming into contact with contagious diseases."

During the Russo-Turkish War, 1877-78, the Mennonites of the Molotschna, as well as the Chortiza settlement, showed a similar zeal to serve. In the Molotschna settlement they took care of 174 wounded, while the old colony settlement established a special hospital for wounded and took care of more than 500 of them. Besides this a large number of additional contributions were made.

Philanthropy and Relief

But the Mennonites did not restrict their activities to war reconstruction work. Chortiza alone contributed about 100,000 rubles[1] for Russian

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

Working With One's Hands

Very few people of any class or condition would deny that labor is a dignified and honorable thing. Only the idle rich disdain doing any kind of labor. Most people will agree that manual labor is an honorable and a dignified way of earning a living, providing it is the other fellow who does the work. We have come to the place in our society where we discriminate between manual work and white-coller or professional work. We give the one a higher rating in our scale of values than the other. There are many people who feel themselves a total failure in life because they have never been able to get anything more than manual labor to perform. Most urban young people aspire to get an office job or some preferential occupational situation where they won't have to work with their hands.

What Is the Reason?

One reason for this attitude is the false standard of values we have built up for ourselves. We have too long been nurtured on the myth every boy can move from log cabin to White House, or if he can't quite get to the White House he can at least "land" some executive position where he won't have to "work." Many of us are like the nobles of the Tekoites who Nehemiah tells us refused to put "their necks to the work." This is illustrated in the case their jobs rather than by their character; by what they have, not by what they are.

It is well to remember that both Jesus and Paul earned their living throughout most of their lives by manual labor. Our own jobs may all take on different appearances if we conceive of them as service rendered to God rather than as attempts to please our fellowmen.

LENDING A HAND AT HOME

From one to four on Wednesday afternoons there is a group of women meeting at the Wichita Kansas mission. These ladies, who come from the underprivileged southwest area of Wichita, are glad to have an opportunity to meet here to make comforts and weave rugs. Other activities are also being planned. We have two sewing machines, a quilting frame, and a loom has been loaned to us for as long as we care to use it. In a happy atmosphere they can work on bedding to keep their families warm. The rugs help to give their homes a more cheerful aspect as well as being practical. Any of the women who spend thirty hours working can have one of the comforts for fifty cents. This is a project by which people are helped to help themselves!

Medical Practice Among the Mennonites in the Chaco of Paraguay

By John R. Schmidt

Since they came to South America twelve years ago, the Russian Mennonites who settled there have had a very difficult problem getting medical care for their colony. They have had doctors come and go, taking on anyone whom they could get.

Need for Trained Doctor

The worst one that they ever had was one who claimed that he was a qualified doctor. After he had made a failure of several cases, some of them getting well in spite of the treatment, he left. The colony then discovered that the only training that he had was a year in a veterinary school which he flunked.

Little wonder that the midwives took over where the "bone-setters" of Russia left off. And I dare that they gave comfort to many a family who was at wits-end even though their treatment probably did more harm than good for the sickness. Considering the kind of medical practice we are used to in the United States the afore-mentioned practice is a hard one to put up with. Not all of the colonists had faith in the "midwife-bonesetter" type of treatment, and many requested that I have it stopped. However, since I was to be there for only a limited time I could hardly forbid them to work, leaving the colony without any care when I left. Consequently, I tried not to let them bother me too much, and we never had a major clash.

Trachoma and Flies

One of the most widely-spread and most troublesome diseases among the colonists is trachoma, a chronic, infectious eye disease. This disease is especially treacherous for little children, causing permanently defective eyesight if not taken care of properly. Many people have become completely blind as a result of the disease.

There are two reasons why trachoma has taken such a hold on these Mennonites. First and mainly, because all those in Russia who had trachoma were not permitted to go to Canada. Hence, the Paraguayan group is really a collected group of Mennonites from all the regions of Russia who had trachoma. This, undoubtly, is the greatest concentration of people with trachoma that the world has ever seen. It is a chronic disease, hence so difficult to cure. Second Paraguay has little flies which are especially prominent during wet seasons. They like to get into people's eyes, especially into those of babies and little children. Thereby the disease is spread markedly.

During my stay I examined people by villages. A total of 1,450 people were examined. Of these 70 per cent had trachoma, and over 750 were put on active treatment. More than 1,600 tablets of sulfa drug were used up for the treatment of this disease.

Living in the Tropics

The Chaco has a tropical type of climate, while all of these people are used to living in a very cold climate. So aside from tropical diseases seen under ideal conditions, we see tropical diseases here because many people fail to make the adjustments which a tropical climate requires. Many know how hard it is for us Mennonites to change our diet, sleep, and way of doing things. Yet all are necessary for proper adjustment.

The problem of diet and health is not an easy one. For one thing, only a limited variety of fruits and vegetables grow here. And they are for the most part of a different variety than those grown in Russia. By habit they prefer meals consisting mostly of flour, baked foods. The severe drought which we had during the year and three months that

I was there forced many to that diet since there was nothing else to get. This brought on many illnesses from vitamin deficiencies.

Typhoid

During the first year of their settlement a typhoid epidemic took an unbelievable toll. One village lost thirty-four people. On many occasions three to four would die in one day. So many that didn't die needed to be taken care of because of undernourishment that at times they had trouble finding people to bury their dead. During my stay we were fortunate in having only one outbreak of typhoid, which was controlled after a father and his two children got it.

No Telephones and No Automobiles

The population as a whole is rural and is spread over an area with a radius of at least fifteen miles. There are no telephones and no automobiles. So you can easily see the difficulties there and why it is important to have midwives in the outskirts of the colony.

For my surgical work I had one well-trained, practical nurse and another practical nurse that could be called upon in non-emergency work. A grade school teacher was trained to give my anesthetics.

Indian Medical Practices

Since the Mennonites have moved into Paraguay the Indians have become very dependent upon them. This dependency will eventially also go over to medical care, I hope. At present the medical aid to the Indians is limited very much because of the numerous superstitions they have. They think that all sicknesses are caused by evil spirits. Their doctor is a man who removes these evil spirits. He does this in two stages. First, with about six assistants a monotonous, staccato-like, harsh, noisy song is sung towards the patient's head, all stooping towards his head. After this has been done for about forty-five minutes they all begin sucking on the patient's body, burying at intervals some of the evil spirits which they have sucked out. If this does not improve the patient, someone sings with him all night. Whenever they think that the patient will die, they are sure to take all their belongings and leave the patient with nothing but a jug of water by his side. To remain there when he died would mean to pick up the evil spirits. Sometimes, to make sure that the evil spirits won't bother anyone else they cut the patient open just when he is dying and put hot bricks in his abdomen. To make doubly sure of getting the evil spirits they pile dry wood on the dead person and burn it.

Light in Darkness

Hospital care and medical care the way the Mennonites are used to is introduced to the Indians when one of them is hurt during work and the Mennonite he works for brings him in. On the whole they make very appreciative and cooperative patients. I, however, had none die while they were under my care. Had that happened I, no doubt, would have been regarded as a suspicious character.

Remember Our Mennonites in Paraguay

In conclusion I plead with all of you to remember our Mennonites in Paraguay. Besides a doctor they need nurses. Also trained personnel for their missions is needed. Only through mission work can the living conditions of the Indians be improved. An enheartening beginning has been made, and anyone desiring to help here will find great appreciation for his work and great satisfaction in the mission performed.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Physical Examinations of IV-E's

We are quoting two paragraphs from a letter to Paul Comley French from the Acting Chief of Camp Operations Division, A. S. Imirie:

"Please be informed that effective February 1, 1943, all IV-E registrants will be sent to recruiting and induction stations for physical examination. They will be forwarded in the same manner and under their own leader with a separate delivery list as I-A registrants are sent.

Full and final type physical examination will be given by this method and it is believed that the use of the system wil greatly relieve receiving physically disabled men in the camps."

Care should be taken that all IV-E registrants are properly informed of this procedure. They will be examined by the Army doctors and Army standards. Heretofore, we have not had an adequate physical examination. This method will insure a thorough official type physical examination. All should properly understand that this procedure is in order and agreed upon between your Committees and Selective Service officials. The boys will not be inducted into the Army but after examination by Army doctors they will be returned for induction in C.P.S. If they pass the examination.

Civilian Government Bonds

Many inquiries are reaching us as to the reason for the delay in the issuance of bonds. No suitable issue has been available to us since October 9. We are at present endeavoring to work out a method that will be a bit more prompt, therefore, more acceptable.

It might be noted, however, that even though subscriptions are uninvested, yet as soon as they reach Provident Trust Company they are recorded on the State and County Quotas. We get credit for them at once in lieu of war bonds. —J. W. H.

Total number of subscriptions for Civilian bonds to Provident Trust Company from beginnning to January 14, 1943—5,439. Total subscriptions in dollars—$774,350. Of this total, subscriptions from Mennonites $641,650. Total funds at Provident Trust Company not yet invested in bonds: $540,750.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By John Graber, North Newton, Kansas

(The Position of the Believer)

FEBRUARY 8—"Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Who hath blessed us with all Spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ." Eph. 1:3.

This verse is a doxology. Its basis is the manifold and various blessings of Redemption. These blessings are Spiritual. Thus, they are the product of the Holy Spirit. Their sphere is "the heavenly places." The relation in which they become ours is "in Christ." This precious phrase is the key to this wonderful portion of Scripture. It is because the saints are in this vital union with Christ, Who is the Beloved of God, that nothing is too great or too good for God the Father to bestow upon them.

FEBRUARY 9—"According as He hath chosen us in Him before the foundation of the world, that we should be holy and without blame before Him in love." Eph. 1:4.

The Believer is chosen of God. The Elector is God the Father. It is His peculiar work or office as sanctification and redemption belong to the Holy Spirit and the Son. God chose out the saints, and provided for their salvation before a star glittered in the heavens. Yes, always, God had us in His heart for redemption. His purposes was for our sanctification—that we should be His in the fullest sense of the word. Holy means "seperated," or "consecrated." Without blame is to be "spotless," and "undefiled."

FEBRUARY 10—"Having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ to Himself, according to the good pleasure of His will, To the praise of the glory of His grace, wherein He hath made us accepted in the Beloved." Eph. 1:5,6.

The Believer is adopted. This is the very first of the privileges which the Apostle Paul ascribes to the Jewish Nation: "To whom pertaineth the adoption. . . ." Rom. 9:4. But the adoption is also the peculiar privilege of the New Testament Church who through faith in the Jewish Messiah become the adopted children of God.

The apostle adds, ". . . accepted in the Beloved." Jesus is the Beloved Son of God. Being in Him, the Believer is as near the heart of the Father as the Glorious Son Himself. What a bond of union!

FEBRUARY 11—"In Whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins, according to the riches of His grace; wherein he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence." Eph. 1:7,8.

The Believer is redeemed. The Person of Christ is the only and everlasting source of human salvation. This redemption is effected by the blood of the Son of God. God makes everything of the blood of His dear Son. The value He sets upon it is infinite. But redemption does more than secure remission of sins for the Believer. It affords entrance into all that is good, all that our loving Father provides and promises His people—life, peace, joy, a title to heaven and fitness for it. Furthermore, it is declared to be our present possession—"We have" it.

FEBRUARY 12—"Having made known unto us the mystery of His will, according to His good pleasure which He hath purposed in Himself: That in the dispensation of the fulness of times, He might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in Him." Eph. 1:9,10.

The believer has a definite purpose in God's plan "The mystery of His will" has been made known in the Holy Scriptures generally, but more especially in His Son Jesus Christ. Dispensation comes from a word which means the plan that a father lays down for the management of his household. Thus, God is the Householder. Christ is the Head under Whom the divine purpose shall be perfected for the family of God in the fulness of times.

FEBRUARY 13—"In Whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of Him Who worketh all things after the counsel of His own will: That we should be to the praise of His glory, who first trusted in Christ." Eph. 1:11,12.

The Believer is entitled to an inheritence. Our inheritance is in substance incorruptible, in its purity undefiled, and in its beauty unfading (1 Pet. 1:4). It is imperishable in its nature, untainted in its possession, and in its enjoyment unfailing. Being God's heritage, the saints are now God's own possession and the dear objects of His love. On them He is expending the riches of His grace, and some day also, the riches of His glory.

FEBRUARY 14—"In Whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the word of truth, the gospel of your salvation: In Whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy Spirit of promise, Which is the earnest of our inheritance, until the redemption of the purchased possession, unto the praise of His glory." Eph. 1:13,14.

The Believer has a divinely-pledged security. A twofold use of the seal is here mentioned. First, it denotes safety, inviolability. No one may break it but the sealer. Second, it denotes possession, property-right. The seal is not baptism, nor the Lord's Supper, nor faith, but the Holy Spirit Himself. But the Spirit is more; He is the earnest, the advanced payment of the purchased possession of God. If God has paid this great and blessed installment, we may rest secure He will pay all.

India Discovers Our American Cast System

It was by a strange twist of circumstances that an Oriental discovered a good Samaritan in the United States. And the good Samaritan, whose heart was larger than his learning, and who was richer in honest virtue than in material wealth, didn't even know the meaning of the phrase.

The story appears in the New York Christian Advocate (Methodist), which vouches for its truth, saying that only the name is fictitious.

Ratnappa Jeevalo, a cultured Christian from India, who is a student in one of the great American universities, was invited to address a missionary conference at a well-known center in the East. It is also important to remember the locality, since it might be assumed that the incident could have occured only in another section of the country.

The alien Christian was to have been met by a minister, but fate disarranged the plans. The conference was on an island some distance from the city, and, the hour being late, Mr. Jeevalo found a taxi, and instructed the driver to take him to a hotel.

And here we quote from The Advocate directly:

"As he entered the lobby of the hotel, the clerk looked him over.

"His skin was very dark, for he comes from South India.

"When he applied for a room, the immediate response was, 'Sorry, sir, but we are full up.' He went to another hotel, and the same thing happened.

"He went to nine different hotels, but everywhere he met the same response.

"He knew why he was not wanted, but he was proud of his heritage and of his color.

"He returned to the railway station, hoping to be permitted to spend the rest of the night there, but was informed that this was not allowed.

"He was perplexed. He did not know which way to turn.

"The taxi driver become keenly interested. He turned sympathetically, and said abruptly, 'Well, I'll find you a bed in this man's town.'

"So saying he drove off to the police station, and explained the situation to the officer in charge. The policeman wrote down in correct form all the particulars concerning this stranger, including his birthplace, his father's name, why he was here, the color of his eyes; and, not least important, the color of his skin—'very dark brown.'

"These details having been complied with, he said bruskly, 'Sure he can have a bed here.' Mr. Jeevalo was then shown a cell down the hall where there was an empty cot. The second cot was occupied by a drunken sot who had been brought in of the streets an hour or two earlier.

The officer and the taxi driver departed, leaving their guest to make the best of the situation. In a little while, however, this uninvited guest returned to the office saying he could not sleep there because the drunken man, taken ill, had become a nuisance. He asked the privilege of sitting up in the police station until morning.

"There they were, a night-coasting taxi driver, a hard-boiled police officer, and a Christian gentleman and guest from India.

"Finally, the taxi driver turned to Mr. Jeevalo and said, 'Well, friend, this is too bad. I am not going to see any man like you sit up all night. I am on night duty, and will not be through until morning. You come up to my room and sleep in my bed, and don't worry: I'll come and get you before breakfast.'

"So saying, he picked up the Indian's bag, and they drove together to a small, plain room in the poorer section of the city. Mr. Jeevalo accepted the offfer of hospitality, and with deep feeling said to his benefactor, 'You certainly are a good Samaritan.' 'Oh, never mind that,' said the driver. 'I want you to get a square deal, and you're welcome.' It was then 3:00 A. M."

The taxi driver returned for his guest at seven o'clock the next morning, and took him to breakfast. After breakfast the driver put Mr. Jeevalo on the ferry that would take him to the missionary conference. To continue:

The taxi driver declined to take a cent for the fare, room, or breakfast, but Mr. Jeevalo forced some money on him.

"Mr. Jeevalo was almost overcome with gratitude, and again he said, 'You certainly have been a good Samaritan to me.'

"The taxi driver could stand it no longer, and said, 'Say, what do you mean? That's twice you've called me a good Samaritan. What does that mean?

"Our Indian Christian looked at him in astonishment, and said, 'Have you never heard of The Good Samaritan? Don't you know the story?' 'No, I don't know what it means.' 'Well,' said

Mr. Jeevalo, 'we still have time.'

And there on the deck of the ferry-boat, the man who had learned the old story in India told it again with effectiveness and meaning to a taxi driver in an American city, who did not know it, but had been living it.

"'That's great,' he said. 'Where did you learn it?' 'Would you like to see the story in print?' said Mr. Jeevalo. 'You bet,' said the man.

"Thereupon Mr. Jeevalo handed him a New Testament, marking especially the story of The Good Samaritan, and adding, 'There may be some other things in there you would like to read.'

"Mr. Jeevalo returned to his college studies and he assures his Christian friends that the thing he wants to remember about this whole experience is the kindness of the plain, unlettered taxi driver. —Sahayak Patrika, India (Submitted by P. A. Penner)

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

THE BEATITUDES AS A RULE OF LIFE

Matt. 5:1-12

I. Worship Service: Songs: "Jesus, Lord We Look to Thee" No. 321; "Lord Jesus, I Long to Be Perfectly Whole" No. 469. 2. Reading of leading topic prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Read in unison the rest of Matt. 5, that is vss. 13-48. (Note how they throw light on the Beatitudes, as a new rule of life.) 4. Offering for Foreign Missions.

II. Leader's Introduction

The Mennonites like the Anabaptists took the Beatitudes as their rule of life. They did not try to dodge the difficult and exacting demands that these teachings of Jesus made on their practical, everyday life. They did not try to escape the suffering that came to them because they took these words literally by saying that in the present age such a life could not be lived. They took Jesus at his word and tired to obey his teachings. They had caught the vision that Jesus' way of living was bound up with this kind of teaching. It was part and parcel of it. He radiated love and taught love because He was Love. He gave life because He was Life. He taught men the way by being the Way. His followers were to be like Him because His Spirit was to dwell in them. They could not choose a convenient, selfish way of living. They would not conform to popular modes and habits that did not embody the attitudes of Christ to God and men. A sacred must to do the Father's will was written into their lives. They must take upon themselves His yoke and learn of Him, become lowly and meek of heart, find rest for their souls, and prove the power of His life in their lives.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. What is meant by being "poor in spirit"? Matt. 5:3; see Luke 6:20; 12:13-21, also 22-34.
2. The comfort that is to come to the mourners. Matt. 5:4 see Luke 16:19-31.
3. Has Jesus' word come true that the meek inherit the earth? Matt. 5:5.
4. How does hunger and thirst after righteousness show itself? Matt. 5:6, see also Luke 18:9-14.
5. God's reward fo the merciful. Matt. 5:7 see also Matt. 18:21-35.
6. The pure in heart shall see God. Matt. 5:8 see also vss. 27-37.
7. Peace-makers, the sons of God. Matt. 5:9 see also vss. 21-26; 43-48.
8. The blessing of being persecuted for righteousness sake. Matt. 5:10-12.

IV. For Discussion: 1. What does it mean to be "blessed?" 2. Why do so many Christians fail to see the need for accepting all of the beatitudes as the rule of their life? 3. How can a Christian follow them in our present-day world?

V. Facts for Study: A few days ago one of our daily newspapers carried the following story on an inside page: American soldiers met a detachment of about 60 men of the enemy troops in hand to hand fighting. They bayonetted them. "We wanted them to surrender in the first place, but they would not. It was the only thing left for us to do, and so we did it." Such an account makes sad reading—who it to be pitied more, those killed, or the ones that did the killing?

Where the Beatitudes are the rule of life such situations do not arise. Mercy and kindness abound in the relation between each other. Humbleness, meekness, and purity of heart will not allow malice, or greed, or vindictiveness to make for any ill will. It is good to live in the midst of those whose attitudes and whose actions are a living testimony to the spirit of Christ dwelling within them.

War, and the causes of war, will not be removed until these simple, practical teachings of Jesus are made the rule of life. The Way of the Master is still The Way. The darkness and sin of the world does not obscure the light that Jesus brought into the world. But if the world is to know peace, lasting peace, the peoples of the world must learn to walk in the way of love and service and sacrifice. They must accept Christ as their Saviour, and let Him rule their life and conduct.

VI. Illustration:

"Guilty of Doing Good"

Several years ago, as a missionary was taking his morning walk, he was met by a young Chinese student who stopped him to say how absolutely useless it was for him to stay on and work among the villages. "They all despise you," said he, "and if you were to stay a hundred years you would not have as many converts as you have fingers." "Nevertheless, I shall stay," said the missionary. "I have a message for the Chinese." In time the student came back and asked to have this message explained, and gave as his reason, "All the village says you are guilty of doing good."

VII. Food for Thought:

Are the Christians today a living illustration of the fact that the Beatitudes are the Rule of their Life?

SEEING OTHERS CLEARLY

Scripture Lesson, Mark 8:22-26

Thoughts On The Lesson

How many of us go through life not really knowing or understanding the persons around us—in our homes, schools, churches, and places of business. We are aware of them but only in an unreal sense as was the blind man in the Scriptures who saw men "as trees walking." Our selfish inclination is to see only ourselves as important and others as servants to us.

It is only after Christ has touched our lives that we are made "to see every man clearly." Jesus saw the true worth of each individual and he helps us to discover this individual worth if we seek his help. We are most happy when we love, when we are interested in other people and things, when we aspire to something higher than that which we have attained. Being busy serving others and seeking ways of serving God is a good way to forget our selfish selves. Perhaps through such efforts we too might help our spiritually blind friends receive sight.

Questions:

1. What other Scripture passages help us to see men clearly?

a. Matt. 5:23-24, 5:44, 7:12, Rom. 12:3-5, 12:10-16, Psalms 119:8.

2. What is meant by spiritual blindness?

3. In what ways can we help ourselves and others "see more clearly?"

4. How does Jesus help us today?

WORLD-WIDE FELLOWSHIP IN C.E. Rom. 10:9-10

Again we come to the birthday of Christian Endeavor. This year we celebrate the sixty second birthday. You will remember C.E. was founded in the Willistown Congregational Church, Portland, Maine, on Februray 2, 1881, by Rev. Francis E. Clark.

When we think what C.E. really stands for, Christian Endeavor, we should be very serious and thoughtful to make our meetings please God. Our uppermost desire should be to glorfiy God and praise Him in our meetings, to help others to believe in God, and teach the plan of salvation as taught in His word.

Since this is a birthday meeting, it is proper that we bring gifts to this meeting. What are the most appropriate gifts I can bring? How do these appeal to you? A clean heart, attentive spirit, willingness to serve, think of others first, being present and on time, bring my Bible and bring others.

When we talk about Endeavor, we mean just that. We mean to inspire and produce action for Christ, and we are not too young as Juniors.

Our C. E. pledge reminds us to give time, talent, and money for Christian activities.

If we are endeavoring, we will want to be little missionaries and have a part in this program of our church too. We want to acquaint ourselves with the needs and projects of missionaries.

The Question Bee

(1) How can C. E. lead us to God? (2) How does your C. E. enthuse you in the work of Christ? (3) What part do you take in your Christian Endeavor? (4) What amount of your collections go for missionary purposes? (5) Do you help support missionary children?

The Prayer List

Thank God (a) for the founder of C. E. (b) The place young people can have in the church. (c) for an opportunity to serve God.

Jesus Heals a Man Born Blind

John 9:18-38 Read chap. 9

In our last week's lesson Jesus declared himself to be the divine Son of God. The lesson closed with Jesus moving away from the angry crowd who rejected Him and were even picking up stones to hurl at Him. As He was passing along He saw a man who was born blind and He healed him. John 9:1-17 relates the healing miracle and the events leading up to the printed portion of today's lesson. Jesus gave light, both physical and spiritual, to the man who had thus far lived in darkness. Great must have been the thrill of this man as he, for the first time, could see with his natural eyes. Greater the thrill of those whose spiritual eyesight is given to them. This miracle was so astounding that the near neighbors wondered whether the healed man was really the blind beggar whom they had seen so often (vss. 8,9).

Unbelieving Jews, vss. 18-34

The healing of the blind man created much opposition among the Pharisees because it occurred on the Sabbath. The refused to see it as a wonderful work of God. They hoped to discredit the testimony of the healed man by close-questioning his parents (vs. 18). They wanted proof of identity, of his having been born blind, and the means of his cure (vs. 19). The fact of being blind was firmly established to the great dismay of the Jews. They could not deny the fact of the healing miracle. They did insist that the man give the glory to God and not to Jesus, for they were so sure that He is "a sinner" (vs. 24). The healed man called Him a prophet (vs. 17), but the Jewish leaders declared that they knew better. When convinced of the certainty of the miracle, they were still blind to its meaning. Miracles alone are not sufficient to convince the perverse heart.

The healed man stuck to the facts. He knew what he had experienced and testified to that. He knew that some supernatural power had given sight to him (vs. 25). The person who has received spiritual sight, who has been touched by Christ, definitely knows for a certainity. There is no "perhaps" or "maybe" to it. The facts were against the Jews so they resorted to abuse (vs. 28). This is the method of narrow minds. They took Moses as their authority for keeping the Sabbath law. Jesus had ignored this law; so they thought. They were certain that God had spoken to Moses, but were not at all sure that He had given any commission to Jesus (vs. 29). The healed man expressed great surprise that they—the Jewish religious leaders—whose business it was to know a true from a false prophet, could not decide in this, so plain a case (vss. 30-33). They admitted that Jesus opened his eyes. God must have endued Him with power. God does not bestow miracle-working powers upon people who live in sin. God who is the foundation of all good, must have enabled this man to perform this miracle.

The Jews could not answer the logic of the man who had been blind, so they cried out in anger against him and treated his words with contempt and excommunicated him from their church (vs. 34). This has been Satan's method all through the history of the Christian Church. Has our own denomination been entirely free from this? Many today reject the light because they prefer the darkness.

The Believing Man, vss. 35-38

These latter four verses reveal the growth of a soul. Amid the hostile questioning his faith increased. Jesus heard and sought the man. He came directly to the real purpose of the miracle, to lead the man into a fuller faith in Jesus as the Son of God (vs. 35). He reveals himself openly to him as the Christ. He knew that the man was ready for it. He accepted Jesus as Son of God and worshiped Him in grateful submission. All who have felt Christ's spiritual power will freely confess Him. Christ opens the eyes to self and sin—to God himself—to the meaning of life—to the high privilege of the Christian calling—to the unseen realities of eternity.

Why were the Pharisees disturbed over the healing of the blind man?

What are some things that blind people's eyes to religious truths?

What explanation is there for religious persecution today?

THE THEATER

"In the early days of the church, Tertullian condemned the theater as wholly opposed to purity and God. The introduction of moving pictures, with the exclusion of individuals from the stage, has not wrought any real improvement in its morality; or the contrary, it has degraded it: The theather is and remains an integral part of the life of the world, and with it the child of God has nothing in common."—Christian Leader

CORRESPONDENCE

EMMAUS MENNONITE CHURCH

Whitewater, Kansas

Greetings to the staff and readers of the Mennonite.

At the annual business meeting our pastor, Rev. J. C. Kaufman, accepted the charge of our church for another three years. He has served faithfully, and both Rev. and Mrs. Kaufman have been a blessing to many. Mrs. Kaufman is the teacher of the children aged six to eight in Sunday School. Brother Kaufman is instructing twenty-five young people in catechism. Friday afternoon and evening of January 22, many of their friends went to their home to surprise them on their tenth wedding anniversary.

Frank Busenitz, Jr, is our S.S. superintendent, with Waldo Klaassen as assistant. We have twenty-six S.S. classes. There are 105 children enrolled from the age of four to the Catechism class. The church enrollment stands at 332.

In the C.E. societies Mrs. B. G. Harder, Waldo Klaassen, and Martha Thiessen are sponsors of the Juniors, and among the Seniors, Gerhard Harder is president, Kenneth Toews is vice-president, Gilbert Thiessen is treasurer, and Marie Fast is secretary.

The government has called sixteen of our young men, eleven of whom are in our C.P.S. camps.

It has been a joy to all of us that Susan Thiessen, who was injured in the tornado of June, 1941, has been attending S.S. and services most of the time. Her smiling face has been a challenge to many.

Mrs. Paul Claassen has been ill for many months. She cannot have much company but enjoys letters and cards.

Elmer Dyck, who was stricken with infantile paralysis three years ago, has been bravely fighting for health, but improvement has been slow. Mrs. Dyck and their three-year-old son have stood stanchly by.

Brother P. P. Tchetter of Pretty Prairie was with us from December 7 to 11 and brought us very sincere and inspirational messages.

—Mrs. Bernard H. Wiebe, Corr.

ZOAR MENNONITE CHURCH

Goltry, Oklahoma

We can truly say that the Lord was with us in the past year. Nine young people who had accepted the Lord as their saviour were baptized and taken into the church on December 20, 1942. Previously they had had three months of Bible instruction. Because of the blizzard our business meeting was not held on New Year's Day. We held it on January 10 with a fellowship meal at noon. On January 16 we had a sad funeral. Pvt. Floyd Pekrul was killed in an airplane crash in New Mexico. Many attended the funeral. Only four boys from our church have gone to camps so far. One went as a non-combatant, and three went to C.P.S. camps. Two more will leave for C.P.S. camps in the very near future. (Would that more of our churches would have as good a record as this—Editor.) We were privileged to have Brother A. E. Kreider in our midst on January 19. We were glad to have Brother Albert Schultz from Butterfield, Minnesota, with us on January 26. These men served in the two-weeks Bible course at the Oklahoma Bible Academy in Meno. —Corr.

CIVILIAN BONDS FOR CONFERENCE

On page 16 the readers will find the approved form for ordering "Civilian Bonds" that are to be issued in favor of The General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America.

The donor may specify for what the gift is to be used:

(1) For our Peace Committee for C.P.S. support; or

(2) As the Conference or its Executive Committee may deem best; or

(3) For a Conference cause specified by the donor.

These bonds may be ordered in denominations of $50.00, $100.00 or multiples of $50.00. Bonds are not issued for less than $50.00.

Remember, please, to add $1.00 for every bond ordered.

If you send your order direct to the Provident Trust Co., Philadelphia, Pa., you will receive a receipt from them. If you send your order to the Conference Treasurer, Karl A. Richert, Newton, Kansas, he will send you a receipt.

—C. E. Krehbiel, President

To the Western District

A Western District Peace Committee recommendation submitted and approved October 22, 1942, merits the repeated attention of our churches:

1. That we as a Conference and as individual churches acknowledge our opportunity in, and our obligation to the C.P.S. camps by seriously endeavoring to raise our respective share for the maintenance of these camps.

In choosing ways of serving our nation in this critical time our boys have expressed varying choices. Let us remember them all in our prayers. It should stimulate united efforts to know that not only our boys in C.P.S. camps, but also boys in the armed forces, will be greatly disappointed if we grow weary in the task of supporting Civilian Public Service. In responding to the needs of C.P.S., let us remember to pray for a generous, prompt, and cheerful response from every Mennonite. —Willis Rich, Chairman

CANADIAN CHURCHES NOTE

Dear Brethren:

In spite of previous announcements some churches in Canada are still sending contributions for foreign missions to The Canadian Mennonite Board, Rosthern, Saskatchewan, and to various individuals. Please, heed in the future the announcement already made by the General Conference Board that all gifts for foreign missions be sent to: D. W. Friesen, Altona, Manitoba, Canada.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Brother Homer Leisy from Dallas, Oregon, will begin a week of services in the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, on February 7.

—". . .the debt on the parsonage of the Portland Mission (Alberta Community Church) has been reduced by almost one-half since the meeting of the conference last June. At that time it was urged that the conference churches make an effort to pay the debt this year. . .These have come in in a most encouraging way. The balance due on this debt on January 1, 1943, was $1,197.38 or less than fifty cents per member of the conference." —Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California.

—Brother J. E. Hartzler requests that The Mennonite be sent to him at Hartford, Connecticut, until further notice. He writes, "I will continue my teaching in the . . .seminary in my three courses as before. Christian doctrine and philosophy (two courses) until the last of May." The card was written from Goshen, Indiana.

—Brother Bernhard Bargen, professor of commerce at Bethel College, visited the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church near Inman, Kansas, recently. After teaching a young men's class, he gave a talk on the Bible basis for being a C.O. Over the weekend of January 29-31 he visited the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C.P.S. camp and talked to the men mainly on the training of children in the home.

—So far all men drafted from the Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, have gone to C.P.S. camps. So reports Reinhold Schmidt, superintendent of the Sunday school.

—Herbert R. Schmidt, M.D., showed his pictures of South America and gave a talk in the Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, on the evening of January 24. This active little church has also adopted the 100 per cent church paper subscription plan.

—East Swamp Mennonite Church, East Swamp, Pennsylvania: The church debt has been paid, and the notes were to be burned on the morning of January 31. A new basement may be put under the whole meeting house. The congregation adopted the following in regard to membership: "Should any member neglect to commune in their home church for one year without just cause, their names shall be placed on an inactive list. Members absenting themselves from communion in their home church for two consecutive years without just cause, shall after proper notification be dropped from the list." The church constitution is to be rewritten. The congregation unanimously adopted the recommendation of the church council concerning the support of Bluffton College. The pastor was given a unanimous vote of confidence for 1943. Seven radio broadcasts have cost $252.00. Towards this has been contributed $203.00. The men's brotherhood is sponsoring the bulletins.

—From the bulletin of the First Mennonite Church, we glean that John M. Swomley, Associate Secretary of the Fellowship of Reconciliation, recently spoke to the young people of the Holmsville Church of the Brethern and the First and Second Mennonite churches. After this he spoke in the main auditorium of the Second Church. Arnold Claassen has been transferred fom a C.P.S. camp in California to a mental hospital near Salt Lake City.

—Loris Habeggar of Berne, Indiana, was recently interviewed by Mrs. Roosevelt. Loris is the head of a unit of C.P.S. men serving in a mental Hospital at Marlboro, New Jersey. Loris gives the following account of the incident:

"Yesterday (Thursday) noon we had a most unique experience. Six of this unit were called into the staff room of the hospital building where we were personally introduced to the first lady of the land, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt. For twenty minutes she asked us questions and we answered them. She was very gracious and we were very much at ease. To have the opportunity of being introduced personally and shaking hands with her was something we shall not soon forget. One thing is sure, her popularity is well earned for her personality is something to admire. As leader of the C.P.S. unit here, I was sort of spokesman for the group and I had to do most of the talking, but she had the knack of making the answers to questions come easy. It was an outstanding experience for me."

—Six churches have been so kind as to send in copies of their year books. These are to be studied and reported on in the next issue. Thank you very much for sending them. They are not wasted.

—The C.P.S. quota for December 1, 1942, to February 28, 1943, is $1.50 or fifty cents per member per month.

—Brother P. R. Voth. former minister of the Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas, and now living on the Bethel College campus, repaired over five hundred watches last year. In the last six years he has sent over 1,500 watches through the mails. Many of them are sent to him by Mennonites in other states who know him. One of his sons is a chemist, one a meteorologist, and another a teacher of botany in Chicago University. The latter is also an artist.

—The Apostolic Mennonite Church, Trenton, Ohio, held its annual congregational meeting on January 10, 1943. The morning services were followed by a covered dish dinner and a social hour. At the opening of the business meeting all united in singing "Faith of Our Fathers," and Brother Amstutz read from Hebrews 11 and 12. The reports were very encouraging. Brother Amstutz gave a resume of the year's work, and a memorial service was held. God calls each of us during a time when the world is in great need. He calls us in all earnestness, and it is important how we respond. The world needs the loving warmth and ministry of the Master today, more than ever before. We members of the Christian Church must stand united that we may best serve His kingdom in this great time of need. —Lydia A. Augspurger, Corr.

—Brother J. N. Smucker, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, recently told members of the two "Y's" of Bluffton College about his experiences as a relief worker in the Near East after World War I. Members of the Bluffton church were led in a general hymn sing on a recent Sunday evening by Harold Thiessen, son of Brother and Sister John Thiessen of India.

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: Brother Wesley Ewert brought the message on the morning of January 31. Brother Ewert is "the religious and educational director of several C.P.S. camps in Canada." Rev, and Mrs. Harold Coen are planning to be with us on . . .February 7. They will bring the morning message. This will be followed by a fellowship dinner in the basement. In the afternoon they will show pictures of their work in Africa.

—Bulletin, Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington: "Is the pastor calling at your home this week? Consult the bulletin board and make sure. Please, feel free to let him know if this isn't a convenient time." "Of late, radio comment, Reader's Digest articles, as well as the words of the President have been very favorable towards the C.O.'s and the worthy work they are doing. Let us show our appreciation to our government and to our boys by buying Peace Certificates for the support of the C.P.S. camps. There is a danger that in purchasing Civilian Bonds, many will forget the peace certificates." The bulletins of this church have some very beautiful designs on their covers. These are done by the wife of the pastor.

Bulletins, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Students at Bethel College are: Edna V. Buller, Eugene Dick, Erna Fast, Jake T. Friesen, Magdalene Friesen, Lola Mae Regier. ". . .the debt (on the new meeting house) is almost paid but not entirely. Several thousand dollars will be due on notes March 1." The new meeting house was dedicated on February 1, 1942.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

West Swamp—The choir rendered "The Christmas King" by Fred B. Holton on Sunday morning December 27. The White Gift Service was held in connection with the service. The Christian Endeavor Society held the annual Watch Night Service on New Year's Eve with a social at 8:00 o'clock and a worship service at 11:30. A special period of prayer for our land and nation was observed immediately after New Year.

Bethany, Quakertown—A prayer Service was held on Friday evening January 1 at 7:30 o'clock in accordance with the Call to Prayer by the President of the United States. The mid-winter communion service was held on Sunday morning January 3.

Souderton—The White Gift offerings from the Sunday School classes amounted to $1,288.11. Of this amount, the outstanding contributions were $321.25 for Civilian Public Service Camps, $385.75 for War Relief and $466.00 for a Nurse's Fund for the Home for the Aged. The church will observe its fiftieth anniversary during the week of February 7 to 14. J. E. Hartzler of Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, will be the guest speaker for the week. The church was organized February 8, 1893, with nineteen members and soon this number was increased to twenty-seven who became known as the charter members. Two of the charter members are still living as well as the first Pastor, the Rev. A. M. Fretz. The church reported a membership of 519 at the last session of the conference held in Allentown last May.

Upper Milford,-Zionsville—Lt. Kermit Shelly and Miss Pearl Miklencic were united in marriage at a beautiful church wedding on Sunday morning, January 3. Lt. Shelly is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Shelly of Emmaus, Pa. At the annual congregational meeting it was decided to forward $100.00 from the General Fund to the Peace Committee for the work of the Mennonite Central Committee to be used where most needed. It was also recommended that the Adult Bible Class take over the responsibility of collecting money for the M.C.C. At a brief business meeting held Sunday, January 24, the class accepted the recommendation and decided to forward another $100.00 to the Peace Committee to be forwarded to the Mennonite Central Committee.

East Swamp—The total income for 1942 exceeded $8,000.00. This is an excellent record for a church having a membership of 159 according to the report of the last conference session. At the annual meeting it was decided to pay the balance of the church debt. The church also puts on a half hour radio program over WCBA-WSAN every Saturday evening from 7:00 to 7:30 o'clock.

Lansdale—The Young People's Society presented a Choral Cantata entitled, "The World's True Light" by Stultz, on Sunday evening, December 27. The pastor reported that he buried as many people during the year 1942 as in the previous five years. The winter communion service was held Sunday morning, January 10.

Allentown—Last month the Sunday School Workers Association decided to give an additional donation of $15.00 to the American Bible Society. The pastor was elected chairman and Grace Moyer was elected Secretary of the Board of Directors of the Friends of Israel at a recent business meeting. Sister Moyer is active in Young People's work and is editor of the Bi-monthly publication of the Young Peoples Union, "The Witness." The Bible Study Class completed the Through the Bible Study Course in December and the pastor is now conducting weekly cottage prayer meetings. Ten churches of the West End united in a Union Prayer service held in our church on New Year's Day morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Philadelphia, First—The Truth Seekers Class presented a Service Flag to the Church on Christmas Day. During the service, appointed folks came to light their candles from the pastor's candle and then lit a candle for each boy in the service as their names were read. The three Philadelphia churches, First, Second, and Germantown, held a union Watch Night Service in Second Church on New Year's Eve. J. B. Bechtel was reelected deacon at the annual congregational meeting. He will soon have completed fifty-one years as deacon of First Church. Wilhelmina Kuyf is visiting the churches of Illinois, Iowa, and Kansas. She will be in Newton, Kansas, during the time of the annual Foreign Mission Board meeting.

The Quarterly Conference held in Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Monday, January 18, was well attended. According to the Conference Treasurer's report, five churches have already met their quota for the conference budget. The total receipts for the budget amounted to $2,161.26. The Peace Committee Sec'y-Treasurer reported that he had received $4,884.21 for Civilian Public Service Camps and $1,504.17 for relief since conference. Robert Kreider of Akron, Pa., spoke on the C.P.S. Camps in the afternoon besides the papers on "The Preparatory and Baptismal Service" by Rev. A. J. Neunschwander and "The Holy Communion" by the Conference Secretary. In the evening Levering Tyson, president of Muhlenberg College, delivered a very interesting message on "The Future of our Denominational Colleges." The Executive Committee also announced that the 145th session of Conference will not be held at Deep Run on account of present circumstances. The place will be announced later.

THE ZION MENNONITE

Souderton, Pennsylvania

Fifty Years of Growth and Service

On February 8, 1893, exactly fifty years ago, the Zion Mennonite Church of Souderton, Pennsylvania, with nineteen charter members became a fully organized congregation. The history of this church is inspiring from the beginning to the present time.

Early Years

On January 9, 1887, Rev. Nathaniel B. Grubb, pastor at the First Mennonite Meeting House in Philadelphia, upon the request of one of his members residing in Souderton, went there to conduct a service. This historic first meeting was held in the Hunsberger Hall, which was in less dignified terminology, the second floor of the hotel livery stable. It was not the first great event to occur in a lowly stable. The second meeting was held in a room in the Central Hotel which served as a meeting place for a short time. The Home Mission and Church Extention Committee of the Eastern Conference took charge of the work after the first few meetings and arranged for Rev. N. B. Grubb and Rev. A. B. Shelly to alternate in conducting the services every two weeks. Other ministers occasionally called in were A. M. Fretz of Perkasie, W. S. Gottshall of Schwenksville, and J.B. Baer of Summerfield, Illinois.

One year after this work was begun, the Zwingli Reformed Church in town completed its new building and was gracious enough to permit the budding Mennonite group to hold its meetings in the new church every two weeks. This arrangement was continued for almost five years. The annual rental paid was seventy-five dollars. Inter-church cooperation in these early years seems to have been splendid for we find the first Sunday school sessions being held in a hall in conjunction with the Methodist church under the superintendence of a Mr. William Duffy.

In 1892 the Eastern District Conference authorized the committee in charge of this work to collect funds to the extent of one thousand dollars from other congregations in the brotherhood for the erection of a new meeting house. A 46 x 36 building was begun in the fall of that year and completed in 130 days at a cost of three thousand dollars. A fine demonstration of mutual aid is exhibited in the erection of this building. This is reflected in the expression of appreciation appearing in the April, 1893 issue of The Mennonite which says: "We have reason to be thankful to God for his grace in enabling our work to prosper. We too owe many thanks to our friends who have so liberally contributed toward our new church."

The dedication services were held on May 20, 21 22, 1893. The dedication sermon was preached in the German language. At that time the Sunday morning services began at 9:30. The nineteen charter members were mostly those who had moved to Souderton from surrounding areas. Six of the members came from the disbanded Rockhill congregation and ten others from the Deep Run brotherhood.

The first pastor of the newly organized congregation was Rev. Allen M. Fretz, at that time also pastor of the Deep Run congregation. He moved to Souderton to take up his work at that place and drove back and forth between these two churches with horse and buggy for the next seventeen years. William Moyer was elected the first deacon and served faithfully for the first sixteen years. During the pastorate of Brother Fretz the congregation grew steadily and constantly from a small one of nineteen in 1893 to a vigorous group of 164 in 1910 when Rev. Fretz brought his ministry to a close.

Years of Growth

One of the inspiring things about the history of the Zion Church is its steady growth. There is hardly a single year in the first fifty that does not reveal some indication of expansion either in membership, larger building, or a larger and more useful program of service in the cause of the Kingdom of God. Already in 1908, fifteen years after organizing, the original building was found to be too small for the rapidly growing congregation. An addition was put to the building in this year at a cost of about $5,000. The editor of the local paper made several interesting observations in reporting on the remodeling of the building. He seems to have been impressed with the departure from the more simple architectural style of the former meeting house. He commented that the new "tower at the east corner of the old structure makes an imposing appearance." "The interior," he said, "is conveniently arranged. The adornment and furnishings are simple, yet beautiful."

The membership continued to grow and the program expanded so that seven years after the first addition was put to the original church, a second addition had to be made. This was done in the summer of 1916 during the ministry of Rev. J. W. Schantz. In the early part of 1925 it became necessary once more to enlarge the Sunday school space. The unused basement of the church auditorium was excavated and additional facilities provided at a cost of approximately $2,000. In 1927 a pipe organ was purchased from the Emmanuel Lutheran Church of Souderton for the sum of $550.00. The latter two improvements were made during the ministry of Rev. G. T. Soldner.

But the end of the physical expansion of this congregation is not yet fully told. From 1925 on the church continued to grow so that already in the early thirties there were inadequate facilities to accommodate all who attended Sunday school regularly. After discussing the needs and the possibilities of expansion for several years, the congregation decided on April 1, 1940, to erect a new Sunday school building and completely renovate the old one. This was completed in the early part of 1941 and the dedication services held from February 16 to 20 of that year. The spirit and cooperation of the congregation is reflected in part by the way this obligation has been met. The cost of the new building was slightly over $30,000 but at the present time, less than two years after the dedication, the debt stands at $7,600 which is exactly a fourth of the original cost. The membership at the present time stands at 523. This means that there has been an annual average net gain of ten members. This steady growth numerically and physically over a fifty year period is a very natural and wholesome type of expansion.

Auxiliaries

Behind the exterior growth of this congregation lies a number of the more invisible reasons accounting for this growth. A large percentage of the lay people have always been active. This is manifested in the large number of auxiliary organizations that have existed within the church to promote the cause of Christ and to assist the minister in a concrete way. The largest of these is the Sunday school which has been active from the beginning. It has served the purpose for which Sunday schools were originally founded, namely to provide a means of supplementing Christian education as taught in the homes and preached from the pulpit. A place where the young can be nurtured and the older folks sustained in the Christian faith.

The Christian Endeavor Society was organized already in 1893. In 1917 it began supporting a native worker in India. In 1916 a Junior society was organized. The church for many years had an active choral society which provided a high type of music for the church and the community. A Ladies' Aid Society and a Men's Brotherhood are two of the main organizations in the church. An interesting comment about the activity of the men in this church is found in one of the old records which says that in 1916 the Men's Volunteer Bible Class began its first crusade toward building up adult membership in the Sunday school. That they succeeded is indicated by the fact that on a certain Sunday morning in 1917 there were 115 men present to study the lesson.

Pastors

Another factor that is significant in accounting for the growth and spiritual warmth of this Mennonite congregation is the quality of its leadership. The Zion Church has had five ministers over a period of fifty years which means an average pastorate of ten years. During each of these pastorates the church continued to grow. This is an evidence of the positive leadership each of the ministers exercised.

Rev. Allen M. Fretz, the first minister, also served the longest period being in charge from 1893 to 1910. "Father Fretz" and "Uncle Allen," as he is affectionately called by his many friends and relatives, is now almost ninety years old. He is probably the oldest active minister in the General Conference. He took part in the dedication services of the new building in 1941 and will have the privilege of sharing in the fiftieth anniversary celebration. Rev. John W. Schantz served the church from 1910 to 1916 along with the Schwenksville congregation which he was serving at the time he was called to Souderton. Schantz was a native of Lehigh County, Pennsylvania, a man of great charm, fine character, and a forceful pulpit oratory. His promising ministry was cut short by an early death at the age of thirty-eight.

Rev. Reed Landis, a young licensed evangelist of the Eastern District, succeeded Rev. Schantz as the Zion minister. From this time on the church required the full time services of a minister. Landis' pastorate continued until 1923 when he accepted a call to the Germantown Congregational Church. In 1923 a call was extended to Rev. G. T. Soldner, then pastor of the Mennonite Church at Summerville. Illinois. He served the congregation for a period of eight years after which he was called to the Eighth Street Mennonite Church in Goshen, Indiana. On June 14, 1931, Rev. E. J. Bohn, pastor of the Mennonite Church at Tiskilwa, Illinois, was called to the Zion Church and has served the church since that time.

Significant Facts and Events

There are certain outstanding events in the history of every organization. In the Zion Church, aside from those already mentioned in connection with the building expansion of the church, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the church on June 15 and 16, 1918, was one of these high points. Rev. N. B. Grubb, Rev. A. M. Fretz, and Rev. Victor Boyer preached sermons in honor of that occasion.

On Thanksgiving Day, 1918, the men of the Eastern District Conference met at Souderton and organized a men's Brotherhood. Attorney Maxwell Kratz of Philadelphia was chosen president.

The ordination of Rev. and Mrs. Samuel T. Moyer as missionaries to India was held on September 6, 1922. Rev. S. M. Musselman and Rev. M. M. Horsch of the Foreign Mission Board were present for the service. The records say that "this was perhaps the greatest service in the history of the church." Missionary Moyer is supported by the Zion Church as their missionary pastor. Moyer is a son of this congregation.

Other pastors who are sons of this church are: Raymond V. Stubbs, now serving the Mennonite Church at Bowansville, Pennsylvania. Harleigh Rosenberger serving the First Baptist Church at Fairport, New York, and Raymond Kriebel serving an Evangelical Church at Reading, Pennsylvania.

In August of 1941 the Souderton Church was host to the triennial session of the General Conference. Those who were present know what splendid accommodations were provided for this great occasion in connection with the local high school.

Conclusion

From the purely human standpoint one can say that the success of this church might be due to its wise and devoted leadership; or to its active lay members; or to the fact that the church is located in a strong Mennonite Community and that the majority of members remain for a long period of time in contrast to other churches whose members frequently move away. All these factors are important, but they do not account for the whole story.

The success of this church is due to its praying men and women who over the years have sought God's guidance, who accepted His blessings humbly and tried to serve Jesus Christ, their master, diligently. The way that God has blessed this people and used them mightily for the advancement of His kingdom is an inspiration to other congregations throughout the Mennonite Brotherhood.

Reasons For Thanksgiving And Prayer

By Fred A. Johnson

You know the Lord had saved two women here this fall in our evangelistic meetings, when Rev. Suderman with few of his native Christians were out here this fall in November.

Mrs. Hilda Dalton who have for four years been faithful at our services here at Moencopi. But who for some reason had kept putting off her decision for the Lord. Not until her oldest daughter had died at Albuquerque, New Mexico, this summer of 1942. And when her husband had deserted her and went off never to return to the family again. All this had brought hardship on her. She was very unhappy for quite awhile. One day my wife met her after the service and talked freely with her about her need of definitely accepting the Lord. She finally said, that so there was no hope for her, and she told my wife that she would accept the Lord again for she had once baptized away in school in California when she was yet a girl. But that was all she knew of becoming a Christian, by being baptized in the Church. And she said furthermore, that she never know any Christian experienced in all these years. But now coming to Church here for four years and listening to the gospel being preached in both languages, Hopi and English, she say that it begin to dawn upon her mind, she can understand what it means to be a Christian. And so she has accepted the Lord again but did not publicly confessed him as a Saviour until we open our fall meetings this year for Moencopi. And during Rev. Suderman's preaching one night. She stood up before all the people in the Church and wept like a child, telling our whole audience. That she will follow the Lord. She spoke of her oldest daughter dying in a hospital with her Bible in her arms, and yet she say, I, am a Mother of five children and never have open my Bible. She say furthermore that she hopes her daughter had gone to Heaven, and it is her desire now to meet her there. When she spoke, I notice the tears from many eyes, even from those who are not Christians. This was Hilda's victory at last. She is now a happy Christian mother, and the last Hopi Bible study and prayer meeting was held in her home here in Moencopi. Pray for Hilda Dalton.

OUR MOENCOPI MISSION STATION

In the foreground of the above picture are the buildings of our mission station at Moencopi, Arizona. The village of Moencopi can be seen in the background of the picture. This is the place where Fred A. Johnson is laboring for the Lord.

Now our next sister is Marion, she is a young women from Hotevilla who married to a young man here at Moencopi. She lives fours years in this Moencopi village now. This young woman had never attended our Sunday school once in all these years she lives here. But the Lord knows who are to be called from among our people. One day my wife visited this young woman's home. And she found her to be a very unhappy woman. My wife talk with her and invited her to come and attend our meetings in the church. This happens to be during our meetings here this fall. She accepted the invitation and came to the meeting one evening. At the close of our evening service she requested that we pray for her. She looks very much burden, for we can see on her face and more than that, she was looking sick. But she came again the next evening and heard Brother Suderman preached. And at the close of the service, she came down to the front, for she wants to make known to the audience that she have accepted the Lord as her Saviour. She too came weeping, bringing her burdens to the Lord that evening. This is again a Victory for one more soul in our meetings for Moencopi. Now as soon as we received both of these women to our church at our communion, Marion gotten very sick. She lay very sick at her own home for about three or four days. Her husband do not seems to care to do anything for her. So after much prayer, I went up there to her home. And found her very low. I went to the government school nearby and call up the hospital doctors asking their permission to send Marion to the hospital. So they send the ambulance in which I send Marion away from her home. The doctors tell me, that if we had been waited another day, Marion would have been too late for the doctors. We were just in time; now Marion is home again; she is able to come to church. But she finds it hard to please her husband. Jackson her husband is very unkind to her; he is making it hard for his wife to live with him. He has been treating her in this manner even before she became a Christian. We are very sorry for Marion; we pray with her and seek to give her comfort from the word of God. Now, we are waiting upon the Lord what step we shall take next for Marion. The Lord will lead in this trial for Marion. But you dear people in our churches must pray for her. She needs your help in this, and I hope you will not fail her in her Christian life. Pray for us workers also, that we may have the wisdom to guide God's children as pastors of His flocks. And when the Chief shepherd shall appear, we must receive a crown of glory which shall not fade away. I-Peter 5:4,

WHY A WEEKLY CHURCH BULLETIN?

There are at least three good ways in which our church is profiting by its use.

1. It encourages early planning. Orderliness is a Christian virtue. Early planning helps to avoid conflicts. Special events are then known to have the "right of way." Church meetings are then not as likely to conflict with family gatherings.

2. It keeps absentees informed. The same announcements made Sunday morning can be handed or sent to those unable to be present: the sick, the aged, students away at school, "boys" in service, or those unable to be present for other reasons.

3. It makes a permanent record possible. The pastor keeps a record of messages, invited speakers, special events, regular announcements. In this way any member can share these with him. Choice poems or sentence thoughts are made available to all.

MISSIONARY H. J. KLIEWER PASSED AWAY

The information of Brother Kliewer's death has just reached us. He passed away on January 3, in the early morning hours while asleep, at his home in Newton.

He was one our oldest missionaries, who had served his full time of forty years. This entitled him to pension for the last years of his life. His death leaves Mrs. Kliewer rather lonesome, because all her children are scattered far and wide in four states.

In behalf of the Foreign Mission Board our hearty sympathy is herewith expressed with the prayer for the Lord's comfort. He reached the age of seventy-one years and ten months.

Faith Of Our Fathers

The following letter was written on January 25 by L. J. Horsch, Treasurer of the Peace Committee of the General Conference:

Today there came a generous contribution for the C.P.S. program accompanied by a letter which in part reads as follows:

"I want to make the above sum a gift to the C.P.S. work in memory of my father, who left his material advantages in Russia and emigrated to America to give his children the advantage of religious freedom and freedom from military service. "This gift, of course, is over and above what I give to my own church to help her meet her quota. I am sorry I can't make the check ten times as large."

Some weeks ago I received another letter, unaccompanied by a contribution, in which the writer questioned the advisability of continuing the C.P.S. program. I regret that I did not have the letter above to quote in reply.

. . .At the time I write this there is a very noticeable decrease in the flow of contributions to the C.P.S. cause, but if you should publish this item, by the time of publication there may be a renewal of the rate of income which held during December, 1942, and until the middle of January, 1943.

WHEN WINTER COMES

By Margaret Denison Armstrong

My lovely tree is stripped by winter's wind,
And through these sunless days is bare and lone.
I will not mourn that for a little while
The fruitful days of summertime are gone.

For lo, retreating into seeming death,
The sap, with life and pow'r all-vibrant still,
Moves deeper down to feed each thirsty root
That stronger grows, in spite of winter's chill.

And so, unseen, the sluggish root below
Expands and deepens 'neath the frozen sod—
That springtime's bloom more beautiful may be,
The fruit more sweet—oh, miracle of God!

Since seasons in God's plan must come and go,
I must not shrink from sorrow's chilling breath,
That sweeps away the leaves of selfish pride
And brings me to a place of deeper death—

Where joy and even faith seem to depart,
And dull inertia tempts me to despair;
Knows this, my soul, that springtime yet will come—
With fragrant bloom and fruit of answered prayer!

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

RURAL CEMETERIES

Once in awhile it is a good thing for us to take time to think about the end of our individual life journeys and especially about the place in which we shall be laid to rest.

What Once Was

One of the most characteristic scenes of all earlier rural communities was the small graveyard not far distant from the peaceful little rural church. In my own home community a thing that added to the peace and quiet of the place was the presence of two or three sheep to crop the grass around the small stone markers. In addition to the church cemeteries one finds also a considerable number of individual family burial plots usually located along some quiet country road on the edge of a Mennonite farmer's field. These family plots often contain no more than ten or fifteen graves. But what stories these few markers can tell! What powerful sermons they can preach to one who to-day wanders there on a cool Sabbath morning all alone. They speak of courage, of faith, of firmness in life that makes us ashamed. They speak serenely, calmly, unhurried and undisturbed by the constant whirl in which we find ourselves.

What Now Is

There is a far cry from these individual church cemeteries to the modern municipal or commercial burial grounds. Instead of the small, intimate, and hallowed ground of the family cemetery one finds today the tremendously large, chillingly impersonal, and disappointingly secular atmosphere of the urban burial grounds. Not only is one impressed with the size and the impersonality but with the sense of being crowded. The great variety of markers, tombstones and vaults further gives the impression of competition for a last bid of man's recognition. In every section of the country corporations have now been organized to make a business of providing cemeteries. The commercial aspect of this business is concealed under the name of "memorial park." The beauty of these modern burial grounds is to be commended, but the commercial aspect is to be deplored.

Church and Cemetery

It seems to me there is something sacred about a cemetery close to a church. The two are inextricably related. To separate them is to disturb a hallowed intimacy. It is like breaking up a spiritual family. There is something strengthening about worshiping in a church where just a little way off one knows his forebears are at rest. There is a spiritual unity and a sense of on-goingness in such a situation that defies description. Individual church cemeteries are a spiritual asset to rural churches. It would be well to preserve them, beautify them, and cherish them as such.

WITH CHRIST ON THE EDGE OF THE JUNGLES

The above title is the name of a book written by Missionary S. T. Moyer, which the undersigned has recently read. It is interesting and informative. It shows in a vivid manner the impressions that experiences of both failures and successes made upon the life of the missionary.

The sixteen chapters of Moyer's book show anew what the gospel of Christ does for the poor and lowly. Verily, the text of Jesus' inaugural sermon at Nazareth is still applied and fulfilled: "To preach good tidings to the poor and to set at liberty those that are bruised," (bruised also by fear of evil spirits.)

Chapter nine, "With Christ Among the Lowly," has one's full sympathy. Chapter eleven, 'The Millstones of Poverty," makes the heart bleed. The last two chapters, "The Spirit of God on the March and "The Full River of God," cause rejoicing and thankfulness. Members of our conference should read the book.

Another thought: Those who have not read Twenty-five Years With God in India have missed something. Missionary P. A. Penner expresses the hope that after fifty years of service in India by our missionaries another book Fifty Years With God In India will be forthcoming. —C. Frey, Newton, Kansas.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By John Graber, North Newton, Kansas

(The Fervor of the Holy Spirit)

FEBRUARY 15—"... .The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Jas. 1:16b.

It creates fervency in prayer. Much of our praying is not real praying at all. There is such a lack of zeal and emotion. Men who possess the fervor of the Spirit can pray with such vitality that their prayers take Heaven by storm. Someone has said, "Prayer moves the Hand that moves the world." The Lord Jesus in the Garden of Gethsemane agonized in prayer before the heavenly throne. His was a direct communication with the Father. The Apostle Paul wrote to the church at Collosse, ". . .always labouring fervently for you in prayers." Col. 4:12. Our praying must be fervent if it is to be effective.

FEBRUARY 16—"And daily in the temple and in every house, they ceased not to teach and preach Christ." Acts 5:42. This fervor produces enthusiasm in service. The early apostles were filled with divine enthusiasm. No obstacle was too great, no threat too terrifying to quench this undying zeal which they possessed. Their chief aim was to make known to the world that Jesus Christ is the Divine Remedy for man's need. They were not concerned as to what the world wanted, but rather, what the world needed. The same cold world exists today as the one which crucified the Christ. The gospel message has not gained in its popularity, but it must be proclaimed.

FEBRUARY 17—". . .and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus." Acts 4:13. The fervor of the Spirit gives effectiveness in testimony. The source from which the apostles had drawn their boldness was their fellowship with Christ. They had experienced corporeal presence all the days that He went in and out amongst them, but now the Holy Spirit came—the "Comforter" whom Jesus promised to send. The disciples were with Jesus as each of us may be. This companionship had transformed their lives and the people knew it. Their words bore weight because their lives corresponded to the same. To be "With Christ" is possible for all of us. Not until a constant being with Him will our lives leave any impression upon those about us. The life of the individual is the most important agency for the spreading of the gospel in this world.

FEBRUARY 18—"For the love of Christ constraineth us;" II Cor. 5:14a. The Spirit's fervor gives constraint in work. The Apostle Paul explains in this phrase why his life and its aims were different from the ordinary man of the world. His life was under the influence of Christ's love. To the eyes of the world he appeared as a madman, but in the eyes of God he was the perfection of sober-mindedness. The love of Christ constrains the soul that is yielded to Him from finding its centre in itself. For all love makes the beloved the centre, and not the self. The Christ-centered life bows in glad submission to the joyous service of the Lord Jesus. Difficulties become easy, the impossible possible, the crooked things straight, and the rough places plain. The duty becomes delight, and self ceases to disturb.

FEBRUARY 19—"And I will very gladly spend and be spent for you. . ." II Cor. 12:15a. There is spending in toil. This is the law by which our blessed Lord lived while here on earth—"The Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Spending and being spent is an unmistakable mark of the man who is specially called to do Christ's work. There is an unspeakable joy in sacrifice. It is a fellowship with Christ in the very life of His that lifts us from time to time to the heavenly places. This is the spirit in which wrong is to be met, and suspicion, and contempt. The world says, "Stand upon your rights; vindicate your position; insist on all that you think is your due." But the Christian says, "Spend and be spent, spare not; life itself is not too much to give that love may triumph over wrong."

FEBRUARY 20—"And Stephen, full of grace and power, wrought great wonders and signs among the people." Acts 6.8 R.V. It produces graciousness in life. "Graciousness is a celestial beauty which belongs to all virtue, and to all likeness in character to God," says Alexander Maclaren. This graciousness is brought into our hearts by the Holy Spirit. He communicates to the believer whatsoever things are lovely and of good report, whatsoever things are fair and honourable, and whatsoever things are worthy of praise. No method of modern culture can produce such a quality of character. It must be bestowed by the Divine Giver.

FEBRUARY 21—"And be not drunk with wine wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;" Eph. 5:18. This fervor brings about Spirit-filledness in the heart. This term does not have reference to a filling such as pouring water into an empty receptacle. It is the penetration of the Divine Personalty into the human. Thus, the human soul becomes the habitation of God. To be filled with the Spirit is to have the Spirit fulfilling in us God's will. It is not a problem of getting more of the Spirit; it is rather the problem of the Holy Spirit getting more of us. A spiritual person, then, is one who is submissive to the Spirit to the extent that the will of God is accomplished daily in his life.

THE DEACON'S SON

By Wayne Yoder (Part One)

(From The Youth's Christian Companion)

Away up on the hill a shot sounded, then another and another. 'Lige Bain stopped and listened, trying to locate the sound. This was a hard thing to do, for the hill, covered with the pine forests, muffled and echoed the sound. 'Lige turned and looked back down the steep trail he had just climbed. Jason Tanner, following him up the mountain, was bent forward under the weight of his pack and his gun.

"Think those shots meant anything, Jason?" Elijah called back. "Three shots together, evenly spaced, and repeated. Sounds like a signal."

"Hard to tell," mumbled Jason. "Guess there's lots of hunters besides us in the hills now. Might be somebody just happened to shoot at a deer that way."

'Lige Bain, his ruddy face serious for a moment, turned over his doubts in his mind, as he brushed back the mop of red, wool-like hair from his eyes. Then as he stood there on a little promontory beside the trail, his keen grey eyes swept over the untouched forests beneath him. Those forests covered, like a rumpled green blanket, the mounded hills beneath them, where was interred all the violence that man had ever perpetrated there upon them. Now they showed no sign of man's rapacious hand. For a moment Elijah Bain put aside the doubts that had been gnawing at his peace, as the gigantic peace of the hills flowed in unto him. Beyond the immediate valley that lay far below him lay the huge hills slightly blued by the atmospheric haze. Beyond that, drawing his eyes out to the contemplation of vast spaces, lay another range of hills, bluer than the first; and then his eyes went on out to another and another, and still yet another range, each successive series showing a deeper blue haze than the last and giving tremendous perspective to the vastness. Elijah felt small out there, and was comforted.

A few woolly clouds moved carelessly over the scene, like a flock of sheep overrunning a new meadow of lush green grass.

"If I could paint a picture like that," 'Lige said aloud to himself. "If I only could, I would write underneath it, 'The mountains shall bring peace to the people.' "

Jason came then and stood beside him.

"What doest thou here, Elijah? After all, they're just mountains. Where do you think you are, up on Carmel or Horeb?" It was not altogether a joke, for a sting of sarcasm was in Jason's voice. Elijah grinned as he passed it off. It was not the first time he had heard allusions to his Bible name, but there was in his thoughts the presentiment that all was not well on this hunting trip.

He turned to the steep winding trail that led upward to the hunting grounds and, leaning his weight well forward against the pull of the pack straps pulling him back, he continued the climb. As he climbed, he he was thinking of the young man Jason climbing the trail behind him. Once they had been the closest friends. A long time ago they had been brown-footed boys romping through the fields and orchards together all content to be with each other, but now their companionship was a rare thing. Elijah wished he knew how to win back the younger boy's friendship.

It was then that the explosions came,—three of them behind him, repeated once and then again. With each shock he gripped his own rifle tighter, tensed into rigidity by the unexpected nerve-jarring concussions. He was steady enough on his feet, however, as he turned to face Jason Tanner.

"Why did you do that?" He asked. "Why, Jason?"

"Ha, ha, that jarred you, didn't it, Elijah?" laughed Jason in immoderate glee. "That wasn't the still small voice you was listening to. I guess that was more like the earthquake. Ha, ha, ha, ha!" And the echo of his laugh came back ribaldly from the steep mountainside across the valley. Then Elijah Bain knew that his doubts were justified.

"Jason," he called. "Jason—" and Jason quieted.

"You brought a bottle, didn't you?" It was a statement. "And those shots were signal shots, weren't they? Signals for you and Ranse Brasen to find each other? Weren't they, now?"

Under Elijah's reproachful insistence, Jason grew sullen.

"Well, what'd I want to come up in the brush for without something to have a little fun with? It's no fun to walk all day up mountains, and sleep on the hard ground and maybe not even see a deer, and nobody to talk to but a—a guy that's going to be a preacher. A guy like you that's always dreaming off across the mountains and quoting Scripture verses to himself."

In spite of himself 'Lige grinned at the allusion to himself, and Jason grew bolder.

"So I came prepared. Ranse Brasen is gonna meet me up the trail here. Sure, that was him that fired those first shots," he said defiantly. "You just go on and find you a Juniper tree to sit under and marvel at the beauties of nature all you want to, and Ranse and me will have a whopping good time."

"Liquor surely does something to a fellow," thought 'Lige, and he marveled at the change in the boy, once so frank and open-faced. Mentally he computed the amount of liquor Jason must have taken to bring him to that stage. It would probably cause violence to try to take it from him now, he decided. There was nothing to do just now but to go on to water and camp, as they had planned. Maybe there'd be a way later to get the boys straightened out before tomorrow. His legs lifted him and his pack steadily up the trail as he thought the situation over. Yes, it had been a mistake to give in to the Deacon's request:

"If Jason goes with you, 'Lige, I'll feel a lot better than if he goes with Ranse Brasen. Ranse Brasen's company wouldn't do him any good. As the Scripture says, 'My son, if sinners entice thee, consent thou not. Walk not thou in the way with them, for their feet run to evil, and make haste to shed blood.' " The Deacon's chin was quivering as he spoke. "I never thought that Jason would turn out like he has. I taught him much Scripture, and there was never a day that I didn't admonish him to live righteously. Neither have I been like Eli of old, who restrained not his sons, but I have tried to do as the Book says of the Lord, that whom 'he loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth.' Somewhere, though, I have missed it."

And as the Deacon turned his face away 'Lige could not help but smile at the Deacon's method of quoting Scripture, even while there was moisture in his eyes at the man's sincere grief. He remembered that he had wondered how much he dare say to this man who was so much older than he.

Cautiously then he had comforted the man as best he could and had made a frank suggestion, to which Deacon Tanner had agreed.

Unable after that to refuse to take Jason along hunting, he had said, "I'll be glad to have Jason with me, if he will go."

"He'll go all right," the Deacon had joyously accepted, "if I have to thrash the hide off his stubborn back."

Now they were out here in the national forest, a long hike from their autos, which had been left at the end of the road. As free as stray pups the boys would be if they got together, and as irresponsible, being away from all restraining influences, except what 'Lige could bring to bear. They were armed with their deer guns and had already demonstrated, by their wanton waste of ammunition, their inability to handle them properly. To crown their folly they had brought along strong drink, for 'Lige had no doubt that Ranse would also have some.

"They're more than likely to get themselves into some kind of trouble if I don't do something," he muttered to himself. "The Deacon may be grieved, and Jason may get hurt. But what to do?" And he glanced behind him back down the trail to where Jason was puffing along, trying vainly to keep up with the undissipated Elijah.

"If I can just wear him out a little more before Ranse Brasen and he get together—" 'Lige was hoping. It was then that he heard the rattle of rocks from the trail above.

It was not Ranse Brasen, however, but a uniformed Oregon State Forest Ranger. He pulled up his horse briefly as he asked 'Lige, "Did you fellows do some shooting a few minutes ago?"

'Lige glanced back briefly at Jason before explaining what had happened. The ranger was nobody's fool, 'Lige saw, as the man spoke, and noted that his eyes were busy sizing up both Jason and himself.

"The fellow your buddy here is expecting to meet is waiting just up the trail a little ways. Better try to keep an eye on the boys if you can, so they don't burn up the country." And the ranger rode on down the trail.

Jesus the Good Shephard

John 10:1-5, 11-16, 27-30

The parable of the Good Shephard was probably spoken shortly after the healing of the blind man (chap. 9). Perhaps, it was indeed a continuation of the conversation at the time. The Pharisees claimed to be the shepherds of the flock of God and prided themselves on being almost infallible religious guides. They had put the man whom Jesus had healed of his blindness out of the synagogue. By this narrow-minded treatment they had proved themselves to be bad shepherds. They had opposed the true Shepherd and had spoken of him with contempt. The healed man had found the Good Shepherd, the door into the sheepfold. Jesus used this parable to portray these leaders as thieves, robbers, and as hirelings who had no heart concern for the sheep. His words apply equally forcefully to religious pretenders in our day.

Shepherd Enters Door of Fold, vss. 1-5

Robbers frequently tried to enter the fold to plunder the flock. They could not enter by the carefully guarded door. They entered to illtreat the sheep. These robbers represent religious teachers who make false claims and lead people astray. These Pharisees had gotten into the visible church, but not into the invisible one. The true shepherd enters by the door (vs. 2). He recognizes the divine way of salvation and leads the flock (people) in the right way. The sheep recognize him as leader and trustingly heed his call and follow him. Christ, the true Shepherd, leads his sheep that He may feed and protect them. Sheep will not heed a strange voice. Christians who truly know their Lord will not follow false teachers and leaders whose teaching and example are contrary to the spirit and teaching of Christ.

Christ the Door, vss. 6-10

Christ is the "door of the sheep" (vs. 9). Through Him alone may we enter into the kingdom of God and find satisfaction for all of our spirtual needs. The Jews were trying to enter through their good works and through keeping the Mosaic law and rabbinical traditions. They needed Christ just as does every one else. No other leader or religious teacher can take his place. Our salvation depends his redemption work. In Him we "find pasture." He gives to us the spiritual life and "more abundantly."

Christ the Good Shepherd, vss. 11-16

In this lesson section Jesus contrasts his conduct and love for the sheep with the attitude and conduct of the hireling. Christ is the one shepherd who excels all others in goodness. He was willing to give his life for the sheep because their eternal welfare demanded it. The Shepherd who was hired to herd another man's sheep did not have any personal love for them, and thought only of his own safety when danger threatened them, (vss. 12, 13). Jesus is speaking of the Jewish leaders whose motives were selfish and who would not sacrifice themselves in any way for Christ's beloved people. A true shepherd lives close to Christ and has a deep heart concern for the life and soul of every one for whom Christ died.

Christ is the Good Shepherd who did deliberately lay down his life to save the sheep, (vs. 15). Christ lives in intimate communion with the Father. His communion with his disciples is as intimate and complete. Christ's sacrifice was made for all sheep, for those also outside the Jewish fold, (vs. 16). Christ forsees the ingathering of the Gentiles who would hear his voice and many be numbered among his followers. All his followers together are to be one great company of Christians. All Christians have the same Shepherd; all are really his sheep. How blessed it would be if all could be willing to live as one flock without any hindrances to genuine Christian fellowship.

Christ the Sufficient Protector, vss. 27-30

Christ rewards the active trust of his sheep by his greatest gift. He teaches here that eternal life is a divine gift and not something which we can earn through good works. Christ is our all—sufficient protector. The bravest and most faithful shepherd may not be able at times to protect his sheep successfully. Those who trust in Christ's protection are always safe. He is more than a match for any foe. His Father is infinite in power, and no power can pluck us out of his hand. Christ and the Father are one, infinite in wisdom and strength. We may entrust ourselves into his hands with unlimited confidence and trust.

How can we detect false shepherds?

How do some sheep come to go astray and become lost?

In what sense do Christians not know the voice of strangers?

AN OPEN LETTER

We are very grateful for the fact that in spite of the growing program of the Mennonite Central Committee which has charge of the directing of the Mennonite relief work and the Civilian Public Service camps, it has never found it necessary to go into the "red." Enough money has always come from the various constisuency peace treasurers to pay the bills, which now are about $60,000 per month. This, we feel, has been a remarkable achievement and speaks well for the interest that the Mennonite people have had in the program.

I. The report of the Mennonite Central Committee up until December 17, 1942, gives us the following statistics:

1. Boys in Camps:

Total number of boys in C.P.S. camps	5,374
Total number of boys in hospital service	298
Total number of Menn. in hospital service	92

2. Statistics on Mennonite Boys

Menn. boys in M.C.C. camps	2,116
Menn. boys in Cooperative camps	30
Menn. boys in detached service	25
Menn. boys in other historic peace camps	19
Total number of Menn. in C.P.S. camps	2,190

3. Non-Menn. boys under M.C.C. direction 271

Total number of boys under M.C.C. direction 2,461

II. Civilian Public Service Camps:

1. There are now 17 camps under the direction of the Mennonite Central Committee. Of the 5,374 boys in the Civilian Public Service, 40.96 per cent are Mennonites, 12.44 per cent are Brethren, 7.86 per cent are Methodist, 6.93 per cent are Friends. The remainder is represented by other religious groups.

2. Of the two largest Mennonite groups—Old Mennonite and General Conference—the Old Mennonites have 953 boys in Camps, and the General Conference has 445 boys.

3. In order to support the present population in the Mennonite Camps it means 50 cents per month per member in all Mennonite constituencies for the three months from December 1, 1942 to March 1, 1943, or $1.50 per member for the three months.

The Peace Committee in the United States

(Members of the committee are: Ernest J. Bohn, L. J. Horsch, J. N. Smucker, H. T. Unruh, and Emil J. Waltner. The above is the first part of a letter sent out by the committee; the second part is to appear soon.)

EXTRA COPIES

There are available about 250 extra copies of the minutes of the last session of the Western District Conference. You can obtain needed copies by writing for them to Herbert Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma, or to the Bethel College Press, North Newton, Kansas. —Herbert Miller, Secretary

CORRESPONDENCE

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Alsen, North Dakota

Greetings in the name of Jesus!

In the past year we were able to harvest one of the largest, if not the largest, crops we ever had. Rainy weather and a shortage of labor made the season long and hard, but we were able to gather in all. We are thankful for that. Recently the thermometer stayed below zero for ten days. It went as low as 40 degrees below. The last few days it has gone above zero now and then. However, the weather is more severe than it was last year. We also have more snow. However, most roads can be travelled by cars.

We have also been blessed spiritually. Yet one longs for greater blessings and feels that only mercy-drops have fallen. For the showers we plead. I herewith thank all the dear servants of God who came into our midst and served us with the bread of life. We very much enjoy these visits, and we sincerely hope that more will be able to come in 1943. We appreciate any Christian workers, and especially, those of our own conference. In December we had the privilege of having Brother J. J. Esau hold a short series of meetings, and we were very glad that he served us at the communion table. The following week Brother A. Warkentin brought us a few sermons, and these were also appreciated very much. One afternoon we had Bible study in German for those who understand it so much better than the English. This was a treat for our dear older people. We were very sorry that the weather was so unpleasant, so that we were not able to show more hospitality to Brother Warkentin. We sincerely hope that these brethren can come again soon, as well as all others who ministered unto us in the past year.

We also hope that all of our missionaries who are visiting the churches will not miss our little group in the far north. In the summer it gets pleasantly warm. If you can come then, you will not have to suffer from cold.

We had a number of weddings the past year, and Brother and Sister John P. Spenst celebrated their silver wedding anniversary. All members were invited to this last celebration and to one of the other weddings. Brother and Sister Spenst both gave very touching testimonies of God's leading in the past twenty-five years.

LITTLE FLAKES OF SNOW

A little thing like a flake of snow,
Can hamper traffic and make us go slow.
It makes children happy, cheerful, and gay,
While down it comes to light the way
Of cars and busses and people so free,
To make them ponder and think of Thee.
It comes in a spirit of life divine
Which tells us in wisdom He rules the kingdom
Of earth and all mankind.

—Helpful Information: Would you like to have a book which lists the names and addresses of all the ministers of the various Mennonite groups, and also the entire personnel list of our C.P.S. camps? If so, you can secure the Mennonite Yearbook and Directory from the Mennonite Publishing House, Scottdale, Pa., for 15 cents a copy or $1.50 per dozen postpaid. This book should not be confused with the Year Book which is issued in connection with The Mennonite and which contains general information about our conference as well as statistics. The latter Year Book can be had from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, for 20 cents.

—Nine churches put in good-sized orders for the Junior Messanger in a period of about one month. This weekly paper for children has increased its subscription rapidly since it started.

—The Brotherhood of the Bethel College Church met recently around a common meal table. Brother Lester Hostetler, pastor, emphasized the importance of: 1. Declaring one's loyalty to the church. 2. Winning people to Christ. 3. Giving one's first and whole allegiance to Christ. Brother C. E. Krehbiel, President of the General Conference, told of churches that had burned notes recently and suggested that the brotherhood succeed in burning the note of the church parsonage debt. The debt is $4,000.00. The brotherhood has undertaken to pay the debt. Leo Brandt, teacher in the Newton schools, is the new president.

—The First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, has decided to put a cement floor in its basement. Older people who were at the General Conference in 1908 will, perhaps, remember what the basement was like. The auditing committee has been authorized to help all treasurers to set up individual bank accounts. The church is looking around for a teacher for its Bible school which it intends to open again next year. Walter Dyck, the pastor, recently attended a meeting of the Western District Peace Committee and spoke at a chapel service in Bethel College.

—The Annual C.E. Banquet of the Eastern District will be held in the meeting house of the Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, on February 20. The Intermediate C.E. Union, instead of having its own banquet this year, has been invited to share in this. —Bulletin of Deep Run Church

—Waldo R. Wedel, son of Brother and Sister P. J. Wedel of North Newton, Kansas, has gone with a party of scientists on a three-months archeological expedition to Old Mexico. He is assistant director of the expedition and holds the position of Assistant Curator, Division of Archeology, United States National Museum, at the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, D. C. His father, who has been connected with Bethel College for many years, is now writing a history of Bethel College.

—The all-school play of Bethel College will be given on February 12 in Memorial Hall. The play portrays in a simple, eloquent, and reverent way the family life of Jesus.

—David Toews was operated on January 22 for the second time. He was given a blood transfusion. He will need complete rest for a while, so that he can utilize to the utmost his low energy reserves.

—The Mennonite Cultural Conference proceedings will be available for distribution within a few days. The publication contains the addresses given at this conference held at Winona Lake, Indiana, on August 7 and 8, 1942. The names and addresses of all those registered for the conference are included. In addition there is a summary of the program and proceedings of the first Conference for Administrators of Mennonite Colleges. The publication may be had from J. Winfield Fretz, North Newton, Kansas, for twenty-five cents.

—Bluffton College: Mrs. Mosiman was honored on her birthday recently by a tea, which students and faculty members attended. The Peace Action Club has started to canvass Bluffton for used clothing. This is then repaired and distributed for relief purposes. Collections of clothing will be made on Saturday afternoons. The Bluffton Sportsmen's Club is making plans for providing trees suitable for bird and animal conservation and for planting them on the college campus. The campus has been a state game reserve for a number of years. Already a large number of fox and gray squirrels are thriving there. Pheasants and rabbits are also seen frequently. Many song birds find refuge there in summer. Plans for a ten-week first aid course to be taught by the wife of Professor Sidney Hauenstein have nearly been completed.

—Winton, California: J. P. Glanzer greets the editor and readers with Psalm 91:2. He writes, "We are having rainy weather now. (January 25, 1943). We had a big wind here and a frost to about eighteen degrees. Most people here are busy pruning peach trees and vines. Rev. Homer Leisy of Dallas, Oregon, will hold meetings here February 3, 4, 5. His daughter, Dorothy, will assist him. The Mennonite is a blessing to us; may it continue to be so."

—From the annual report of the Burrton Mennonite Church, Burrton, Kansas, we glean that the membership fee has been abolished. Another plan of "The Giving of The Tenth" is to be tried. The membership stands at 133. In the past year letters were sent to absentee members. Those who did not reply in six months time were dropped from the list.

—The Year book of the Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, opens with an interesting picture of its meeting house and a schedule of services. This church has the worthy practice of electing correspondents to The Bundesbote and The Mennonite. It has a mixed choir and a Junior choir. All eleven boys who have been drafted are in C.P.S. camps. In it is also a complete list of offerings for 1943, including offerings for the Publication and Education boards, two boards sometimes overlooked. The name Wiens leads in the church membership list, being mentioned twenty-three times. The church membership fee is three dollars per member.

—The Annual Report of the Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, is before me in a very neat, business letter size form. This size and make-up is very convenient for filing. On the first page is an interesting history of the beginning of this church which was eight months old on February 7, 1943. One of the main motions reads: "That we take the offerings of every fourth and fifth Sunday of the month, of which one-half will be given to the various benevolent causes; four Sundays to C.P.S.; four Sundays to Foreign Mission Board; two Sundays to Board of Education; two Sundays to Board of Publication; two Sundays to Home Mission Board and two Sundays to Emergency Relief. The church has a correspondent to our church papers and has also adopted the 100 per cent church paper plan. Ronald von Riesen, a son of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, is pastor.

The Annual Report of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, has very clear print and in a legal letter size. This church also has a Mennonite paper in every Mennonite home. Ten members were placed on the inactive list during the past year in accordance with the constitution. "Back to School and College Day" was one of the special days observed. There were no church services on the Sunday that most of the members attended the Pacific District Conference. Nineteen young people went to the retreat. Willard Jantz, Marie and Viola Franz are attending Bethel College. Seven members are in the teaching profession. A chart of church giving, which is one of the clearest the eidtor has seen, shows marked increases from 1941 in practically all lines of activity.

—A program given by the music and dramatics departments of Bethel College on the evening of February 1 was very well received by a large audience.

—Eicher Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa: At our Christmas program Carel Johnson spoke on God's greatest gift, His son Jesus Christ. The mission society sent thirteen boxes to the boys in camp for Christmas. It also collected and sent away 133 pounds of clothing for European relief. We are still without a pastor. No seminary to go to? Several pastors from the community have filled our pulpit. When Miss Kuyf visited us she renewed within us a more earnest zeal to pray for our missionaries and their work —P. P. Graber Corr.

—Walter A. Gering, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, recently conducted evangelistic services in the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church.

—A church correspondent writes: "I wish some plan could be worked out so that every Mennonite would have the privilege of reading The Mennonite . . . I think the quarterly supplement is a great advancement in showing the contributions of our various churches."

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: The Young People's C.E. has made itself responsible for sending the church bulletin to the men in camp. The Friendship Circle furnished linens for two boys which left for C.P.S. camps recently. On the back of the January 24 bulletin this church listed its proposed budget. Then it provided a blank in which the member could indicate how much he planned to give in the coming year. This seems like a systematic way of planning. A budget of $1,777.78 was adopted at the annual meeting. If every member would pay one dollar every month then the budget could be met, states the bulletin.

—The Gnadenberg (Whitewater, Kansas) C. E. Society had an interesting C. E. program on January 24. Topics had been prepared by all of our boys in camp. We have five boys in C.P.S. camps. (These are all that have been drafted.) The subjects of the articles sent in by the boys were: "Goals for C.P.S. Camps," "Children of God Are To Be Peacemakers," "Those That Take the Sword Shall Perish," "Christians Are To Overcome Evil With Good," and "Christ's Example."

—Wayland Mennonite Church, Wayland, Iowa: We had a joint meeting with the Eicher Church to hear Wilhelmina Kuyf. She gave a clear picture of conditions in occupied China and also an encouraging report of how the Chinese Christian leaders carry on the good work since the foreign missionaries can no longer work with them. On January 24 all church officers were installed.

—Mrs. C. K. Schantz, Corr.

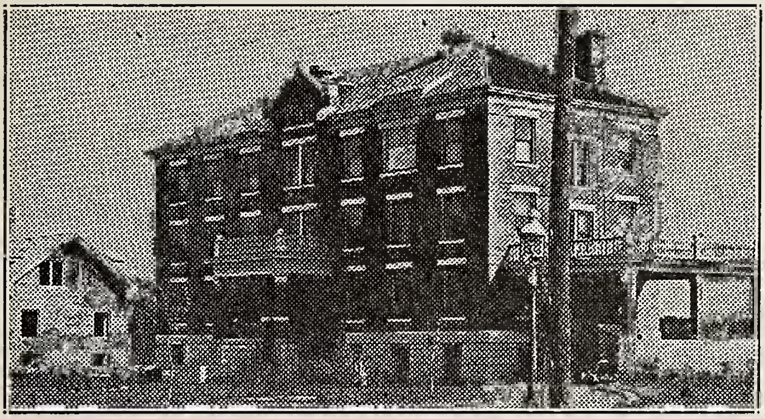
—Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., will observe February 14 as Home Coming Day. A conference program in the afternoon will include greetings from the ministers of the conference. J. E. Hartzler is the speaker for the anniversary week.

—Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas: Brother and Sister J. K. Warkentine and son John went to California to attend the funeral of son Jake. Eleven of our boys are serving in C.P.S. camps. Two more boys are leaving: Walter Martins to Fort Collins, Colorado, and Carl Neufeldt to Hill City, South Dakota. Brother and Sister George Plett were baptized recently.

Some of the year book reports must wait longer, for there is too little space in this issue.

The Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society, Newton, Kansas

At the thirty-ninth annual meeting of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society in session at the First Mennonite Church in Newton, Kansas, on February 9, 1943, special recognition will be given to the fortieth anniversary of the organization of the society on March 13, 1903. On that date, the directors of Bethel College made application to the secretary of state at Topeka, Kansas, to form a private corporation in order to establish and maintain deaconess home and hospital under the auspices of the Mennonite church of North America through the agency of this corporation.



Bethel Deaconess Hospital as first Constructed

The following men signed the charter which was submitted with the application for incorporation:

Abraham Ratzlaff, Moundridge, McPherson County, Kansas
Abraham Baumgartner, Halstead, Harvey County, Kansas
H. Banman, Canton, McPherson County, Kansas
Jacob Isaac, Moundridge, McPherson County, Kansas
J. W. Regier, Elbing, Butler County, Kansas
B. Warkentin, Newton, Harvey County, Kansas
J. J. Krehbiel, Newton, Harvey County, Kansas
G. A. Haury, Newton, Harvey County, Kansas
David Goerz, Newton, Harvey County, Kansas

Of these men, Jacob Isaac of Moundridge is the sole survivor, and, God willing, he will take part in the short anniversary observance.

The directors of Bethel College took the first steps toward renewing the deaconess service in the Mennonite church on May 29, 1901. By 1903, considerable interest had been awakened; plans were being made for the erection of a deaconess institution in connection with Bethel College, and there was a fund of approximately three thousand dollars on hand for this purpose. Three sisters had volunteered for the work and were being trained for the service. (Frieda Kaufman, Agnes Harder, and Agnes Isaac.)

The plan to establish a deaconess institution in connection with Bethel College met with considerable opposition, and the newly organized society did not meet for further action for two years in order to await the clarification of the situation. On April 12, 1905, the men who signed the charter called the first general meeting of the forty-five members of the society; and the charter was adopted with the provision that the words, "In connection with Bethel College," be cancelled, and the society has functioned since as an independent organization.

This year, 1943, also marks the thirty-fifth anniversary of the dedication and opening of the Bethel Deaconess Hospital on June 11, 1908. The original hospital building received additions in 1913, 1930, and 1939. It is well-equipped and has a bed capacity of seventy-five.

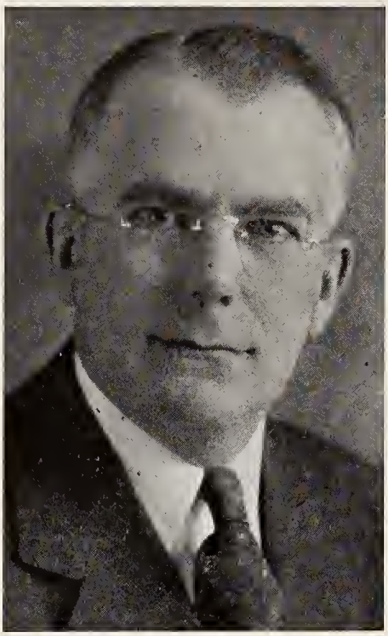
The school of nursing connected with the hospital is fully accredited by the state of Kansas and by the American Red Cross. It has forty students enrolled who are housed in Sarepta, a separate building which was completed in the fall of 1942.

The Bethel Deaconess Home was built by Mrs. B. Warkentin as a memorial to her husband and was presented to the society on December 26, 1910. In 1916, Mrs. B. Warkentin and her children, Mr. and

Bethel Deaconess Hospital as it is now

Mrs. M. L. Alden and Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Warkentin, enlarged this home, adding not only to its capacity but also to its comforts.

In 1911, at the request of a few friends from Mountain Lake, Minnesota, a sister was stationed there to care for the sick in that community. Friendship and mutual trust were established between the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society and the people of Mountain Lake and vicinity. By 1927, the service to the sick and aged in Mountain Lake was centered in three buildings, a fire-proof, modern hospital, a commodious new home for nurses, and a well-functioning home for the aged. By 1930, a number of young women who were trained as nurses were available for service in the community. The friends there then asked to form a separate society, to procure a charter, and to carry on the work independently. The institutions have prospered under the blessing of God.



H. J. Andres,
administrator of the hospital

The efforts of many years toward establishing a home for aged in Newton was crowned with success, and on May 9, 1926, the Bethel Home for Aged was dedicated to God for service. It has offered the comforts of home and care to many in need of its shelter since that day. It can accommodate thirty-five guests and is usually filled to capacity.

On November 1, 1932, on the eighteenth anniversary of the birth of Mrs. B. Warkentin, the beautiful home of the B. Warkentin family, located on East First street in Newton, was presented as a gift to the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society to be used as a home for retired deaconesses. This home has been dedicated as a memorial to Mrs. B. Warkenten who was a close friend of the deaconess institution for more than twenty-four years.

The present officers of the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital Society are; Rev. J. E. Entz, president; H. E. Suderman, vice-president; Rev. H. J. Dyck, secretary; and F. N. Funk, treasurer. Sister Frieda Kaufman is the deaconess mother of the sisterhood, and Sister Helena Entz is sister-in-charge of the home for aged. Mr. H. J. Andres has been the administrator of the hospital since September 1, 1938.

A Memorable Day Was June 11, 1908

Let us step back in time! As late-comers we enter into the meeting house of the Newton Mennonite Church on June 11, 1908. We must hunt for a seat, for practically all places are filled by visitors from near and far. We listen to the following men: J. H. Langenwalter, Elder J. Toews, Elder Abraham Ratzlaff, and Pastor Jentz, Superintendent of the Evangelical Deaconess House, St. Louis, Missouri. Frieda Kaufman, Katharina Voth, and Ida Epp are ordained to the deaconess service by Elder D. Goerz.

At the dedication of the hospital in the afternoon Mayor Grove says, "I hereby wish to thank you people for this institution which you have built in our city. The origin of all giving finds its origin in God, and true goodwill expresses itself in blessing." Speaking in behalf of the doctors of Newton, Dr. Axtell says, "I am ready to give my right hand to this institution which is an honor to us." Pastor Jentz bases his message on I Kings 8:28,29. Pastor Ewert of the Presbyterian Church also speaks. Rev. J. W. Regier had led in the "Einleitung" that afternoon, and Elder D. Goerz speaks the prayer of dedication, basing it on Psalm 127:1. The offering amounts to a little over $800.00. Many enroll as new members of the Hospital Society before they leave for home. (The above is based on material given in the Christlicher Bundesbote of July 9, 1908. The direct quotations are rough translations from the German.—R.W.)

A LIFE OF DEVOTION AND SERVICE

Henry J. Kliewer, son of John P. and Aganetha (Foth) Kliewer, was born in Russia on April 9, 1871. At the age of three his parents with the entire family migrated to America. They located about ten miles east of Newton. It was in this vicinity that he spent his childhood and youth. When but a lad of eight years his mother's death brought a change in his life. At her grave a friend said to him, "Your mother has gone to be with Jesus. If you trust Him, and do as she has taught you, He will take care of you till you meet her in heaven." Thus began a life of devotion and service.

Missionary Henry J. Kliewer

In spite of many difficulties he secured his education in the public schools, and later at the Halstead Seminary and Academy. He was baptized on May 26, 1890, and became a member of the Gnadenberg Mennonite Church.

It was his early desire to become a missionary. A few days after graduating from Halstead Seminary, he was on his way to Oklahoma to fill the position of a teacher in the mission school at Darlington and Cantonment. After a few years in that capacity he went to Canada where he also taught. Ill health necessitated his return to a warmer climate, so he continued teaching in Kansas. After these experiences he felt prepared to enter active mission work, and was ordained as a missionary by the Rev. R. Petter May 15, 1898. He answered the call of the Foreign Mission Board to start a new station among the Red Moon Indians near Hammon, Oklahoma.

On August 31, 1899, he was united in marriage to Christiana Horsch and they founded their first home at the Red Moon Mission station. Of his five children born into the home four are still living.

He was ordained as elder April 13, 1902. He has seen forty years of active missionary service among the Indians of Oklahoma. All those who are acquainted with mission history will know that such an undertaking is connected with much prayer and full consecration to the work. He must have had discouragements, but among his papers we read, "The Lord has guided and blessed us during these forty years with the Indians."

Because of his wife's ill health he retired to Newton in 1936 where he has since made his home. He transferred his membership to the First Mennonite Church November 27, 1937. He passed away peacefully while asleep early in the morning of February 3, 1943.

He is survived by his wife; three daughters, (Martha), Mrs. A. G. Linscheid, of Cleveland, Ohio; (Linda), Mrs. R. van der Smissen, Ely, Nevada; (Ruth) Mrs. P.R. Linscheid, Attica, Kansas; one son, Milton Kliewer, Bartlesville, Oklahoma; four grandchildren and three sisters, Mrs. Agnes Ewert, Drake, Saskatchewan; Mrs. J. J. Schmidt, Newton; Mrs. J. H. Harms, Newton. Besides the immediate family he will be missed by his fellow missionaries and many friends in Newton and elsewhere.

His life was a continual victory. His death only ushered him into the heavenly home where he pursues in a more complete measure his labors for his Lord, whom he so gladly and humbly served on earth.

Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon, February 6, at 2:30 o'clock from the First Mennonite Church with the following ministers officiating; J. E. Entz, A. Warkentin, P. A. Penner, and P. H. Richert.

Interment was in the Greenwood cemetery.

An Energetic Youth: How Are We to Direct It?

By J. C. Kaufman

When an infant is born into a home a bundle of problems come with it. Problems of which the young parents were not conscious heretofore. As the child develops and grows the problems develop and grow with it.

These problems do not remain the problems of the home only, but gradually become the problems of the Sunday School, the church, and the higher institutions of learning. The problems which began as individual problems have thus become a general problem, and these problems increase or decrease with the trend of the time.

I believe, therefore, that the problems which are confronting us in our day, as to the guidance and the direction of our young people, are more vital and more serious than they were at any time in history, because of the abnormal and chaotic conditions the world over, and in every sphere and on every field, the religious included.

The spirit of the present age has, to a certain extent, gripped old and young, but our youth is more affected by this spirit because of their idealism. They are easily affected with something striking, something fanciful.

The Danger of Emphasizing Leadership

We are living in a day in which the need of leadership is very prominent. Educational institutions the world over, ours included, see this need of leadership. Therefore, phrases like these are very common: we must create leadership among our youth; we must educate our young people to become leaders. This idea of leadership has alarmingly gripped some of the young people even to an extent where it may prove disastrous for the world in general as well as for the church.

We all are aware of the fact that leadership is necessary; someone will have to take the responsibility after we are gone, if the Lord tarries. And especially is wise leadership necessary in the chaotic conditions of the world as well as the church. When this objective of creating leadership among our youth became so prominent, I was interested in one thing and that was, the reaction, the bearing which this may have upon the youth. Here is an observation: I happened to be in a community just at the closing exercises of a large school. A large class of fine young people graduated. The motto this graduating class had chosen as the motto for their future life was, "We will lead but we will never follow." Think of it if we turn loose several millions of young people into our country, into our churches, into our homes, inexperienced, energetic with a big amount of surplus energy with such a motto or view in mind.

Leadership is necessary, but the best leaders the world as well as the church ever had were those men and those women who were trained first of all to be obedient and submissive followers and especially obedient to the parents. We must therefore before we can create effective leadership create followership, obedience and submission.

I mention the above incident to show to you how the spirit of the age takes a hold of some of our young people and how here and there the mask is lifted, and the spirit is exposed. Questions arise in my mind as to why this is so, and I turn to the Word of God for an answer, and I read: "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy. Without natural affection, truce breakers, false accusers, incontinent, fierce despisers of those that are good, traitors, heady, highminded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God; Having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof: from such turn away. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts, shall they heap on themselves teachers, having itching ears." II Tim. 3, 1-5:4,3. In passages like these I find the answer to my questions.

The Virtue of Obedience

You have noticed that the Apostle Paul mentions disobedience to parents. This is a mark of our present age. I wish to say that I had ample opportunity in my itinerant work for observations along this line. I have been in many homes where I said to myself: "In this home the parents are quite obedient followers. Quite frequently the father who had lost all control over his children, confided his troubles in me, and often with tears. I plead with you that before we create an egoistic spirit of leadership, let us above anything else create a spirit of followership, of obedience, and submissiveness. My Bible has much to say on obedience and submissiveness, but what has it to say on creating leadership? My Bible says God gives the leaders. See Eph. 4,11-14. "And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; For the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ: Till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ: That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive."

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

"THIS MOUNTAIN SHALL BE REMOVED"

A number of us brethren were gathered at Saraipali, about seventeen miles from our Basna mission station, for a church business meeting. Night came and our Brother Tunglu, a rather weak Christian brother, and I were to sleep on one side of the house, outside, and several other brethren were to sleep on the other side of the house. I made my bed, and then said to Brother Tunglu, "Let's go and have evening prayers on the other side of the house with the rest of the people." We did.

When we came back Tunglu's blanket was gone. The only one he had, not only the only one he had along, but the only one he possessed. We had seen no thief. We hunted, but found no trace of it. Finally Tunglu said, "Let go, I will sleep without it." I lay down on my bed then, and he came to his bamboo mat (fishpole mat) and knelt down, with face on the mat, and prayed earnestly for strength to endure hardships, and for love towards all men. Then he picked up a brick from nearby and put it under his head for a pillow and soon was sound asleep. The mountain had been overcome.

I lay awake a long time yet, wondering what I would have done if my bedding had disappeared. Here I am in a country far from my native land. I am here to help build a church against which the gates of Hades shall not prevail. Yet this Christian brother taught me a lesson. (The next morning the blanket was found. A young dog had dragged it into a rice field not far away.)—John Thiessen

Since the connections for traveling are often not the best, we have given to most churches two days. The churches may decide whether they wish one or two services. Sister Kuyf will be ready to speak also to the sewing societies, and to make house visits. Then she will also need some rest.

If a church finds its date not suitable, please, inform the secretary.

Such young people who have broken loose from all restraint in the home join our churches and enter our schools. I question, are such in the proper state of mind to be filled with the spirit of leadership?

This is one side of our problem today as to the direction of our energetic youth. But the problem of guidance does not involve only young people who have broken loose from all restraints in the home, church, and school, it includes also our splendid, modest, obedient young people. They look up to us for direction. How shall we direct them in a world of chaos and surrounded by dangers to the soul? How shall we train them so as to reach the highest standard of efficiency in the Lord's cause?

(to be concluded)

AN OBLIGATION

"Freedom of conscience is a foundation stone of our Democracy. Consequently. we must respect the attitude of those persons who honestly and sincerely, on conscientious grounds based on religious training and belief, object to participation in war. The fact that such persons form but a small minority of our citizenry and that we disagree with their position, does not effect our obligation to recognize and respect their convictions."

—Francis A. Biddle, The Attorney General, Washington, D.C.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

ON CHURCH UNITY

Recently I heard of a small rural community of about 700 people in which there were four churches. Each church was so weak it could not support a full time minister. The school superintendent, who had recently come there, suggested that by combining all of the churches one fairly strong church could be maintained. Church unity was freely discussed and a good deal of enthusiasm aroused for the idea. When it came down to the point of action the enthusiasm waned and pettiness prevailed.

The Church of God people maintained that there was, after all, only one true church and that was the Church of God. The Baptists were interested in unity but claimed that all true Christians really must baptize by immersion. The Methodists happily offered their church as the most likely to satisfy all groups and, after all, the bishop would never agree to allow any other group to take over the building. The United Brethern advanced the plausible suggestion that if all of the Christians in the community formed one body they would in fact be United Brethren, so it would be well to merge with them from the beginning. These attitudes prevented the formation of a unified group, and today there is a fifth church as a result of a split in the Baptist church.

A Lesson For Mennonites

I wonder how many times a similar situation prevailed in rural communities where four or more Mennonite bodies were formed because of small differences of opinion and a lack of appreciation for the larger good. Certainly there is hardly a justifiable reason for the existence of seventeen varieties of Mennonite churches today. Many times there is so little difference that members in each group can't tell what the distinctive teachings are until they consult one of the church fathers or a history book. This fact is repeatedly discovered by the boys in the C.P.S. camps who come from every branch of the Mennonite Church. They are frequently amazed at the similarity of their beliefs and the points of doctrine.

The inspiring thing to witness in these camps is the way the boys from the various churches get along well with each other. They may still hold to certain practices and beliefs that vary one from the other but this does not prevent them from working and worshiping with each other. Not only do they work and worship together but they come to understand and appreciate each other's point of view and respect the person for his sincere convictions.

Would this not be a fine lesson for the communities back home where differences are cultivated and continued decade after decade simply because of a lack of effort to try to understand, to discover, and appreciate each other's convictions? Perhaps our young men can make this contribution toward greater unity when they return from their present areas of service after the war.

WANTED

Someone in each Mennonite congregation to sell our line of Everyday Greeting Card assortments, birthday and getwell assortments. This is an opportunity to earn money for yourself, church, or society. Good commissions paid. Remember, too, this will give you a chance to get in on the Christmas greeting card business also. Many earn as much as $100.00 in their spare time.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

John C. Kaufman is pastor of the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas. Formerly he served as traveling minister in the Northern District Conference and as a worker in the Pacific Conference. He has taught in the Bible Department of Freeman Junior College and has also solicited for this school. He served the Hoffnungsfeld Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, before accepting his present pastorate. Elder Christian Kaufman of Marion, South Dakota, was his father. Brother Kaufman now has a son in the C.P.S. camp at Weeping Water, Nebraska, who edits the camp paper.

Paul Goering, Senior at Bethel College, is from Moundridge, Kansas, where his father is a banker. His father is also a member of the Bethel College Board of Directors. Paul is Chairman of the Peace Committee of the Western District Christian Endeavor Convention and has been active in arranging peace rallies in churches.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By John Graber, North Newton, Kansas

("Thou hasts" of Psalm 30)

FEBRUARY 22—"I will extol Thee, O Lord; for Thou hast lifted me up, and hast not made my foes to rejoice over me." Ps. 30:1. "Thou hast lifted me up." (Salvation). The Psalmist extols the Lord. That is, he wishes to give utterance to his gratitude in the best possible way of expression. Throughout this Psalm David enumerates the various reasons for which he "extols" the Lord. The first great benefit is salvation. God's Grace through Christ has lifted us from the pit of hell, from the pool of iniquity, and from the ditch of corruption. God was not obligated to save any man. Man forfeited his blessings in the Garden of Eden when he disobeyed God's command. But God, in spite of it all, provided a way of redemption.

FEBRUARY 23—"O Lord my God, I cried unto Thee, and Thou hast healed me." Ps. 30:2. "Thou hast" healed me. (Sanctification). Healing energy flows form the Divine hand. God is the best physician, even for our bodily infirmities. If our watch is out of order, we take it to the watchmaker; if our body or soul be in an evil plight, let us resort to Him who created them. Nothing can heal our spiritual diseases but the touch of the Lord Jesus. If we but touch the hem of His garment, we shall be made whole. Sanctification is the second aspect of the work of Christ in this world, justification being the first. Sanctification is a work accomplished in us. Whereas, justification is a work accomplished for us. The health of the soul consists in holiness. God declares the sinner righteous in order that He may restore him to holiness.

FEBRUARY 24—"O Lord, Thou hast brought up my soul from the grave. . ." Ps. 30:3a. "Thou hast brought up my soul from the grave." (Revised). The Psalmist tells us here that he has descended to the brink of the grave and yet he was restored to tell of the forbearance of God. The restoration that God afforded, David likened to a resurrection from the grave. A parallel passage which conveys the same thought is Ps. 23:3a, "He restoreth my soul." It is God's "quickening" and "restoring" work for which David offers praise. The Good Shepherd not only gave His life for the sheep, but He leads them day by day. When one goes astray He restores and chastises. Jesus said, "What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine in the wilderness, and go after that which is lost, until he find it."

FEBRUARY 25—" . . .Thou hast kept me alive, that I should not go down to the pit." Ps. 30:3b. "Thou hast kept me alive." (Preservation). Again we must turn to Christ's words: "My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand." John 10:27,28. If God preserves our physical life, how much more may we expect Him to preserve the Spiritual. The word "preserve" reminds us immediately of Ps. 121:5a, 7: "The Lord is thy keeper. . .the Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: He shall preserve thy soul."

FEBRUARY 26—"Lord, by Thy favour Thou hast made my mountain to stand strong . . ." Ps. 30:7a. "Thou hast made my mountain to stand strong." (Established) King David prospered in his domain by the hand of the Lord. His wealth had secured for him a stability which he compared to a mountain. He considered himself fixed and established. In the realm of the church there are many individuals who seem to be unstable. They're always in doubt about something. They really don't know where they stand. They are not established spiritually. But the individual who has received Christ as Saviour and has entered into newness of life with Him, knows of a certainty his position.

FEBRUARY 27—"Thou hast turned for me my mourning into dancing. . ." Ps. 30:11a. "Thou hast turned. . . mourning into dancing." (Exultation). Here the Psalmist names another benefit of the grace of God. The mourning is not simply turned into peace and quiet, but more than that. It is turned to dancing, to joy and mirth. God loves to do wonders for His creatures. He would bless every man with His salvation. But man's stubborn will does not permit Him. The Lord delights to do the unexpected. He lifts the sinner from the pit of sin, and looses his bonds. He showers upon him blessings of peace in place of former confusion, light in place of darkness, and joy in place of sorrow.

FEBRUARY 28—"Thou hast put off my sackcloth, and girded me with gladness." Ps. 30:11b. *"Thou hast. . .*girded me with gladness." (Separation and Gladness). The Lord removes the sackcloth of human sin and defilement. Not only does He purify the soul, but He clothes it with a new garment—gladness. Many a man possesses only shabby garments in this world, yet around his heart he may be clad with a royal vestment bestowed by God Himself. On the other hand, there are those who wear only the most expensive garb. Yet, towards God they are poor, naked and wretched. They are destitute of the robe of "gladness." There is no reason why God's children should not be seen with gladness on their faces at all times. Christ's salvation brings joy to the full. "Whom having not seen ye love; in Whom, though now ye see Him not, yet believing, ye rejoice with joy unspeakable and full of glory." I Pet. 1:8.

CENTRAL CONFERENCE ACTIVITIES

Rev. Wm. B. Weaver, Editor, Danvers, Illinois

The year book of The Central Conference of Mennonites has just been issued, (1943). Rev. R. L. Hartzler of Medaryville, Indiana, is the editor. Copies can be procured from his office for twenty cents if anyone is interested. This year book contains directories of our conference organizations as well as of the ministers of the conference. It contains annual reports of the various reports of our institutions and activities for the year July 1, 1941, to June 30, 1942. There is also a historical "In Memoriam" of Rev. Emanuel Troyer written by Wm. B. Weaver.

The annual meeting of the delegates of the Old People's Home at Meadows, Illinois, was held January 7, 1943. This is a cooperative work of our conference and the Defenseless Mennonites. This home was built in 1922. On May 20, 1923, it was dedicated. Since January 1, 1925, Rev. and Mrs. George Gindy have had charge of the work. They care not only for the physical, but spiritual needs of the old people. The reports at the annual meeting were very encouraging. A fund is being built up to build another wing to the home. The capacity of the home now is about twenty-two.

The other annual delegates' meeting held in relation to our institutions was that of the Mennonite Hospital at Bloomington, Illinois. This hospital is the cooperative work of our conference, Defenseless, and Old Mennonites. These groups are represented on the board. The meeting was held at the Normal Mennonite Church. The Ladies Auxiliary of the hospital met in a separate session in the afternoon.

The superintendent of the hospital, M. O. Hoover, reported 2,165 admitted patients at the hospital in 1942. Babies born in the hospital 494. The new addition just completed gives more needed room to care for the patients.

The Nurses Training School has thirty-one students. There are seventeen probationers. Rev. R. L. Hartzler gave the inspirational address at the hospital meeting. This was a memorial service in honor of Rev. Troyer who had been president of the Board of the institution beginning in 1919. Rev. Hartzler spoke on "The Price of Leadership."

On the evening of January 22 the ministers of Illinois of our conference had a fellowship meeting at the Normal Church. These meetings have been held about every two months. After a lunch, the wives of the ministers held a separate meeting. The ministers meet in a discussion group led by Rev. Wm. B. Weaver. We have discussed thus far personal evangelism, and the minister as pastor. Our next discussion will be the minister as a preacher.

Our Conference Women's Organization, under the leadership of Mrs. Harry Yoder and Mrs. Ali G. Stohly of Carlock, Illinois, has arranged for prayer circles. They suggest to the churches the institutions and specific activities which are to be remembered in a special way for a given period of time. Through March we are to remember 1-7, our boys in the war service; 8-14, our foreign missions; 15-21, our proposed seminary; 22-28, missionaries on furlough; and 29 -April 4, our boys in C.P.S. camps.

RELIEF

As Relief Work continues in England

A recent letter from Brother John E. Coffman in England and reports for Sisters Edna Hunsperger and Elfrieda Klassen give an account of the progress of a busy relief program.

Twenty bales and five cases of clothing arrived in time for distribution during the Christmas holidays. Sister Klassen remarks that the children at the "South Meadows" Home in North Wales are doing very well and that she enjoys her work "immensely." Sister Hunsperger continues to be helpful as attendant to the old people in "The Woodlands."

Brother Coffman mentions that post-war relief and reconstruction is occupying a place in the thinking of government and relief agencies and that he is keeping in touch with contemplated measures.

"We Give Through Our Church"

For these giving to War Sufferer's Relief and Civilian Public Service, a placard for window display can be secured through the treasurer of the respective relief board or committee. The placard is five and one-half inches of four and portrays the M. C. C. symbol together with the words: "We give through Our Church to War Relief and Civilian Service."

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

Twenty-four to Attend Training School

The second Training School for C.P.S. administrators will include among its students six who are serving as camp directors, four who are serving as assistant directors, nine who are leaders of hospital units, and five campees who are to be placed on administrative duties as needs for their services are presented. Six of the total will attend the Akron session only.

Latest Expansion of Hospital Service

The Rhode Island State Hospital at Howard, Rhode Island, is now eligible for receiving a contingent of tweny-five C.P.S. boys on its personnel staff. This hospital is located near Providence, Rhode Island and has over 2,800 patients.

The Hawthornden State Hospital at Macedonia, Ohio, is soon to have five more C.P.S. boys added to the present unit making a total of fifteen.

Mennonites in Paraguay and Our Mennonite Heritage

By John R. Schmidt, M.D.

My experience with the South American Mennonites along with the world picture as it has unraveled itself before us in the last two years has given me renewed appreciation of what we as Mennonites really have inherited from our forefathers and that we need to keep it alive forever.

The Mennonites of Russia had almost two centuries of great riches and luxury. When the Russian revolution came many held on to material wealth even if they had to take up atheism; others went through some of the most horrible punishment to hold fast to their religious beliefs. We have all heard of the suffering these people went through, but to have various people tell you in their own way how they lost a sister, brother, father, or mother, gives it a new meaning. The thought of these tribulations calls to mind the many sufferings Menno Simon and his followers had to go through in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. It is said of these men, that the Mennonite principle had never survived the punishment if the men that upheld it had not had supernatural strength and courage. These tribulations are all credited on record as suffering for the Mennonite cause.

The paradox about the Mennonites that came from Russia is that while they saw many dear ones give their lives, and many risked their own for the Mennonite cause, not more than ten years later many started to play with politics and fell for Nazism, which means utter disregard for the noble cause. Also they were so glad that they got out of Russia, yet the whole political inspiration came from the idea that as Nazis they would some day be able to go back to Russia. Even with conditions as they have been in Europe in the last four years the movement has been kept alive. Of course, this has brought marked dissension among the Mennonites in the Chaco.

The political movement of the Russian Mennonites in the Chaco was well known to the American Consulate in America long before I ever arrived in South America; hence, I felt free to consult with them, and I am glad to report that they have shown great appreciation for the work of good-will that the Mennonite Central Committee has done in disapproval of this movement. There are many of the colony's most able people who have a clear Christian viewpoint of this problem and are working actively to regain the faith of the people involved in this movement for the noble cause. The whole story of the Russian Mennonites covering the last twenty years is one that will always remain an important one in our Mennonite heritage, but the ones left of this group who are true to the cause need our support.

Our Mennonite heritage is not something we can memorize and then put on the shelf to let dust collect on it. We must not cover its light with a bushel. We must recognize deeds done by men of great spiritual insight. With Nazism making its attack on Mennonites we should all remember the great pastor, Niemoller, He is not a Mennonite but is probably one of the greatest human martyrs of Christendom that the world has ever seen. The torture that he went through to try to save freedom of religion ("Freedom to Preach the God We Believe In" as he put it the Sunday he was preaching in Berlin while all Germany had its eyes on him.) can only be told in bits. During the trials by the Nazis, when he knew there was no way out, he said that really he was not on trial, but the One Who died on the cross was on trial.

If we as Mennonites had worked up enough support for him before this war started we would have gone a long way in preventing this war. Here in the center of Christendom, the place where the Reformation took place and the region where brave Mennonites died for what we have the privilege to believe, we as Mennonites allowed men like Pastor Niemoller and his followers to stand alone, and eventually we see the worst war of all ages develop. God still sees what His people are doing and I'm sure He has the greatest dissatisfaction for us if we know but do not care.

This picture hints at the very bad road conditions with which the Mennonite colonists have to contend. In rainy weather the wagon sometimes sinks down to the axle. Seated on the rear of the wagon are: Dr. John R. Schmidt, Oberschulze Legiehn, Fernheim, and Oberschulze Kroeker, Friesland. The name of the driver is not given.

We can still regain some of the lost duties by searching for opportunities to let our light shine, the light given us through our Mennonite heritage, where people who are about to break under the strain can hear us and be lifted up.

The climax to this whole thought of Mennonite heritage comes to me when I see how we, the Mennonites of North America, respond to the events of history before us. To hear what Senator Taft, Mayor La Guardia, Eleanor Roosevelt and dozens of other nationally known people have to say on tolerance for the conscientious objector makes you think thay have more respect for our Mennonite heritage than some of the people from our own churches.

The young men that go into the military organization from the Mennonite churches may be sincere with their beliefs, but they are not sincere with what we stand for. For many it is "Faith of our fathers, I will be true to thee until I am threatened with loss of income and friends." Having been away from the United States for some time I'm sure no one could appreciate the marvelous government we have more than I do; yet we must serve God before man.

We, the Mennonites of North America, have a great task to perform. The hundred twenty thousand Mennonites or more in Europe need our physical, social, and spiritual support. Many of these, including some in South America, have had their Mennonite beliefs shattered. We must have understanding for their motives and tolerance for their ideas yet give unquestionable disapproval for any point that does not rest on the solid ground laid down by our forefathers. The problem with Mennonites here at home that have lost sight of our Mennonite heritage need cautious judgment, yet the answers must be directed unwaveringly along the straight and narrow path. Will we be strong enough for the task? We cannot just remain Mennonites because the noted people of our country seem to have an understanding for our cause.

We must remember our Mennonite leaders. We must study our Mennonite periodicals. We must acquaint ourselves with Christian activities all over the world. We must practice what we preach. Our Mennonite heritage—let us keep it undefiled. If we remain clean and true He will give us the strength we need.

"Hard things are put in our way, not to stop us, but to call out our courage and strength."

IN MEMORIAM

ANNA FREY wrote most of the following obituary herself before her death: I . . . was born on the farm of my parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Balzer, on January 30, 1879. This my home, was near Goessel, Kansas, in a village called Greenfeld. . .

On the sixth day of June, 1897, I was baptized . . .and admitted into the Alexanderwohl Church.

On April 21, 1904, I was married to C. J. Frey, with whom I had the pleasure to live for ten years and one day. . . .This was a short union, but the most blessed time of all my life. Seven of the ten years we spent on the mission field of Arizona. We were blessed with three sons and one adopted Indian orphan child, when only one month old. This Hopi orphan girl had her home with us for twenty-four years.

In 1907, a well-to-do Christian lady from California, found interest in mission work in Arizona and in connection with this she outlined a mission farm and also a hospital. The call to aid in this great plan was extended to us and we resolved to go and extend a helping hand.

Brother J. B. Epp's wife was sickly and was ordered to find relief. When Mrs. Epp died, we were asked to take over the work, and so in 1912 we were ordained for the mission work at Oraibi, Arizona.

In 1914 my husband was stricken with typhoid, and after twelve days of suffering was taken from me. Then I took my little children and went back to Kansas. Here my mother took me in, and I stayed with my mother for eight years. At this time I joined the Tabor Church.

We have experienced much sickness in our family circle. . . .My mother, loved ones, church, and many friends have aided and helped us much in easing our life's burdens. . .

In 1923 we moved to Hillsboro, Kansas, where the children had better educational advantages. . . . In March 1935 I joined the First Mennonite Church of Hillsboro. In 1938 I moved to my children, Mildor Freys, Newton, Kansas. They took me into their easy home. But in 1940 I moved back again to my children, Amadeus Frey, Hillsboro, Kansas (From here on the children continue.)

Our mother suffered extensively in her later days. This caused her and us to arrange for an operation, which seemed the only way out. . . . The Lord had different plans. She slumbered into eternity, seemingly without pain, on Thursday morning, January 21.

One of her favorite Bible verses we find in Psalm 28:7. . . . Our mother was a praying mother . . . her prayers have guided us through the years. . . . She had a warm heart for the mission cause. . . .

She leaves to mourn three sons, and their wives, and one adopted Hopi Indian daughter and her husband. . . .

Kirby Page to Speak at the Eden Church

Mennonites will have a rare opportunity to hear an outstanding thinker and speaker when Kirby Page speaks in the Eden Church near Moundridge, on Friday evening, February 19, at 8:00 on the theme of "How We Can Follow the Way of the Cross in an Age of Violence." The Peace Committee of the Young People's Union of the Western District Conference made the arrangements for Dr. Page's appearance with the American Friends Service Committee.

Kirby Page is a minister, author, lecturer, and one of America's foremost leaders in pacifist thought. He is an intelligent, devout Christian and is recognized for his superb ability as a thinker and an interpreter of Christianity in relation to life.

Although several years ago many people were critical of Mr. Page because of his forward political philosophy he has become more conservative and emphasizes the Christian approach to our current problems. He is increasingly concerned that we understand the Christian basis for objection to war and peaceful living.

The suggested theme for this discussion centers around the problem of suffering and in particular about the persecution and scorn which conscientious peacemakers meet especially in wartime. Hence, his talk will be right up to the minute for Mennonite youth for many of the adults who have watered down their convictions with compromises. It is expected that the message of this courageous and stimulating Christian will be a real strengthening influence to the Mennonite faith which we are now endeavoring to live.

The Peace Committee is not paying Dr. Page any guarantee. However, an offering will be received of which the first fifty dollars will go to the American Friends Service Committee for their relief work and the expenses incurred in Mr. Page's visit, the second fifty dollars will go to the M.C.C. and any balance remaining will be divided evenly. —Paul Goering

By Wayne Yoder (Part Two)

When they found Ranse Brasen, 'Lige was left out of the greetings as Ranse and Jason, in jubilant obscenity, thumped each other on the back.

"That's putting one over on the Deacon. Haw, haw, haw!" shouted one gleefully as they matched brown bottles in the sunlight. The other yelled, "We're rootin' tootin', sons of curly wolves, and this is our time to howl. Just wait till the rest of the gang get here," and they roared with laughter "We'll shoot all the deer, climb all the mountains, and drink all the liquor in Malheur county. . ."

'Lige shuddered. This was really going to be some hunting trip. Even one day of this would probably result in burned forests, crippled bucks and does. Maybe a man or two would be shot by the wanton carousers, filling up the cup of their careless crime. This would never do. He strode resolutely up to Ranse and Jason who were tipping up their bottles.

"Boys, please don't go ahead and spoil a clean hunting trip this way. You know as well as I do that you're heading up the wrong canyon. There'll be trouble, fellows. Throw that stuff away, please, or give it to me to keep for you. . . ."

Jason's face was sullen, his eyes avoiding 'Lige's, but Ranse laughed scornfully.

"You, preacher, you keep out of this. Go find you some place to worship nature according to the dictates of your own conscience, and let us worship in our way. Haw, haw, haw!" He tipped up the bottle again. "That was a pretty good one, wasn't it? Hooray for nature! Me for the wide open spaces!" Then he raised his rifle and let off shot after shot at a knot on a tree till the magazine was emptied. As the startled echoes died down, he reloaded while singing a song that originally meant something like,

"To the west my way I'll wend,
Where a friend is still a friend," but his parody of the song was a despicable thing to hear.

"Jason," said 'Lige quietly, "Ranse is no true friend of yours. He'll cause you only misery, and in the end he won't stick with you. Let's you and me get away from here and find our own hunting grounds."

Jason made him no answer then, but stubbornly refused to meet 'Lige's eyes or his words till 'Lige continued, "Jason, what would your father say?"

Then Jason exploded.

"Don't you talk to me about my old man," he ripped out. "There's only two things in this world that the Deacon cares about, and I ain't one of them. If he'd ever forget his farm or his church position long enough to go any place with me, things might be different. Every good time I've ever had I've had to sneak away from milking cows or feeding bawling calves and cleaning stables." He broke off as Ranse came closer again. "I ain't going with you, and that's final. I'm going to have MY friends."

It was then that Ranse Brasen noticed the drift of the conversation and at once he was before 'Lige, his bony fist shaking, his breath charged with fumes.

"Listen, preacher, I'm warning you! Either you like our company, or you get yourself out of here. I didn't want Jason to bring you along in the first place, but he said his old man would be more apt to leave us alone if you were along. But no more trying to get Jason to go back on the gang! Understand? And no more preaching! D'ya hear? Or I'll shoot that Testament out of your vest pocket for you."

'Lige, seeking for right words to say, could think only of, "O. K., Ranse; no more preaching," for he knew it was no use. As he strode on down the trail toward Clear Creek Camp he was considering the alternatives left to him. He could give it up and go back alone, leaving Jason with Ranse Brasen and the gang that would soon meet them; or he could go with them quietly, watching his chance to get Jason out of any trouble that might come. The latter, of course, was dangerous, and would become more so the more they drank. It was, however, the only plan he could seriously consider and not call himself a coward. Besides, the Deacon was counting on him.

By that time his stride had brought him to Clear Creek, and there was an hour of daylight left. While Jason and Ranse dawdled at their camp-making, Elijah quietly cleared a space for a fire, fried himself some ham and eggs, and after eating, spread out his sleeping bags on a well cleared carpet of pine needles.

Then he lay down,—but not to sleep; nor to make plans for a successful hunt tomorrow, for the chucklings and swearings and jests of Ranse and Jason around their campfire were in his ears. Covertly he watched their firearms so as to know as far as possible their location and the amount of their ammunition. If only there were some way to do so without violence, the boys should be dispossessed of their arms and their liquor.

When darkness had fallen he arose and stole away into the brush. As he looked upward past the tall waving tops of the firs, he was steadied. Even the incontinent shouts of the other two of the gang, just arrived, failed to startle him. Then he returned to his bed.

As he peered through the darkness he could see the four together, and there was much evidence of bottles. In a little while they'd be badly drunk and more dangerous than ever, he knew, unless he could stop them. Carefully he moved his sleeping bag further away into the trees; then with his rifle under his arm he walked toward the group. They were playing with their guns and taking an occasional shot at a shiny tin can which gleamed from out of the darkness, reflecting the light of the campfire.

"Has anybody hit it yet?" he smilingly greeted them, and in his voice there was something of a challenge.

Ranse, his face flushed, carelessly brandished his rifle as he shouted, "I can hit anything you can!"

So 'Lige knelt where the firelight shone on his gunsights and shot. The tin can jumped a little, punctured by the bullet. Ranse, not to be outdone, levered cartridge after cartridge into his gun as he fired. The others took up the challenge also and riddled the can with holes. When they paused, 'Lige shot again, hitting the can. That set them off again. They chose other targets and dared 'Lige to beat their shots, which he was careful not to do too often. When they had tired of the sport and fell to boasting of their marksmanship, 'Lige smiled and strolled away, partially content, into the darkness. He estimated that they still had half of their ammunition left, but that was far too much. In their condition, one shot, carelessly let off, might cause grief to the whole gang. He had dedicated himself to protect the boys, all of them if he could, but Jason by all means, from disaster from their own folly. Some way he must prevent manslaughter, forest fire, or a prolonged spree of drunken debauchery.

As he walked toward his bed he glanced back at the group around the flickering fire. They were passing the bottles again, evidently comparing their flavors. 'Lige turned and watched them from out there in the darkness, his rifle half raised to firing position, as if trying to decide whether to shoot or not. In the moment that all four bottles were at rest on a windfall log, set there to await the next round of drinks, 'Lige yielded to temptation.

"This is something I never thought I would do," he muttered softly. "God, If this is the wrong method for a preacher to use to save Jason and the rest—please forgive me."

But if God spoke, Elijah did not hear. He raised his rifle and aimed at the glimmer of firelight on the bottles. When the shot came, it momentarily paralyzed the circle around the campfire. Then they raised a howl as they saw the havoc the bullet had done to their drink. One of the bottles, however, had been out of line and had not been hit, and Ranse Brasen stumbled forward toward it, reaching out desperate hands.

When 'Lige's second shot exploded the last bottle, Ranse was still five feet away.

For one moment that group of four around the campfire appeared to be a sober bunch. Jason and one of the others rolled over and quietly lay down beside the fire. 'Lige had an idea that they would be there till morning but Ranse and the other fellow stalked around in the lurid light, brandishing their weapons, and slobbering curses.

"Tomorrow, I'm going to kill 'Lige," declared Ranse over and over again, and the other fellow muttered also, a number of times, "Kill him! Kill him!" before he sank to the ground beside Jason and his buddy, near the fire.

The sleepers stirred a little from time to time, according to their degree of yieldedness to the spirits of alcohol. Presently, Ranse Brasen, too, lay down near the fire in a drunken stupor. His snores soon obliterated the footsteps of 'Lige, who came up and covered the sleepers with their own blankets. 'Lige then made sure the fire was safe and that none of the sleepers was too close to it. Then he gathered up the four rifles of the gang and carried them away with him into the darkness. He placed them where they could be found only in daylight and by sober men.

Then at last he retired to his own bed, to toss fitfully for an hour, before he fell asleep.

WE THANK THEE

"We thank Thee, Lord, for weary days
When desert streams were dry,
And first we knew what depth of need
Thy love could satisfy.

We thank Thee for the rest in Him
The weary only know—
The perfect, wondrous sympathy
We needs must learn below." —Selected

MENNONITE ORIGINS IN EUROPE

(Based on a pamphlet by H. S. Bender)

I. Worship Service: 1. Songs: Luther's Hymn, No. 549, A Mighty Fortress is our God;" No. 546 composed in 1640, "O Holy Spirit Enter In." 2. Reading of Luke 8:16-25; 3. Special music. 4. Offering for relief.

II. Leader's Introduction:

A series of six booklets entitled, "Mennonites and Their Heritage" has been published by the Mennonite Central Committee. They are presented to the men in Mennonite C.P.S. camps and are used for study groups in the camps. They are to serve our C.E. groups, too, this year as a basis for the programs of alternating months. In this way we will share the thought life of our friends in the camps. We, too, need to deepen our convictions and commit ourselves more fully to following Christ in the way of love and peace. These booklets offer convenient study material dealing with the faith, life, work, and history of our church. They will lead to a greater appreciation of the precious heritage that may be ours. They may become a help to a deeper understanding of Christ and His teachings, and lead to greater vision and better service for Him and His Kingdom.

III. For Discussion:

1. What changes took place in the Catholic Church which were not in line with the true faith and worship of God?
2. What were the strong points of the Lutheran movement? The weak ones?
3. Discuss John Calvin and his work.
4. What blessed results did the Reformation have for the progress of the Church of Christ? What weaknesses did it have?

IV. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. The Founding of the Mennonite Church in Switzerland.
2. The Early Leaders of the Swiss Mennonites.
3. The Founding of the Mennonite Church in Holland.
4. The Life of the Early Leaders in Holland.
5. Foundation Stones of Mennonite Faith—(Use your best speaker for this topic, or work out a pageant or dialogue on this chapter.)
6. The Price of Faith: Persecution and Martyrdom.

V. Facts for Study:

Our forefathers aimed to live in accordance with the teachings of Christ. He was their Master. Since He clearly taught newness of living and true holiness in everyday conduct they endeavored to live such a life. If Christ told his followers to love the brethren and to love their enemies, love must be the motive of all their actions and so they refused to go to war. Christ taught them the value and high regard for human life. From Him they learned lessons in sympathy and helpfulness; so they were willing to share their possessions with those in need.

They held that the church was a fellowship of true believers of those who were born of God and led by Christ's spirit. Church membership, based on conversion and the voluntary committment to holy living, was achieved by baptism on confession of faith. This meant adult baptism. Separation from the world followed since there was a radical difference between their way of life and that of those who did not practice Christ's teachings. They naturally did not want the state to dictate to them, and so the separation of church and state was another emphasis of our fathers. Likewise, freedom of conscience was taught by them. No one was to be compelled to accept the faith. Force and coercion were not to be used, for "faith is a free gift of God."

VI. Food for Thought: Our life proves the depth and sincerity of our convictions.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

LET THERE BE LIGHT

I. Worship Service: Songs: (1) "Holy Spirit Light Divine" No. 136; (2) "When we walk with the Lord," No. 286; (3) "I heard the voice of Jesus say," No. 142; (4) "Holy Spirit, Faithful Guide," No. 137. (5) Prayer: Use song 136 as a prayer—read or repeat it slowly. (6) Scripture reading, Psalm 139. (7) Offering.

II. Leader's Introduction:

God's first recorded words in the Bible are "Let there be light." This might serve as the title for our Bible, because this is the subject it treats about in all of its chapters.

We who live in Christian families, communities, and countries have not experienced what it means to live in fear of death and sin a life not worth living. In India life is cheap. The lot of orphans and widows is sad indeed. The little children seldom laugh; the faces of young and old usually look sad or hard and forbidding, never bubbling over with joy and hope and health. There is constant fear of evil spirits. Diseases are believed to be caused by evil spirits, and people burn the skin of patients over the painful area with red hot irons to drive the evil spirits away. Even little babies suffering from indigestion are treated like this, and these burn wounds often become infected. Long journeys are made to loose the load of sin; sacrifices and money offerings are tried without results. The phrase "everybody hunts for salvation" is common. I have heard it almost daily. There are good and bad non-Christians, too, relatively speaking for some have followed the teachings of nature and their own conscience at least in a measure, but all have much to learn at the lesson "to do justly and to love mercy." In court the man who pays most for bribes wins the case.

Yet "the people that walked in the darkness have seen a great light: they that dwell in the land of the shadow of death, upon them hath the light shined." Isa. 9:2. The low-caste Christians who accepted Christ and began to walk in the light have been blessed. Today many non-Christians of all castes acknowledge this and wish to become Christians. The out caste, despised people, have become Christians in large numbers, and today the higher caste people say that they are ahead of them and they too wish to accept Christ and live this new life.

III. Suggested topics for short talks:

1. What do the following scripture passages say about light or walking in the light? Ps. 119; 105; Col. 1:10; Col. 3:16; Rom. 13:13; I John 1:7.
2. Tell the story of "Two Lightbearers." (May be secured from Mrs. A. E. Kreider at North Newton, chairman of literature committee. for a few pennies.)
3. Tell what you know about the necessity of light for plants and animals.

IV. For Discussion:

How can I be a light in my own family school, community, and church? How might I be a damper or hindrance? Try to think of definite things you as intermediates might do to serve as light to others at home, school, neighborhood, and church.

V. Illustration:

A Hindu by the name of Sadhu Sunder Singh accepted Christ. He was persecuted by his relatives and others. They tried to poison him, crush him, drown him, leave him to be devoured by wild beasts; but again and again he was miraculously saved; several times he did not know whether by human beings or by angels. He traveled where preaching was forbidden and made disciples of Christ. When I heard him preach at a conference I thought I saw the light of Jesus Christ reflected in his face. Missionaries said his face reminded them of Jesus Christ more than any face they had seen before. Soon after this he went to Tibet to regions where preaching was forbidden under sentence of death. No one ever heard of him again, he may have been killed, he may have died; many of his friends think the Lord took him away to be with Him like Enoch and Elijah, because he walked in the light.

VI. Food for thought:

Jesus says, "I am the light of the world." Later he says to his followers, "Ye are the light of the world." Many non-Christians in India know very well how a Christian should live; if a Christian succeeds they think our religion is wonderful and very good. Those who are only name-Christians are a stumbling block. What are we lights to help others find the way to heaven or stumbling blocks for others to fall? Can we say to others. "Follow me, as I follow Christ" as Paul did?

WHAT CAN WE DO TO HELP CHINA?

I Thess. 1:2-6

Memory Verse—"Go ye unto all the World, and preach the gospel to every Creature. Mark 16:15. China is a hungry land. The people in China are going through a time of great testing. For many months the Japanese have been waging war upon them. Many people are hungry for food and also for the Bread of Life, the Lord Jesus. The Lord commanded us to give the poor to eat; he himself fed the multitude.

A letter from a missionary in China tells how their church daily fed hundreds of hungry starving people before they were interned. Twice each day, morning and evening, the people formed a double line outside the church, and each person carried an empty bowl. As they passed each was given a scoop of rice.

Who must carry this work on now? The people, native Christians, must do the best they can themselves. They are learning to trust God and depend on him more than ever.

The Chinese people are eager to have Bibles. In every city and town and school, they ask when they will get their supply of Bibles. Let us send money that these Bibles may be supplied. We are told the supply is not nearly great enough for the demand.

Then too, we must send workers. Let us prepare now, so that when the way is open there will be some who are ready to go at once. A missionary from China once wrote, "There is no better way to help China than to invest your money in the lives of Christian workers."

As we send money for food, Bibles, and workers to the Chinese we need to pray. Missionaries tell us that frequently they have felt that someone in the homeland was praying for them. How wonderful is this privilege. God's great blessings have come because of the volume of believing prayers that friends have offered.

The Question Box

(I) What do we mean "By praying without ceasing?" (2) Who is to go out as a missionary? (3) What can you do to help China?

The Prayer List

(a) Strength and faith for the believing Christians in China today. (b) For the wounded soldiers on the battle fields of China. (c) Thank God for those who have answered the call to be his servants in far-off China.

Bishop Grundvig, founder of the famous Danish folk school and folk culture, once said, "The cosmopolitan is like sawdust. But one who roots himself in the life and culture of his town is like the grain of wood."

JESUS RESTORES LAZARUS TO LIFE

John 11:20-29, 32-35, 38-44 Read chap. 11

The account of this outstanding miracle of raising Lazarus from the dead is of absorbing interest. This event is inseparably connected with some of Christ's most profound sayings. This miracle was witnessed by a considerable number of people, (vs. 19), most of whom had not as yet believed on Jesus. Some of them indeed remained hostile to Him after seeing the miracle, the reality of which they could not deny. They reported to the Pharisees what Jesus had done (vs. 46). The end of Christ's life was near at hand, and it was fitting that He should work this miracle of mercy to hearts crushed with grief. It would also strikingly prove that his claims concerning himself were true.

Jesus Delays

When Lazarus fell sick, his sisters sent a message to Jesus (vs. 3), informing Him of his friend's illness. They doubtless presumed that He would come at once. Jesus, however, delayed for two days in the place where He was (vs. 6). This was not caused by any lack of love, (vs. 35). It can not be considered as being a lack of love when God allows us to suffer, or permits affliction and grief to come into our lives, or does not answer our prayers in the way we desire . We do not understand God's purposes. The apparent purpose of Jesus was to bring greater glory to God and to his Son by working this miracle under conditions which could leave no doubt as to its reality.

Jesus Meets Martha and Mary, vss. 20-35

Martha, the more energetic of the sisters, went to meet Jesus when he heard of his coming. She expressed the lament which had been in their thoughts during the past two days, (vss. 21, 32). This reveals the implicit faith of the sisters in Jesus' power. Martha intimates her faith in His power to raise her brother from the dead even now, (vs. 22). God is not limited in his power.

The resurrection of the dead at the last day was commonly taught among the Jews, and Martha fully believed that doctrine. She so understood Jesus' words, (vss. 23, 24). That promise, so distant in fulfillment, did but little to assuage her present grief. Jesus declares that He is the resurrection of the body and the life of the soul. He wants Martha to see that He has the power of resurrection and is the source of all life, so that He can give life to the dead. He who truly believes in Him shall continue forever in fellowship with Christ, (vs. 26).

Mary came very promptly when Martha called her, (vss. 29, 32). Her deep emotions overwhelmed her when she came to Jesus. Her grief was very real and unrestrained. The Greek word for weeping means "wailing," crying aloud. Jesus "groaned, was strongly moved in the spirit." He was moved with deep sympathy for the sisters in their distress. He wept, meaning here that He shed tears. He is moved by our sorrows and struggles.

Jesus' Mastery Over Death, vss. 38-44

Jesus asked that the stone be taken away from the entrance into the grave. He could have done this by a mere word, but He has always called upon men to do what they could do. Beyond their ability to do, He uses his divine power. The Jews believed that the spirit of the dead kept vigil by the tomb for three days, but flew away on the fourth day. Martha's faith could not believe that Jesus would actually raise Lazarus after he had been dead for so long a time. Jesus stood by the open tomb and thanked God the Father for hearing and answering him. He attempted no task without prayer. Jesus too wanted the Jews who were standing by to be convinced fully that He had been sent by the Father, (vs. 42). Jesus called Lazarus with a voice of authority so that all should hear and see. All were amazed as he came forth bound with graveclothes. Jesus clearly demonstrated his mastery over physical death. He has authority to speak to us about the world to come. Christ can call the sinner from the dark grave of sin.

How can we best help one who is in sorrow?

How does God compensate us for our losses?

How may tears afford relief?

THINKING JESUS

An Indian, in his preparation for the Sunday services, said he made his body very clean from head to foot, and then, instead of laughing and chatting idly with his friends—to use his own words, —"I sit down and think Jesus until it is time to go." How many of us "think Jesus" just before church time? —Exchange

HOME MISSION BOARD TO MEET

The annual meeting of the Home Mission Board will be held in the First Mennonite Church, 73rd and Laflin Street, Chicago, Illinois, on Tuesday morning, February 23.

Many problems are before the board. New stations need to be considered and workers located. Other phases of church extension work need also to be considered.

Will you pray that the Lord may guide us to conclusions which are in harmony with His plan.

—A. J. Neuenschwander, Sec.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—One of our conference churches has allotted in its 1943 budget the sums of $50.00 for the Publication Committee of the General Conference and $20.00 for the Education Committee of the General Conference. If every church made such provisions, then these boards would be able to do some very necessary work that now is left undone.

—The annual report of the Lehigh Mennonite Church, Lehigh, Kansas, lists an "Improvement Sinking Fund Report." By this means money is laid aside for improvements in the meeting house. This church does not center its giving upon a few causes, but it gives to practically, if not all, phases of district and General Conference work. A schedule of offerings for 1943 is also given. The name "Stubby"—given fifteen times—appears most often in the membership list.

—The annual report of the Zion Mennonite Church, Elbing, Kansas, reveals that this congregation of 115 members contributed $908.77 to the C.P.S. cause in 1942. Forty-eight certifcates were issued. This church has correspondents for both of our church papers and also has used the 100 per cent subscription plan. An interesting feature of this report that is not found in many reports is the listing of receipts from all members who gave for church purposes. Brother H. J. Dyck is the pastor of this church. The name "Regier" appears most often in the membership list.

—The First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, puts its annual report on legal size paper. In 1942 Arthur Wenger, who now serves in Shafter, California, was ordained to the ministry in this church. Rev. and Mrs. Egar Toevs transferred their letter to a Presbyterian Church at Aberdeen where they now serve. Forty-five young people went to the retreat, where Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger taught. Eight silver wedding anniversaries took place in this church of 375 members. Ellen Mae Wedel and Ruth Wenger are attending Bethel College, while Lois Wenger is at the Bethel Hospital, Newton, Kansas. Ten members are in the teaching profession, and one is a nurse. The church has correspondents to the Bundesbote and The Mennonite. A member gave twelve fire extinguishers for the meeting house and four for the parsonage. A calendar of offerings for 1943 is also given. Philip A.

Wedel is pastor.

—The reports of the annual business meeting of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, informs of the following: The church provided secretarial help for the pastor. An invitation has been extended to Missionary P. A. Penners to serve the First and Second churches during Passion Week this year. During the past year the 100 per cent church paper plan was put into operation. About twenty-five members have completed the Red Cross First Aid Course. Others are now taking a similar course in home nursing. The church has a four-page bulletin which relieves a shortage of space for announcements. A total of 119 certificates was issued for peace or relief work. A very interesting and clarifying financial summary is given. It shows the total amounts given by the church for various purposes (seventeen listed) during the last three years. Then it also gives for each one of those purposes (for each of the three years) the percentage that it was of the grand total given by the church in that year. In 1942 the largest percentage (19.1 per cent) of the total given went for C.P.S. work. The church has decided to install ear phones and to provide a practical system for parking. It was moved, "That we retain an assessment of $7.00 per male member and 11 cents per acre and continue the free-will offerings."

—From the year book of the Bethel Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas: C. E. Krehbiel is chairman of church meetings. Many of the college faculty and staff are Sunday school teachers, etc. The church has a welcoming committee which seeks to give a feeling of "at-homeness" to those who attend. Adolf Friesen is Sunday school superintendent. The name "Unruh"—given seventeen times—appears most often on the membership list. In the past year the congregation lost the following members by death: H. P. Peters, E. L. Harshbarger, and Elizabeth Voran. The book contains a calendar of Sunday morning offerings and also a budget estimate for the year.

—First Mennonite Church, Halstead, Kansas: The annual school of leadership education sponsored by the ministerial association was held the first three weeks in January. This year it was entirely under local leadership due to restrictions in travel. The school is rotated among the churches, and this year it was held in our meeting house. The Student Volunteer Band of Bethel College visited us on January 24, and Wilhelmina Kuyf spoke to us on February 3.

—Bluffton College: The Gospel Team, of which Herbert Fretz is president, recently visited churches in Indiana. Forty-one students have registered for the Red Cross first aid course. Arthur E. Morgan, former chairman of the T.V.A., spoke at the college vesper service on February 14.

—Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri: During the latter part of January our pastor, Leonard Metzker, spent several days in the C.P.S. camp at Hill City, South Dakota. Three of our boys are there at present. He spoke to the boys in camp three different times. He, as well as the boys, enjoyed the visit. So far eleven boys from this church have been drafted. Eight of these are in C.P.S. camps or on detached C.P.S. work. On January 31 we very much enjoyed the messages of Wilhelmina Kuyf. We refuse to think that one who is prepared to do such a blessed work should not be permitted to return to her field, which for the present is closed. On Sunday, February 7, Nellie Parsons, past state president of the Missouri Christian Endeavor Union, spoke to the C.E. society of the church. — Corr.

—On February 28, J. Winfield Fretz will start a series of meetings at the Grace Mennonite Church, Enid, Oklahoma. Other surrounding churches will be invited to participate in the meetings.

—Erland Waltner, pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently conducted evangelistic services for the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. During that time he also spoke at chapel services in Bethel College. He besought the students to study the scriptures.

The young men at the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C. P. S. camp are studying a unit on home and family life. Another one of our camps offers Spanish and German.

—The Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, has begun to issue a church bulletin. The pastor is kind enough to supply the editor with copies of it. Dear pastor, if you use a weekly church bulletin but do not send it regularly to the editor, will you not be so kind as to put the editor on a regular mailing list.

—Esther Funk from Goessel, Kansas, writes that they want to use one of the booklets from the "Mennonites and Their Heritage" series for their C. E. programs.

—All subscription orders and orders for renewals of The Mennonite should be sent to Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, and not to the editor.

—A four-drawer steel filing cabinet stands in the Historical Library of the General Conference at North Newton, Kansas. One of these drawers is pressed full with folders, some of them fat with material and some of them very lean from lack of material. When the editor is through using the various years books and annual church reports these are filed away in the folders of the respective churches in this filing cabinet drawer. Here we hope to keep historical material on our churches that will still be there when a great deal of it will have been lost to the churches themselves. Historical material about your church belongs in this drawer. Church histories, constitutions, year books, etc., are what the librarian wants.

—Even though the American Civil Liberties Union may resort to court procedures in contrast to our historical Mennonite abhorrence of such, it is interesting to note that this organization is one that seeks: "Protection of the rights of conscientious objectors against military training and service" and the "Defense of religious liberty, maintaining separation of church and state, especially in public education; opposition to all forms of compulsion on religious conscience, including flag-saluting in the schools contrary to conscience."

—Pictures of C.P.S. camps and their activities—yes, there ought to be a few of them around somewhere. Those who have good pictures could be of great service to the Historical Library of the General Conference, if they would send such pictures to it. In later years these will be exceedingly valuable. Send them to Historical Library of the General Conference, North Newton, Kansas. Newspaper articles on Mennonite C.O.'s are also very welcome.

—"It is highly important that all Selective Service registrants carry with them at all times their registration cards and notice of classification (Form 57). After February 1, civilians are liable to be stopped on the street and asked to produce such identification, the government warns, and stiff penalties are provided for delinquency."—The Reporter

—A religious magazine read by many ministers in the United States recently stated that there were less accidents to the patients in a certain mental hospital since C. O.'s started caring for them.

—The young people of the Northern District are putting out a young people's paper. The editor of The Mennonite hopes that he will be put on the mailing list of this paper. Hermie Preheim of Freeman, South Dakota, is the editor of this new district paper.

—Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Wiens of Deer Park, Washington, have moved to Lynden, Washington, about twelve miles from Bellingham where they have a chicken farm. The church at Deer Park is being served by Rev. Harley King and Rev. P. D. Unruh, each once a month.

—Elder David Toews is convalescing satisfactorily according to a report in Die Mennonitische Rundschau of February 3. The first few days after his second operation were hard. Now he feels much better, although he is still weak and tired. The pathologist ascertained that Brother Toews did not have cancer. Undoubtedly, the dear brother will have to remain at the hospital for a number of weeks.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa: There is talk of enlarging the church building in the not too distant future. The church has received a gift of $100.00 from the estate of the late Miss Hulda Leisey. William Hurd Griswold has given the Primary department a piano.

—Bulletin, Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: Hugo Mierau has enrolled at the Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut. During January 1,232 pounds of used and new clothing and shoes were gathered and sent to Akron, Pa., for relief. The freight amounted to $37.31. The church is investigating the matter of a loud-speaking system. So far all of the eighteen and nineteen year-old boys have received the II-C classification.

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Dr. D. V. Wiebe, who left the United States last year to work for the Friends Service Committee in foreign lands as a doctor, has had many interesting experiences in his stops in South Africa and Egypt. His brief contact with Palestine meant much to him. William Dyck of this church recently picked up a short wave radio message from Tokio which gave a report of 225 Americans interned by the Japanese at Peiping, China. It stated that they had their freedom in the city; that they had their own schools for their children, and good medical care. Amongst numerous denominations it mentioned the missionaries of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America. During his special meetings Brother Homer Leisy spoke on "Consistent Christian Behaviour. . . ." in relation to Christ, God's Word, sharing, nation, home, fellow man, "One Thing," and the blessed hope. He gave illustrated talks at the beginning of each evening meeting.

—First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: Mr. and Mrs. Harold Coon, returned missionaries from Africa talked and showed pictures on their recent visit.

Sitting in Front

Somehow in most churches the front pews are not as readily occupied as are the back pews. Since most pulpits are not fixed with rollers and a track to roll on, the pastor rather often stands somewhat far removed from those he seeks to reach with the Word of God.

In contrast to this are the seating customs at football, baseball, and basketball games and prize-fights. There the front seats are highly prized and priced. The front seats are desired in order that just as much of the performance as possible can be taken in. There is somewhat more occasion for getting hurt at such performances than when sitting close to a minister, yet the front seats are considered the choice ones.

When a young man calls upon the maiden of his choice he usually does not practice the seating custom of most church goers. When visiters seat themselves around the dining table they do not seek to stay as far as possible from the host and hostess.

Why then do people tend to sit in the back pews? There are various reasons, a few of them justifiable but most of them not. For example, someone may say, "I don't like to go to the front and be conspicuous." That sounds humble when one thinks of the person who does go to the front to be conspicuous. But is it? He who does not want to be conspicuous is still concerned with himself after all.

Should not that which the minister has to present be of such compelling attraction that the hearers will involuntarily choose the seats nearest to the source of so great blessing? Furthermore, sitting in front is an unspoken but acted out declaration of affection for the minister and it tends to encourage, strengthen, and inspire him. In addition one might mention such lesser benefits as room in the regular back seats for mother with children and for late-comers.

Let us be so zealous about the things of God that we will come to enjoy the front seats. Remembering the second mile, let us go the second thirty steps with joy. —rw.

A Front Pew

"If at the kirk ye sit a wee
Nearer the front 'twill kindle ye
To sing and pray and care will flee,
And worship will mean more to ye;
If empty pews there needs must be,
Let them grow chill in back of ye,
For warmest song and homilie
O'er them can't touch the heart of ye;
An' when each one a front pew shares.
The back may fill up unawares."

"The world needs a reliable version of the gospel in terms of human living."

Rug Making In C.P.S. Camps

By Vernon S. Rocke

Rug making is not a lost art. When the Civilian Public Service Camps were opened none of the boys had made any rugs which are known as "warp rugs." In 1942 several men imprisoned for their failure to register for the draft were paroled to the Colorado Springs camp. They brought with them the art of rug making. From this Colorado camp the art has spread to most of the Civilian Public Service camps throughout the country.

I made a little survey at the Weeping Water camp to determine the extent of the rug making industry in that one camp. The average number of campees in camp was approximately 150. During the seven months from May 15 to December 15 more than 410 rugs were made. One hundred and two men made one or more rugs. Some boys made as many as fifteen.

It requires approximately two and one-half rolls of warp to make a rug four feet by three feet in dimensions. More than one thousand rolls of warp have been used in the Weeping Water camp alone. The warp runs around forty cents for eight hundred yard roll. At forty cents a roll the cost of the warp used would be approximately $400.

If one were permitted to spend all his time making a rug four feet by three feet it would take at least twenty-four hours. The men work at these rugs during off hours, and since the number of educational activities are numerous in most camps it is nothing unusual for a boy to spend a month on his rug before finishing.

Many rugs were given by the boys as Christmas gifts.

Present Conditions in India

By H. E. Dester

Yesterday (July 15, 1943) I came to Champa to help out in the medical work. The doctor who was employed about three months ago is leaving. We again expect to get Dr. John who resigned shortly before Baumans left.

Several days ago we received a letter again from our consulate. This is causing others to consider seriously the immediate future.

The distress of our people is great because of abnormally high prices, famine, and war. Hungry people come to us day and night. In Phuljarh the distress is even greater because there is a much larger percentage of Christians who have no income from mission sources. We are having good rains. The people are hopeful for better crops this year.

The Duerksens are thinking very seriously of Mrs. Duerksen and the children going home. We are considering giving more responsibility and property to the Indian Christian Chruch, but one difficulty is that this body is not fully organized and registered.

Our work continues much as usual. The Lord only knows how long it shall be thus. Aside from high prices and restrictions of some articles, there is not so much change in our work and living. May the Lord not leave man to his own destruction much longer.

"These People Are Rogues, and Must Be Treated in a Roguish Way"

Thus runs the pronouncement of a government official whose work with village people I had a chance to observe for an hour, yesterday. I was called to a court case to identify some property which was stolen from the mission smithy shop some time ago. Two Indian officials, one a Mohammedan and one a Hindu, held court for some days in our area. Before the case came up in which I was to witness, I sat in the courtroom and listened in. Several small cases came up during the hour I sat there. On the least provocation the officials unloaded profanity on the village people. People came in folding their hands and spoke with trembling voices. Yet the officials "scorched" them. Finally I said laughingly, because the officials were quite friendly with me: "You surely handle these folks without gloves." Upon this remark the Mohammedan official said, "These people are rogues and must be handled in a roguish way. We are now very soft with them because you are here, otherwise we land much harder on them." A feeling of sympathy and pity came over me. Here I was, unconsciously serving as a constraining force in the relationship between officialdom and the ordinary citizen of village India. I thought people were treated brutishly, and here I was told that because of my presence they were treated rather softly. Then I let my thoughts go on to some conclusions: How can the riches of grace and love be understood by people who are treated "roguishly" and who are constantly looked upon as rogues and who think themselves rogues? Out of such our Christian brethren come, and it is painfully true that very many of our immature Christians identify grace and love with weakness.

Jesus came to demonstrate God's love and grace, and many in Palestine scoffed at Him. We are here in India, not merely to tell of God's grace and love, but to demonstrate it too, at least, in a small way. We too are scoffed at and counted "soft" by many people, including some Christians. This is sometimes a bit discouraging; yet in the long run history and God himself teach us that love and grace are more powerful than brutishness.

TWO COMMANDS

Stone upon stone rear we churches today;
Finer and fairer than ever are they.
"How do we honor Him!" proudly we say—
But Christ said, "Go ye!"

Deep-toned the organs we place in each shrine,
Well-trained the singers that chant praise divine,
Woods carved and costly, rare metals that shine;
Still, Christ said, "Go ye!"

Then, on our way to our temples so fair,
(Ah me, the ecstasy, worshipping there!)
Pass we earth's lowly ones, burdened with care—
And Christ said, "Go ye!"

Over and over is God's Holy Word
Preached unto those who already have heard,
Ears long grown calloused, and hearts feebly stirred;
And He said, "Go ye!"

Out in our mission fields, far, far away,
Labor our workers; how patient are they,
Bearing the burden and heat of the day,
For Christ said, "Go ye!"

Shall we not ask ourselves earnestly, How
When we shall stand in that ominous now,
Will Christ, approving, say, "Come, enter thou"?
Or will He say:
"Go ye!"

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

COUNTRY DOCTORS

A few years ago a Kansas small town doctor became famous for writing his experiences and observations in a book which the publisher chose to title The Horse and Buggy Doctor. This reminds us that the country doctor once played an important part in the life of every rural community. He with the pastor was one of the two leading men in the community.

Where Is He Today?

But what has happened to the country doctor in the life of the modern rural community? Statistical evidence shows very clearly that the supply of country doctors is steadily diminishing. It has been for the past thirty-five years. Yet the total number of doctors is increasing. Every medical school in the country annually turns away hundreds of young men seeking admission. A look at the graduate list of our colleges indicates that Mennonite men are among those entering medical schools in increasing numbers. What happens to the graduates of medical schools? Where do they go? Where do our young doctors go? It is evident that they do not return to their own or other rural communities. They tend to remain in the cities. They are needed there, but they are no less needed in the thousands of rural communities that have no medical care. The proportion of doctors to total population is greater in the cities than in the country, and the disparity is contiunally growing.

Is There No Need?

Lest we think there is less need in rural areas than in the cities it need only be said that in a study of a half million children both rural and urban it was found that by comparison rural children suffered more from heart disease, lung defects, anemia, curvature, ear defects, enlarged glands, malnutrition, eye defects, adenoids, tonsil and teeth defects than did urban children. Rural children do not have the clinical and preventative treatment and services provided for most city children today. It is estimated that 50,000 babies, stillborn each year, could be born alive; thousands of mothers could be saved, and half of the 70,000 babies who die during the first month of life could be saved if adequate medical protection were provided. In addition is the high cost of medical services to many rural communities. Often it costs rural people from $10 to $15 for every medical call to the home. There is a crying need for country doctors today.

What It Takes

The thing that it takes to bring our medically trained young men back to our home communities is a little vision, intelligent leadership, and community support on our part. A medical school training is expensive. No less than $5,000 to $10,000 is needed to go through medical school and establish oneself in practice. This has to be repaid, and many young men feel the city offers greater opportunity to repay these obligations. To bring our own young men back to serve us we need to show them that there is a need for them and that we are willing to help them meet their problems. A small building equipped with only the most essential medical supplies would be a great inducement to most of our young men. They would feel that the community was interested in them and willing to support them in a way that they could render service that would approximate that which they could render in the cities. We help establish our medical missionaries, why not our home doctors?

Religion and Health

Looking upon the problem of health in this way would again put the doctor in a position of rendering a professional Christian service rather than operating a profit business as so many doctors now do. The doctor and the minister should work hand in hand because health is something that is both physical and spiritual. Sometimes the minister needs to show the patient a cure for his soul before the work of the doctor can be effective. We need country doctors. Let us find ways of bringing them to communities in need.

WESTERN DISTRICT MINISTERS' CONFERENCE

will this year again be held in connection with the Bethel College Bible Week. The program of the first day will be of special interest to church officers and Sunday school leaders. To listen in on that hour of testimony will in itself be a great experience. We invite church officers and Sunday school leaders to attend this conference.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Albert Schultz has been pastor of the Butterfield Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota, since 1939. From 1935 to 1938 he served the Bethel Mennonite Church, Wolf Ponit, Montana. He is a graduate of Northwestern Bible School, Minneapolis, Minnesota.

Forrest Musser, who is contributing the daily devotional messages for March, is the pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, which he has served since 1941. Previous to this he served as Assistant Pastor of the Hadlyme Congregational Church, Connecticut, from 1929-1931; as Pastor, Winchester Congregational Church, Connecticut, from 1931-1938; and as Pastor, Portland Congregational Church, Connecticut, 1838-1941. His college he took one year at Wooster and three years at Blufton. Next he attended Hartford Theological Seminary for four years and secured his B.D. and S.T.M. degrees.

An Energetic Youth: How Are We to Direct It?

By J. C. Kaufman

A Great Need

The greatest need to guide our energetic youth is to fully understand them. We must be able to follow their line of thinking; we must make their problems our own. We must win their confidence. We must be their companions in whom they can confide. And by all means we should take their problems seriously. Young people will gladly confide their problems in persons who take an interest in them. They long to have someone to go to with their problems. We older people must show ourselves worthy of such confidence. Many a young life has been wrecked because the one in whom confidence was placed proved himself unworthy of such confidence. Never, never ridicule the problem of a young person; take them seriously and you will be able to direct them. We are living in a day in which I believe the gulf between mature minds and young minds is fixed deeper than ever. And the burden of bridging this gulf rests upon those of mature minds. We must take an interest in their recreation, their amusements. Personally, I enjoy playing most any innocent game with young people when opportunity affords. Thus we will be able to direct them in wholesome recreation.

The True Foundation

Furthermore young people who are to be directed effectively must have a good foundation. Young people as well as older people are building character, building for eternity, and the older people are the ones to lay the foundation. Some will say give them a good education as a foundation. I beg to differ on this. First comes the foundation and then the education, and if the education is in disharmony with the foundation, the results may be disastrous. The foundation should be laid when very young and this must be laid in the home at the mother's knee, if we shall be successful in the guidance of our energetic youth. Most of us who had saintly and Godfearing parents will agree with me that the first religious impressions of childhood remain with us through life. Therefore the guidance of our energetic youth should begin at the family altar, or rather while kneeling at mother's knee. Sanctified homes and sanctified parents are the great essential in directing our energetic youth.

The foundation our young people need before they really start building for life is the foundation which is laid, which is Jesus Christ according to the teaching of the Holy Spirit by St. Paul. They must be brought to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ. I mean a saving knowledge. There is a world of difference between a saving and a historic knowledge. So often we find young people who are acquainted with only the historic and not the saving knowledge of Christ. Bring them into contact with the regenerating power of God. To accomplish this they must be instructed in the living, not only the historic truths of God. This can only be done by instructors who themselves know that they have experienced the regenerative power of God in their own hearts.

In all the chaos of the present age an old saint of God said, "There are only two things that matter." 1. Does God speak? 2. And if He speaks what does He say? Take this to heart and meditate on it, it is worthy of our meditation.

To the Mourner's Bench

Bring our youth to the point where they are convinced that God speaks, and then let them listen to what God says. To gain this end we must have a revival, a real heaven-born revival by the Holy Spirit of God. And I am convinced that the most effective revival for our youth would be one in which some of us older would come to the mourner's bench and get right with God, and be freed from some of the shackles of denominationalism and even Mennonitism (all that which has crept in and does not edify, yes.) which are, mildly said, threatening our spiritual life. O, for a revival and a return to the old faith even if it should be somewhat emotional. The emotional side of man too is a creative act of God and should not be neglected, especially with the youth. If we do not give them something to feed this part of man, they will seek satisfaction elsewhere. In sensational religious meeting, etc. This also should be seriously considered in directing our youth. Do you know why so many of our young people flock to questionable amusements, such as movies, dances, card playing, etc. If you ask such a one he or she will answer you, because we get a kick out of it. And the older people who frequent such places must confess this too. What is this kick? You do not have to study psychology to know that it is the the gratification of the emotional side of man.

The Living Bread of God

O, why let our youth feed on the husks of the swine of this world? Why not feed them with the deeper truths of God? Why are we so neglectful of our duty, why not feed them on the living bread of God instead of denominationalism, or some form of antichristian social programs; or even Mennonitism (true Mennonitism is good, but not all is Mennonitism that claims to be.) These things will not save. Let me assure you if we bring them to a saving knowledge of Jesus Christ we have made a long stride in directing our youth in the right way.

What God Actually Says

And then after they have found out that God really speaks, then lead them to the second thing that matters and teach them what God actually says. Instruct them in the Word of God. This can be done in the home, the Sunday School, and the church. I am instructing a class of young people in my church the year around in the deeper spiritual truths of God and as an outline or textbook I use our catechism because upon personal investigation I have found that the teaching of our fathers was based squarely on the Word of God. I can assure you that I am not a Mennonite because my father was an elder in a Mennonite church. Maybe it will shock you but I do not teach Mennonitism neither pacifism in the present day meaning of the word, but the doctrine of non-resistance based on the doctrine of seperation, which doctrine was so dear and so precious to our fathers but lies to a great extent dormant in our day We seemingly rather teach affiliation and cooperation with all kinds of questionable movements and enterprises.

But not only is the home, the Sunday School and the church a factor in directing our youth but also the school. And if the school shall direct our youth effectively in "What God has to say," the school must stand firmly and unitedly on the Word of God. For instance, if one teacher teaches the doctrines of the Bible literal and the other figurative, or if one teaches that our Lord was conceived by the Holy Spirit and the other that he was conceived by Joseph. If one teaches that the Bible in its original language is the inerrant Word of God and if the other teaches that the Bible only contains the Word of God. If one teaches that the Bible is God's revelation unto man and the other teaches that the Bible is the fragmentary discovery of the human mind of God. How in all the world do you expect that our youth shall find the right way of teaching and be directed in the right path?

A Need For Soul Travail

All this is a proof to me that we need a real heaven-born revival, that we need to get back to God and the Bible, so that we may hear God speak and listen to what he says. It sometimes appears that there is seemingly so little interest taken in the salvation of the lost. I hear so much about loftly social enterprises but all this on the expense of the salvation of souls. Our need today for the direction of our youth is not social programs for the uplift of the economic and political conditions of the world in general; our need today is not more cooperation in financial support for expansion of our churches and schools. What we need today to save our youth is soul travail. Without soul travail none will be born again. We may grow numerically, we may grow economically, it matters not. The need of our youth cannot be supplied with this. We need the life which Christ gives in the hearts of our youth. And only in so far as we will be able to direct our youth to the real source, the spring of life, only in so far will we be able to direct them successfully for time and eternity.

O, that we could be united on the Word of God and stand positive for the sake of the oncoming generations.

IMPRESSIONS OF O.B.A.

It was my privilege to spend a full week at the Oklahoma Bible Academy and another week at Inola with the Brethren Mouttet and Regier. The blessings have been many in giving out the powerful Word. It has not lost its power; it is even as Paul described it in the sixteenth verse of Romans 1. "It is the power of God."

A school is composed of a faculty and a student body. All impressions must be gathered from both of these bodies. The faculty impressed me as loving the Lord and the Bible. They have a ringing testimony to the saving power of the Lord Jesus. They have firm convictions concerning the Bible. The one thing that arrested my attention was that some of the teachers have a deep concern for the salvation of the men and women in the school who are not saved. They pray for them and talk to them about their lost condition.

The student body is being trained to serve the Lord. A group goes to a state orphanage to tell the children about Christ who can save them. On Friday afternoons students with material for object lessons and flannel-graphs hurry into cars which have been lined up. After inquiring about the hurry and bustle, I learned that the students go out to seven rural schools to teach the children about the saving power of the Lord Jesus. The student's liveliness was proof of their interest in this work.

The chapel periods were an inspiration to me. While I was there visitors spoke. Normally, the teachers read a passage of Scripture,, comment upon it, and pray. One of the chapel periods revealed the atmosphere of the school, when students testified to the saving power of the Lord Jesus and of their desire to serve Him.

With a school board that is spiritual, a board president who has missionary vision and evangelical fervor, a school president who is Biblically sound, aggressive, spiritual, and who has a passion for the lost and a good understanding of the Bible with a positive tone in all of his teaching, God will bless this school with both men and money. The Lord never fails when we are true to Him. Parents, you can send your children to O.B.A., and they will learn to love the Lord and the Word.

New York Fellowship Is Active

The first meeting of the New York Mennonite Fellowship was held at Biblical Seminary, 233 E. 49th Street, New York, on Wednesday evening, February 3, with twenty-one people present. We were very happy to have four of the Mennonite groups represented: General Conference, Mennonite, Mennonite Brethren in Christ, and the Defenseless Mennonite. We also discovered that we had representatives from four of the five district conferences of the General Conference: Eastern, Middle, Western, and Northern. The group also included graduates from Bluffton, Bethel, and Goshen colleges.

The meeting was opened with a brief devotional service in charge of Jacob Enz, a middler at Biblical Seminary. Paul Shelly, a graduate student at Union Theological Seminary and Teachers College, Columbia University, told of the steps that led to the formation of the group and also spoke of the purpose of the Fellowship. He mentioned the Mennonite group that he belonged to while he was a student at Hartford Seminary. He also spoke of the group in Chicago and mentioned the fact that it met a real need in the lives of students and others in that area. He said that late this past fall he had met with a few of the Mennonite students at Biblical Seminary and at that time made plans for the first meeting. He said that he felt that Mennonites had a distinct spiritual heritage that was worthy of being preserved and that such a group would make a definite contribution to the people in this area.

After this we had the most interesting part of the informal Fellowship meeting. Each person introduced himself, giving a brief autobiography, including information concerning his home community, home church, college, his present work, and his future plans if he was a student. Each person also told of his present church connections and also gave his opinion on the problem of whether the Mennonites had a distinctiveness that was worth preserving.

We were very fortunate in having as our guest Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church, Schwenksville, Pennsylvania. Brother Swartz is chairman of committees in both the Eastern District Conference and the General Conference and is also a member of the Board of Trustees of Bluffton College, Bluffton, Ohio. Thus, his presence made the group feel a sense of relationship to our larger Mennonite Fellowship. Brother Swartz spoke briefly about the Mennonite groups in Pennsylvania. He spoke of the Mennonite heritage, saying that it is more than a tradition, more than a name, that it is something vital within the individual and the group. He mentioned that the Mennonites have always stressed the fact that the Bible is to be lived in the daily lives of people.

Plans were made for future meetings of the group on the first Wednesday of each month at Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th Street, New York, at 7:45 p.m. The topic for discussion on March 3 will be "Pacifism among the Mennonites." At the conclusion of this article I have included the names and addresses of the people who attended this initial meeting of the New York Mennonite Fellowship. I have also given the home church of those where I have the material available. We will appreciate the names and addresses of any Mennonite who lives in the New York area. If any one knows of any Mennonites who should be informed of our Fellowship kindly communicate with the Executive Secretary, Gerald Stucky, 235 E. 49th. Street, New York City, New York.

It may be interesting to note that four of the people who attended the first meeting of the New York Fellowship are at present at Biblical Seminary, preparing for Christian service. Two are doing graduate work, preparing for God's work. Two are General Conference missionaries, who are at present enrolled at Biblical Seminary. One is a missionary in the Mennonite Conference and one is a city missionary in a rescue center in Brooklyn. Two are former missionaries.

The following is a list of those who were present: Mr. and Mrs. Hans Bartsch, 562 W. 193rd. Street, First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas; Mr. Willard Derksen, 27 E. 35th. Street, Bayonne, N.Y., Mountain Lake, Minnesota; Mr. and Mrs. Addison Eastman, 7505 35th. Ave., Jackson Heights, student Biblical Seminary, Mennonite Brethren in Christ, Detroit; Mr. Jacob Enz, 235 E. 49th. Street, Student, Biblical Seminary, First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas; Miss Aganetha Fast, 235 E. 49th. Street, Foreign Missionary, China, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; Miss Elizabeth Foth, 415 E. 3rd. Street, Brooklyn, City Missionary, Oklahoma; Miss Clara L. Kuehny, 314 E. 15th. Street, New York, Foreign Missions, Halstead, Kansas; Miss Marie Hodges, 235 E. 49th. Street, Student, Biblical Seminary, Baptist, Hamilton, Ohio; Mr. Howard M. Lichti, 440 Morningside Road, Ridgewood, N.J., Former Missionary, Berne, Indianna; Corporal Gerald W. Leh, Co. A., Metro Technical School, 673 Broadway, Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania; Mrs. Quiring, 537 W. 121st. Street, wife of the late Professor Quiring; Mr. Milo A. Rediger, 418 E. 136th. Street, Professor and Graduate Student, New York University, Fort Wayne, Indiana, Defenseless Mennonite; Miss Augusta Schmidt, 235 E. 49th. Street, Missionary, India; Rev. Paul R. Shelly, 600 W. 122nd. Street, Graduate Student, Union Theological Seminary and Teachers College, Columbia University, Hereford Mennonite Church, Bally, Pennsylvania; Mr. and Mrs. S. J. Smucker, 79 Western Ave., Morristown, New Jersey, Mennonite Church; Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, Norristown, Pennsylvania, pastor,

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio

MARCH 1—"And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain . . . and taught them." Matt. 5:1,2.

It was Jesus' compassion for the multitudes that prompted many of His teachings and parables. "Seeing the multitudes . . . he taught them." The "Red Lettered" words of Jesus are timeless—just as appropriate for the multitudes as they were the day they were uttered. When he opened His mouth every word had divine and eternal significance. We are a part of the multitudes who go up the mountain to hear His words of Life.

MARCH 2—"Blessed." Matt. 5:3.

The very first word strikes a deep responsive chord for the multitudes. So much meaning is crowded in this one word that we need to pause in our meditation and prayer to discover its depths. We usually think that Jesus meant, "Happy is the one who," but there is more than mere happiness in the beatitudes. While the word "Blessed" does undoubtedly contain this quality of Christian joy, like most of Jesus words, there is a deeper current beneath the moving waters of the surface. By prayerful thought we would come to understand that the Master was speaking not only of those things which give us joy, but also of being holy, reverent, overflowing with joyful service, and being spiritually whole.

MARCH 3—"Blessed are the poor in spirit for to them belongs the kingdom of Heaven." (Weymouth) Matt. 5:3.

The Gospel of Luke records these words simply, "Blessed are the poor." Luke 6:20. Who are the poor? Did Jesus have in mind those who had not allowed the cares of riches and possessions to harden their lives without any sense of Christian stewardship? He often refers to the dangers of riches in crowding out spiritual things. Surely, he must have thought of the rare quality of humility which keeps man's mind and spirit always open to further teaching and understanding about His Kingdom. In fact, it is as He says, the Kingdom belongs to those who remain learners or have the quality of teachableness. Let us pray for such a spirit as we approach the Christ.

MARCH 4—"Blessed are they that mourn."

The shortest verse in the Bible, "Jesus wept," John 11:35, is in some ways the most meaningful. Jesus had an infinite capacity to sympathize with the multitudes. Those who are able to mourn are spiritually whole. The most miserable people in the world are those who have become bitter and have lost the ability to sympathize. Are we still moved by the vast suffering in the war torn countries of Europe? Does the starvation, broken homes, tragedy, and death following the path of war still touch us deeply? If so, we are spiritually well. Once we turn a cold shoulder to "the least of these" we are spiritually sick and in need if the healing touch of the great Physician.

MARCH 5—"Blessed are the meek."

In what way did Jesus mean that the meek shall inherit the earth—in this life or in the life to come—materially or spiritually? Does the meek man always achieve outstanding success in the material world? Does His happiness and well-being rest in these successes? Humility and meekness are essential for success in all lines of human endeavor. Another thought must not be covered by this—it is the meek spirit that becomes conscious of the need for God and the reality of being one of God's children. In this sense, as a child of God, he does inherit all of God's world, His Kingdom. What he inherits in this life is but the foretaste of what he beholds in the life to come.

MARCH 6—"Blessed are they who hunger and thirst."

In this day when the hungry wolf waits on so many door steps and in many homes, the wolf is already inside the room, would we say that "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst"? It is true that we only can enjoy food and water when we are hungry and thirsty, but I believe that Jesus had another meaning beneath the surface. Not until we develop the feeling of need, the emptiness of our life without God in Christ, do we accept Him. Just as in the nourishment of our bodies we become hungry and thirsty for those things which mean life to us, so in our religious life we are to remain hungry for the bread of life and thirsty for the water He gives us. Hunger and thirst for more of His spirit in our lives, hunger and thirst for more of His teaching and love in the life of our day, is basic to all Christian work in His Church.

MARCH 7—"Blessed are the merciful."

We sing the beautiful hymn, "There's a wideness in God's mercy, like the wideness of the sea; There's a kindness in His justice, which is more than liberty." If you have ever stood on the shore of the ocean, you understand the picture. God's mercy in Christ is as wide as the vastness of the ocean we behold. It is limitless, "Greater love hath no man than this." Those who have such mercy towards others receive mercy in return. Man's ways are not always just—often far from it—but with God is such justice which includes all who will come unto Him.

THE DEACON'S SON

By Wayne Yoder (Part Three)

When he awoke, the skylights between the trees toward the east showed lighter than those toward the west, so he arose.

After cooking his breakfast over a small, safe fire, he hid his pack. With his rifle under his arm he wandered slowly up through the timber and underbrush of a canyon. He reveled in the glory of the morning. The chatter of pine squirrels and magpies blended with the whisperings of the forests of pine. This was the choir in a temple greater than any man had ever built. "Behold, the heavens of heavens cannot thee hold, and how much less this house which thou hast built." Elijah worshiped. If only Jason could enjoy these things instead of walking blindly past them, longing for things too low to be compared with them.

Then he continued up the canyon, his rifle ready, his feet quiet, every sense alert. Now he was on the hunt, and he knew there was game ahead. He knew it by the faint snapping of a twig in the underbrush and by a faculty of knowing, almost without sensing, the presence of wild deer. When a doe came walking toward him from up the hill, he did not even raise his rifle, but quietly watched as she nervously looked back over her shoulder, then bounded away up a ravine. But when he espied a buck with a fair spread of antlers, he was tempted to shoot. However, Jason was no longer with him and it would take a long hike up and down hill to get the meat out of the woods. Besides, the buck had warned him by his nervous haste. There was danger up the hill. 'Lige turned to the left in the direction the deer had taken, to wait and see what would happen. What happened was not up the hill where he was watching but down the hill behind him. A man or a boy came running up the hill toward him from the thicket below. 'Lige soon saw that it was Jason. The boy weakly struggled up the hill, as if he had exhausted himself with speed.

"'Lige," he panted, "they're—after—you. You—run."

"Who?" asked 'Lige. "Do they know where we are?"

"Ranse. Others too. They saw you when you were—praying. They found—guns." His breath came in great tearing gasps, and in his eyes was suffering. 'Lige sat down beside him to wait till he should be able to talk more.

"Two are watching at the top of the canyon, and I'm supposed to be with the other one driving up from the bottom, like driving for deer. They'll shoot you and claim it was a mistake, like dozens of hunters are killed every year. Maybe they'll fire the canyon—afterwards."

"Why do you tell me this?" asked 'Lige gently.

"Aw, you know why, 'Lige. I ain't going to see them do you like that; you—the only guy that ever cared a thing about me! Besides, I don't belong with them birds. They're too tough for me. I didn't know it at first, but they're in pretty deep in some things. I ain't goin' along with them!"

"Good boy, Jason," commended 'Lige. "Now we better get out of here before they accidentally on purpose take us for a deer. See that little ravine there? That leads off to the side. We'll try to make it to that and lay low there till they either pass us by or show themselves. Think you can make it now?" he asked the tired boy.

"Sure," said Jason; "sure, I can make it. Say, you were swell, 'Lige, to get rid of that liquor for us. Soon as it was gone I knew I was glad, but I just had to go to sleep."

"Quiet, now," warned 'Lige. "Keep hidden by the brush all you can."

They half stood and started to make their way to the ravine. When the shots came, lacing through the brush around them, Jason screamed, hit through the shoulder, but 'Lige barely heard it, for another slug had hit his own head. He felt himself spinning, as it were, into a forest, it seemed, of Ranse Brasen's. Everyone of them was threatening to kill him, and he didn't dare shoot back, for his purpose had been made—to help save the boys, not to use violence upon them.

He dare not return the fire, yet he was, in his delirium, shooting savagely. He was trying to stop those laughing scornful mouths, and his rifle jumped in his hands until all the cartridges were gone. Then he threw it away with the scornful face of Ranse Brasen still laughing at him while he tried to carry Jason away down the hill. And part of it was true and part of it was a nightmare, but he could not separate the two at the time.

"It's because I did wrong, oh!—God!" he was groaning to himself. "I did wrong—I did wrong." And something was holding him down. "I did wrong—used force—my own way—I should never use a gun again, even for hunting. It's too great a temptation."

"You didn't do wrong. I was the one who did wrong," said a familiar voice. 'Lige awoke to see his friend, the Deacon, bending over him. Jason's father had found them.

"Where's Jason?" demanded 'Lige, raising up, but the firm hand pressed him back down.

"Jason's here and alive, thanks to you and the Lord," said the Deacon. "You're all right, too."

"How did you find us?" asked 'Lige. "What happened?"

"Well, I came up this morning, like you told me to—to be with my boy, to have some companionship with him. I'll never regret it, except that I didn't do it sooner. Then I heard your signal shots, the signal shots we agreed upon to find each other, and I came to them. Then I saw you carrying Jason down the canyon to meet me. I knew that some way you had kept him from being taken in by that hoodlum gang of Ranse Brasen's."

Then 'Lige's grief was renewed. "Oh!" he groaned. "I shot at Ranse, and I never thought I'd do such a thing. I was going to save all the boys."

"But you didn't shoot at Ranse Brasen, or anyone else," said the Deacon. "But for a man in delirium, you're sure a mighty good shot, 'cause you practically riddled a big black stump that was standing off up the hill."

"Then what happened to Ranse?" asked 'Lige.

"Why, the State Forest Ranger took care of him and his pals. All that target shooting last night that you got the boys to do was heard up at the fire lookout station on Lava Mountain. Then early this morning the Forest Lookout man came down to see if all was well. He caught Ranse and the other two in the act of shooting at you and Jason. He took them in charge. I quote from Romans 13: 'For he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil.' If you and Jason want to help those boys, you'll find them in a place where they won't do anyone any harm for sometime to come."

"And where are we now?" persisted 'Lige. "Are you sure Jason is all right?"

"I'm right here, 'Lige," said Jason's voice. "My shoulder isn't hurt badly, although the bullet passed clear through. The ranger said I'd be in bed only a couple weeks. 'Lige, look up there toward the hill. The rangers will help us get out of here now, and when we're well we'll come back—all three of us," he said boldly enough, but he shot a questioning glance at the Deacon, his father.

"Yes, we're coming back just to enjoy the scenery and the land that God spread out here all free and bountiful. Why," he said, "I'm a better man for having seen this country. Jason, boy," he said, and there was a catch in his voice, "I want you to teach me, if you will, to ride and camp and hike and shoot."

"Oh, Dad, I knew you would enjoy it out in the woods if you ever got started. And I'm glad this happened to show me who my friends really were. I'll gladly teach you how to do all those things the best I know, if you'll teach me how to—" he gulped, "how to choose good companions, who won't go back on me in a pinch and—I guess with this sore shoulder I'll have plenty of time to think things over." He looked away.

"It's the smoke in my eyes," he said, rubbing them furiously. "Oh, Dad, I just know we're going to have a lot of good times hunting and at home too. Those little calves are awful cute, and I'm going to work harder than ever, taking care of them, while I'm looking forward to the hunting trips we'll take together once in awhile."

"It's a deal, Son," said the Deacon solemnly.

'Lige was looking away to the western sunset where the wooly clouds had been dyed red by the sinking sun. So must have appeared the rams' skins, dyed red, for that other tabernacle in the wilderness. The sun gave the world a parting blessing and was gone.

"His going forth is from the ends of the heaven and his circuit unto the ends of it," quoted 'Lige.

"Now it's time for me to quote some Scripture," said Jason. "I will say, 'It is good for that I have been afflicted, that I might learn thy statutes.' "

And then, under the starry sky, that little group lay down in peace and slept in safety.

The End.

THEIR EXPERIENCES IN EUROPE TO THE PRESENT TIME

(Use booklet No. 1 of "The Mennonites and Their Heritage" series.)

II. Leader's Introduction and Facts for Study:

The experiences of the Mennonites in Europe through over four hundred years have been varied. They have met severe oppression and persecution because of their faith. The sincerity and purity of their life has often called out the respect and admiration of their oppressors. Wherever they went they lived simple, frugal, and truly pious lives in the earlier years of their wanderings when many gave their life as proof of their faith.

Later with growing toleration they acquired wealth and influence, and for a time the churches showed an active, wholesome, Christian life. But all did not remain well; they began to be more like the world around them, and they had divisions among themselves and the membership grew much smaller.

In time, finally, even the basic principle of non-resistance was abandoned in Holland and largely also by the churches in northwest Germany. The churches in southern and eastern Germany clung to their faith more tenaciously, but after the abolition of exemption from military service in 1868 they also gradually abandoned non-resistance.

The invitation of Russia to the German Mennonites in 1786 meant escape from militaristic pressure and open door of opportunity. A large exodus to a desirable part of this vast country was made with complete religious freedom and other privileges guaranteed. These settlements flourished and developed a culture of their own. Their spiritual life had handicaps since missionary effort was forbidden them, but they had opportunity here to develop their religious life according to their conscience.

Then came the loss of special privileges, including military exemption in 1870, and many emigrated to America. The Russian government later modified its demands, instituting forestry service much as the United States today has arranged C.P.S. work. Thus the principle of non-resistance was kept intact by those who left and also by those who stayed.

Their experiences in Russia since the beginning of the first World War have been most terrible. Mennonite worship has been suppressed, Mennonite church life has been destroyed, and Mennonite youth has been communized. Many of them have lost their life through execution or re-settlement in the cold, northern wilds. What is happening to those who have maintained their faith in these days we do not know.

Over 25,000 Mennonites have come to Canada and South America in two great migrations, the first movement of over 20,000 under the direction of the Canadian Mennonite Board of Colonization, the later one under the auspices of the Mennonite Central Committee. These people are proving to be good home builders and they are an asset to American Mennonitism.

The Mennonite churches in America number about 300,000 souls, those in other countries about 100,000. Ours is the opportunity to re-emphasize the principles by which our fathers lived, and to apply the great truths of the teachings of Jesus Christ in the world today.

Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. The Huttarian Brethren. 2. The Amish. 3. Mennonites in Switzerland and Holland to 1914. 4. The Mennonites in South Germany and North Germany. 5. The Migration to Russia, and Life in Russia. 6. Mennonites of Europe in the World War and after.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What effects has oppression had on Mennonites in the early years of the church? 2. What effects on Mennonitism in Russia? 3. What effect did good times have on the churches in Russia?

V. Food for Thought:

"Except a grain of wheat fall into the earth and die, it abideth by itself alone; but if it die, it beareth much fruit." John 12:24.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Bible Teachings Against Drunkenness

Samuel, Isaiah, and Paul wrote in widely separated and different periods of time. They also wrote under very different circumstances and environment. All were fully convinced that drinking alcoholic drinks is detrimental to the drinker and to the nation. Drunkenness is and always has been so repulsive that no sane person would defend it openly. The vile saloon—there is no other variety—has tried to put on a cloak of respectability by using the name "tavern" or some other nice-sounding name. So, some describe a drunken person by saying "he has imbibed too freely" or "he has taken more than is good for him." To the man on the street, he is just plain drunk. Drunken, intoxicated people are neither gentlemen nor ladies. A real gentlemen, a real lady will not be a drinker. Drinking people are not heart and soul Christians. They are the bondservants of sin. A sincere follower of Christ will not drink alcoholic drinks.

Drunkenness and Physical Destruction

Samuel speaks of the lack of watchfulness on the part of the Amalekites while they were drinking and carousing after they had raided Ziklag and had taken much spoil. David and his men attacked them suddenly and the carousing Amalekites were easily destroyed. Drink had befuddled their senses. It always does that to people.

Isaiah lived in a day when all appeared to be well with Israel. He saw the impending doom of destruction at the hands of the Assyrians (vs. 2). He warned the people of the inevitable judgment of God upon the nation because of the corruption in high places, the debauchery, the drunkenness, so rampant among the people. Destruction and desolation were sure to come. This came to pass in 722 B. C.

Drunkenness and Perverted Acts

The religious leaders of Judah fell a prey to strong drink. Their judgment was perverted. The natural processess of the mind and body do not function properly when under the influence of liquor. Wine had gained such a mastery over them that they were completely overcome by it. Woe to any people who follow such religious leaders as these. One of the terrible things about habitual drinking is the moral perversion that accompanies it. Under the deceiving spell of alcohol all sense of right and decency is lost; evil may and does seem natural and pleasing and all sense restraint is usually swept away. Drinking is the fruitful promotor of many other sins, vices, and crimes.

Drunkenness and Eternal Woe

Paul lists drunkenness among the sins of the fleshy appetites and evil desires of the unregenerate man. These sins will keep a person out of the kingdom of God. This warning to the Galatians needs to be taken well to heart today. Alcohol is the greatest physical enemy of mankind. Drinking liquors injures body, mind, and soul. The drinking man has lost control of himself. He is under the control of sin and not of the Spirit of God. The end of such a life can only be eternal woe. The one and only safeguard against all this is to open our heart's door widely to God's Spirit and daily seek his help. Christian homes that nurture their children in the Lord are necessary to the life of our nation.

Drunkenness is a potent cause of physical destruction today. It injures the body and is the direct cause of many accidents which involve the death of one or more persons. The drinking driver is a serious menace. Drinking is probably the major problem in our nation. Many in high places make a practice of it. The young people are encouraged to drink, even young girls and women. Many modern drinking places make special efforts to allure the young people of both sexes. Our administration makes drink available to the boys in our military training camps. The Brewer's Digest for May, 1941, says, "One of the finest things that could have happened to the brewing industry was the insistence of high ranking officers to make beer available at army camps. Here is a chance for brewers to cultivate a taste for beer in millions of young men who will eventually constitute the largest beer-consuming section of our population." Our greatest danger lies not in foreign powers, but in the moral failings and corruptions within our nations.

TO THE WOMEN OF OUR CHURCHES

Please, note that the World Day of Prayer is to be observed on March 12 this year. Now is the time to order program booklets at two cents each or one hundred for two dollars for community and interdenominational meetings. Order them from The United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

EMMANUEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Pratum, Oregon

"Blessed is that man that maketh the Lord his trust," Ps. 40,4. After two months of rain the Willamette River overflowed and did much damage. The basement of the Salem Deaconess Hospital was completely filled with water. The kitchen and laboratory are in it, and expensive equipment was stored here. A number of the people from our church helped several days in cleaning away the debris and setting things back in place. In January we had a blanket of snow fifteen to eighteen inches deep and nine above zero.

Our annual business meeting was held as usual on New Year's Eve and was followed by a watch night service. We resolved to raise our pastor's salary $25.00 per month. For foreign and home missions and relief we contributed $894.22 in the past year. The offering for Sunday school was $258.73, and that for the C.P.S. camps was $297.45. Twenty-three of our boys have been called into service. Several are deferred for agricultural work on the farm, and Rufus Franz is director of the C.O. camp at Lapine, Oregon.

Brother Home Welty, our Sunday school superintendent, found it necessary to move to Portland because of his employment there. The Juniors of our Sunday school have collected fifty dollars to buy a cow for the leper home of Champa, India. Now they want to find a name for this cow. The Juniors have also been busy making a Bible alphabet which is almost complete. A group of the young people are going regularly once a month to sing and bring words of cheer to the Deaconess Old People's home here in Salem.

In addition to serving us, Brother Unruh serves as chaplain in the Deaconess hospital in Salem. Patients express their joy in getting acquainted with him. Our women's missionary society sent 460 pounds of dried fruit and nuts to the Montana American Indian mission last year. Christmas gifts were also sent to the missionary families. A total of 235 pounds of used clothing was sent to the relief committee.

Bulletin, December 27: "What has 1942 meant to you? Did you use it for the glory of God? Were you drawn closer to Him who loved you and gave Himself for you?"

HOFFNUNGSAU MENNONITE CHURCH

Inman, Kansas

On January 24, Prof. B. Bargen of Bethel College was a guest in our church. In the afternoon the C.E. met at which time Prof. Bargen delivered a very interesting talk on the Bible basis for being a C.O. The High School Girls' Sunday School Class served dinner after the morning services and charged twenty cents a plate. This was their S.S. project and they took in a nice sum of thirty dollars, all of which is to be used for missions.

During the week of January 24 to 29, Rev. Walter Gering of the Eden Mennonite Church conducted a series of meetings which were all very well attended. His sermons were on "Living a Normal Christian Life," based on the life of Paul. The topics were that of "Not Being Ashamed," "Joy," "Peace," "Bearing the Cross," "Spirit-filled Life," and "Prayer Life," all being factors of living a normal Christion life. We were all richly blessed through these meetings.

The funeral of Abraham Dirks, Buhler, was held January 31. He reached the age of eighty-three years and has been a faithful member of our church since he came to America. Mrs. Dirks is at present staying with her daughter Mrs. Peter Dyck and Mr. Dyck.

Rev. A. J. Dyck again started the catechism class on February 7.

Brother Walter Adrian of the C.P.S. camp at Downy, Idaho, was operated on February 5. His condition is reported quite satisfactory.

At present we have twenty-one boys in government service. All are in C.P.S. camps, except four who are non-combatants.

The Rev. A. J. Dyck and C. H. Voth are still serving our church and bring us very inspiring sermons. For this we are very thankful.

—Year Book, Johannestal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: This church has a "Peace Committee" of three members. The office of "Car Usher" is an unusual one, but undoubtedly a very useful one. The church elects correspondents to both of our conference papers. Sixteen Sunday school classes are listed. A women's society earned some money, evidently by selling food at two farm sales. The pastor's salary has been raised for 1943. The total membership is 201. Of eleven men drafted, seven are in C.P.S. camps. The name "Plenert"—given twenty-eight times—appears most often in the membership list. The church observed its Golden Jubilee in 1942.

—From the Record and Directory of the First Mennonite Church, Allentown, Pa., and the Upper Milford Church, Zionsville, Pa., Brother Howard G. Nyce is the pastor of these two congregations. Their memberships are 196 and 189 respectively. The Allentown congregation has a correspondent for The Mennonite. It utilized Bluffton College Gift Envelopes for giving to Bluffton College. The church spent $8.00 for sending out church buletins; how necessary it is that those who do not attend receive the bulletin! The name "Kummery"—given eleven times—appears most often in the membership list of the Allentown Church. One name is given on the inactive list. The Upper Milford congregation has two sons in the ministry Wilmer S. Shelly, Topeka, Indiana, and Willian Henry Stauffer, Sugar Creek, Ohio. The name "Geissinger—given twenty-five times—appears most often in the membership list of this church. This church has no services on July 18 and 25, for they are classified as "Vacation Sundays."

—The First Mennonite Church of Shafter, California, is enjoying a series of seven evening meditations on the subject, "God's Message to the Church." These are based on the Book of Revelation. Members are asked to write out any questions they may have for consideration in an open meeting after the series is over.

—Bulletin, Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas: "The Apostle Paul tells us . . . 'The Earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof.' Are we not robbing God if we do not do our part in trying to conserve our soil and do no thing to prevent the soil from washing away? Let us take a lesson from our Amish brothers. We are told that the value of their farms increase instead of decrease after they have lived on them for some time. The government is putting out a Soil Conservation plan whereby counties will be divided into districts, and the plan provides for six things: soil and water conservation, contour and terracing, drainage, shelterbelts and trees, gulley control, and pasture improvement. This program is in correlation with what our C.P.S. camps are doing. . . ." Every week a Fellowship group meets which studies the subject of "Mennonites and Their Heritage."

—Brother Albert Schultz writes that the total receipts of the Butterfield Mennonite Church (Butterfield, Minnesota) in 1942 amounted to $5,332.96.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: "This is a period of testing. Our government has made provision for the C.P.S. camps to make the test whether we as the Mennonite Church will be able to prove that we can live what we believe. If we cannot prove it now, another opportunity may never come . . . an unprecedented opportunity is before us in the support of these camps. We must not fail our boys! We must not fail our God." —By J. John Friesen, member of the Northern District Peace Committee. "As an alternative to the President's Birthday Ball to aid victims of infantile paralysis, Cottonwood County is asking churches to take special offerings for this cause. By giving to this cause through the church we are doing two things: (1) We are helping in a worthy cause, and (2) we are demonstrating that Cottonwood County does not have to stoop to the level of promoting public dances to raise money for this cause."

—The Home Mission Board had its meeting in Chicago on February 23. Let us look forward to an interesting report of this meeting. Members of the board are: J. M. Regier, A. J. Neuenschwander, J. J. Plenert, David Toews, J. E. Amstutz, and Harley King.

—Buhler Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: On the afternoon of February 5 Sister Wilhelmina Kuyf brought a wonderful message on the life of the Chinese woman after she has accepted the Saviour. She urged us not to forget the Chinese in our prayers. After the program we looked at the pictures and articles which she had brought from China. In the evening she spoke again. Sister Kuyf left China in June, 1942. She intends to return to China, if possible, when her furlough is over.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: "Remember the living. Next Friday, February 19, it will be seventy-eight years that Dr. Rudolphe Petter of Lame Deer, Montana, was born in Switzerland. He had done a great work under the direction of our Foreign Mission Board, and is still at it despite his years. Those of us who are fortunate enough to know him personally will want to remember him and give him a word of appreciation and encouragement. That will do more good than many flowers and well-worded eulogies after he has passed to his reward. Those who have never met him will be glad in later days for any kindness they have shown such a faithful worker in the Kingdom of God."

WANTED

Someone in each Mennonite congregation to sell our line of Everyday Greeting Card assortments, birthday and getwell assortments. This is an opportunity to earn money for yourself, church, or society. Good commissions paid. Remember, too, this will give you a chance to get in on the Christmas greeting card business also. Many earn as much as $100.00 in their spare time.

—Brother Harold Burkholder is still conducting a weekly radio broadcast over WSAN, Allentown. In the Financial Statement of 1942 the number of members on the active list are given as 174, and those on the inactive list are given as 18.

—Brother W. C. Andreas, Beatrice, Nebraska, sent in a newspaper clipping telling about " . . . a group of senators meeting to read the Bible and to discuss their personal and public problems in the light of the Holy Writ." The clipping mentions that a similar group meets in the United States House of Representatives. Brother Andreas comments, "It inspires one to note that at least a few of our national leaders will unite in reading the Bible for divine help and guidance. 'God still has his thousands who have not bowed their knees to Baal.' "

—"Lincoln was an earnest advocate of temperance. Total abstinence from both liquor and tobacco was part of his religion. His idea of temperance did not mean indulging even moderately in what is dangerous. He often defined temperance as 'The moderate use of that which is good, and total abstinence from that which is evil.' "

—The Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Pratum, Oregon, decided at its annual meeting to hold an offering for C.P.S. on the fourth Sunday of every month. The pastor recently baptized a ninety-four year old man who had been an agnostic until recently. Rufus Franz, a son of the congregation, is director of the C.P.S. camp at Lapine, Oregon. The work project of this camp is a two million dollar dam. The men are now clearing away trees and will begin work on the dam next spring. The camp paper is New Horizons. D. J. Unruh, the pastor, intends to visit the boys of the church at Placerville, California, on his way home from the meeting of the Foreign Mission Board in Newton, Kansas.

—Mennonite and Their Heritage is the name of a six-booklet series which should be in every Mennonite home. Those in the Eastern and Middle districts can conveniently get their copies from the Mennonite Book Concern or from their peace committees. Those in the Northern and Pacific districts, undoubtedly, can get the copies from their peace committees. Those in the Western District can order theirs from Reynold Weinbrenner, Secretary, Western District Peace Committee, North Newton, Kansas. Ten or more copies may be had for fifteen cents a copy, postpaid. In quantities less than ten, a copy costs twenty cents.

—Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas: Recently the Young People's C. E. Society sponsored a panel discussion on the subject, "A Just and Lasting Peace." The church expects Brother and Sister P. A. Penner to be with them on February 28. They are also looking forward to having Brother and Sister J. F. Isaac with them on the evening of March 14. The church is revising its constitution.

—A Year Book is often difficult to design by those unfamiliar with work of this nature. For a three-cent stamp to cover the postage the Bethel College Press, North Newton, Kansas, will send free sample copies of year books used by churches who have had year books printed there.

—Bluffton College: Rufus D. Bowman, president of Bethany Theological Seminary, Chicago, Illinois, has been secured as speaker for the annual Bible lecture series to be held next fall, beginning with November 14. Dr. Bowman is a member of the Church of the Brethren. Brother Jesse N. Smucker conducted a series of messages dealing with the Sermon on the Mount in chapel recently. Brother H. A. Fast, head of Mennonite Civilian Public Service work, discussed problems of reconstruction and opportunities which may open in that field after the war in a Sunday evening meeting of the Bluffton College church organization.

—Freeman Junior College faces the following problems according to a statement by the president in a recent bulletin: 1. In the light of our committal to Jesus Christ and His way of life, to what extent can we cooperate with others in a "total war effort?" 2. With a drop of 32 per cent in our college enrollment over last year what can we expect next year? 3. To what extent will the lowering of the draft age to eighteen affect our academy enrollment for next year? 4. Anticipating a further decrease in enrollment for next year, how large a teaching staff will be required to meet adequately our needs? 5. To what extent can we depend on our churches for increased support in the light of increased taxes, more demands for relief, and the C.P.S. program? 6. Do our people fully realize the crisis facing our school—and other schools like ours? Do they value our own school enough to enable it to survive? If it does not survive, to what extent will our respective communities and churches suffer?

—Rushmore Reflector is the name of the camp paper put out by the C.P.S. camp at Hill City, South Dakota. In its first issue it contained two interesting pictures of the work being done.—The editor made an unsuccessful attempt to borrow them; so we can not print these pictures in The in the Tabor College auditorium on February 8. Mennonite, for the Board of Publication has no fund for the making of cuts that are used in great western forests. Training is scheduled to start about June. Forest Service has only used this method for about three years. "The idea is to get men as quickly as possible to the scene after a fire has been detected, thereby making tremendous savings in area burned, manpower and overall expenses." In 1941 Forest Service figured that fires attacked with parachutists cost on an average of $247 per fire, whereas with the old method they would have cost $3,500 per fire. Special clothing is provided for the "smoke jumpers." Each man wears a padded suit with high collared jacket, football helmet and steel wire mask to protect his head and face, a steel-ribbed leather corset and ankle braces. Straps on the legs of the trousers fit under the feet to help distribute part of the shock of the opening chute. The men carry two parachutes and a supply of rope to get themselves out of trees."—From the Reporter.

—Storerooms well filled: "For the second time in recent months, the various Mennonite churches near Goessel, Hesston, and Hillsboro, Kansas, banded together to supply us with many much appreciated commodities. Packed into the truck of F. D. Vogt of Hillsboro were items much too numerous to mention. Included were 1,600 pounds of flour, 176 dozen fresh eggs, 40 pounds of butter, 45 pounds of dressed chicken, and almost 200 pounds of pork. We will remember with thanks for a long time the fine spirit of these people.

—Brother Herbert Schmidt, M.D., of Newton, Kansas, gave an illustrated lecture to a large audience in the Tabor College auditorium on February 8. Brother Schmidt returned last fall from Paraguay where he had assisted his brother John in about thirty major and many minor operations. Dr. Schmidt gave a history of the Mennonites in Paraquay and showed two reels of colored film showing the life of the colonists and that of the surrounding territory and parts of his trip which was made by huge airliners, river steamer, narrow guage railway train, team and wagon, ox cart, and by foot. Dr. Schmidt says that the Mennonites are making a garden spot out of a jungle.

editor's desk contains an interesting story told by Brother Herbert E. Miller in a recent devotional message series. This is a commendable use of material from our church papers.

—Bethel College: The all-school play, "The Family Portrait" was given to a large audience in the new Memorial Hall. Wilhelmina Kuyf spoke to the Student Volunteers on her recent visit to the Bethel Campus. She also spoke in chapel. "O Pow'r of Love," the first piece in the Bethel College Choir Series edited by Walter H. Hohmann, is enjoying a good sale. A great many visitors to the Bethel College Museum are amazed by the great wealth of material found in it.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

The new Statistical Reports are coming in very slowly, but they are very interesting. To Rev. John Raugh, pastor of the Smith Corner Church goes the credit for being the first one to send in his report, dated January 29. It is also interesting to point out that the receipts of this mission church for 1942 amounted to $547.38 as compared to $416.68 for 1941. The second report to be returned was that of Rev. R. V. Stubbs, pastor of the Bowmansville Church, dated February 2. This church is still receiving some help from the Home Mission Committee but has been asking the Committee to reduce the support for a number of years. The total receipts for this church amounted to $1,848.55 for 1942 as compared to $1,407.69 for 1941. If all the reports show similar improvements according to the membership, the total receipts of the Conference this year will have surpassed any previous record. Pastor, please send in your report as soon as possible. If you read the report carefully there should be no difficulty in filling it out correctly. The first two received were properly filled out.

First Church, Philadelphia—Have you jotted down the new address of the pastor, Rev. J. J. Plenert, who is the Treasurer of the General Conference Home Mission Board? Yes, it was in The Mennonite and you meant to change it but forgot. Just a reminder to change it at once. The address is 7319 Whitaker Ave., Philadelphia, Pa.

Eden Church, Schwenksville—The Glee Club of the Lower Salford Schools presented special numbers at the Christian Endeavor meeting, Sunday evening, February 7. Mr. and Mrs. Alvin K. Alderfer, Jr., of Conshohocken, are the parents of a son Alvin III, born Sunday, January 3. Mr. Alderfer is treasurer of the Board of Directors of Men-O-Lan.

East Swamp—In a recent issue of the East Swamp Bulletin, the following interesting news was found: "Bridal Showers—Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Cope were pleasantly surprised by a group of East Swamp members and friends. The bride and groom received many lovely and useful gifts." Mr. Cope was a former president of the Eastern District Young People's Union and is greatly interested in young people's work.

Grace Church, Lansdale—The Sunday School of Grace Church is the fourth largest in Lansdale. This is a wonderful record when you think of the fact that not long ago this was a mission church and that ffiteen years ago there was no Lansdale church.

Springfield—The Church put out a very neat and interesting annual report. It is believed that Springfield is the only church in the United States where Old Mennonites and the General Conference Mennonites worship in the same building and there never seems to be any misunderstanding between the two groups. Brother Shelly, we agree with your statement, "This is how it should be."

Bethel Church, Perkasie—A copy of Home and Church, issued by the Bethel Church was received this morning. The Rev. A. M. Fretz, Dean of the Eastern District Ministers and affectionately called "Father Fretz," is pastor of the church, and the Rev. Ward Shelly, pastor of the Springfield church, is the associate pastor. The report is interesting, but the outstanding feature of the paper is an article entitled, "A Cloud of Discouragement versus an Encouraging Revival," by the pastor. Rev. Fretz was ninety years old December 12 and is preaching regularly at Perkasie.

Zion Church, Souderton—At this writing, the church is in the midst of the fiftieth anniversary celebration. Dr. J. E. Hartzler, of Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut, is the guest speaker. The services are very well attended. A booklet has been printed illustrating the activities of the church with beautiful pictures. May God continue to bless the church in the future as He has in the past. Howard G. Nyce, Secretary

RIGHTLY DIVIDING

One sometimes hears the statement that a little learning is a dangerous thing. It is when it tends to keep someone from learning more. It is not dangerous but helpful when it tends to stimulate more learning.

So it is with truth. There is danger that one becomes so wrapped up in one or several great truths that one becomes closed in mind and heart to others that are important.

Thus it happens that Brother Wenner seeks to impart a great truth to Brother Smide and vice versa, and they both become distrustful of each other. What happens is this: Brother Wenner with heart and head full of one truth tries his best to get Smide to accept it. But Brother Smide also has a great truth that he would like to plant in Wenner's heart and mind. Consequently, his mouth too overflows. But with much talk little is accomplished in the hearts and minds of the two. Why? Each is inclined to feel that since the other does not appreciate the great truth that he sees, the other person has little or nothing to give but much to accept. The result, both try their best to give but not to take, with the further result that neither takes.

But it can be different. Brother Wenner and Brother Smide can meet as humble followers of Christ ought to meet. Each esteems the other better than himself. Each seeks to learn from the other. As each becomes conscious of this, each respects the other a great deal more. With respect in their hearts they are eager to take. Naturally, the barriers to giving have been removed.

How important it is that we seek to emphasize the whole truth as revealed in the Word of God! How important it is that we divide rightly, giving the greatest emphasis to the most important things and seeing all in its rightful place!

Paul declared to the Corinthians, ". . . I determined not to know any thing among you, save Jesus Christ, and him crucified." Should not this be our supreme emphasis in all of life? Jesus Christ is the Way. His crucifixion is the means by which we are freed from the power and punishment of sin. This is the key to right dividing. —r. w.

MENNONITES IN CHICAGO

Do you have any friends, relatives, or acquaintances in Chicago who are Mennonites or who used to be Mennonites? If so, would you be so kind as to send their name and address to Karl Baehr. He is chairman of the Mennonite Fellowship of Chicago. Brother Baehr is trying to get into contact with all those in Chicago who still are Mennonites and also with all those who have joined other churches or no longer regard themselves as Mennonites. Your help is important. Write Karl Baehr, 3815 Thomas Street, Chicago, Illinois.

More Jottings

At the General Conference session held in Upland, California, in 1935, a motion was made that read in part: "Moved, That we give less space to non-essential and non-interesting articles, such as deaths and marriages, unless definitely connected with our church or Conference work; that we give more space to 'Jottings' . . . "

In 1935 The Mennonite was issued only every two weeks. In the two July issues of that year the "Jottings" filled fifty inches of space. In the four issues of January, 1943, the "Jottings" took up 109 inches of space. This indicates the need for still more jottings.

However, it does seem as though there now is news from a greater number of churches than in 1935. More and more churches are using bulletins, and more and more pastors are sending them regularly to the editor. Still there are some that do not send them in and some send them in very irregularly. Often for many months one doesn't hear a word from some of the churches which have no bulletin. Others do present news through correspondence. However, a long correspondence is never as appealing to the readers as a fresh, juicy jotting.

We can have more and better jottings if:

(1) The pastors who are not sending in their bulletins and those who are not sending them in weekly, will send them regularly to the editor as soon as they are printed. More than thirty churches in our conference use bulletins.

(2) The correspondents of those churches which do not have bulletins will jot down important news items on postcards and send them in before the important event happens or just as soon thereafter as possible. The churches in our conference which do not have correspondents are comparatively few. —rw.

Post-War Europe and the Allies

*By Helen Dick

(First article in series of two)

Magazines of late have been featuring suggested programs for post-war Europe. Our vice-president and other men of note have attempted to outline procedures which they feel will build a permanent peace. "Take away their arms," they say of belligerent nations. "Provide for their economic advancement." "Install an international court, an international council, and a police system to enforce its decisions." The suggestions sound reasonable.

The whole set-up is democratic since each nation has voice in the governing body. But that which is its peak—its goal—its aim, democracy, can only be built on a foundation of people who are Christians or who act like them. Therein is where the plan hangs in suspense. You can't start on the top of the structure and work down. You can't build a superstructure on a crumbling foundation, hoping the top of the structure will somehow keep the bottom in place. In reviewing such a picture, history must some day say, "and great was the fall thereof!"

"The heart of man is full of evil." It is "deceitful above all things and desperately wicked. Who can know it?" Such material have the planners for world government to build on.

Some one says, "But democracy works here: why couldn't it work in Europe?" Not all Americans are Christians but there are many; and many, though indfiferent to spiritual values themselves, have imbibed Christian ethics, perhaps, from godly ancestors or neighbors. Christian standards have been in practice to a great extent since the coming of the Pilgrims. That is why democracy works here yet.

Why doesn't it work in Latin America? Those countries want it. Intolerance and selfishness control the lives of too large a proportion. So it is in Europe where religious and political tyranny have held sway.

But "if man be in Christ he is a new creature. Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new." "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples that ye love one another." When a man becomes a Christian he develops in "faith, longsuffering, love, patience."

This is not an effort to set up a policy for our government in dealing with the peoples of Europe after the war. Rather it presents the necessary ground-work for making a policy workable.

Civilian Public Service

As Others See Us

It is quite common for newspapers to carry stories and pictures which feature C.P.S. camps. Many of the country's leading papers have in some way or other given publicity to the conscientious objector.

A newspaper from a large mid-western city recently carried a most interesting story of a Mennonite camp. Throughout its paragraphs it emphasized repeatedly the willingness on the part of the boys to sacrifice and run risks if necessary for the welfare but not the destruction of their fellowmen. It lauded the boys for volunteering to serve as subjects for dietary and temperature experiments. Some of these scientific experiments are hazardous, it pointed out, but that does not deter the boys. "No call has yet been ignored because of the personal risk often involved."

The fact that the boys even give money for War Sufferers Relief when they are not earning wages seemed to impress the reporter quite favorably. One Sunday offering in camp amounted to $38.00. He also referred to the fact that the church and not the Government stands the costs of camp operations.

Nor did the story overlook some of the deeper meanings of C.P.S. Because of their convictions against supporting war the boys could not assist in the scrap metal drive because the scrap was to be used for munitions. Another point of accuracy was the mention of Mennonite good-will. "The Mennonite objection to serving in wars or armies comes from a conviction that good will and love are the only ways to meet the problems of human conflicts."

All in all, this story left the reader with a favorable impression chiefly because it showed to the public that in a world of suffering the Christian conscientious objector desires to serve even at risk or danger. However, he can do so only in a Christian and constructive manner.

This story calls to mind a remark made by a college professor regarding the C. O. in Great Britain: "It has been reported that, owing to the tremendous peril connected with mine sweeping in the waters adjacent to Great Britain, such work is never assigned on command but is performed by men who specifically volunteer for the task. Conspicuous among such volunteers have been the British conscientious objectors—adverse to destroying life, yet risking their lives to save life—true heroes and patriots. Similarly, those whom our own nation has, out of regard for religious scruples, exempted from military service may yet come to rank among our bravest and most loyal citizens."

"A fanatic is one who is incapable of entertaining more than one thought at a time."

Helene Dick is the wife of George Dick, who is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Lima, Ohio. This church is often referred to as "The Lima Mission." It is located in a residential part of town and has a membership of thirty-two. Attendance in 1942 averaged sixty. The supplement to the last Mennonite revealed that this little church had the highest per member contribution average of the churches of the Middle District for 1942. The average amount per member was $6.25.

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

A CARD FROM CHINA

14 Tung Huang Ching Kan,
Peking, China
November 1, 1942

Dear Brother Richert:

A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to you! The same to all the mission board members!

Since October 3 we live here in Peking. I have recovered from my illness; only have stomach trouble, but I take treatments from a doctor. Maria is well. We study, read, and write. I have translated the Mennonite catechism and articles of faith. The manuscript is now in the hands of a publisher. This promises to be a great help to our Chinese churches.

Continue to pay Maria's and my salaries into the National Bank of Freeman, South Dakota, for we now depend upon writing checks. We cash them at the Swiss Consulate. The sisters are still in Kai Chow. We have the freedom of this city and are well-placed in a group of seventeen. Please, write through the International Red Cross.

Sincerely,
H. J. and Maria Brown

Fear In The Orient

When Jesus said to his disciples, "fear not," and to the church as a whole, "fear not little flock," He put his finger upon a very sensitive weakness of the human heart. All over the world people fear. In the Orient fear has more power over human beings because superstitition is so much greater than in many other lands.

In the beginning of the rainy season this year, (June and July) cholera was raging in many villages. We were indeed grateful to our heavenly Father that most of our Christians committed themselves into God's hands and took all precaution in sanitation too. It was real Christian to do both these things. But not all Christians had that grace. In one of our villages in which we have a large church, some twenty-five miles away from the mission station, cholera broke out too. The whole village was confused and nervous, including the Christians. Many people died, also some Christians. All of a sudden by some evil trick of some kind, the idea was born that a certain woman was a witch and caused cholera. Fear took such desperate hold upon the village that one might that woman was cruelly murdered and the Christians approved of that diabolical act. The woman was not a Christian. But that fear, instead of confidence in God, had taken such a hold upon our Christians that they would look with satisfaction upon such an act. It is most painful to us and to the Christian Church as a whole in this area. Please, pray for our churches and us and for that one church in particular that the Christians there may repent in "sack cloth and ashes" and put their confidence and trust in Christ. —John Thiessen

Progress of the Educational Program

Through Brother R. S. Kreider, Educational Secretary, a summary of the Educational Program in Mennonite C.P.S. camps is given. Some of the highlights of the program in the Fall Quarter were:

1. The Mennonite Core Course, Bible Study, and Red Cross First Aid were offered at virtually all of the camps.
2. Major activities were chorus and mid-week prayer meeting.
3. The order of popularity for other classes and interest groups were: Woodworking, Typing, Photography, Public Speaking, Spanish, Rudiments of Music, Current Events, Bookkeeping and Farm Arithmetic, Handicrafts, German, and twenty-three other types of study groups.

Of the instructors and leaders, seventy-three per cent were found to be assignees, fifteen per cent were staff members, eight per cent were members of the technical agency and four per cent were individuals from nearby communities.

In all eighty-four outside speakers including M. C. C. staff members, Selective Service representatives, church leaders, and members of the technical agencies appeared before the camps.

A survey of the educational levels of the Mennonite camps indicates that forty-seven per cent of the boys have had grade school training, thirty-six per cent have gone to high school for one to four years, and seventeen per cent have had college experience.

Among new courses in prospect of being offered are studies in post-war relief and reconstruction.

New Form of Detached Service Opens

A recently approved form of detached service is that of dairy herd testing. From March 3 to March 17 a course of Dairy Herd Improvement will be offered to ten boys at the Pennsylvania State College School of Agriculture. Following this they will be given positions as testers in Dairy Herd Improvement Associations where they will make monthly circuits of dairy farms, spending a day in testing the herd of each farm.

"Opportunity is often lost through deliberation."

Camp Statistics

Following are the Mennonite-administered C.P.S. camps and hospital units with their respective number of assignees as of January 14, 1943:

Three More Hospitals Approved for C.P.S. Boys

Boys from the Denison, Iowa, camp and the Weeping Water, Nebraska, camp will comprise the twenty-five man unit which will take up duties at Iowa State Hospital at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa. This hospital is located about twenty miles from the Wayland Mennonite Community.

Ten boys from the Denison camp are scheduled to be transferred to the Ohio State Hospital for the Criminally Insane at Lima, Ohio.

The Utah State Hospital at Provo, Utah, is now approved and will receive a contingent of twenty-five boys on its staff from the Placerville, California camps.

The Year Book of the General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America was off the press by February 24. All those who are entitled to a copy of it should receive it soon through the mails.

Those who are not entitled to it by virtue of early subscription payments may secure a copy for twenty cents form the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas. Order yours today, for the supply is limited.

Those who prefer reading the German may have the Bundesbote Kalendar from the Mennonite Publication Office for twenty cents.

RELIEF

Two Relief Workers Leaving For Paraguay

Passports have been secured and final arrangements made for the sailing of Brethren A. E. Janzen of Hillsboro, Kansas, and Robert W. Geigley of Fairfield, Pa., from New Orleans with the Paraguayan Mennonite Colonies as their destination.

Brother A. E. Janzen, with the assistance of Brother Geigley, will endeavor to serve the varied needs of the Mennonite Colonies. Brother Janzen's responsibility will be in particular that of a spiritual ministry which includes assistance to the Chaco Mission to the Indians and promotion of the Bible School and the printing establishment. Plans for liquidating the colony debts are to be arranged for by him. Brother Janzen is also scheduled to visit the colonies in Brazil.

Brother Geigley, in line with his legal training and experience as business manager in C.P.S. camps, will aid the colonies in their legal problems and give such help as can be useful in the economic life of the Mennonites in Paraguay.

Interview Held with Mr. Herbert Lehman

On February 4, 1943, Brethren O. O. Miller and C. L. Graber were granted an interview with Mr. Herbert Lehman, Ex-Governor of New York and now Director of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Service. The interview was prompted by a desire to present to the government the Mennonite interest and concern to carry on relief as opportunities open and resources permit.

Mr. Lehman was appreciative of the Mennonite record of relief work in the past. While avenues for service are now closed to virtually all private agencies, reasonable assurance was given that as opportunities arise the Mennonite Church can, along with other experienced relief agencies, expect to enter fields of service.

War Prisoner's Aid

Through channels that serve war prisoners it has been the privilege of the Mennonite Central Committee to minister to war prisoners in different camps in Texas, New Mexico, and Jamaica. The service to these war prisoners has been in the form of providing devotional books and song books for the interned German families which comprise the camps.

Among the letters of thanks received from the prisoners there is one letter written by the son of a Mennonite elder in southern Germany. Evidently serving as a missionary, he has been interned with his family and has been removed to Jamaica from whence he wrote a letter of gratitude for the gifts which the M.C.C. made possible for his camp. The letter closes with greetings to all Mennonite congregations.

Brother M. C. Lehman, upon consent of the Canadian government, plans to visit certain German war prisoners in Canada as per the agreement he made with the German government prior to his leaving Germany last year.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE SMALL TOWN

There is an old adage to the effect that God made the country, man made the city, but the devil made the small town. I do not know what the origin of this proverb is, but it doesn't matter; it is based neither on sound reasoning nor on actual facts. It seems to me that God must love the small town for the same reason that Abraham Lincoln said He loved the common man, namely, because he made so many of them. There 19,000 towns in the United States with a population ranging from 250 to 2,500 and an additional 35,000 small hamlets with populations under 250.

Vices and Virtues

The small town is neither good nor bad just because it is a small town. It has both vices and virtues. The quality of a small town depends on the quality of its citizens. It stands half way between the open country and the crowded city. It has within it some of the strengths and weaknesses of both. There are the hangers-on, the idle or loafers who hang around corners, frequent pool rooms, gamble, drink, engage in indecent conversation and in general are anything but valuable elements in the life of the community. In many towns there is misunderstanding between farmers and townspeople that results in unpleasant relations and often a feeling of superiority on the part of the town folks. There are those who engage in small talk, petty quarrels, and neighborhood rivalries. People in small towns are famous for their provincialism, narrow-mindedness, and conservatism. But there is another side to this story.

The Other Side

The small town is to be viewed correctly as the capital of the surrounding country-side. It provides the goods and services for the rural hinterland. It it we find the marketing facilities, shopping centers, schools, churches, and community organizations. While the small town may be accused of provincialism and conservatism it cannot be accused of a high crime rate. In most small rural towns there is a high degree of neighborliness, mutual aid, and mutual trust. An interesting evidence of this fact is the prevailing custom of people in small towns never to lock their doors. That this mutual trust is not violated is attested to by the low rate of crime in these communities. Neighbors are frequently concerned with looking after each other's property and welfare as well as their own.

The Future

The small town is a comprehensible and manageable social unit in contrast to the large cities. People can learn to know each other and deal with each other on a decent human level. Many of the evils of the large city are by the very nature of the small town eliminated. These areas may today in fact enjoy many of the blessings and avoid many of the evils of the cities. It seems to me churches in small towns have a tremendous challenge to build upright Christian communities. There is not much sense in talking about world brotherhood if we can't build local brotherhood. The soul of the individual must indeed be saved, but so too must the soul of the community. Regenerated individuals must manifest their regeneration in their social behavior. Menno Simons showed keen insight when he observed that the true Christian brotherhood should be a small working model of the Kingdom of God.

CORRESPONDENCE

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Newton, Kansas

THIS WOULD WE SHARE

Though a few weeks have passed since our farewell service for Miss Sarah Buller, we nevertheless wish to share not only the events of that week but also the opportunity for prayer.

Miss Buller is our missionary to Africa. We may say "our" for we have learned to love her in her joyous spirit of service and as a church have obligated ourselves for her financial support.

On Wednesday, January 6, the women of our church surprised Miss Buller with a bountiful shower of gifts and Bible promises. Among the promises was the one in Isaiah 43:2,

> "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee."

These words have remained in our hearts to stir us unto prayer toward her safe return. Predominating among the gifts that night was thread. I doubt if any of us had ever seen such an abundance of thread. We thought—would it be enough, when unwound, to reach from Newton to the shores of Africa? What a weak bond that would make! How much stronger would be a bond of love and prayer of which God can make a chain to link us with the worker on the field of service.

On Sunday evening, January 10, the church and friends of Miss Buller, gathered for a farewell service. Our beloved Dr. P. A. Penner opened the meeting with the reading of Psalm 91 and also the passage in Isaiah 43 which had been given to him on his leave from India. The larger part of the evening was taken up with the viewing of slides which Miss Buller had brought with her from Africa. I should like to leave her with you as she left herself to us in the last picture shown. There was a narrow path winding its way through tall grasses and the roof of the mission station in the background. Against this background, standing in the path with the tall grasses reaching over her head, was Miss Buller. This picture was taken as she left her station for furlough.

This narrow path winds its way for twenty miles out of the interior of Africa to wider roads and better traveling facilities. It must be walked. Miss Buller left us that night with the prayer that God might allow her once more to walk these twenty miles of narrow path that leads to the work which He has given her to do.

On Monday morning following the service, Miss Buller left by train for New York City to await an opportunity for sailing. Having had a glimpse of the trunks and satchels and cases that stood ready to accompany her, my sympathy went out for a moment to those dark friends across the sea that, should God allow it so, would shoulder these heavy loads and bear them across the twenty miles on foot.

Miss Buller's present address is: Sudan Interior Mission, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York. She is anxious to return to her work in Nigeria, Africa, but is willing, too, to accept God's No should His plans for her at this time prove otherwise.

Still the words ring in our hearts as they were read to us by Dr Penner: "When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee: and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee . . . I have given Egypt as thy ransom."

EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundridge, Kansas

Eden Chronicles, a monthly bulletin put out by our pastor and family, is welcomed by all of us.

In a series of evangelistic messages Brother Erland Waltner spoke to us on: "The Real Enemy," "Our Sure Defense," "Our Spiritual Weapons," "This Is the Victory," "The Home Front" (religion in the home), "Our Victorious Christ," and "More Than Conquerors." The meetings were well-attended. We were brought closer to God and inspired to fellowship more with him.

Our Mission and Aid Society recently gave a program for the West Zion Misson Society. On her visit Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf related experiences which reminded one that Christianity is on trial today. One wonders what will really be called upon to sacrifice for our belief in Christ.

Rev. Barkman was with us on February 17. An audience which filled our meeting house was keenly disappointed on February 19 when Kirby Page, who had been awaited, failed to appear. We hope to hear him in March. We have begun to practice for the annual rendition of the "Messiah."

BETHEL MENNONITE CHURCH

Winton, California

The Church has elected another deacon; he is P. N. Yost. Brother and Sister J. P. Glanzer and I attended the conference of the Mennonite Aid plan in Dinuba. For three days Brother Home Leisy of the Grace Mennonite Church, Dallas, Oregon, served us with inspiring messages. Before each evening message he gave a chart talk. We enjoyed his visit very much. We hope that he soon will be able to come back and stay with us a longer period. Brother Leisy was on his way to Reedley. From there he was to go to Paso Robles for a short series of meetings before returning home to Dallas, Oregon. When Brother Leisy, during the last service, asked for a show of hands of those who wanted to dedicate their life anew to the Lord, a great number of hands went up.

Shortly before Christmas nearly all of the members partook of a communion service. We plan to have another revival series this winter or the coming spring if the Lord will reveal an evangelist to us.

WOODLAND MENNONITE CHURCH

Warroad, Minnesota

Greetings in Jesus' Name. I think it would be a good idea if all church correspondents wrote once a month, and so we shall try to follow that plan.

A farewell gathering was held at the home of Brother and Sister A. P. Harder, January 28, for their son, Abe, who had to leave the following morning for Fort Snelling. An impromptu program was given, consisting of several duets and other musical selections, and Rev. Arthur Ortman spoke briefly.

The sewing circle met at the home of Brother and Sister Jake Quiring, the tenth of February. It was decided at the business meeting to donate a curtain to partition off the various Sunday school classes.

Plenty of snow and cold weather has cut down the church attendance this winter, but with the return of warmer weather the attendance is greater again.

So many people in this world still believe that salvation may be earned by doing deeds, but, oh, that they might forget that false idea and grasp the truth that salvation is free to them that believe, and not to be earned through hard labor.

When the problems of this life seem too great to be solved, let us remember Psalm 46:1 where it says, "God is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble."

God doesn't give all sunshine
He also sends the rain.
He gives to each a share of joy
And each a share of pain;
But through it all, His love Divine
Gives strength for every care,
The heart that calls to Him finds help—
God always answers prayer.

—Jake G. Quiring, Corr.

IN MEMORIAM

JOSEPH A. GOERING, November 15, 1863, to January 12, 1943, was born in the province of Wohlynia, Russia. His mother died in Austria in 1874. At the age of thirteen Joseph and another brother emigrated to America and joined four sisters and one brother who had gone before. The father came later, but one brother remained in Europe. In 1878 Joseph A. Goering became a member of the Hoffnungsfeld Mennonite Church. In 1935 he transferred his membership to the Eden Church. In 1886 he married Mary Wedel who now survives him with one son and three daughters. The family lived on a farm for fifty-two years.

MARIA STUCKY GOERING, June 10, 1858, to January 9, 1943, was born in Waldheim, Russia. In 1874 she came to Kansas with her father, the mother having died in Russia. She was baptized by Rev. Jacob Stucky in 1873 and became a member of the Hoffunugsfeld Church. In 1934 she joined the Eden Church. In 1876 she was married to Peter Goering who preceded her death in 1925. The family circle numbers 252 at the present time.

ANNA FLICKNER STRAUSZ, April 6, 1887, to January 3, 1943, was born on a farm three miles west of Moundridge, Kansas. In 1902 she was baptized by Rev. C. J. Goering and became a member of the Eden Mennonite Church. In 1910 she was united in marriage to Peter J. Strausz, who now survives her with five children.

ELISE PENNER, June 14, 1871, to January 25, 1943, was born near Ladekopp, West Prussia. She was the daughter of Johannes and Lisete Thimm, nee Isaac. She came to America with her parents in 1876 and settled near Beatrice about a year later. In 1897 she moved with her parents to Paso Robles, California, but in 1919 she returned to Beatrice. In 1888 she was baptized by Elder Gerhard Penner and became a member of the First Mennonite Church. In 1892 she was married to John Penner, but he died about one year later.

ELLA FRANCES REICHENBACH, May 31, 1891, to December 27, 1942, was the daughter of Alfred and Mary (Kiene) Reichenbach. Ella is survived by Mrs. Mary Sylvester of Columbus Grove, Ohio, and Edward at home, and John at Pandora. At the age of eighteen she was baptized and became a member of the St. John Mennonite Church, east of Pandora.

HENRY DALKE, August 31, 1857, to December 22, 1942, was born in south Russia, the son of Cornelius and Anna Duerksen Dalke. With his parents he migrated to Marion County, Kansas. During his life he lived at or near Hillsboro, Kansas; Cordell, Oklahoma; Vinita, Oklahoma; Du Bois, Idaho; and Aberdeen, Idaho. He was baptized by John S. Hirschler. When twenty-four years old he married Anna Buller. In 1909 she was taken from him in death. In 1910 he married Anna Mathies of Buhler, Kansas. In 1935 they celebrated their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary.

MRS. SARAH AUGSBURGER HAAS, wife of Rev. Jacob Haas, died at the age of seventy years, three months, and three days. She was born in Wayne County, Ohio, the daughter of Henry and Barbara Moser Augsburger. She united with the Swiss Mennonite Church when a young girl. She is mourned by her husband and seven children; Walter Haas of Bluffton, Ohio; Mrs. Enos Walters and Harvey Haas of Mt. Cory; Albert Haas of Columbus Grove; Mary Haas, who is a missionary to Nigeria, West Africa; Mrs. Ernest Francis of Detroit, Michigan; and Milford Haas of Pandora. Three surviving brothers and sisters are: Mrs. Jesse Welty and Mrs. Isaiah Welty of Bluffton; Mrs. Jesse Steiner of Mt. Cory, and Menno, Eli, and Walter Augburger of Bluffton.

FANNY BASINGER, May 13, 1886, to January 10, 1943, was the daughter of the late Moses and Sophia (Aerni) Basinger. She was born near Pandora. She was baptized in 1903 and became a member of the St. John Mennonite Church. Four sisters and four brothers who survive her are: Caroline of Findaly; Elma and Mary Basinger, and Mrs. Elizabeth Augsburger; Christian, Elam, Edwin, and Curus Basinger, all of Pandora.

MARY ANNE (nee Roth) TAYLOR, October 23, 1860, to November 29, 1942, was born in Milford Township, Bucks County, Pa., the daughter of David and Lydia Roth. She was baptized and received into the West Swamp Mennonite Church in 1877. Later she joined the Bethany Mennonite Church at Quakertown. In 1882 she was married to William Taylor. who preceded her in death in 1929. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Thomas White of Trumbaursville, Pa., and one brother, Frank Roth of Quakertown.

MRS. MICHAEL WENGER died on January 2, 1943, at the age of eighty-seven years, four months, and one day. In 1942 she and her husband celebrated the sixty-third anniversary of their marriage. With her husband and family Sister Wenger came to Aberdeen, Idaho, in 1909. There they developed a sage brush tract into a prosperous farm. She is survived by her husband; one daughter, Sadie; and three sons, Ira and Frank of Aberdeen, and Rev. Paul of Roaring Springs, Pa. (Paul Wenger has returned from mission service in India.) One brother, John B. Welty of Berne, Indiana, and one sister, Mrs. Emilie Rohrer of Ft. Wayne, Indiana, also survive.

WESTERN DISTRICT MINISTERS' CONFERENCE

will this year again be held in connection with the Bethel College Bible Week. The program of the first day will be of special interest to church officers and Sunday school leaders. To listen in on that hour of testimony will in itself be a great experience. We invite church officers and Sunday school leaders to attend this conference.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio

MARCH 8—"Bessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God," Matt. 5:8

This verse may be thought of as one of the great themes of Jesus' life. He emphasizes it many times. The Pharisees were rebuked for keeping the outside of the cup clean by following their ceremonies and traditions to the letter, but the inside of the cup, the mind and the heart, was untouched. Jesus does not imply that the outside phases of our religious life should be ugly or unclean. He does reveal that it is the purity within that is basic and most important. Like the large icebergs, nine-tenths of man's life lies beneath the surface within the inner consciousness which we call the "heart." The pure in heart shall see God. The impure do not have the inner consciousness which makes it possible for man to be sure of God's nearness.

MARCH 9—"Blessed are the peace makers: for they shall be called the children of God."

We are living in the midst of a world war, a war that seemingly no one fully expected and most people did not want. Christians are not all agreed upon the duties of a Christian during such a time as this. Whatever be his belief in regard to this question, he should not forsake the purpose of a peacemaker. No Christian can possibly be a "war maker." Emphasis should be placed upon the word "maker." Many are "peace believers," but few are "peace makers." Let us ask ourselves the question, do our lives bring goodwill, harmony, and peace into our homes, our church, and among all classes of men we meet day by day?

MARCH 10—"Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven."

Does persecution bring joy and contentment—only if we are persecuted for righteousness' sake. It is easy to have a persecution complex, that is, to go out of our way seeking disfavor and persecution. Thus, we do not seek righteousness, but we seek persecution or martyrdom. There is no virtue at all in martyrdom unless it is done for the sake of a great belief. God wants not our death so must as he wants our life dedicated to the Christ and His teachings. Blessed are those who endure the cross for the sake of Christ; there is joy and peace in such persecution. "Lo, it glows with peace and joy."

MARCH 11—"Ye are the salt of the earth," Matt. 5:13.

Jesus taught that our lives were like salt. Salt has two qualities—one for preservation and another for seasoning. We are often heavy on the side of preservation and light on the side of seasoning. We want to defend and preserve all the traditions of our fathers without re-applying and seasoning life today with this inheritance. "If the salt has lost its savor. . it is thenceforth good for nothing." We need both these qualities; we need to preserve the good that we find, and we need to season those areas of our life and understanding which have not been touched by the gospel.

MARCH 12—"Ye are the light of the world."

There can be no life without light—at least in its highest forms. Put a plant or a man in a dark dungeon and life soon ebbs away. We think of Jesus as being the light of the world, and, therefore, we say that there can be no life in its highest forms apart from Him. Jesus says in the Sermon on the Mount "Ye are the Light." As disciples of Jesus we gain some light from Him. Our lives reflect His light. Some of us reflect only a dim light like a single match which often flickers and goes out in the wind. Others have the light of a candle, still others the powerful searching light which can be seen for miles through the darkness. Or our lives, in a Christian way, may be like the flood lights which cover a very large area of life and make it possible for thousands to see their way clearly even on the darkest night.

MARCH 13—"Let your light so shine before men."

It is almost impossible to keep a light from shining somewhere. The world may build a wall around the light of Christ, but some of the light will be seen above the wall. If we have the Christian spirit, our light will shine in our words, our thoughts, and our deeds. It is not our purpose to try to keep this light for our own homes alone, but to let it shine from every hilltop throughout the world that "Men may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in Heaven."

MARCH 14—"I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill."

Jesus' severe criticism of the scribes and Pharisees is often thought to be an indication that he had little respect for the Mosaic law and the words of the prophets. The opposite is true. "I came not to destroy, but to fulfill." It was because of Jesus' profound insight concerning the great commandments that the narrow, casuistic, legalistic, attitudes of the Pharisees troubled Him. He simply let His light and life fulfill these ancient laws of God. Just as the scientist of today uses the laws of the lever and the inclined plane in every new machine so did Jesus use the law and the prophets for the fulfillment of His way of life.

Rethinking Civilian Public Service

By Sanford G. Shetler

When the first "conchics" arrived in camp in May, 1941, it was with the thought of encamping for a year's service. Until Pearl Harbor this was the idea forming the basic pattern of what was to be known as Civilian Public Service.

The thought of being in camp at all was to be alleviated by the time element. For many, after being reconciled to peace time conscription, it was going to be taken as a year's vacation, a more-or-less pleasant change from the normal pursuits of life. The fact of having to give free service was to be compensated for by the possibility of spending off-work hours leisurely by reading and study in the camp library or by participating in recreational activities, in short, in engaging in such activities as a busy life out of camp does not allow.

But after Pearl Harbor a complete readjustment took place. The time element was completely removed, and instead of a year's vacation, a new word came into usage, the word duration. The idea of free service for the duration was a different matter from that of a year's service, and the future economic situation began to loom in the minds of many. Instead of the former acquiescent attitude toward the work program, the type of service now became a matter of discussion. Off-work hours no longer carried with them the idea of leisure but assumed a cumulative value that demanded a more systematic utilization. All in all, it was evident that C.P.S. had undergone a complete revolution in the minds of the majority of the assignees.

Here is where the process of rethinking the entire program of Civilian Public Service began to take place. The social and religious attitudes of the men were being definitely affected, and the whole problem of the Conscientious Objector underwent the closest scrutiny. Such questions as, "Why are we here?", "Are we truly C.O.'s?", "Is this truly work of national importance?", were common in the minds of the men. Satisfactory solutions were sought at the expense of leaving the program for the army if no settled conclusions were reached.

We cannot say that this process of rethinking has ended. However, we who have been connected with the program are beginning to see emerging from the temporary chaos of thought and opinion, a definite C.P.S. pattern which is not likely to undergo much change for the duration. It is with a degree of satisfaction that we look upon the program as it is today, although it is not without its weak spots. The pattern is clearly defined. The religious objector has caught the significance of it all and is willing to concede his own opinion in points where there is any doubt.

Civilian Public Service as it stands today follows a four-fold program of religious, educational, recreational, and work-program activities. Around the religious program center the religious meetings, daily devotions, private interviews on life problems, and fellowship of other Christians, and personal growth activities. Around the educational program center various courses dealing with life problems, religious background, the alleviation of human suffering, economics and sociology, and industrial arts. The recreational program consists of a varied schedule of competitive athletics in the realm of the common games. The fourth part of the program, the work-project, is of course, the work of national importance that is to be the alternate service to military service. It naturally occupies the largest part of the assignees' time. The work consists of definite projects pertaining to the development of the nation's resources and the beautification of the landscape.

Civilian Public Service also includes today what is known as "detached service." Assignees who have spent at least two months in camp are given opportunity from time to time to go out on detached assignments in hospitals or on farms or in some type of specialized service relating to the development of the nation's resources or people. Detached service has served as a "safety valve" for the pent-up desire to serve in projects of greater national importance, and is therefore an indispensable part of the program.

The ideal objective, however, of these camps, is to prepare men for future service either by way of reconstruction or evangelism. This idea of active service for God after the war instead of returning to the normal life pursuits is one that is often expressed among the assignees. It is hoped that the former selfish life pattern will be definitely replaced by the altruistic pattern and thus help to interpret to the world the positive expression of the peace ideals which while in camp in time of war appear to give a negative testimony.

In rethinking the C.P.S. program, the part that religious training and belief as well as individual conscience plays in the life of the average assignee is by no means the least point of consideration. It is upon this ground that the men have accepted the program, and whereas the initial induction into camp during the time of peace time conscription included men whose opinions and convictions were not altogether crystalized, at the present time and since Pearl Harbor the depth and sincerity of these convictions has been the basis of successful adjustment to the entire program. General Hershey at the Winona Lake Conference of 1941 said that the status of a true C. O. would not be affected by the time element. He said that to the true C.O. it did not matter if the war lasted one year or ten. He recognized the fact that where men are guided by principle instead of passion, that the time element would not figure in the total picture.

A conscientious objector in a Civilian Public Service Camp is therefore neither to be an object of pity or of scorn. He has had sufficient time to re-think the whole situation thrust upon him and to make the necessary adjustment somewhere along the line. By and large, the average "conchic" is, however, much the same man as he was when he arrived in camp, as far as fundamental ideals and beliefs are concerned. He is one who is willing to serve his country in a way that does not conflict with these ideals, to submit to the "powers that be" and give a continued witness to the highest Christian ideals in his daily Christian life, indefinitely.

A true conscientious objector is definitely Christian in every aspect of life. His stay in camp for the duration is accepted in the truly Christian way as a part of God's plan for his life. To him it marks an important epoch in his life, a period of development and enrichment and the attainment of the highest blessings which can only result from being found in the Will of God. With this outlook there can be no great concern for the future of Civilian Public Service, for its future is held in the hearts and hands of the men who have adopted this concept and are willing, if need be, to die for its continuation if an effort is ever made to enforce military training and service upon them in its stead. —Turnpike Echo

NON-CONFORMITY TO THE WORLD

Rom. 12:1, 2, 9-21

I. Worship Service: 1. Songs: "O Love that wilt not let me go," No. 175 (written by a man who was blind); "A ruler once came to Jesus by night," No. 461. 2. Reading of Rom. 12:1 2, 9-12, leader's remarks, and prayer. 3. Offering for C. E. Work. 4. One or two stories of martyrs of the faith taken from the church history by C. H. Wedel.

II. Leader's Introduction:

The main interest of the Christian is in the things that abide in the unseen and eternal. The things which are material and are of only temporal value receive their rightful place in his life, and that is a place of minor importance. His life is centered in Christ and his way of living. He must love and serve others, so he cannot fritter his time away with things of lesser value. He cannot conform to the world, spend his time and energy acquiring wealth, or power, or fame, or position, or engaging in the frivolous pastimes of the world because he has other interests.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks

1. What does it mean to "walk by the Spirit"? Gal. 5:16-26.

2. What does it mean to "be crucified unto the world"? Gal. 6:14.

3. The relation of Christ's disciples to the world. John 13:1; 15:18,19; 17:6; 17:14-16; 17:9.

4. Faith and the world. I John 5:4,5.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What is meant by the world in John 15:18,19; I Cor. 2:12; 6:2; John 17:14-16 and the other above passages?

2. What have we as Mennonites meant by "non-conformity to the world"?

3. Should we hold to it today?

V. Facts for Study:

The disciples were warned by Jesus to expect the hatred of the world, the unredeemed general society of mankind. The world had hated Jesus because his pure life testified against its wickedness. The world which is selfish in its standards and ways of living; it seeks its own interests and is concerned with its own glory and well-being. Such standards are not acceptable to the Christian. He can not conform to them. So he is persecuted by the world in various ways: by subtle pressure to yield, by ridicule, by ostracism, by outright criticism and infliction of various degrees of punishment for his non-conformity.

Mennonites in the course of their history have generally taught and practiced a complete separation from the evil and selfish and vain practices of the world. They had the serious intent to live lives of purity and sincerity—in motive, in speech, in morals, in actions. The adoption of various tangible means helped to make it possible to live up to this ideal in group life. To shield their members against temptation the direct social and psychological contacts with "the world" were guarded against. Marriage should be within the brotherhood. Close social and business ties were discouraged. Even the adoption of a certain type of dress helped to bring about the consciousness of belonging to a group whose lives must be different from those about them.

Today the Mennonites again find that they cannot conform to the general attitude taken toward war and the people of our so-called enemy countries. Pressure is brought to bear on them from the outside. Their sincerity of desire to follow the Master's teaching and His way of living separates them into a group that desires to bear witness to their convictions.

VI. Food for Thought:

Non-conformity must be the result of an attitude of heart, manifesting itself in outward ways of living.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

HIS NAME

I. Worship Service: 1. Songs: "All hail the power of Jesus name," No. 3. 2. "Come Thou Almighty King, Help us Thy Name to Sing," No. 8. 3. "Take the name of Jesus with you," No. 485. 4. Read: Matt. 1:21; Isa. 9:6. 5. Prayer. 6. Offering.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Is a name important? Our parents or someone else gave us names; we did not choose them ourselves. Sometimes we like a name which we disliked before because we have pleasant associations with a person by that name, or vice versa. We associate character and life with a name. In India parents and relatives give odd names to children, e.g., a girl may be named Sukhala which means time of joy or prosperity if she happens to be born at a time of rejoicing, or she may be named Dukhala which means time of pain or grief; perhaps, there was sickness or a crop failure when the latter was born. A much beloved child may be named Sweepings, so that the evil spirits may not be interested in harming such a worthless thing. Sometimes a very precious boy, whose older brothers and sisters all died, is named Old Woman, for surely the evil spirits won't care about an old woman the people reason.

We are often urged by our non-Christian friends to be helpful here and there and to do good deeds for our good reputation, literally for our name. The fear of what people will say often influences both us and the people in India and other countries. The name of Jesus also stands for his character and life, that is why we can pray and work in His name.

A non-Christian storekeeper in India was very ill with pneumonia. He came to our hospital in Basna and to his and our surprise and joy the man recovered. He was very grateful and repeated again and again. "When I was earth and dust you served me and made me well." We explained that the service he had received had been given in the name of Christ, for if Christ had not come people in America would not have given money to build and run this hospital and there would be no people to serve here. Christ taught us how to love, give, and serve. He came to the daily morning services in the hospital, bought gospel readers for his little boys who could read and stayed on and on. Finally after he had paid his bills, the patient brought a cow and said he wished to give the cow as a thank offering for his recovery in the name of Christ. "Yes."—he added, "I would like best of all to stay here, but my children must go to school and I must look after my store to make a living."

III. Suggested topics for short talks: 1. Should we be concerned about our reputation? 2. Do we need a good name to be successful in earning a living? 3. Do we need a good name to be successful workers in God's kingdom? 4. What kind of a reputation should we aim to have? 5. Can it be a blessing to us if some one slanders us?

IV. Discussion or debate:

Is it right or wrong to ask what will people say? Give as many reasons for and against as possible, citing examples when people's opinions should influence our actions and when not.

V. Practical Application:

The poet says:

"He who steals my purse, steals something—nothing
'Twas mine 'tis his and has been slave to thousands,
But he who filches from me my good name
Robs me of that which not enriches him,
But makes me poor indeed."

We have given names, e.g., John, which are our personal property, also a family name, e.g., Brown. What John does honors or dishonors the Brown family. What I do as a Christian belonging to God's family also honors or dishonors Christ and God. Does my reputation and life attract others to become members of Christ's family the church?

VI. Let one or two pupils sing song No. 19 and all join in "May Jesus Christ be praised."

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

DISREGARD FOR THE LORD'S DAY

Isaiah 58:13, 14

One Day a Week for God

"One day a week for God—
To whom we owe all days
One holy day to honor him
In worship, prayer and praise!
One day a week for God—
'Tis needful for your soul
That Christ may touch the wounds of sin
And say to you. Be whole.
One day a week for God—
Your body, too needs rest,
Without relief from labor's strain
No man can do his best!
One day a week for God—
Only one day in seven

That every other day may be
A little more like Heaven!"

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy" (Exodus 20:8). Let us consider what day in the week is the Lord's day. The Jews of old were commanded by the Lord to keep the Sabbath day holy. This was Saturday, the seventh day of the week. Until the death and resurrection of Jesus, this day was always kept holy, but since then, the Christian people have kept Sunday, the first day of the week as the Lord's day, perhaps, since Sunday, the first day of the week, was the day of our Lord's resurrection. Many Bible incidents are related to have taken place on Sunday; or the Sabbath. It is important that we keep it a holy day.

God promised blessings upon his children for keeping the Lord's day holy, but many people are not doing this today, sad to say. Many people are working seven days a week and getting extra pay for the labor they do on Sunday, because they are in war plants. Still others are at home, sleep, and rest and never attend church, because they are too tired, but Monday morning always finds them back at their jobs and on time.

We know that God honors our efforts we put forth to serve him on Sundays, and living such lives that exalt Christ and do not disgrace his name, always pleases him.

The Question Bee

1. Why is it wrong to find excuses on Sunday morning, about going to Sunday School and church? 2. What are some things we can conscientiously do on Sunday? 3. What example did Jesus teach us about the Sabbath? 4. What is the Sabbath Day? Is it a Christian Day?

The Prayer List

Pray for (a) the church, that its doors may remain open to the people on the Sabbath. (b) the church, which has taught us God's law from our early childhood.

Ask God (a) to bless us and keep us to live according to the laws as given us. (b) to use us to carry his message. (c) to keep and bless the church and all the good work it is doing.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

A. S. BECHTEL

March 14, 1943

IN THE UPPER ROOM

John 13:12-20, 14:1-6

This lesson brings us to the concluding events in the last week of Christ's earthly life. It is a part of John's long record of the most notable evening of His life. The expression, "the upper room," suggests a place especially sacred to the Christian. In the upper room Christ had the last long heart to heart talk with His disciples on the night of His betrayal and arrest. There He tried to prepare them for the ordeal before them. There He washed their feet and instituted the sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Greatness in Humble Service, vss. 12-20

Time and again Christ had endeavored to have His disciples understand that true greatness consists in humbly serving our fellow-men. Now in the upper room He gave to them finest example of noble humility. No provision had been made for the washing of their dusty feet when they entered the upper room, so Jesus did this for them. He wanted them to grasp the full meaning of His washing of their feet. Even here in the upper room, they had been discussing as to who was entitled to the highest honors in the kingdom. In contrast to this, He gave to them an object-lesson in humble service, a lesson which they would never forget.

Jesus clearly asserts His lordship, yet he willingly stooped to do the work of a servant. He gave a concrete example of what He had taught before this concerning true greatness. It does not consist in high honor and position, but in inner heart quality. Jesus' disciples should be willing, likewise, to do a humble service for others. Jesus is our savior and our pattern and we are called to follow Him. Christ gave expression to the spirit of genuine humility. Happy are we if we have acquired this same spirit and have learned to put it into practice in our every-day living. The most happiness comes from humble service done for Christ's sake and for the welfare of others. Christ's whole life was one of service. In this most unusual act, so contrary to all custom, He helped men to see the standard of humble greatness which He requires and to make it a practical rule of life.

A Glorious Hope, vss. 1-6

Jesus had just been speaking to His disciples about His going away, and it was natural that they should be troubled. He spoke these tender words to those faithful ones to soothe their grief at the thought of His leaving them. Their sorrow was not merely a sentimental feeling at the parting of a dear friend. It was a deep perplexity of mind and heart arising from greatly disapointed hopes. Jesus' words resound like music in the soul and fill the Christian's heart with gladness and joy. He urges his disciples to have the same faith in Him which they have in God. He wants them to believe that He, Jesus, is able to and will keep His promise to them. This was to give them courage for the tragic day just ahead. Jesus is urging us today to hold a firm faith in Him.

Jesus beautifully designates the heavenly realm "my Father's house," our Father's house. Heaven is a large place with many abiding places, room for all who are prepared to enter there. Jesus came down from heaven and knew all about the "many mansions." He told the disciples all that they would understand at the time. How comforting it is to know that He is preparing a place for each faithful one where we shall ever be with Him. The blessed hope of each Christian is in the promise of a great reunion in the heavenly home. Jesus is the way to this home. It is open to all. Each one must choose for himself. We alone can exclude ourselves from this heavenly home. Christ is our one and only, our all sufficient mediator with the Father. He is the teacher of the truth which reveals God to us. He is the giver of the spiritual life which carries the believer to heaven.

We do not know just where the heavenly mansions are, but Christ knows, and He will conduct us there. We do not know when He will come to take us there, but that time matters little if we are ready for His call. We may be assured of happiness without alloy in His presence.

Correspondence

ST. JOHN MENNONITE CHURCH

Pandora, Ohio

Since the year is still new, it is not amiss to make resolutions and try to keep them. We do hereby resolve to write to The Mennonite oftener and less lengthily. For this one more time, however, we'll take the risk of incurring the editor's displeasure in writing a bit lengthily as we review lightly the things that took place in our church during the past year and up to the present.

Among the outstanding things were the series of special meetings held in spring under the auspices of the Young People's Bible Class. The messenger was J. Edwin Orr. Before each message, everyone of which was soul stirring, he would spend a short time showing pictures of places through which he had traveled and would tell of the Lord's wonderful leading in opening doors for spiritual ministry in many countries. Recently, with his wife, little daughter, Astrid, and little son, Allen Bertram, who had come into the family since their stay in our midst, he stopped in Pandora for a few hours on his way from Chicago to Massachusetts where Brother Orr is now being installed as an army chaplain. The welfare of the boys in the army camps has been a real burden upon his heart, and he feels that the Lord is definitely leading him into that service.

The work of the Jubilato Trio in our midst meant much last summer. They took part in a number of meetings, having charge of some of them entirely. Their messages in song, instrumental music, testimony, crayon drawings, and flannelograph presentation were truly helpful and inspiring. Their greatest contribution, undoubtedly, was their work in connection with the two weeks' Vacation Bible School that they conducted with over a hundred children in attendance. We feel the girls are truly being used of the Lord as they go from place to place with such spiritual ministries. One member of the trio is one of our own girls, Henrietta Schneck.

The visits of our China missionaries, Misses Aganetha Fast and Wilhelmina Kuyf, were much appreciated. To the pastor's family especially, they were "home-folks," and their visits and the reports of the Chinese churches carrying on in the face of much hardship, meant much. They realized anew the truth of the words of Prov. 25:25, "As cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country." We fellowshiped with the Grace church in a meeting in which Dr. P. A. Penner "took us to India" in the clear pictures he showed and the earnest message he gave. The two churches joined with other churches of the town to listen to a stirring message in the Grace church by Solomen Caulker, a young African from the field in which Rev. and Mrs. Walter Schutz have been laboring.

Thirteen of our boys have been called into the service of our country in some form or other, and a number of others will soon be going. How we need to "keep the home fires burning" spiritually, that the warmth thereof may be felt even in these far, away-from-home places.

Two beautiful church weddings took place during the year. In each case the bride said, "I will go," to a bridegroom from away when he said "Wilt thou go with me?" The first wedding was that of Ruth, daughter of Brother and Sister Hiram Geiger, when she was married to the Rev. Richard Reilly in July. They have since taken charge of a church in Nappanee, Indiana. The other wedding occurred in September when Martha, daughter of Brother and Sister Menas Gerber was married to the Rev. O. Karl Brown. They are serving several churches in the neighborhood of Kimmel, Indiana. While we miss the girls we are glad for every one of our young people that enters upon some definite Christian service. Other young people, nine in all, are preparing for their life work in Bible Schools and colleges.

The choirs of the church gave programs at different occasions. The most recent one was given by the mixed chorus at Christmas time, in the rendering of the Cantata "The Light Eternal." The cantata, ably and inspiringly rendered, was given entirely by home talent, the following taking leading parts; Director, Earl Lehman; accompanists, Ruth Bixel and Susie Welty; the soloists, Rolland Reichenbach, Helen Schneck, Arvilla Geiger, and Myron Hilty, singing the tenor, soprano, alto, and baritone solos respectively.

The elections at the annual business meeting resulted in bringing two new members into the church council, namely Hiram Kohli and Maurice Grisemore, as secretary and treasurer respectively. They are taking the places of Clarence Schneck and Howard Welty both of whom had served to the limit of the alotted time.

It is rather unique that throughout the year no deathes occured within the ranks of the members, until just as the year was about to "bend around the corner," when Ella Reichenback was called home. In a few days the Rev. Jacob Haas family was saddened when the mother was taken from them. Two years ago when their daughter Mary left for Africa it had seemed unusually hard for the mother and daughter to part, and it may have been due to the fear that they might not see each other again on earth, which has now become true. In a little less than a week Fannie Basinger also was called in death, after having been crippled for thirty-seven years and bedfast for twenty-three years. What a faith was hers and what a radiance of joy and love despite the suffering! Of her and these others who have left us as well as of us who remain, it has been and is true that God has His own way of leading His children along.

"Some through the waters, some through the flood,
Some through the fire but all through the Blood.
Some through great sorrow but God gives a song
In the night season and all the day long."

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF CHRISTIAN

Moundridge, Kansas

"Blessed be the Lord, who daily loadeth us with benefits, even the God of our salvation." Ps. 68:19. May all of us be mindful day by day of all that for which we can be thankful even in these critical and disturbing times.

Encouragement and spiritual nourishment was received from the following visitors in the past year: John P. Suderman, Augusta Schmidt, Helen A. Penner, J. Winfield Fretz, Herbert Schmidt, M.D., A. J. Dyck, Lester Hostetler, and W. F. Unruh. Walter Gering conducted evangelistic services in our church. His soul-stirring messages centered around the life and teachings of Paul.

Twelve of our men are in the armed forces, and twelve are in C.P.S. camps. Another member, a nurse, is in the Red Cross service. At Christmas time each one of these was sent the devotional book Strength for Service.

From our year book for the past year we glean: Membership, 354; total contributions for all causes, $9,010.28; baptized, 11; new members, 17; marriages, 9. Besides making cash contributions to mission work, the sewing society has given a kit to each man who went to a C.P.S. camp, and sent thirteen pounds of baby clothing to mission stations (this included five quilts), and also fourteen pounds of blocks to the same. Thirty-two pounds of new clothing were made and sent to the M.C.C. Five comforters were knotted and given to needy families, and three families were given food and clothing.

—The next Supplement to The Mennonite should come out on April 13. This will be possible if the treasurers send off their reports on April 1 or 2 and if the printer isn't overloaded with work.

—The Western District Tidings, the official paper of the Western District C.E. Convention, is nearing completion in the print shop as this is being written on February 24.

—The new Mennonite Hymnary has already passed through three editions, and over 14,000 copies have been sold in less than two years. "Never before has a Mennonite hymnbook met with such general favor as this one, and churches needing a new hymnbook will make no mistake by purchasing the same." —Year Book

—Brother A. S. Bechtel, pastor of the Einsiedel Mennonite Church, Hanston, Kansas, writes that he and Sister Bechtel plan to attend Bethel College Bible Week this year. He deplores the fact that our ministerial and other conferences are not announced earlier in our church papers.

—Two members of the Friends Ambulance Unit who worked in China are reported lost at sea. Plans are being made to have seventy more Americans join this unit in 1943 if possible. The Quakers are continuing their relief work in France to the extent that they have turned it over to a French organization. The Quaker relief workers expect to be repatriated and are now in forced residence at Baden Baden in Germany.

—Switzerland has some 11,000 foreign refugees now. Many of them came with only the clothes on their backs. Switzerland is physically limited in the number of refugees she can care for. She does an outstanding job in caring for them by providing work camps. Relief workers who saw two of these described them as "paradise" in comparison with the concentration camps of France. Clothing is strictly rationed and supplies are low.

—Spain is to be the scene of renewed relief work by Quakers and others who are interested. Two Quakers are already in Madrid.

—Dr. D. V. Wiebe, a member of the First Menno- nite Church, Reedley, California, traveled over 25,000 miles to reach a unit of the Friends Ambulance Unit at Kutsing, China. On the "homestretch" he rode on a mail bag in a mail car, but the scenery was pretty. He likes the hostel built by the unit, and the food is good. The town is in a little valley, surrounded by green rice fields. The crops that he saw towards the end of his journey looked as good as those on "the best bottom land in Kansas." (Dr. Wiebe comes from the community near Lehigh, Kansas.) There is much spiritual activity at the hostel. Gasoline is forty-five American dollars per gallon. Most trucks are driven on either charcoal, diesel oil, or alcohol. In the market are to be found such fruits as pears, oranges, persimmons, tangerines. All kinds of vegetables and especially potatoes are also available. Dr. Wiebe says, "I am now waiting word from Chungking concerning need for my help in the large hospital out there. If they want me out there I am to go next week. I have always wished that they might send me there as that is the center and nucleus of Free China. For later, I think I am scheduled to direct civilian relief. That will include medical and surgical, but only time will decide that and whatever they might want me to do I will do."

—The year book of the Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, opens up to a picture of the meeting house in a setting of trees, uncrowded by buildings, etc. The church has correspondents for both of our church papers. Eleven men are listed as being in C.P.S. camps. The offering schedules for 1943 shows that the church does not limit its giving to a few phases of district or General Conference work. The name "Wiens"—given twenty-three times—appears most often in the membership list which totals 205.

—The year book of the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, begins with the words, "Be ye not unequally yoked together with unbelievers: for what fellowship hath righteousness with unrighteousness? and what communion hath light with darkness?" The church has "German" and "English" secretaries. It elects correspondents to The Mennonite and the Bundesbote. The pastor is the "Hospital Representative." The church' gives generously for many causes. It has an active library committee. The Sunday school has a "Lookout" committee and also a "Welfare and Publicity" committee. The pastor made 140 calls at sickbeds during 1942. The total membership January 1 was 332. Eight men are in government camps. Undoubtedly, many of the young men in this church have been deferred because of farming status. Of the 332 members 40 bear the name "Wiebe," 38 the name "Dick," 35 the name "Claassen," and 35 the name "Regier."

—The Grace Mennonite Church, Enid, Oklahoma, recently had a three-day conference on "Mennonites and Their Heritage" led by J. Winfield Fretz. His subjects were: "Mennonites in the History of the Christian Church," "Mennonites Go to the City," "Anchors of Faith," "Mennonite Youth and the Present Crisis," and "Our Opportunities for an Effective Life." The bulletin which announces the conference has a very interesting front cover. It shows the six booklets of the "Mennonites and Their Heritage" series.

—More C.P.S. men are being invited to serve in various mental hospitals. Institutions which have begun such units recently are those at Ipsilanti, Michigan, and Vineland, New Jersey.

—Number of C.P.S. camps according to a February 5 report: 28 Mennonite camps, 17 Quaker camps, 16 Brethren camps, 2 Catholic camps, 2 cooperative camps, and 1 Methodist unit. These figures include hospital units. Total number of men in C.P.S. is 5,852 with several hundred awaiting assignment.

C.P.S. Camps Continue to Give to War Sufferers' Relief

Brother H. A. Fast, General Director of Camps, reports as an evidence of fine camp spirit the fact that in the past two months 10 C.P.S. camps have given $1144.92 for War Sufferer's Relief. Of this amount $63.00 came from individual boys as their own personal gifts, $707.23 was contributed by camp Sunday Schools, and $374.69 was turned over to relief purposes by the boys when they voluntarily fasted or partook of "frugal meals."

—First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: Into the Hymnary rack are to be put envelopes which will contain the list of causes that can be given to. As the donor gives he checks the cause given to. At a special congregational meeting it was also decided that the laity do more in the way of education for mission and for tithing. The meeting house is to be shingled and a storage room built under it.

—A member of the Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., has sent a number of bulletins with very beautiful designs on the front. These were done by Mrs. Olin Krehbiel, the wife of the pastor. Mrs. Krehbiel also enjoys writing poetry.

ence is seeking to keep in touch with a little paper that is to be issued from time and which is to contain a summary of the activities of the brotherhood, a list of materials for local chapter programs, news items of general interest, and reports on projects. Plans have been made to have the annual fellowship dinner in March. During the past four years this brotherhood has raised $250.00 each year for the education of John Boehr at Bluffton College. Now they have undertaken a project of a permanent nature. It it planned to raise one hundred dollars each year for the creation of a permanent Scholarship Fund, which is "to be used in helping educate young men of our conference for religious work." The brotherhood plans to raise this money but will welcome aid from churches and individuals. The following books are listed as suggested material for programs: The Story of the Mennonites by C. Henry Smith, With Christ on the Edge of the Jungles by Samuel T. Moyer, Twenty-Five Years With God in India by P. A. Penner, and the Mennonites and Their Heritage series. A mission number of The Mennonite is also suggested for reports on China, India, etc. On the next page is given a program outline based on booklet number one of the "Heritage" series. The Quakertown chapter has undertaken the responsibility for building a Workers' Cabin at Men-O-Lan this coming spring. The president of the brotherhood is Eli R. Fretz of Pleasant Valley, Pa.

—Bible Week at Bethel College is to be held March 7 to 12. Jacob H. Janzen, minister from Waterloo, Ontario, and M. C. Lehman, former missionary to India and relief worker in Europe are to be the speakers. Brother Janzen is to preach in the Bethel College Church on the morning of March 7.

—Johannestal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Vernon Unruh of Bloomfield, Montana, brought the message on a recent Sunday morning when Brother Regier had to remain at home because of a bad cold. Brother Unruh is a ministerial student at Bethel College. While Brother Regier was gone to the Home Mission Board meeting, Brother John A. Ewert filled the pulpit. Our pastor leads our young people in a study of Mennonite history on Wednesday evenings.

—The Saturday Evening Post desires to draw attention to the article "We Must Feed Europe's Children" in the issue of February 20.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: John von Reisen, who is the head bookkeeper at the huge Dempster Windmill Manufacturing company, has been appointed by the auditing committee to assist treasurers of various church organizations who have problems with their work. "Do you know? That a C.P.S. Hospital unit of twenty-five men now serves at Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, where Mennonites stayed temporarily in 1876 before deciding where to settle. The Mt. Pleasant people extended a most cordial welcome to them to remain in Iowa and were much disappointed when most of them decided to settle in Nebreska and Kansas. Do you know that Rev. Peter Dyck influenced a number of these immigrants to choose Kansas as the state of greater possibilities? Do you know that his great-grandson, now the pastor (Walter H. Dyck) of this church, chose Nebraska to be his home?" This bulletin lists in advance the birthdates of men in C.P.S. camps. One of the mission societies held an offering recently for the kitchen equipment in the Bethel College Memorial Hall. The cement floor in the basement of the meeting house has been completed.

—Bulletins, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: While the pastor conducted a series of evangelistic meetings at the Eden Mennonite Church in Kansas, Jesse Toavs of Windom brought the message. Brother Toavs is a missionary of the American S.S. Union. "During the last ten years the consumption of cigarettes in the U.S. has increased from 106 billions to 162 billions per year. Today about 60 per cent of the men and and nearly 30 per cent of the women are consistent cigarette smokers. How can God bless a people which wastes so much? 'Wherefore do ye spend money for that which is not bread?' Isa. 55:2" Brother August Ewert brought the message while the pastor spoke at the C.P.S. camp at Denison, Iowa.

—A group of men, among them Henry Sloane Coffin, Henry St. George Tucker, Reinhold Niebuhr, and Henry P. Van Dusen, now advocate the "immediate despatch of limited quantities of powdered milk and vitamins for the relief of starving children in the conquered countries of Europe. . . ." The forty-three signers of this statement are said to "explicitly disassociate themselves from former President Hoover's various feeding schemes and from the agitation of pacifist and isolationist groups." AN INSPIRING STORY OF STEWARDSHIP

As Told of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington

Historical Background

The period from 1899 to 1902 saw several migrations of Mennonites to eastern Washington, some directly from South Dakota, others, originally from South Dakota and Kansas, but coming by covered wagon from Oregon where they had first settled. These homesteaded in a country so desolate that one wonders how they managed to survive the first few years when progress was so slow. Sage brush as far as the eye could see—sage brush inhabited by hordes of jack-rabbits, coyotes, even wild horses. Occasional trails through the brush were the only roads. Clearing the land of sage brush isn't an easy task today with modern machinery. What a grueling task it must have been for those hardy pioneers! And yet many a family might have frozen in their sod hut had it not been for the sage brush which served as fuel.

As the land was gradually cleared it was found that the powdery soil had a way of retaining moisture for long periods and that it could grow a fine hard wheat. It could also blow itself into swirling, blinding dust storms. Present methods of farming control this tendency pretty well.

Eventually the sod huts gave way to substantial farm homes and the people began to prosper. They had brought their spiritual leader with them, Rev. J. R. Schrag, who was largely responsible for the migration to Washington. For some time there was no church building, but they worshiped in their homes and in school houses in the various districts—Menno, Tiflis, and Ruff. The late Rev. P. R. Aeschliman, and Rev. S. S. Baumgartner of Portland often served these groups over a period of years.

In 1908 it was decided to build a church at one of the cross-roads in the center of the district, a place called Menno which boasted a post-office, store, and school. The late Peter Gering gave the land for the church building, and Rev. John Waltner, at present the oldest active member, gave the land for the cemetery. That building, with improvements added from time to time, is still the Menno Mennonite Meeting House and the only building left of the former town of Menno.

The church has been served by five pastors: the Revs. J. R. Schrag; D. B. Hess; D. D. King; M. J. Galle; and E. J. Miller. Several of these ministers also served the Ruff church which was built meanwhile and which merged with the Menno Church in 1937.

About every other year produced a good crop until the years 1930-31 and '32 which brought complete crop failures. Conditions were so bad that the Salem Church near Freeman, South Dakota, sent money to help along. Some lost their farms, and many moved away. Those who weathered the disaster bought up the land, for they had found that farming in eastern Washington must be done on a large scale to be successful. Where thousands of acres lay idle now everything is under cultivation, and nearly every ranch consists of several thousand acres.

It wasn't until 1940 that prosperity really began its return. Then in 1941 and 1942 there came such crops as had never been seen before. These past three years have seen a clearing up of debts, many improvements, and a trend towards cattle raising as a profitable side-line. Through it all the people have been traditionally Mennonite in their belief in hard work, thrift, simple living, and church loyalty. It should be noted that there is no community near the church. It seems to stand in the "middle of nowhere," but in reality it is the center of several Mennonite districts—those near Lind, Ritzville, Odessa, Menno, Ruff, and Schrag. Lind, Ritzville, and Odessa are about twenty miles from the meeting house. The others vary from twelve to eighteen miles, with a few ranches nearer by. It is not unusual for the pastor to cover more than five hundred miles a month in pastoral calling and related work. The present active membership is 136 with 33 of these living at distances which prevent their attending church more than a few times a year. Many of these latter are associate members of churches in the communities in which they live but wish to retain their membership in a Mennonite church.

Stewardship Beliefs

Many of the Menno church members tithe and the young people are being taught to do so. When talking to various members about giving, the thought expressed most often is, "When God blesses us so much, we owe it to Him to give abundantly."

One member, whose contributions have been very generous, when asked to give a statement of his idea of giving, thought it over and made this surprising observation: "Well now, really, we don't feel that we have given much. We haven't had to deny ourselves anything or suffered any. We should have given a lot more." Evidently this member does not believe that giving is really giving until it hurts. Jesus expressed such a thought as He sat over against the treasury one day watching a certain widow put in her mite.

When asked about his church and record of giving, the Sunday School Superintendent, one of the deacons, wrote the following statement:

"Our church has gone through two depressions. During the period 1929-1935 our members were confronted with a series of crop failures causing such a financial depression that some lost their land and others were at the point of losing their farms and homes. All had to make sharp adjustments, for in these years there was no income from the farm, and the church had to receive help instead of give it.

"A flock of sheep out in a lonely country without a shepherd feels lost. Our church was in a similar condition during the time we were without a pastor before Rev. and Mrs. Edmund Miller came to serve us. They came in 1940 when the bad years were just ending. Since then the dear Lord has abundantly blessed this community, so that the grain elevators have not been able to hold the golden wheat. With such a pastor as Rev. Miller to make us aware of the blessings bestowed upon us and that we are but stewards over God's property, we have felt it a joy and a duty to give back to God a small share of what He has given to us. We firmly believe Malachi 3:10."

Pastor's Belief in Stewardship

The Rev. Millers' personal belief in stewardship was expressed as follows: "We believe that stewardship begins with the yielded life. Only as we lay our highest hopes, our brightest talents, our material goods, and our very hearts at the feet of Jesus can we serve Him acceptably.

"We have never felt that the minister is exempt from either tithing or giving. We have always taken that part which belongs to God from our pay check first, and what is left streches so much farther! We believe that we owe the tithe to God and that only what is more than the tithe is a true gift. We feel that tithing is a wonderful way for people of the lower income brackets to be always among the givers. These same people, with no systematic method of giving usually have nothing to give.

"We also believe that if every church were a tithing church no cause of Christ need ever suffer want and that all the time, energy, and money put into pleas for help for the many worthy causes could then be turned into other channels of service."

Stewardship Opportunities For 1943

This year a fund has been started for a new meeting house to be erected after the war. The money given so far has been largely in the form of Civilian Bonds. However, this local project is

EDMUND J. MILLER

Born near Freeman, South Dakota, January 13, 1910. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Julius Miller of Freeman.

Graduated from Freeman High School—1929

Graduated from Freeman Junior College—1931

Attended Moody Bible Institute—1932

Graduated from Bethel College—1935

Attended Biblical Seminary in New York—1935-1937

Attended Western Baptist Seminary—1939

Married August 28, 1937, to Miss Christine Oakes of Rochester, N. Y. whom he met at Biblical Seminary where she was doing graduate work in the field of Religious Education.

Ordained to the gospel ministry Sept. 5, 1937, in Freeman, South Dakota, by his pastor, Rev. Albert Claassen, assisted by the late Dr. P. R. Schroeder.

Ordained elder in Portland, Oregon, by Rev. S. S. Baumgartner and members of the Evangelization Board of the Pacific District Conference.

Served under the Home Mission Board in Portland 1937-1940. Came to the Menno Church in Feb., 1940.

District Conference duties include education board, young people's and retreat work.

not to curtail the contributions of the church to the regular General Conference causes, nor is the availability of Civilian Bonds to cause neglect of the Peace Certificates for C.P.S. and Relief. A majority of the members feel that, "We could have done far more last year than we did. We hope to do so this year. As the Lord gives to us, so may we give."

No matter what comes—whether lean years or good years, the people are learning the art of giving. This is of great importance. The habit of giving and giving some more is not easily engendered, but once formed the joys and blessings that result help to fix it permanently.

Contributions For 1942

It is a good thing to "weigh in" the treasures of the church at the end of the year to see whether the Christian heart of the church is still beating or whether it has succumbed to selfishness.

At the "weighing in" at the end of 1942 the contributions of the Menno Church added up as follows:

Foreign Missions	$ 1,291.06
Home Missions	633.80
Pacific District Conf. Home Missions	556.63
Relief	2,233.63
Civilian Public Service	1,918.31
Educational-Publication Boards	20.00
Mennonite Colleges	3,586.12
Local	3,882.05
(An average of $103.08 per member)	$14,121.60

Financial Program of the Church

The only offerings taken in the church are those for missions twice a month. These are distributed one-half to Foreign Missions, one-fourth to Gen. Conf. Home Missions, and one-fourth to Pacific District Home Missions. On every fifth Sunday a Relief offering is taken. Local expenses, including the pastor's salary, are cared for by elected treasurers who receive the money, unsolicited, from the members who give when and as much as they feel they should. There is always money in the local treasuries.

The largest amounts for C.P.S. and Relief are acquired through the sale of M.C.C. Peace Certificates and Stamps. A committee of three members takes care of contributions to the Mennonite colleges. A certain time is set aside when the needs of our institutions are stressed from the pulpit and in the church bulletin, and willing hearts respond liberally.

These people of the Menno Mennonite Church feel it their great privilege to help feed and clothe a physically and spiritually starved world; to uphold their Mennonite heritage of peace-mindedness therough the Civilian Public Service program; and to give to Christian education, believing that the future of the Church is dependent upon Christian colleges for its preachers, its teachers, its missionaries, —its leaders.

FIRST LADY COMMENTS ON SOME MENNONITE C.O.'S

During her recent visit to the New Jersey State Hospital at Marlboro, New Jersey, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt interviewed six of the Mennonite assignees in the unit of men who are giving their services there. Concerning her visit her column "My Day" reports:

"We met here with some of the group of Mennonites who are conscientious objectors and who have volunteered to serve in hospitals for mental cases. They are a very fine group of young men and bring a spiritual quality to their work because of their religion. In many ways, this is probably raising the standard of care given the patients."

"The Bible is a loaf, every chapter is a slice, and every verse a big bite. There is no need of starving with such an abundant supply of the 'bread of life.' "

Social and Religious Life of the Russian Mennonites in the Chaco of Paraguay

By John R. Schmidt, M. D.

The social and religious life of the Russian Mennonites was a varied one before coming to Paraguay. They knew much less about each other in many respects than Mennonites from one part of the United States know about those in another part. They were separated by great distances; and the means of communication were poor. They dwelt in the Ukraine, the Crimea, in the Caucasus, and in Siberia. Even in the small Crimean area there were such variations of culture that the "ways" of some groups were strange to each other.

The progressive spirit of the Mennonites brought them under diverse influences. Some were educated in non-Mennonite schools; some lived in the midst of non-Mennonite people. Some became great manufacturers, and through their business they came into contact with various influences. So there were many reasons for marked variations of customs and habits of living among these people.

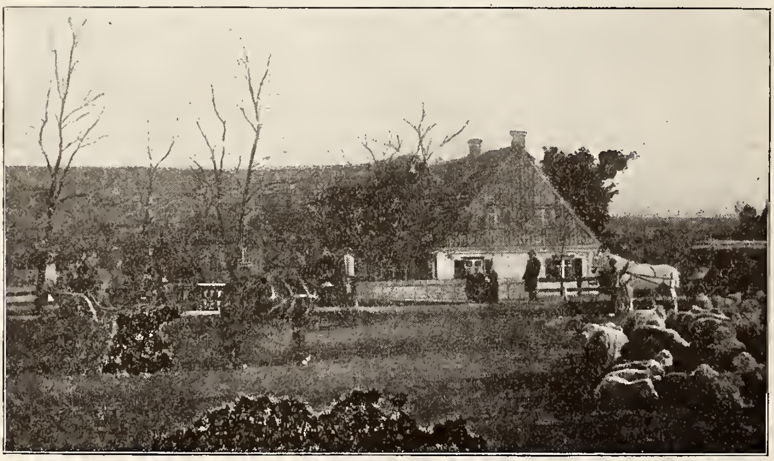
A LARGE "STEAM-MILL" NOT "WINDMILL" IN HALBSTADT, RUSSIA

Jacob Willms and Company built this large mill around 1900. In it was ground into flour wheat raised by Mennonites. Some of the flour was exported. Brother A. Warkentin believes that flour made in this mill was used by his parents. Two other large flour mills in Halbstadt were owned by Peter Willms and Heinrich Willms. Some of the relatives of Jacob Willms live in the United States and Canada. The above mill was later taken over by the Bolsheviks. Soon thereafter it burned down. For what reason no one seems to know. Right behind this mill stood the largest Mennonite starch factory in the world.

Persecution Brings Uniformity

The persecution of these people because of their religious faith brought forth some of the fundamentals of Christianity in which there was more uniformity than in their ways of living. A common faith and a firm belief in the Mennonite cause is a binding thing during routine life, but it is doubly so when put under stress. Under the Communist regime the possibility of ever getting free seemed remote. Continuous cooperation among themselves to find a way out of danger brought understanding and love for each other.

It is little wonder that when they finally did get free and gathered in Germany the M.C.C. found them agreed 100 per cent for the organization of villages. The variations of customs and habits of living seen under ordinary life couldn't occupy their minds at all when there was a possibility of living in villages in a free land. Although some of them were aware of these differences, they probably felt that since they were all Mennonites they would be able to make adjustments in regard to these variations. The leaders for each village: teacher, preacher, and ruling council, were all chosen before they landed in Paraguay.



A MENNONITE HOMESTEAD IN THE MOLOTSCHNA

Note the sheep. Large flocks of sheep were kept in South Russia. One carriage has a cover on which, seemingly, are tassles. Perhaps, the trees were planted by Mennonites, for they planted many trees in the treeless regions of Russia. This picture was taken before 1908, for it appeared in the Bundesbote Kalendar of that year.

A Picture to Remember

If the readers will keep the above picture in mind, I believe, they will more clearly understand why various developments have taken shape like they have. Colonization went forward very rapidly when one considers what they had to begin with. Their enthusiasm to make their colony 100 per cent Mennonite in all respects was as great as the world has ever seen. They lived under canvas tents in a strange wilderness. They practically lived off worm-infested beans, yet they worked courageously making adobe bricks, digging wells, and clearing brush. Even with all this they found time to develop grade schools, Sunday schools, church services, and even an academy for higher education. With the organization of these educational institutions they also formulated rules to regulate the social activities of their youth. This whole set-up was established before the people knew their own neighbors. So as time went on we see embarrassment and humiliation over major problems arising from minor differences between neighbors. Many adjustments have been made all along by them. However, there are differences in their social and religious life which have not even been ignited.

Harmony Becomes Less

In the description of conditions as they exist let us progress from the more harmonious to the less harmonious activities. The encouraging thing is that all the settlers want to be true Mennonites above everything else (That does not hold true of all the young people, however.), which is clear when you keep their past experiences in mind.

Church Organization and Services

The church expresses this desire most strongly. Like in Russia the Mennonite Brethren make up the largest group. The two smaller groups are the General Conference and the Alliance Mennonites. There has been considerable interchanging by various people from one group to another, including preachers, in an effort to find a group with more desirable ideals.

The plan for services and the type of services are essentially the same for all groups. The Sunday service has two parts, the sermon service and the Sunday school for children. There are no Sunday school classes for adults. The children's classes are similar to ours in the United States. They also have their Sunday school picnics. The sermon usually begins after Sunday school (before Sunday school in summer). Usually a choir renders special music. It is of very good quality as a rule. The general singing is always done without books; a leader reads the stanzas before they are sung. This practice tended to make me feel somewhat sad at first because in the United states I had only experienced this at committal services at the grave in the cemetery. The preachers deliver very good sermons, as a rule giving very intelligent interpretation to scripture.

Once every month each church group has a general assembly for all of its members in the colony. On the other Sundays they gather at the various village schools. The various villages are not composed purely of any particular church group, however. There are no Christian services on Sunday night as a rule. Most villages have prayer meetings one night of the week. In some villages they are Christian endeavor meetings, and in others they are political meetings. At the close of any public meeting it is the custom always to let all the women folk get out before the men even get up.

FEAR IN THE ORIENT

Many of our Christians in the Basna area earn their living by weaving and selling cloth. Some are what we call in America, hucksters, buying cloth at one place and selling at another for some profit. Our brother Tikesan, a farmer, and a good substantial brother in the church, heard that at a certain bazaar (market) cloth was fairly cheap. It was a distance of some forty miles. He decided to go; saying goodbye to his young wife and three small children. On his way back, heavily loaded on his back with the cloth he had bought, cholera overtook him. He managed to get as far as to the home of his sister and brother-in-law, some fifteen miles from his own home and family. As soon as his brother-in-law saw that Tikesan had cholera he drives him out of his home. Poor Tikesan has to leave, though by now he can bearly drag himself on. It is terrifically hot and outside of the village he sits down under a shade tree. He is now so weak that he cannot get up anymore, and he dies there, alone and uncared for. What must the last moments have been for this good man; whose own sister and brother-in-law drove him out into a lonely death? It was fear that did this to Brother Tikesan. His brother-in-law is no evil person, but under the control of fear he was willing to be most cruel. —John Thiessen

Clothing Donations Run High

A favorable report on the clothing contribution comes from Sister Lydia Lehman of the clothing Depot, Akron, Pennsylvania. Throughout the winter a constant stream of clothing has been coming from congregations all over the country. In past years the donations of clothing generally began to decline during February. This year, Sister Lehman reports the clothing contributions continue to arrive in larger quantities from congregations far and wide.

Plans are under way for shipment of clothing to England and Paraguay in the near future.

WORKERS TOGETHER

By Harold D. Burkholder

Text: II Cor. 6:1, "We then as workers together with Him, beseech you also that ye receive not the grace of God in vain."

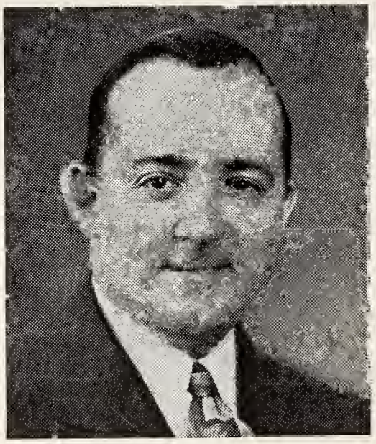
Present day conditions demand closer cooperation between God's people. "A house divided against itself cannot stand." Forces of evil are uniting to strike their crushing blow. How much more must God's redeemed ones "work together"; fight together the good fight of faith. The druggist or physician who mixes his drugs for the purpose of battling a disease would be giving you a free ticket to the undertaker's parlor if each ingredient were given separately. This suggests the importance of "working together" for the glory of God. Several things must be considered if we are to be "Workers Together with Him."



H. D. Burkholder

United in Christ

I. We must be "In Him." Amos 3:3, "How can two walk together except they be agreed?" The Bible is the infallible rule and guide of life. It is divinely inspired—not as writers today—but "God breathed," therefore without error or contradiction. The scriptures present many outstanding teachings on which all Christians must agree. There is the doctrine of the deity of Christ, (that Jesus Christ was God manifest in the flesh—very God, of very God.) The virgin birth of Christ. The atoning death of Christ for all sinners, ("all have sinned" Rom. 3:23). The bodily resurrection of Christ and His second coming. Christ's teaching that it is sin to war with the carnal sword. Many others could be mentioned. Anyone who is in Christ, having been born again from above by the regenerating power of the Holy Spirit, will have no difficulty in agreeing on these fundamental principles. Those who are not in Christ are still "natural men and cannot receive the things of the Spirit for they are spiritually discerned." (I Cor. 2:14) God does not ask all religions to work together, "For how can two walk together unless they be agreed?" God has always required "separation" and not "cooperation" with those who deny His Word.

A theological professor made this statement recently, "The greatest danger to the Gospel of Christ after this war is over is the federating of churches and religions." The uniting of all bodies and groups, regardless of their consideration of the Bible or of Jesus Christ, is a program from the pits of hell and had its beginnings at the "Tower of Babel." To have anything to do with this is to confess that our forefathers were wrong, and that we should have no Mennonite, Baptist, Reformed, etc., denominations today. We are a Mennonite Church because Menno Simons intolerantly stood against certain things which were contrary to scripture. We need never expect united action between those who hold a conservative, fundamental position and those who in their liberalism deny the Truth. God does not expect it; in fact He condemns it. (II Cor. 6:17) However, He pleads for united cooperation among all His redeemed Saints. To be "Workers Together with Him," we must be planted together, builded together, joined together, raised together and seated together in Christ.

Knit Together in Love

II. We must be knit together in love. Col. 2:2 "That your hearts may be. . .knit together in love." Church factions, disruptions, and failures are due to a lack of true Christian love. The love of Christ if shed abroad in our hearts constrains us to love the unlovely, to overlook the faults of others to love those who speak evil of us and despitefully use us. The fruit of the Spirit, which includes "love," needs to express itself in a practcal way.

This is the meeting-house of the East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., of which Brother Burkholder is pastor.

Strive Together in Prayer

III. We must strive together in prayer. Rom. 15:30 "That ye strive together with me in prayer." The word "strive" means to labor hard, even to the point of agony. This calls for fervent, importunate praying. It is a praying church which is a working church. Let us rekindle the fires of prayer. "Our ability to stay with God in the closet measures our ability to stay with God out of the closet." Paul admonishes us to "Pray always," "Pray without ceasing." How prayerless we all are. Is it any wonder that not more is accomplished for Him? Every member in a church must feel his responsibility here. For "ye can help together by prayer for us, "praying" that utterance may be given to us as ministers, in order that we may speak the mysteries of Christ." The church needs people of prayer. "Let us strive together" in that work. Talking to God about men will make us more efficient and powerful in talking to men about God.

Strive Together for Faith

IV. We must strive together for the faith. Phil. 1:27. "Striving together for the faith of the Gospel," laboring to the point of agony against those who would destroy the "faith once for all delivered unto the saints." There are many today, as predicted in the Bible, who are denying the faith, denying the scriptures, denying Jesus Christ as being God. This is one battle in which there can be no C.O.'s. We must be militant Christians, "putting on the whole armour of God." and attacking Satan on every front. In such an attack we cannot have our forces scattered; instead, we need to "strive together" for the victory.

As "Workers Together," having been planted, builded, joined, quickened, raised, and seated together with Him, and as knit together in love, striving together in prayer and for the faith, we look forward to the time when:

All Together With Christ

V. We shall be caught up together with Him (I Thes. 4:17,18) and shall be glorified together. (Rom. 8:17)

"Therefore my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord." "For our light afflictions which are but for a moment worketh for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." Let us be "Workers Together with Him."

"The truly useful person is so busy that he does not have time to consider how useful he is."

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

REVERENCE IN MEETINGS

Walter Lippman, one of America's most widely read columnists and commentators said some years ago that the reason many people didn't go to church is because they were not certain of finding God there. He said if they knew that they would actually meet God there the churches would be filled to overflowing every Sunday including the very front seats.

Judging from my own observation of the irreverent behavior of many people when they are at worship services in the house of the Lord, I too wonder whether such people are really meeting their God.

The Small Church

For some reason or other the irreverent conduct seems to be greater in the small churches where informality and loose organization seems to be the common characteristic. The commotion caused by the Sunday school session may be a partial factor in explaining this condition. This is especially true where the Sunday school sessions are held preceding the worship services rather than following them. Children running in and out, whispering, laughing and even visiting throughout the entire service by individuals far beyond the innocent stage of childhood is all to frequent a characteristic in many of our churches. What defense can there be for such conduct in the sacred house of God during the most solemn hour of the whole week, the hour of church worship

Do We Teach Reverence?

Reverence is an attitude. It is an attitude of profound respect, of awe, of veneration, of adoration, of worship of something high and holy. To the sincere Christian this attitude should most manifest itself in the Sabbath meeting. It is here that man stands eagerly searching and penitent before God. The Roman Catholics have something to teach us on this point. Those of us who have visited their churches have been deeply impressed with the attitude of reverence existing there. There is no talking, no whispering, no running around during the service. This is so because it is taught from earliest childhood that the Church is holy and sacred and is the abiding place of Almighty God and Jesus Christ, the Son and that when one comes to church he comes into this divine presence.

What Can We Do?

The small church need not be characterized by irreverence nor need the large one. And it is possible to cultivate the attitude of reverence without stained glass windows, vivid imagery, heavily carpeted aisles and cushioned pews. We can practice the habit of coming to church for one purpose and that is to meet God. When we come early it is not necessary to

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio

MARCH 15—"First be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift" Matt. 5:24.

One of the far reaching by-products of war is the deep lines of enmity between brothers. In a spiritual sense this is even more tragic than the direct loses of life, liberty and property during a war. We can avoid this, however, if we "First be reconciled to our brother." If we place uppermost in such a time an attitude and understanding of reconciliation, we shall avoid the vast consequences of a situation wherein we have race against race, nation against nation, brother against brother after the conflict is over. The key to this lies in our willingness to forgive whatever wrong may have been done to us under the stress and emotion of the present time.

MARCH 16—"For if we forgive men their trespasses your heavenly Father will also forgive you." Matt. 6:14

The law of forgiveness is written in the very nature of life. God has thus created life that wherever there is sin one against another there is also the power to forgive. Everywhere and always God makes it possible to forgive. God forgives because of His boundless love. Just as in nature an injury to the bark of a tree or in human life the injury to a finger is healed over again so in the spiritual life God is more than ready to forgive. In the story of the Prodigal Son the father was waiting for the wayward son indicating that his forgiveness even preceded the son's return. Thus does God through Christ make it possible for men to return to Him through the pathway of forgiveness. If we forgive, He also forgives.

MARCH 17—"And whosoever shall compel thee to go with him a mile, go with him twain." Matt. 5:41

These are days for the "Second mile" Christian. If someone asks to do something in line with our Christian duty, do more than we are asked. If the suffering of humanity demands one of our coats, let us give them two. Love always goes beyond what duty dictates. Citizens of a country are called upon to make certain sacrifices and adjustments in a time of war. The Christian should not shrink from these duties unless something is asked which is opposed to his religious faith. If he is asked to go one mile for his country and his God, he should go two. We should do this in peace time as well as in a time of war. We do not go very far in life if we do no more than our duty.

MARCH 18—"Love your enemies" Matt. 5:43

They say that it can't be done when we are at war. We are told by some that we must hate with all our being. Even if one accepts was as inevitable and believe that we should stop all else until the war is won, hatred is unwise. Only by emphasizing the love for one's country, love for positive ideals or the four great freedoms can the government enlist men to fight. Love ennobles and increases power while hatred degrades and paralyzes power. Should we not love our enemies in a time of war even more than in an era of peace? Is not love and respect for our enemies eventually going to formulate a just and lasting peace?

MARCH 19—"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your father in Heaven is perfect." Matt. 5:48

Various interpretations are given this text. In some ways it may be taken as the Christian goal—something always within sight but never quite within our grasp. I am sure that no one would declare himself to be one hundred per cent Christian—only Jesus could be accredited in this way. Perfection is our incentive. We grow toward it as God gives us the power, vision and the faith. Another idea may be gained from this challenging verse and that is that while we have imperfection here, we may expect perfection in the next world wherein we live with God. Thus it is that the realization of this teaching may be known. Then, too, in so far as we live with God here, do His will as revealed in Christ, we have perfection already not in all things, but in the few things wherein God reigns.

MARCH 20—"When thou prayest—enter thy closet"

So many prayers are uttered to be heard of men and never reach God at all. A small boy once asked his father after a Sunday service, "Father why did you preach so long with your eyes closed?" Prayer is not preaching, it may not necessarily be speaking; it is entering into our closet to be alone with God. We close our eyes to shut out the visible to that we might see the eternal. We shut the door against our own petty problems and worries and commune with God. A great preacher described prayer as being "the hospitality of the soul." In such a spirit of hospitality to God we pray quietly, sincerely with our whole being and we come forth from the closet with an assurance of God's will for us.

MARCH 21—"But when you pray, use not vain repetitions."

The scribes and Pharisees made prayer merely a ritual as many Christians are apt to do in their religious life. There is a large place for beautiful rutual provided that it is meaningful and entered into with understanding and sincerity. So often our prayers slump down into the area of "vain repetitions." In this way we merely repeat words, words and words which have no relationship to our spiritual condition or our real needs and, consequently, we do not really pray although we spend much time speaking in a loud voice.

Christians Shall Grow

By Arnold Reimer

As brought out in a previous article, before a person is a Christian he must be born again. After that we are to "grow in grace, and in the knowledge of our Lord and Saviour, Jesus Christ." As we gain in the knowledge of Christ and closely follow Him, we grow. The result of growing is that we bear fruit. The Bible tells us in detail how to "grow in grace."

What I would like to discuss now is not how to grow spiritually, but rather some of the reasons why people do not grow spiritually, but remain infants, or are spiritually sick. Someone has aptly said that if we do not grow forward we grow backwards. One of the results of "growing backwards" is lukewarmness. Christ condemned lukewarmness very severely when he told the Laodicean church that if they did not repent, but continued lukewarm, He would spue them out of His mouth.

Looking at it possibly from a doctor's standpoint, I would like to list some of the symptoms, some of the causes and the cures for spiritual sickness or lack of growth.

SYMPTOMS:

1. People go to church only when it is convenient or when there is no place else to go. In other words, "lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God."

2. Many people seem to think it is more important to sleep on Sunday morning than to go to Sunday School or church or both.

3. Love of money. Some people have money to buy all kinds of things for themselves, but God usually comes last. If there is any money left after the people are through spending for themselves, God might get a little.

4. One very common thing, although I hesitate to call it spiritual sickness, is certainly close to it, is that very many, if not most, churches seem to have a large number of people who come late to Sunday School or church Sunday after Sunday with no apparent reason. During the week they can get their children to school on time, and if they have to meet a bus or train to go somewhere they can get there on time, but they don't seem to consider the Sunday School or church important enough to make it a point to be there on time. Jesus certainly cannot feel that he is considered very important by a Sunday School when there is only a "handful" there when it is time to begin worshiping HIM.

5. The fact that the General Conference was over $20,000 in arrears in supporting Civilian Public Service camps would indicate something wrong in some churches. Some churches have apparently given nothing, or practically nothing toward the support of this program. It is probably not possible to lay the blame at any one place. In some of these churches it is undoubtedly the indifference of the pastor, in others possibly the coolness of the people, and in others it has possibly not been presented properly. There might, of course, be some churches who have been financially so hard-hit that they cannot give their quota. These are not in mind here. I believe, however, that most of those churches who are behind in their quota could fill it without much trouble if, when they find themselves behind, they would take a special offering to make up the deficit. If we as a General Conference fail to support our peace program it will certainly "broadcast" to the world that there is something radically wrong with our spiritual growth.

So much for the symptoms of spiritual sickness or lack of Christian growth.

Now let us consider some of the causes of spiritual sickness, for where there is a sign of spiritual sickness there must be a cause.

CAUSES:

1. Yielding to sin and not having it forgiven, or not attempting with God's help to overcome it. Our temper getting away with us might be an example of this.

2. Not obeying the Spirit when we are told to do something. Jonah is a good example. He refused to obey God for some time, and in addition to his physical troubles, his spiritual life seemed to degrade.

3. One very common cause for "growing backwards" is that we get discouraged or tired of taking good care of our souls, and decide to "rest" a while. This "rest" usually lasts for a long time, often the rest of a person's life. At first the person that "rests" can't seem to notice any ill effects, but it keeps getting worse and worse until even our neighbors can see the difference.

4. One of the most common reasons for not growing is lack of spiritual food, and lack of communion with God. Many people wait from one Sunday till the next for their spiritual food—sometimes longer than that. During the week they seldom read the Bible and seldom pray, and then wonder why there is no growth. We all know what would happen to a child if it was fed once a week or less. It would not grow at all, but would get worse and worse till it died. It is not much different in our spiritual lives. No, we feed a child every day, and our souls need food every day also.

CURE:

Now what is the cure, the remedy for spiritual sickness? Answer—correct the cause.

In conclusion, only some of the symptoms and some of the causes for spiritual sickness and lack of growth have been listed. There are many others. Each one of us, undoubtedly, at times has signs of not growing as we should. Whatever that sign might be, there is a cause for it. We can find that cause through the guidance of the Holy Spirit, and then with God's help—correct that cause.

visit. It is necessary rather to prepare our hearts for the inspirational hour that is to follow. All visiting can wait till after the services. If we come to church with a reverent attitude and hearts attuned to God we might occasionally experience a vision similar to that of Isaiah as described in the sixth chapter. He came humbled and searching. He was cleansed and purified. He was inspired. After this he willingly consecrated himself to the task to which he was called.

Mennonite Churches must cultivate the quality of reverence at their Sabbath meetings. It will inspire the preaching, it will enrich the experience of the congregation. It will result in many more willing souls who are going to answer God's call to duty with the words: "Here am I, send me."

"Moment by moment I'm kept in his love;
Moment by moment I'm life from above;
Looking to Jesus till glory doth shine;
Moment by moment, O Lord, I am thine."

"The secret of life is not to do what you like to do but try to like what you have to do."

BOOKLET TO BE DISTRIBUTED

The Committee on Doctrine and Conduct has arranged for the printing of 15,000 copies of Dr. P. H. Richert's booklet, entitled, "A BRIEF CATECHISM ON DIFFICULT SCRIPTURE PASSAGES AND INVOLVED QUESTIONS ON THE USE OF THE SWORD." These booklets will be distributed among our churches free of charge as soon as they are off the press. There will, however, be some expense in the printing of these booklets, and it is hoped that the churches will respond and help to defray these expenses.

For the Committee,
Willard K. Claassen, Sec.

POLICY REGARDING CASES OF DEPENDENCY OF MEN IN THE C.P.S.

At its meeting on May 30, 1942, the MCC passed the following resolution:

> "It is our conviction that it is the responsibility of the church to provide aid for needy dependents of men in C.P.S. camps who cannot be cared for by their families, and that assurance should be given to men facing the draft that the church will provide for this need to the utmost of its ability. We believe that this is primarily a responsibility of the local congregation and the general body to which it belongs. . . .
> "The function of the MCC in this matter should be to see that all cases of need are brought to the attention of the proper church officials and cared for otherwise. . . ."

In harmony with this resolution the following statement was attached to the letter of welcome which is sent to all Mennonite draftees:

> "The MCC expects a draftee with dependents to make earnest efforts to provide for their maintenance during his period of service. Sound Mennonite practice requires that a man provide for his own insofar as possible. If he is unable to do so his immediate family or relationship come to his aid in some form. If this circle of relatives either cannot or will not come to his assistance his local congregation seeks to provide help as necessary. Beyond this conference committees and finally the MCC stand ready to aid where needed.
> "No conscientious objector facing the draft need fear that his family will suffer undue hardship. Mennonite people have always regarded it a Christian duty and privilege of love to 'bear one another's burdens' and take care of their own members. Economic necessity should not tempt a draftee to a decision which his Christian conscience cannot approve."

It is clear that the MCC wants to provide a way whereby drafted men with needy dependents can frankly, honestly, and without embarrassment make known their concern, confident that the church cares and is prepared to do what is required. No young man is to hesitate to make known to the MCC his concern about his dependents. In fact, the MCC wants him to report if he needs assistance.

However, it is assumed that he has thought through seriously whether he needs help for dependents or not. If he doesn't need it he, of course, shouldn't ask for it. It is also assumed that he has earnestly tried to provide for his own in some manner, whether by helping them to secure employment or by some other plan. This is good Mennonite custom and is likewise good for Christian character and self-respect. Mennonite young men generally take pride in such self-reliant provisions where possible.

However, in Mennonite circles parents and family groups generally would be quick to sense needs that might worry a drafted young man and just as quick to come to his aid. The love of Christ constrains them.

It can also be seen from the above resolutions how the MCC, in its attempt to provide assistance how the M.C.C., in its attempt to provide assistance to needy dependents of men in CPS, tries to follow what is regarded as good, sound practice in our MCC constituency. When a case of dependency comes to its attention the MCC would probably follow the course above, inquiring from the local congregation whether in their own circle they would make some happy provision for the care of the dependents of the drafted man. Generally our people think it self-evident that as followers of Jesus and members of the same church they should "bear one another's burdens."

If the local church feels unable to provide for such dependents the MCC would acquaint the larger conference group with the existing needs and inquire whether they were prepared and willing to assist. It should be noted, however, that the MCC stands ready to assist not only as a last resort but all along the way.

The above resolutions of the MCC are here reprinted together with some explanatory statements because requests keep coming in inquiring whether the MCC has any policy with regard to the care of dependents of men in CPS. They are here reprinted for your information and assurance.

Any request for further information or for counsel or any desire to call attention to some unprovided need can be directed by the campee or anyone interested in his case to his camp director, to Henry A. Fast, General Director of Camps, or to Orie O. Miller, Executive Secretary of the MCC, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Civilian Bonds for Conference

In The Mennonite of February 2, it was announced that "Civilian Bonds" might be donated to the General Conference in three difference ways.

I am told now there are almost as many bonds in the treasury, for which the cash has been paid out, as at present can well be used in this way.

Kind donors are therefore requested to continue to make further gifts to the General Conference; but please either leave it to the Conference or its Executive Committee to specify for what they shall be used, or do as one has done, add the words "at maturity," which makes it possible to accept any amount of bonds, including those you have already bought and want to donate to the Conference by assigning them to it.

You may order your bonds direct from the Provident Trust Co., Philadelphia, Pa., and get a receipt from there. If you send your order to the Conference Treasurer, Karl A. Richert, Newton, Kansas, he will send you a receipt.

Remember, please, to add $1.00 for every bond ordered. C. E. Krehbiel, President

Peace Section Notes

Civilian Government Bonds

Inasmuch as the new F and G United States Government Savings Bonds are not designated as "war issues," they are being used currently by the Civilian Bond Committee for all civilian bond subscriptions to Provident Trust Company. We understand that the revised printing of the F and G's is not yet available except through this channel. In any case, it is the only channel through which the subscriptions for these can be handled and due recognition given to the subscriber's conscience in the matter of purchasing war bonds and for recognition of the subscription on state and county government bond sales quotas.

The revised civilian bond folder indicates that these issues are available currently in four denominations. G's are available in denominations of $100, $500, and $1000. This piece matures in twelve years—is a registered bond with interest payable semi-annually at the rate of two and one-half per cent per annum. The fourth piece available costs $18.50 and matures in twelve years at $25.00. The subscription fee of $1.00 continues for all four of these items. Copies of the revised folder describing the present plan in detail can be ordered from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Inasmuch as no $50.00 bonds have been available to the Committee, nor promised to be available, letter has recently gone out from Provident Trust Company, Philadelphia, to all $50.00 piece subscribers indicating how their subscription can be handled in light of the F $18.50 availability or the $100.00 G. From now on subscribers to Provident Trust Company of any of the foregoing four available pieces will find their subscription promptly handled. Ordinarily, the government bond certificate should be in the hands of the subscriber within two to three week at the longest. The Civilian Bond Committee is continuing its contacts with the Treasury in an endeavor to procure still more suitable offerings to take care of subscriptions from those who for conscience reasons cannot subscribe to the war issues.

In the meantime, the arrangement now in effect will, we believe, provide for most of our people and has been approved by the Mennonite Central Committee. —J. W. H.

Civilian Bond Subscriptions, Total $859,400.00

Provident Trust Company report as of February 11, 1943, shows a total of $859,400.00 in Civilian Bond subscriptions entered at that date. $712,500.00 of this was subscribed from Mennonite sources. The total number of subscriptions was 5,948.

VOICES IN THE DARK

Poignant voices shrill with pain
Far across the sea,
Baby voices growing faint
Melt the heart of me.
In the softness of the dark
(Counting sheep at three)
Pity whispers, "Clothes would help
Far across the sea."
In the morning, infant things,
(Baby isn't here)
Jackets. . . Bootees, soon are packed,
Hurried to the pier.
Poignant voices in the dark
Crying out in pain
Baby voices far away
Must they weep in vain?

POST-WAR EUROPE AND THE CHRISTIAN

By Helene Dick (second article in series of two)

After the war is over, a vast and ripened field will be open for Christian missionaries. Bread for the bodies and bread for the souls will be needed for starving nations.

Food has been withheld by political leaders; but even of more importance in many nations the Word of God, which is food for the soul, has been withheld by leaders in religious systems. The Pope forbids the spread of the Bible in Spain. Europe is dying of malnutrition, physically and spiritually.

The Christian has the needed supplies to bring to these people. He must give them bread and he must give them the Bible. Their ears will be open to the one who feeds them. True liberty in Christ must be presented, "to open their eyes and to turn them from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God." They have been bound through fear of purgatory and hell. Forgiveness of sin, they were told, could come only through penance and payments to the church. To these burdened and benighted people Jesus still says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your soul. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

What an immense field! What a challenging task! But it will be a hard one. Young men with strong faith and strong bodies must go. This is not a job for the weakling. It is a task for the sturdy Christian.

He should prepare now for service in these war-torn lands. After choosing which field he would serve, he should commence to study the language; learn methods of evangelism; continue in prayer and Bible study; and seek the help and advice of such agencies that promote missions and relief.

When the armistice is signed he must be ready to leave the comforts and culture of the United States for the misery of lands seared and scarred with battle and oppressions. The work will seem tremendous and endless. But the Christian goes with Him who come that "the world through Him might be saved."

THE EMERGENCY FLOOD RELIEF AT CAMP MARIETTA

By Quintus Leatherman

Marietta, situated at the point where the Muskingum River flows into the Ohio River, experienced one of its many floods during the week of December 30 to January 3, 1943. The camp, located on a prominent hill one-half mile east of the Ohio, was out of danger. Calls for help came to our camp early Wednesday morning. We responded immediately with a crew of forty-two men to Marietta, and a group of five men to the village of Reno, near the camp. Work consisted largely of moving furniture to second floors or into other prearranged places for storage. In a few cases, people were evacuated from their homes by boat. The business section of Marietta, situated along the river front, was completely under water up to the second floor. The crest of the flood was reached late Friday afternnoon at 48.8 feet.

The work was ably directed by our project superintendent, Mr. Elicker. The men were stationed at the U. S. Employment Service office building. Calls for help came through their office and also the County Engineers' office. People in Marietta took the flood very indifferently—just another flood. One elderly man who seen his thirtieth flood said that he should now be growing webbed feet.

After a long and tiring days work, the men returned to the camp. By the evening of that day the waters of the Ohio had crossed Route 7 at two points between the camp and Marietta. Conscious of the fact that the camp would be cut off from Marietta, a large supply of food had been purchased. The camp received no mail for four days. Some of our friends at home were of course concerned about their boys in camp, but needlessly so.

Since the emergency continued to exist after the boys returned, and since the camp would soon be unable to help any further, if marooned from Marietta, it was decided to send eleven overhead men to carry on the flood relief. Food supplies and bedding were taken along. The pastor, Rev. Townsend of the First Presbyterian Church, graciously offered the church basement as living quarters for the boys. The kitchen equipment utensils were also at their disposal. The assistant director, Orin Beechy, accompanied the men and was in constant telephone communication with the director. The boys were busy all Thursday afternoon and nearly all of Thursday night, moving pianos, refrigerators, etc. Another group was assisting the Marietta Times Company in moving its equipment to the second floor. One of the boys delivered a boat load of food supplies, including milk and eggs to an apartment house where at least ten babies were living. The boys had been organized for feeding and first aid work, but this work was adequately handled by the Red Cross, in the three flood refugee centers. By Sunday night the flood waters had receded and the boys returned to camp.

CORRESPONDENCE

BURRTON MENNONITE CHURCH

Burrton, Kansas

Rev. and Mrs. J. J. Regier taught the Vacation Bible School of twenty students. A catechism class of eleven young people is being conducted. At the annual meeting it was decided to drop the membership fee and accept the invitation of our Lord in giving our tenth to meet the financial needs. So far it has proved successful. Due to the rationing system each family is asked to gather in their own homes Wednesday evening for prayer meeting at the same hour, studying the same scripture passage. Our Women's Missionary Society presented a Thanksgiving play, helped the Grace Children's Home, Arizona Missions and Foreign Missions. They plan to have the church re-varnished and re-papered now that a new roof has been put on. The Junior Endeavor has offered to buy carpet for the aisle and the stage which has been extended to the width of the building. The W. M. Society and the S.C. Endeavor remembered our two C.P.S. boys and four non-combatant boys in service at Christmas. Rev. and Mrs. George Moore, missionaries from Arizona brought a mission message to our Senior Endeavor. A friend and an active Endeavor worker, Elva Enns, married Elmer Kroeker. They are at home at 3219 Magec Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

Ernest Pankratz who was drafted in 1941 to a C.P.S. camp is now taking up mental hospital work at Prova, Utah. Howard Boese just recently has gone to a C.P.S. camp in Montana.

Our congregation is obliged to find a Shepherd for the Flock—we're looking upward. Will you, likewise, for us?

BRUDERTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Hillboro, Kansas

This community held a corn-husking bee for Arlo Plenert when he left for a Colorado C.P.S. camp in fall and another one in February for Sister J. E. Rempel after the sudden death of Brother Rempel. Both times between twenty and thirty men turned out with teams, wagons, and tractors to help harvest the crop.

Our rock pile, which had previously been gathered and hauled onto the yard, was recently crushed and spread over the yard surrounding the meeting house. The Marion County engineer kindly permitted us to use the county crusher, and the township furnished the maintainer which was much appreciated.

On the afternoon of February 24 Sister Wilhelmina Kuyf spoke to the women, and in the evening she spoke to the congregation. This visit was greatly appreciated, especially, by the many friends and relatives of Sister Elizabeth Goertz who is a member of this church and who at present is interned in occupied China. Sister Goertz was a co-worker of Sister Kuyf before Pearl Harbor.

We very much enjoy reading The Mennonite, and we hope that soon it will be read in every Mennonite home.

IN MEMORIAM

ABRAHAM J. KLASSEN, October 14, 1863 to January 5, 1943, was born in Michalin, Russia. He came to Harvey County, Kansas, in 1874. Later he lived north of Hillsboro and then in Hillsboro. In 1887 he married Anna Goertz. In 1929 he was married to Mrs. Anna Unruh. Church membership was held in the Gnadenberg, Johannestal, and Hillsboro First Mennonite churches. Mourning him are Mrs. H. P. Ewert, Drake, Sask.; Rudolf of Fort Leonard Wood, Missouri; Mrs. Albert Plenert, Mrs. Jacob Enns, Elmer and Sam of Hillsboro, and Esther of Wichita.

WILLIAM P. SCHMIDT, January 10, 1867 to January 17, 1943, was born at Heinrichs Dorf, Poland, South Russia. He homesteaded with his parents west of Yankton, South Dakota, in 1874. Later he homesteaded north of Glendine in Dawson County, Montana. Membership was held in the Friedensberg Church, Avon, South Dakota, and Bethlehem Church, Montana. He is mourned by his wife and Mrs. Chris. Buller, Tobias, Joseph, and Benjamin Schmidt, Mrs. Dan Macir, Daniel Schmidt, Mrs. Henry Boese, Mrs. Lydia Berg, and Mrs. Herbert Rauch, and one brother Herman Schmidt of South Dakota.

KATIE B. SCHMITT, November 10, 1878 to January 21, 1943, was born at Summerfield, Illinois, and died at Halstead, Kansas, where she was a member of the First Mennonite Church. She was the daughter of Jacob E. and Elizbaeth Baer Schmitt. She attended Bethel College for some time. She is survived by her brother Dan T. Schmitt and Mrs. P. D. Krehbiel, Maize, Kansas.

—Freeman Junior College, Freeman, South Dakota: Instead of the high school music contests that have been held regularly in fromer years there will be a festival in the college auditorium on April 9. In the evening the public can hear a program of four band numbers, and three numbers by each of the three joint glee clubs. February 28 was Prayer and Gift Day for the college. A resolution of the Northern District Conference that pertains to this reads as follows: "That we encourage our young people, seeking higher education, to give our Conference and Church institutions like Freeman Junior College and Academy preference, and after that to select truly Christian institutions for their vocational and Christian education.—Further, recognizing the need of Freeman Junior College, we recommend that each Conference Church set aside the last Sunday in February, each year, as a day of prayer, and in that connection have a voluntary offering for the institution. The annual Music Day will again be observed on Easter Monday in the college auditorium. All church choirs are invited and urged to bring two numbers as part of the morning worship program. The academy chorus and the College Choir will give the afternoon program. The College Ladies Choir is planning to serve lunch to the members of all the choirs. Pastors and all church members are invited to this joint Easter Monday worship in the college auditorium. Bring a lunch at noon and stay for the day. Each Tuesday evening the faculty wives sew for relief.

—According to the year book of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas, eleven young men are in C.P.S. camps and twelve are in the armed forces. One nurse is is the Red Cross service. The total membership is given as 354. Of these 270 are resident and 84 are members living at a distance. Those who have left the home community for work somewhere are considered as resident members. The names and addresses of all members living at a distance are given. The name "Stucky"—given forty-five times—appears most often in the membership list. The church has $10,502.66 in its building fund.

—The Bethel Mennonite Church, Perkasie, Pa., has begun to issue a "Home and Church" paper. The paper is made up by a concern that specializes in such church papers. This publishing concern fills most of the pages with news of general interest and then lets the local church have a few pages in front and back. (Such a church paper can hardly mean to our churches what our own General Conference church papers can mean to them.—Editor)

—The First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas, will have a Bible Conference March 17-19, with Sister Wilhelmina Kuyf as main speaker. See the program on another page of this paper.

—Ruth Frances Dyck and Harold Kenneth Dirks were married in the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California, on February 12.

—The First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California, has voted that Arthur Wenger, the pastor, be ordained as its Elder.

—The directory of the Deep Run Mennonite Church for 1943 lists Allen M. Fretz as Honorary Pastor and Russell L. Mast as Pastor. A Retreat Fund Committee paid out $45.00 for sending fifteen young people to the retreat. The total membership on January 1, 1943, was 194. The name "Myers"—given twenty times—appears most often in the membership list. The church council meets regularly on the first Sunday afternoon in each new quarter.

—Willis Rich and Reynold Weinbrenner recently visited the churches at Pawnee Rock, Hanston, and Ransom, Kansas, in the interest of the Home Missions and Peace Committees of the Western District and Bethel College.

—Brother Ralph C. Kauffman, Associate Professor of Sociology and Dean of Men at Bethel College, recently visited the C.P.S. camps at Colorado Springs, Fort Collins, and Hills City.

—Mrs. Elbert Koontz, a daughter of Mrs. P. R. Schroeder died very suddenly at Dayton, Ohio, on February 26. Stricken with pneumonia Mrs. Koontz passed away about an hour after she had been admitted to a Dayton hospital. She graduated from Bethel College in 1940. Her husband was now attending Bonebrake Theological Seminary. The couple had planned to enter the African mission field.

—"An Inspiring Story of Stewardship" is the story of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, which gave a total of $5,815.60 into six General Conference treasuries in 1942, making a per member average of $42.14. Besides this it gave generously for other causes.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

Fellowship Banquet—Two hundred and twenty-two attended the annual young people's fellowship banquet held in Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, on February 20. The Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel, pastor of Grace Lansdale Church was the toastmaster. M. C. Lehman of the Mennonite Central Committee was the speaker. Stanley Fretz is president of the Eastern District Young People's Union.

Fourth Quarterly Conference—The fourth quarterly conference for the 1942-43 conference year will be held in the First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, on Monday April 5. The Rev. Ward Shelly, pastor of the Springfield Mennonite Church will present a paper in the afternoon and the Rev. Paul R. Shelly, son of Rev. and Mrs. Elwood Shelly, student at Union Theological Seminary, New York, will present a paper in the evening.

District Conference to be held in Souderton—The 145th session of the Eastern District Conference will be held in Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, April 29 to May 2. The Rev. Ernest J. Bohn is pastor of the church.

First Church, Philadelphia—The ladies and friends of the church have sewed faithfully for the Mennonite Central Committee, Red Cross, British Relief and City Nurses Relief in 1942. Result of the labors; 329 articles knitted, 375 garments made, 18 comfort kits put up. Mrs. Kuyf was superintendent of knitting and Mrs. Sehl over the sewing. I. I. Friesen, a student at the Westminster Theological Seminary, Chester, Pa., occupied the pulpit Sunday morning February 14. Members of the Live Wire Class went to sing for the shut-ins on Sunday afternoon February 21. The pastor, Rev. J. J. Plenert, attended the meeting of the Home Mission Board in Chicago, Illinois, during the week of February 21. Rev. Plenert is treasurer of the board.

Germantown—Mr. Walter H. Temple, Deacon, informed the secretary that the pastor, the Rev. Howard T. Landis, was absent from the pulpit fo several weeks on account of illness. We hope he has sufficiently recovered to be able to minister to his people.

East Swamp—Abraham Unruh of Chicago, Illinois, a former student at Moody Bible Institute underwent an operation for appendicitis several weeks ago. Mr. and Mrs. Unruh are planning to leave for the Kentucky Mountains about the first of May. Richard Boehr, son of Missionary P. J. Boehr, also a former student at Moody's, is planning to spend some time in or near Quakertown, so that he might fellowship with the members and friends of the church.

Eden Church, Schwenksville—In his annual report to the congregation, the pastor, Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, made the following statement, "There has been cause for rejoicing. After a rather slow start we succeeded in getting our construction under way. We have a new heating plant and newly renovated Sunday school headquarters. We trust that we soon shall have our main auditorium finished."

First Church, Allentown—Dr. Harvey R. Baum preached at both services on Sunday, February and Dr. Ella Bauman delivered the message on Su day evening, February 21. The pastor preached in the Berne, Indiana, church at both services on Feb. 14. The evening service was the fifty-sixth anniversary service of the Ladies Missionary Society. The pastor attended the annual meeting of the Foreign Mission Board in Newton, Kansas, during the week of February 15.

Upper Milford, Zionsville—Dr. Harvey R. Bauman preached on February 14 and 21 during the absence of the pastor. The ninth annual union lent services will be conducted as follows: April 6 in the Mennonite church, with Rev. J. C. Kaufman, Lutheran minister, preaching; April 13 in the Lutheran church, with Rev. J. N. Blatt, Reformed minister, preaching on April 20 in the Reformed church, with Rev. Howard G. Nyce delivering the message. Howard G. Nyce, Sec.

The Mennonite

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOLUME LVIII NORTH NEWTON KANSAS, MARCH 16, 1943 NUMBER 11

Conscription of Women

Some kind of bill providing for the conscription of women will very likely be passed. Peace-loving Mennonites everywhere should prepare themselves immediately for such an event. The better we prepare now, the better we will be able to do the right thing later.

Mennonite pastors, parents, and teachers, what are you doing about this matter? There are now in the armed forces men from Mennonite churches who are doing things that can never be approved of by a Christ-directed conscience. Once some of these men needed light and, undoubtedly, wanted it. But Christ's teachings were not made clear to them. Confused they stumbled into the terrible darkness of war. We have a responsibility. We ought to discharge it while "daylight flies." The night is coming. If we fail—then sin and, perhaps, the terrible charge, "You did not give us a chance to learn what the teachings of Christ are as taught by our Church." Deep roots must be struck now if the women of our churches are to survive the gales of a conscription law.

Many may wish that such a law will not come to pass. They may spend much energy doing so. Is it not more important to help others know the God-lled course of action and cling to it? Let us misplace our emphasis. Undoubtedly, it is true much good can come from trying to influence political representatives in Washington. But is it not more important that we give those near and dear to us the opportunity to know what Christ's teachings are and how they ought to be applied in specific cases? Right living is not dependent upon the acts of congress. It is dependent upon the individual's choice. The Christian must will the right and live the right regardless of what happens in this world. Here lies our primary responsibility and opportunity. Let us make the most of it.

At the same time let us remember in prayer those of our church leaders who are able to make worthwhile proposals for us in Washington. —rw.

God Never Changes

Sometime ago, a woman who was utterly despondent spoke to me. She related existing circumstances as we find them in the world today. I said, "Yes what you say is all true, but don't you know that we still have God—and He never changes.

She answered, "There was a time when I thought so, but I can't think of it that way now." Yes, we are living in a changing world, but God never changes. He is always greater than our circumstances; His Grace is always sufficient. —Elwood S. Shelly

" . . . Published in Our Church Papers"

Most papers presented at district, ministers' and other church conferences are very much worthwhile. Aware of this, the resolutions committee rightly suggests that they be published in our church papers. It is good that this is done, for the editors then have a better chance of getting hold of the papers. The resolutions committee which adds the suggestion that the papers be condensed is helping the editors even more. The latter is a very important point.

The original length of conference papers would prohibit their publication in most cases. Our conference papers just simply do not have enough space for such lengthy papers. However, there is another reason why conference papers should be re-written. Re-writing may help to improve the quality. By the time an individual is through giving a paper he has thought a good deal more about it than when he first wrote it. Discussion of the paper by the conference may have given him added insights. Re-writing gives the opportunity to eliminate any chaff that may be present and to present the full, rich kernels of truth. Then too, it should be remembered that in most cases it is more pleasant to absorb words by the ear than by the eye. It usually is more interesting to hear a full speech than to read it in full. Therefore, conference papers should be re-written into "Gettysburg speeches" which say much in few words. Readers want the honey, but not the beehive.

Three to four pages of double-spaced, typewritten material constitutes about the maximum length in practically every case. Those who present papers at conferences will win the interest and goodwill of the readers by condensing their papers for publication as suggested. —rw.

Kirby Page to Speak in Memorial Hall

Kirby Page, the noted pacifist and spiritual leader who was originally scheduled to speak in the Eden Church, is now going to speak in Memorial Hall, North Newton, on the evening of Friday, March 19 at 8:00 p.m. The change in location as made because Memorial Hall affords spacious accommodations for the many people who want to hear him.

The schedule for Dr. Page is made many weeks in advance and the misunderstanding of the first meeting was caused by an oversight in correspondence between the Peace Committee of the Christian Endeavor Convention and the representative of Mr. Page, with whom the arrangements were made. This error has been cleared and the contacting parties now understand the same date.

During his tour Kirby Page is including visits to several C.P.S. camps, where he is speaking with the boys in camps; however, for these visits he is standing his own expenses. Prior to coming to Memorial Hall he will have spoken in the C.P.S. camps in Dension, Iowa, and Weeping Water, Nebraska.

Mr. Page has been forwarding to the Peace Committee copies of fine religious books and pacifist literature. This material will be displayed in a religious book exhibit on the evening of his address. Some of these books are of his own writings and include his more recent books such as Living Prayerfully, Must We Go to War? and Religious Resources for Personal Living and Social Action.

An offering will be received at this meeting which will be divided equally between the M.C.C. and the Friends Service Committee, through whom Mr. Page is made available to us. The offering received at Eden on February 19 amounted $169.00, all of which was sent to the M.C.C.

Kirby Page, America's well-known author, lecturer, and religious leader who is to appear in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, next Friday evening, March 19.

Mr. Page will probably speak on the previously announced topic of "How Can We Live the Way of the Cross in an Age of Violence." Out of his fresh experience, his contacts with boys in C.P.S. camps and his deep spiritual thinking we are expecting a message of vital importance. It is indeed timely and relevant to Mennonite youth and also to the members of our entire constituency who are faced with the critical necessity of uniting themselves in cooperation and love to make effective the position of the conscientious peacemaker.

The Eighteenth Amendment is said to have closed 177,000 saloons, and the Twenty-first Amendment is said to have opened 436,000. That is how we have made progress.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

F. J. Isaac, missionary to India, is at present home on furlough and hopes to go back next fall or later if conditions permit. At present he is in Newton, Kansas. Brother Isaac was born August 9, 1888, at Lehigh, Kansas, the son of Jacob and Maria Voth Isaac. He married Anna Eleanore Penner (sister of P. A. Penner) of Mountain Lake, Minnesota. Their son Donald is now attending Bethel College. Brother F. J. Isaac graduated from Bethel College in 1912. He has taught at various places including the Rosthern Academy, Rothern, Saskatchewan. He did city missionary work in the Who-so-ever-will Mission, Los Angeles, California, from 1914-16 and served as pastor of the Woodlake Mennonite Church from 1916-18. He went as missionary to India in 1921. Arnold G. Isaac, M. D., Newton, Kansas, is a brother. Brother F. J. Isaac presented the paper published in this issue at the spring ministers' conference of the Western District.

P. W. Penner, missionary in India at the present time, was born February 12, 1876, in the village Prangenau, South Russia. He married Mathilde Ensz of the Brudertal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas. They adopted an Indian girl who was born in 1912. Brother Penner attended Bethel College from 1896-98, the Mennonite Collegiate Institute, Gretna, Manitoba, in 1900, and graduated from the Theological Course of the German Wallace College, Berea, Ohio in 1908. He took the summer course at Moody Bible Institute in 1907. He has served the Sterling Mennonite Church, Sterling, Ohio, and what was once the Mennonite mission in Los Angeles. The latter service was from 1918-21. He sailed as missionary to India in 1908.

John R. Schmidt, M. D., was introduced to the readers in the Mennonite February 2.

When Ox-Carts Tip

By P. W. Penner

It was a quiet, beautiful Sunday in early March. The morning services in Mauhadei meant much to us. We were also blessed in Sunday school. After Sunday school Mrs. Penner and I left Mauhadei to resume our camp-life at a place about fifteen miles southeast of Mauhadei. A few days before one of our efficient workers had died from cholera. Now his bereaved widow chose to go with us on our tour. We wanted to cross the wide Mauhadei River and cover a stretch of treacherous road before nightfall. We remembered that buffaloes move only three miles an hour.

The majority of the church came with us onto the wide stretch of sand bordering the water in the river. As we moved away in a crude boat those who had accompanied us called hearty "good-byes" to us. Tears rolled down the cheeks of some. We could see the waving of hands until the distance hid them from us. Undoubtedly, the fact that no missionary was left with them on the station made them feel lonely.

An unimproved road led away from the river and into the fields and the jungle. Soon darkness fell upon us. Sometimes we could just barely see the cart in back of us when it was silhouetted against the twilight horizon. Then it could no longer be seen. We had to cross a smaller river. How would we be able to find the meagre trail in this darkness? Our cartmen helped us to traverse the stream successfully. The driver assured and reassured us that he knew the ascent out of the river very well.

Suddenly the cart upset. One buffalo had fallen; the other stood almost on top of him, for the bank was very steep. While we were feeling around, trying to find out what to do next, we heard someone in back of us shouting at the top of his voice.

The other cart had tipped, and it was now lying on its side on the bank of a ravine. The widow and her small child had been thrown out. The goods lay scattered on the bank. By the time we came there the driver had succeeded in getting one buffalo out from under the cart. We tried to pick up the tomatoes, other vegetables, the breadbox, the basket with food, clothes, etc. We tipped back the vehicle. Gratefully we discovered that the widow, who was sitting on the ground recovering from her shock, had not been hurt. The stuff was rearranged on the cart, the ropes were tied, and the trip was resumed.

How should this second cart pass the other one stranded on the bank? We discovered another road leading out of the river. It was not as steep as the first one we had tried. With every male member in the crowd encouraging the buffaloes to put their utmost into the pulling, they succeeded in pulling the cart to level ground.

Now we returned to the first cart. The buffaloes were hitched to it. We pushed, pulled, twisted, and screamed to encourage the buffaloes. With the beasts of burden we brought the cart to level ground. When buffaloes are encouraged to pull, they fall on the knees of their front legs. A man perches on the yoke to keep it from slipping onto their backs. A moving camera with flash bulbs would have enabled us to take an interesting picture.

Most of us felt the strain considerably. However, not long thereafter happy music floated on the evening breeze. The group rejoiced. After a short while we reached a near-by village where some relatives of a number of our people were living. The disappointing experience was forgotten completely. The Indian generally dismisses such episodes quite readily. Soon all were eating what had been prepared. Then some of us crawled back into the carts, others spread their blankets under the carts, and the rest slept on crude beds. Soon all were sleeping quietly.

At midnight the moon lit up the sky. By 1:30 a.m. the alarm was struck. Slowly the caravan moved forward under the starlit sky, the soft moonlight directing us on our way. Again one cart erred into the ditch. The electrified driver, however, kept it from upsetting. The sun rose and our destination still lay ahead of us. Soon the buffaloes were panting from the heat. By 10 a.m., the campers at Pendrabond received us with uplifted hands and shouts of joy, for we had been absent several days.

The separation from our escort the previous evening had been very touching. It expressed our intimacy; pangs touched our feelings. Now this hearty welcome corroborated the close fellowship in Christ that we had experienced. Our experiences during the last eighteen hours on the fifteen-mile stretch had proved again our oneness in Christ that is irrespective of country, clime, race, or language. "They shall come from the four winds and sit with Me in my Father's Kingdom!" Instead of rolling over a highway at fifty miles an hour, would you have enjoyed journeying with us? We felt anew the deep significance of Christian unity. The non-Christian multitudes frequently remark that such fellowship is not seen in any other religion. They wonder why that is true. —Five Oaks, Landour, U.P. India, June 6, 1942

A Very Present Help in Trouble

He's helping me now--this moment,
Tho I may not see it or hear.
Perhaps by a friend far distant,
Perhaps by a stranger near,
Perhaps by a spoken message,
Perhaps by a printed word,
In ways that I know, and know not
I have the help of the Lord.

He's keeping me now--this moment,
However I need it most.
Perhaps by a single angel,
Perhaps by a mighty host,
Perhaps by the chain that frets me,
Or the walls that shut me in;
In ways that I know and know not
He keeps me from harm or sin.

He is guiding me now—this moment,
In pathways easy or hard.
Perhaps by a door wide open,
Perhaps by a door fast barred,
Perhaps by a joy with holden,
Perhaps by a gladness given;
In ways that I know and know not
He's leading me up to heaven.

New York Fellowship Grows

On Wednesday evening, March 3, twenty-three Mennonites, representing five different Mennonite groups, gathered in an informal meeting of fellowship, study, and worship at Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th. Street, New York, N.Y. This was the second meeting of the New York Mennonite Fellowship. The meeting was opened with a brief devotional service in charge of Gerald Stucky. The leader of the discussion for the evening was Howard Lichti. Brother Lichti was formerly from Berne, Indiana. He reviewed the book War, Peace, Amity by H. P. Krehbiel and led an interesting discussion on the theme, "Pacifism among the Mennonites." The group was gathered in a circle which seemed to be very conducive for this type of a program. Brother Freeman H. Swartz from the Eastern District Conference was again our guest and spoke to the group. He pointed out that we as Mennonites should follow the example of the Master and "go a little farther" in carrying out the task that God has given us. Miss Elizabeth Foth closed the meeting with prayer.

The following people attended the meeting of the New York Fellowship for the first time. It is most interesting to note that these six people represent five distinct Mennonite groups. The following is the list: Mrs. R. Emerson Niswander, General Conference, 45 W. 9th. Street, New York, N.Y., Nappanee, Ind.; Mrs. Milo Rediger, 418 E. 136th. Street, New York, N.Y., Defenseless Mennonite, Fort Wayne, Ind.; Rev. R. C. Reichenbach, 243 Taylor Street, W. B., Staten Island, N.Y., Mennonite Brethren in Christ, Chester, Pa.; Mr. R. J. Shank, 180 Vavick Street, New York, N.Y., Old Mennonite, Argentina, South America; Miss Irma Loretta Schneck, 156 5th. Avenue, New York, N.Y., Missionary to Nigeria, B.W. Africa, Sudan Interior Mission, Pandora, Ohio; Miss Marie P. Staesz, 473 Greene Ave., Brooklyn, N.Y., Mennonite Brethren, Mountain Lake, Minn.

The group has planned to hold its next meeting on Wednesday evening, April 7, at 7:45 p.m. at Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 40th. Street, New York. At present the plans are to have as our theme "Foreign Missions." We hope to have Rev. Howard G. Nyce, Allentown, Pa., with us for this meeting Brother Nyce is a member of the Foreign Mission Board of the General Conference. The General Conference missionaries, Sisters Fast and Schmidt, and the Old Mennonite Missionary, Brother Weaver, will also participate in this meeting.

If any of the readers know of any Mennonites in the New York area kindly send the names and addresses to Gerald Stucky, 235 E. 49th Street, New York, N.Y.

Visions of What Bethel College Should Mean to Our Churches

By F. J. Isaac

The founders of Bethel College had very definite visions of what this school should mean to our churches. They felt that it would provide leaders. They would be Sunday school teachers and instructors in parochial schools. They would be pastors and missionaries. Thus the founders believed that this school would become a prominent factor in determining the future character of the Mennonite Church. And so it has happened. This aim has been realized even more fully than they had dared to hope. Eighty per cent of our missionaries have been students at Bethel or Bluffton. Seventy per cent of the ministers in the Western District Conference have been in Bethel. If called on to do so, I dare say, the majority present here could give a testimony of the great influence on their living, and thinking of men like C. H. Wedel and J. W. Kliewer, just to mention two who are no longer here. But when we begin to enumerate the number of laymen within our church who have attended Bethel, be they farmers, or business men, lawyers or doctors, then we realize that Bethel's influence has gone much farther and deeper than the founders had visualized. It is not too much to say that after fifty years the character of our churches is largely what the character of our school is.

Now it has been generally conceded that the definitely Christian character of our college is the main excuse for its existence. And since we have seen to what extent the character of the school has become the character of the churches, it certainly behooves our college to realize as never before how responsible its position has become.

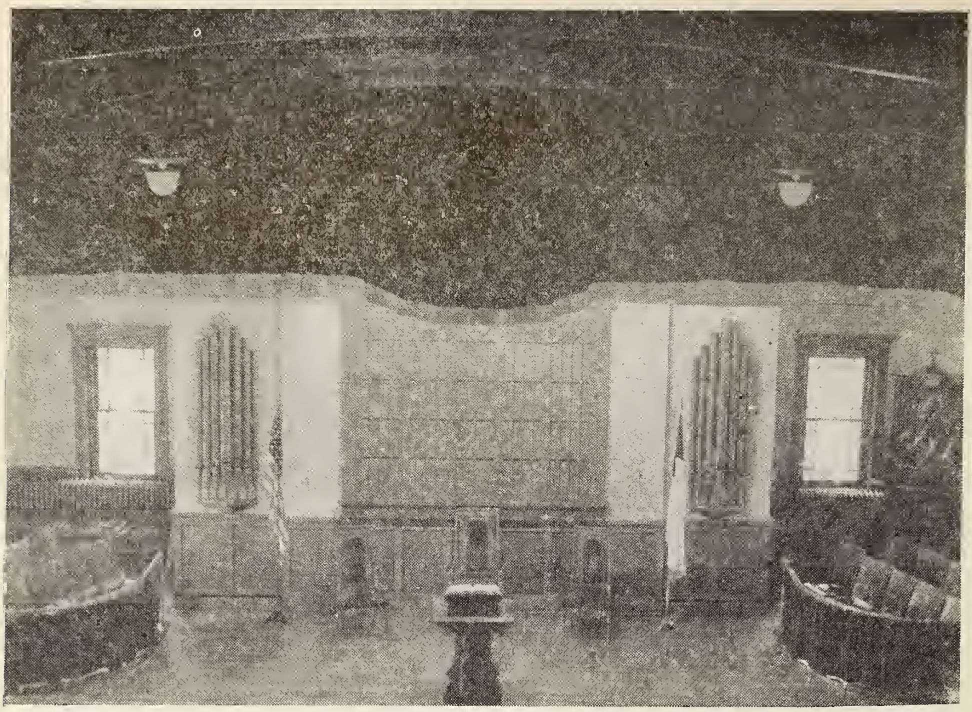
In our lives as individual Christians we have experienced belief and doubt, growth and stagnation, backsliding and revival, glad commitment with peace, failures with mighty wrestlings for a blessing, awful revelations of a sinful self and great experiences of the grace of God in Christ Jesus. Withal there have come abiding convictions and heart felt obedience to our Lord and His Word.

We have had our beginning in Christian homes. Most of us were baptized upon the affirmation, very naturally, of what home and church taught us. Sooner or later doubts have assailed us. There came a time when we had to get the question answered whether the Bible, trusted and obeyed by our fathers, was really God's Word—and to us.

Still harder will have been the battle with sin in many forms, making us wonder whether there was any progress whatever in our spiritual growth, making us fear for our very salvation, and probably becoming by far the greatest factor in causing doubt and unbelief. And when by God's help victories had been won, even then there were falls which shook our very foundations. But when God's limitless forgiveness and unbounded grace again and

C. H. Wedel who was President of Bethel College from 1893-1910 left imprints upon the minds and hearts of many Mennonite leaders.

J. W. Kliewer who was President of Bethel College from 1911-1920 and from 1925-1932 also touched deeply the lives of many.



The Front of the Bethel College Chapel

Many men with vital messages have stood behind the above pulpit. The pipes of the organ have poured forth the melodies of songs dear to our hearts After his graduation from Bethel Brother P. A. Penner returned to this platform, kneeled, and in prayer re-dedicated himself to mission service and beseeched God that Bethel might be a blessing to its constituency.

again raised us up, then we have also experienced peace and a faith which the gates of hell cannot overcome. Having turned our eyes more and more to the Savior only, we have experienced a glad commitment to Him and find that He is sufficient for every personal need and for the need of the whole world.

Similarly, we can say that the corporate life of our Bethel College has gone through such experiences progressively. Its inception was in our own Christian community. Naturally it affirmed our Mennonite and Christian heritage in its early years. But it was also to be expected that as the school reached maturity as a liberal arts college and developed farther into the storehouse of knowledge and achievement of the whole of mankind, there would be questionings about our Mennonite doctrines, and there would be more questions about the validity of the faith of the whole church and the reliability of the Bible as the Word of God. Bethel had to come to a definite conclusion as to where it stood.

Just as hard were the struggles over mistakes and failures. What should the school do in this and that involved moral issue? The things over which individuals stumble are bound to be reflected in the life of the school and vice versa.

Now the important thing for us is this: After much questioning and struggling; after many failures, but also great victories, where does our Bethel stand now? Does it affirm God and its dependence on Him? Does its every policy imply that it wants to be more thoroughly Christian? Is it the repository and faithful minister of the heritage of our fathers? I, for one, believe that it is all

By Forrest Musser, Pandora, Ohio

MARCH 22—"But when ye pray—be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of before ye ask Him." Matt. 6:8.

Jesus urges us to pray sincerely with full understanding of God's wisdom and spirit. Many prayers insult the intelligence of God. We often slip into the custom of telling God how to create and govern the universe. Carlyle once said that if he had been present at the time of the creation he would have given the Almighty some advice. We often do this in prayer; we command instead of request. The Father knows our needs and consequently, we pray as Jesus did, "Not my will but thine be done." Vital prayer is seeking those deeper needs of our soul which God alone can fulfill.

MARCH 23—"After this manner pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name." Matt. 6:9.

Jesus gave us the Lord's Prayer not so much as a pattern as a compass to guide our prayer life. As long as we treat it as a mere pattern or blue print it remains a list of words instead of a spiritual experience. Taking the prayer as a compass, we can carry it wherever we go in our experience and it will always guide us. Wherever we are, in whatever country, we can pray sincerely with fuller understanding, "Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be Thy name." Prayer as a compass keeps our lives always pointing or going toward God as the Father of us all. We go toward Him with reverence.

MARCH 24—"After this manner pray ye: Thy Kingdom come." Matt. 6:10.

The prayer compass should always point in this direction—behind or beneath every prayer should be this aspiration, "Thy Kingdom come." How glibly and hypocritically we sometimes utter this prayer? We repeat the words and then by our lives say: "Let God do it; someday He will bring in His kingdom." Many things are beyond our power and wisdom, but God uses our hands, our feet and our whole lives to do His work. He sends us out into the vineyard to gather His harvest and we fold our hands expecting God to bring the harvest to our door. The two words to be remembered with this prayer about the Kingdom are, "Go ye." Unless Christians go about the work of the Kingdom, no one else will. God depends upon us.

MARCH 25—"After this manner pray ye: Thy will be done as it is done in heaven," Matt. 6:10.

This is the heart of all prayer, in this spirit all prayer must be made. We may bring all our desires, perplexities, praise, and consecration to God, but always in the spirit of this allegiance—"Thy will be done." In the spirit of the familar hymn we pray in such a time as this: "Immortal love, forever full, forever flowing free, forever shared, forever whole, a never ebbing sea! O Lord and Master of us all, Whate'er our name or sign, We own Thy sway, we hear Thy call, we test our lives by Thine."

MARCH 26—"After this manner pray ye: Give us this day our daily bread." Matt. 6:11.

Many would say that we earn our bread by the sweat of our brows and we may as well omit this part of the Lord's prayer. Today, however, for millions of people in war stricken areas, some who never prayed before, are crying out, "Give us this day our daily bread." Some thoughtless person may still say, "Let them work as I do," but in many places today there is no food aside from the generosity and help of others. Many will be fed because of love and sympathy aroused within us because of the earnest prayers of these starving millions. Does God not stir humanity to such action? Is this prayer not vital to the life of us all?

MARCH 27—"After this manner pray ye: Forgive us our debts as we forgive us our debtors." Matt. 6:12

Forgiveness has always two poles of understanding. First, our forgiving spirit towards others, and the forgiveness we ask of God. Our prayers are often ineffective because we either do not include this at all or we try to separate the inseparable. One of the spiritual laws is that God can only forgive those who have the capacity to forgive. There is an old story of the small boy who was praying before he went to sleep, "If I die before I wake, I pray Thee Lord my soul to take." In the middle of his prayer he rushed down stairs and after a few minutes he came and finished his prayer. In answer to his mother's question as to why he interrupted his prayer he said, "When I came to this part 'If I die before I wake,' I thought of how I had upset all my brother's toys and blocks just before coming to bed and I had to straighten those out before I finished my prayer." We need to straighten some things before we can expect God to forgive.

MARCH 28—"Lead us not into temptation, and deliver us from evil."

This, too, is an earnest desire of all men—to avoid tempations which are too powerful for us wherein we shall be sold to evil. We shall never be free from temptation—only in death are we in such a state—but we do pray for the grace, faith, love, and strength of Christ to overcome temptation and thus be free from the powers of darkness.

MARCH 29—"For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." Matt. 6:21.

Life is like a great treasure buried beneath the surface. As we search for truth and life we make one discovery after another which makes life a constant adventure and joy. All depends upon where our treasure is hidden. Is it hidden in the soil of material possessions alone, or in shallow pleasures, or in desire for applause and fame, or in the physical appetites of eating, drinking and being merry? We often keep our real purpose or treasure hidden from others, but God knows that where our treasure is, there will be our heart and life also.

MARCH 30—"Judge not that ye be not judged," Matt. 7:1.

One of the most common failures in Christian circles is that of trying to be a judge instead of a servant. Instead of being a servant of the Church of Christ and of all men we set ourselves up as judges. In short, we too often enjoy the privilege, which belongs only to God and never to man, of dividing the sheep from the goats. Many of our petty divisions of the church can be traced to this common weakness or folly of Christians to be judges instead of servants. We should have critical judgment and discrimination, but this should be done in the spirit of service rather than the spirit of condemnation "For with what judgement we judge, we shall be judged."

MARCH 31—"I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock. Matt. 7:24.

While traveling near Lexington, Kentucky, last summer, we saw a small negro Church perched on the edge of a high precipice. The back part of the church was supported by long, wooden pillars reaching part of the way down the steep 200 foot drop. It seemed as if a little shove would dislodge and send the whole building down the precipice. In these days we are apt to think of the Christian life or the church as being just as uncertain as this negro church. The building will stand if its foundation pillars are made of the teaching and principles of Christ.

this. My observation leads me to the conclusion that our school has experienced a Christian growth in stature and character in line with the purpose of its founders. It is not necessary to try to assert that it has been without fault and without failings, or that it now is all that it should be in Christian character and testimony. Who of us would want to say of himself that he is all that he ought to be in his Christian life. But we do say that as we have experienced the grace of God in our personal lives—and this again and again—and as we have had His help through doubts and fears, so that we now find ourselves His in a glad abandon—so, also, we believe that our Bethel, which has so richly experienced God in the past through doubt and faith, through defeat and victory, through spiritual depression and revival, will find itself today absolutely committed to Christ in joyful abandonment and perfect confidence, so that this Jesus Christ, whom it affirms at its centre, may pervade its whole life to its very perimeter. Looking forward then, we have this vision for Bethel College: That it remain true to its heritage, that it remain true to the Bible, and that it realize ever more fully that in a peculiar way there has been committed to it the charge of being Christ's minister in moulding the character of our Mennonite Churches "until we all attain unto the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a full-grown man, unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." (Eph. 4:13)

A Picture of Christ in the Gospels

By Amanda Friesen

In the Gospels we are told
By the men who wrote of old,
Of a Saviour who is Prophet, Priest, and King.
As a little Babe He came,
And Jehovah chose His name,
For salvation to this world He came to bring.

Matthew pictures Him, we see,
As a King. . .His family tree
To old Father Abraham we clearly trace.
Next we see His bleeding brow
Crowned with cruel thorns. . .and now
He is slain to bear the sins of every race.

As a servant Mark portrays
Christ the Lord, who spent His days
In obedience to the Heavenly Father's will.
He could make the lame to walk,
He could cause the dumb to talk,
Many prophecies of old did He fulfill.

Luke's narration now appeals
To our hearts, for it reveals
Christ as man. . .His body weary from the strain.
He is tempted as are we Homeless, slandered. . .yet we see
He the perfect Man now breaks sin's awful chain.

John who lifts his pen to write
Brings to us a glorious sight
Of the One who was before the world began.
He forgave the thief who wept,
Died. . .Arose while guardsmen slept
In great glory He is coming back again.

Oh, I know it was for me
Jesus died upon the tree;
May I daily show my love to Him, my King.

LETTER BY A C.E. WORKER

Whitewater, Kansas
March 3, 1943

Dear Rev. Weinbrenner:

We find that it rushes us and makes our program planning so late always if we depend upon the current Mennonite for our programs. A program outline for the entire year was given in The Mennonite at the beginning of the year. We were very pleased with the topics listed and liked them much better than the programs listed in the international C.E. program booklets.

However, the program outlines appeared too late for us to use them up-to-date. In the beginning we had to use back numbers for program material, because the program outline did not appear in time. At present the programs scheduled for February have to be used in March. We do not like to miss having any of the programs during the year because they are all so good. Those serving like current numbers.

We are wondering whether it would not be a great help to us if the program outlines in The Mennonite would be given the first two weeks of the month instead of later.

Are there any Mennonite C.E. standards available for C.E. societies? If so please, send one.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Reinhold Schmidt
Gnadenberg C.E.

A Statement of Explanation

Thank you for the words of encouragement. We are happy to know that these topics meet the needs of your society better than those given by the international C.E. They should, for they are particularly adapted to the needs of our church which is a "peculiar" church.

As to the matter of using current issues for program material there may be some misunderstanding. It should be clearly understood that these programs are not written to be used on any specific date. These program outlines are of such a nature that we hope any one of them could be used at practically any time in any other year. The dates which were given in the outline of programs for 1943 in the December 29 issue of The Mennonite do not refer to the time when each topic is to be used. Rather, these dates merely state when such and such a program outline is to appear in the paper.

Because C.E. programs must be planned considerably ahead of time, sometimes as much as two to three weeks, it is impossible in most cases to use the outline in the current issue for a program on the Sunday following the date of issue. We expect program committees to use back numbers as far as the date of the program is concerned. As far as planning a program is concerned, we hope that current issues will be used. For example, the senior outline appearing this week could be utilized by a program committee as soon as the March 16 issue of The Mennonite arrives through the mails. Undoubtedly, however, those on the program would have to have at least two weeks from March 21 to prepare. Thus, the program outline of March 16 issue could be used in a C.E. program on April 4. This is entirely in place.

In other words, C.E. societies are urged to pay no heed to any dates for the presentation of particular program outlines. They are urged to use one program outline after another. The type of program material presented fits well into any time of the year. Therefore, no program outline is outdated. They are all up to date if they haven't been used. The series can be begun at any time of the year and taken through as a series. We hope that eventually we can put our program outlines in textbook form.

A copy of our C.E. standards is being mailed out. We hope that representatives of other societies will write to the editor about any problems which they may have. —rw.

SPURGEON AND SOLDIERING

"I am always glad to hear of a soldier becoming a Christian; I am always sorry to hear of a Christian being a soldier. If there be anything clear in the Scripture it does seem to me that it is for a Christian to have nothing to do with carnal weapons. May the day come when war shall be regarded as the most atrocious of all crimes, and when for a Christian man, either directly or indirectly, to take part in it shall be considered as an abjuration of his principle."

—Chas. H. Spurgeon

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

NO. 2 OF SERIES BIBLE STUDY THE LORD'S PRRAYER AND WORLD BROTHERHOOD, LUKE 11:1-13

I. Worship Service:

Songs: "There's a Wideness in God's Mercy," No. 53; "All hail the power of Jesus' name," No 5; 2. Reading of scripture passage, leader's remarks, and prayer; 3. Offering for foreign missions. 4. Roll-call, answered by Bible verses.

II. Leader's Remarks:

The Lord's prayer does not contain the words me and mine but it uses the words we and us. It makes us aware of the fact that we are all of us children of the heavenly Father and also that we are brothers one of another. It reminds one of the song: "In Christ there is no East nor West" and of Paul's words in Rom. 10:12, 13 "For there is no distinction between Jew and Greek: for the same Lord is Lord of all, and is rich unto all that call upon him: for, whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved."

The content of the petitions, too, deals with common needs and universal causes. If God's name is hallowed everywhere, if His Kingdom comes, that means the coming of world brotherhood. The daily bread for everybody and the willingness to share it which needs must go with it when we pray "Give us our daily bread" will do much toward making all men feel brotherly toward each other. The willingness to forgive removes rancor and hate and ill will from the hearts and opens them wide to the spirit of love and kindness and concern for others; it also serves to make us brothers. This prayer, so well known, so often repeated, should become more and more "a tie that binds our hearts in Christian love."

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. God Above All, Gen. 1:1, 6:5; Ps. 24:1,2; Ps. 93.
2. God the Loving Father, Luke 15:11-32.
3. We are to Be Brothers, I John 3:10-12; 4:7-11; James 2:15,16.
4. Christ's New Commandment, John 15:12-17.
5. The Other Sheep, John 10:14-16.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What points does Christ's intercessory prayer in John 17 have in common with the Lord's prayer?
2. In what ways does the Lord's prayer lead in the direction of world brotherhood?
3. What do prayer and world brotherhood have to do with each other?

V. Illustration:

Gate Locked Out Opportunities

A remarkable story of a woman of her acquaintance in India has been given by Mrs. W. Honsinger Fisher, a former missionary of the Methodist Episcopal Church in that country. Said she:

"An American woman friend of mine has been living in a far-away Indian village alone for many years. There she stands tonight, a Gibralter for every great and good thing. She stands for God and for better womanhood. I visited her recently and found her thatched roof house exposed, entirely unprotected—cows around at will, monkeys were unmolested in their mischief. I said, 'Lena, let me put up a fence and a gate to keep your home and garden protected.'

" 'No, no,' she said. 'Not that. I once had a gate and kept it locked. Late one night a group of village Christians came—outcasts. They had walked ten miles to learn more of the new way of life, and seeing the barred gate they passed on. After a night of sleep on the damp ground they walked back the ten miles. One of them died of snake bite that I might have cured. No.' she repeated, 'never again. I want no gate and no fence. I shall live "by the side of the road" and let all come who will.' "

VI. Food for Thought:

Is there any thing that we must do to have God answer our prayer for world brotherhood?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

CHRIST, THE ALL-POWERFUL

1. Prelude—Soft piano or violin music.

2. Call to Worship—"Oh come, let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker, for he is our God."

3. Worship in Song—"A Mighty Fortress is our God" (M. H. 549).

4. Worship in Prayer.

5. Leader's Remarks—Today we want to follow Jesus through four scenes of His life which show Him to be the all-powerful Son of God. His power extends into every phase of life, and we see the utter helplessness and hopelessness of man changed with His coming. With very little comment we will let Mark present these scenes to us as he has told them in his Gospel.

6. "Jesus Reveals His Power over Nature," Mark 4:35-41. (After the reading of this passage point out the extremity of the case—no hope, humanly speaking, for it was a "great storm," and "it (the ship) was now full;" the result when Jesus appeared—"the wind ceased, and these was a great calm." Apply to own lives.)

7. Special Music—"Master, the Tempest is Raging," verse 1 (Songs for service, 200).

8. "Jesus Reveals His Power over Evil Spirits," Mark 5:1-20. (Extremity—no hope, for "no man could bind him . . . neither could any man tame him;" but when Christ came, he became normal and sane.)

9. "Jesus Reveals His Power over Sickness," Mark 5:21-34. (Extremity—no hope, for in spite of spending her wealth on doctors, she was "nothing bettered, but rather grew worse:" but when Jesus came, "she was healed of her plague.")

10. Special Music—"The Hem of His Garment" (Songs for service, 123).

11. "Jesus Reveals His Power over Death," Mark

5:35-43 (continuation of 5:21-24). (Extremity—no hope, for she was already dead; but when Jesus came, she arose at his command.)

12. Leader's Closing Remarks and Prayer.

13. Prayer Response.

LACK OF RESPECT FOR THE PROPERTY OF OTHERS, Ex. 20:15.

Memory Verse: "Thou shalt not steal," Ex. 20:15. This is the second lesson in the series, Some of our Enemies. We do not like to think that we have enemies; we would rather be friends with all but there are certain things which keep us from being good citizens here on earth, and in heaven too. Dishonesty, misuse of our time, money and talents often causes us much grief and trouble.

We are accountable to God for how we live our lives, and how we use our gifts and talents. These are God's properties, and when we misuse them it is wrong for us.

What are these things that belong to God:

Our Bodies

"What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price—therefore glorify God in your body, and in your spirit, which are God's." I. Cor. 6:19-20. The Lord dwells in our hearts when we accept him, so let us keep our bodies clean and undefiled by sinful habits.

Our Lives

"For whether we live, we live unto the Lord, and whether we die, we die unto the Lord, whether we live therefore or die, we are the Lord's." Rom. 14:8. This then, is enough proof that we have no right to live our own lives that is let self rule our lives. We must also be willing to give up our lives for the cause of Christ.

Our Money

"But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God; for it is he that giveth thee power to get wealth." Deut. 8:18. The Lord asks us to give our tithes, to remember the widows and those less fortunate.

If God blesses us, we should be willing to give more. Often when men and women are prosperous the love of money makes them very zealous to keep all they make and thus lose the blessing that comes in sharing with others.

Our Talents

"So then everyone of us shall give account of himself to God." Rom. 14,12.

One time Robert Harkness, the gospel pianist and hymn writer, was called upon in a large gathering to play for a young girl, who rendered a fancy dance. Bravely, Mr. Harkness rose to his feet and said that he could not use his talent which God had given to him for anything that would not bring praise and glory to God. He knew that he must give account to God. May we, too,. use our talents always for God and his glory.

The Question Bee

1. How might we steal time? 2. Is cheating the beginning of dishonesty? 3. What is the penalty for dishonesty?

"Rather Than"

I'd rather lose, than play the cheat,
I'd rather fail than live a lie:
I'd rather suffer in defeat,
Than fear to meet another's eye.

I'd rather never win men's praise
Nor share the victor's sum of laughter
Than trade my self respect for days
And hate myself forever after.

DEATH IS A BRIDGE

By May Allread Baker

Death is a bridge and earnest souls, approaching,
With faith and confidence that God knows best,
Shall span the gulf that lies 'twixt earth and heaven
And reach the flowery fields of peace and rest.

Death is a bridge. And not with fear and trembling
Should we behold it when we reach the stream.
Beyond the mist—beyond the troubled waters—
The streets of gold and walls of jasper gleam.

Death is a bridge we cross with breath abated,
With heart-blood chilled, and feet reluctant, slow.
But oh, the joy we find again, when greeting
Those whom we loved and lost long, long ago!

Social and Religious Life of the Russian Mennonites in the Chaco of Paraguay

John R. Schmidt, M. D.

Social Activities of Young People

As stated before, the rules for regulating the social activities of the young people were formulated with only Mennonite ideals in mind. Practically, this works out so that when a girl and boy who are not engaged are seen walking together along the street, they are called before the church council because of it. The fact that children born of Mennonite parents are considered Mennonites, whether baptized or not, complicates the matter even more. The non-baptized youth does not think about it in the same way. And thus the baptized group is often led astray by the non-baptized group. On many occasions the strict rules, with no effort to supply satisfying activities for the young people, bring about very tragic and embarrassing results. Because of the strict rules many of the young people go to Asuncion. There they find a life that is more free. They feel that this life is acceptable, but they know it is not approved of by the people back home. Hence, they never go back. A common remark in the colony is, "All young folks who go to Asuncion never come back to us."

Efforts Towards Unity

Much effort has been made and is being made to unify the thinking of the various groups. During my stay the General Conference Mennonites and the Mennonite Brethren had communion together for the first time. During that time they also had a union song festival. Five years had elapsed since the last event of this kind. Minister's conferences, representing all groups, are held about twice each year. Several times a year there are held Bible study sessions in which various portions of scripture are intensively studied. A typical passage is chapter four of the Book of Ephesians. The participants enter the discussions with sincere intentions. However, a neutral observer can detect how one group, while pleading for Biblical unity, still really insists that they be permitted to carry out their own political and social ideas. The other group, however, can't even refer to these teachings on unity without bringing down upon themselves the accusation of trying to stir up trouble or trying to judge. The second group would like to obey the exhortations to unity without regard to political and social ideas. The latter group does have much more trouble in directing its young people. The first group is always very anxious to point this out to a neutral observer. The control of the first group over their young people is something that they can partly use for covering their own political sins.

Need For a Bible School

Here is a group of Mennonites trying to make adjustments to divers ideas and motives. The whole problem has been and is very close to me. The encouraging thing is that they all want to be Mennonites and Christians. There is only one answer to this problem as I see it, and that is to give the coming youth the opportunity really to study the Bible and Mennonite history through a Bible school. Considerable interest has been shown in the efforts made in this direction. They are in need of books and of someone to direct this educational program. The M.C.C. is sending Rev. Janzen of Tabor College over there. His work is going to be worth very much.

Let us all remember him. Let us all remember the people he will serve. Vernon Schmidt, who has worked with these people for over one year, is doing a great service about which I shall give more details in another article.

"One body we. . ."

Let me relate a development which took place

Dr. John R. Schmidt in Front of His Chaco Home

While serving the colonists in Paraguay Dr. Schmidt lived in this house with a grass thatched roof. This was formerly an Indian hospital. It is near the large hospital in the village of Philadelphia.

Elder Abraham Harder and Ministers, Fernheim, Paraguay.

just before I left the colony. In my mind this event puts "a cross of Calvary" on their efforts to restore unison. Very spontaneously the Alliance Mennonite group decided that they should build a meeting-house. None had ever been built in this colony. This idea developed momentum in spite of the poorest harvest that they had ever had.

The amazing thing about the building program is that they had no treasury and no one to keep record of the time put in by anyone. Everyone came to work as he found time. They did not have to be asked to come. The bush was cleared. Enough logs were hauled to the sawing machine to give them lumber and pay for sawing too. The walls were made from adobe bricks. Some of the badly needed nails were donated, and others were bought with money collected from the men at work. The interesting thing was that the building went up much faster than any other public building built by plans. Through donations from friends at home I was able to help them some, for which I was thankful. After all the discouraging experiences this proved to me that the colony still has people who are not afraid to share with each other.

(Brother Schmidt forwarded a very interesting and clear picture of the above-mentioned meeting house to the editor. However, since the Publication Board has no funds available for the making of cuts, the picture of this unique meeting house in the Chaco cannot be brought to the readers. —rw.)

JUST WAITING TO GROW

By Alice Hansche Mortenson

Under the sleet and the winter's snow
Are the loveliest things, just waiting to grow!
May flowers, trilliums, violets blue,
Down where the jack-in-the pulpits grew!
And, out in our favorite garden spots,
Are columbine, iris, forget-me-nots,
Hyacinths, tulips, and daffodils gay,
Waiting for winter to hurry away;
With never a thought and never a fear
But that spring will be coming again this year!

And so in Life's garden though winter may come
And bar for a time the song and the sun,
We must have faith as the flowers do,
Knowing there's always a sky of blue;
For beyond the wreckage of broken dreams,
A light, in the dreariest night, still beams,
And, beautiful recompense, after the storm,
Lo,—courage and strength and hope are born!
For God has arranged His gardens so,
With the loveliest things—just waiting to grow!

—Herald of Holiness

A REQUEST

Lord, give me tact to speak for Thee,
For hearts are hurt so easily,
And sometimes, too, we thoughtless are,
And hasty words may leave a scar—
Lord, make me wise to be more kind,
That love alone may fill my mind.

Lord, give me strength to work for Thee,
That all the tasks Thou givest me,
Done in Thy power, may yet seem light,
And each succeeding day more bright;
For in Thy service hearts grow strong
In helping weary ones along
The climbing way that leads to Thee—
Lord, give me strength to work for Thee.

Lord, give me grace to live for Thee—
To live in faith, in purity,
In joy that deeper is than woe,
In love that cannot but o'erflow,
That others, knowing me, may see
Not self—but Christ, abides in me.
Lord, give me grace to live for Thee.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

RURAL PAGANS

When we think of mission work we almost inevitably turn our minds to "darkest Africa," pagan India, Mohammedan China, the American Indians, or city missions. Few of us think of doing mission work in our home communities, in the town next to our own, or in the thousands of other American communities. In this regard the (Old) Mennonites have developed much more rapidly than any other body of Mennonites. At present they have about thirty rural missions in the United States. A famous American authority on rural life tells us some sobering facts about the health of religion in America's rural areas. Such information serves to keep us from becoming too complacent about things too close to us.

Statistical Facts

The Census of Religious Bodies for 1936 gives the total number of church members in the United States as 55,807,366. This means that out of the total population of about 130,000,000 less than half are church members. Some of those not members may be children it is true, but then again many churches baptize children and consider them members. Of the total church membership in the United States 17,084,410 were rural and 38,519,170 were urban. It is difficult to think of pagan people all around us when we have thought so long that pagans were found only in distant lands. Yet Charles J. Galpin says that out of fifteen millions of farm children under twenty-one years of age, more than four million are pagans, children without knowledge of God. Or as he suggests: "If perchance, they know the words to curse with, they do not know the Word to live by."

Mission Opportunities

The Institute for Social and Religious Research asserts that 1,600,000 farm families, which means over six million individuals, live in communities where there is no church or Sunday school of any denomination. Moreover, it is significant to notice that these 1,600,000 pagan children are not distributed evenly among children who are in contact with the Bible, but are generally found in godless, bibleless communities. Galpin concludes that we are unfortunately moving "not from bad to better, but from bad to worse." In connection with this subject one should not fail to say that there are too many churches in many communities. In hundreds of towns two and three churches could well serve where now eight and ten exist. When Jesus instructed his disciples to go into all the world he did not exclude the home country nor the rural areas. A rural church with a rural heritage and a missionary zeal such as the Mennonite Church has, can well afford to meditate upon the challenge of rural mission work among pagan millions in the United States.

INSTALLATION SERVICE

Brother Lester Hostetler will be installed as pastor of the Bethel College Mennonite Church at North Newton, Kansas, on Sunday, March 21, at 3:30 p. m., in the Bethel College chapel.

The brethren A. E. Kreider, J. M. Regier, and D. C. Wedel will be the speakers. You are invited to attend.

A PRAYER FOR THE LORD'S DAY

Lord of all the days, I give Thee thanks that the Sabbath day has dawned.

For the quietness that descends upon the world—the stillness of machines, the lessened rushing to and fro, the peace of the hills and sky—I am grateful and glad.

Speak Thou to me through the manifold ministeries of this day:

The quiet of my home circle,
The leisurely thought that can be given to the ordinary affairs of life,
The joy and broadening influence of books,
The fellowship of friends,
The touch of nature and the out-of-doors upon a tired mind and a troubled heart,
The open doors of the church with its summons to the higher things of the spirit,

Grant, O God, that when evening falls, I can look back upon a day crowded with these and all good gifts.

In the name of Him who said, "The Sabbath was made for man." Amen.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

May we again remind you of the Fourth Quarterly Conference to be held in First Church, Philadelphia, Monday, April 5, with afternoon and evening services. The afternoon service will begin at 2:30. After a brief business meeting, the Rev. Ward Shelly, pastor of the Springfield Church will present a paper on "The Mid-Week Prayer Service." The evening session will start at 7:30. Rev. Paul R. Shelly, student at Union Theological Seminary New York, will present a paper on a semi-devotional theme, "Are Ye Able." Rev. John J. Plenert is pastor of the First Church, Philadelphia.

Are you getting "The Mennonite"?—When the secretary attended the annual meeting of the Board of Foreign Missions, he called on the Rev. J. M. Suderman, Secretary of the Board of Publication, in the Mennonite Publication Office, in Newton, Kansas. Rev. Suderman informed the Conference Secretary that he was well pleased with the number of Pennsylvania subscribers. He counted them and informed us that there were 345. The total number of subscribers is over 3,800. While the Secretary of the Board of Publication may be well pleased, we know of a number of people who do not subscribe to The Mennonite. I wish it might be possible to boost this subscription list for Pennsylvania to 375 or perhaps 400 before the end of the year 1943. Pastors let us do our best and see what can be accomplished!

Is your church appearing under these articles?—While some are sending in correspondence direct there are others from whom we never read. Your secretary took it upon himself last autumn to prepare an article frequently so that all churches might be heard from. A number of ministers are sending their bulletins or notices to me from which I gather news from the churches. Rev. Weinbrenner, our efficient editor, as well as Rev. Suderman, Secretary of the Board of Publication, believe this to be a worthwhile project. Some churches have appeared in these articles from which nothing has been read for years. Please, send me a card frequently giving news of your church. Probably, it isn't much, but included in this article it will be interesting to the Eastern District subscribers as well as many in th General Conference. Several people have expressed themselves very favorably in the middle west concerning these articles. Probably if your church is heard from more often, you will be able to interest more to become subscribers.

East Swamp—Richard Boehr has decided to remain in Chicago. He is attending a technical college, hoping to become a draftsman in a factory near Wheaton College, where he expects to resume his studies this fall. (In our last article we stated that he was planning to come to Quakertown so he could worship and fellowship with the members of the church.) (Probably we should add "These articles are subject to change." H. G. N.)

Upper Milford, Zionsville—The pastor consecrated the infant son of Brother and Sister Henry Bowyer in the Episcopal Hospital, Philadelphia, on Monday evening, March 8. Both mother and child had been seriously ill. We praise God that we can report that both are improving nicely at this time. The pastor also consecrated the son of Brother and Sister Harbert Forbes at their home 1628 N. 16th street, Philadelphia, the same evening.

Allentown—The cottage prayer meetings are being fairly well attended and everyone seems to be receiving a great blessing. We had a number of sick people for whom we had been praying and rejoice in answered prayer. Yes. "God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform."

Hereford, Bally—Mrs. Norman Berky submitted to an operation in the Women's Hospital, Philadelphia, recently. John Moser is still a patient in the Allentown Hospital. While he suffers a great deal of pain at times he is usually cheerful and always glad to welcome visitors.

Howard G. Nyce, Conference Secretary

—The Bluffton College Booster Banquet will be held Friday, April 2, beginning at 7:30 p.m. Lieutenant Governor Paul Herbert will speak. The choir gave a concert in the St. John Mennonite Church, north of Bluffton, on March 14. Work on the "Beaver Hut," new recreational center at Bluffton College, is progressing rapidly. This is a social center in the former college project building. It will include many games and activities and a lunch counter, specifically for student use.

—Mrs. P. R. Schroeder writes, "Our family has gone through a very hard experience in that our dear Louise was taken from us so unexpectedly on February 27. It is especially painful since it comes so soon after our other loss. Her young husband, with whom she lived two days less than seven months, of course, has the greatest loss. We appreciate more than we can express the many, many expressions of sympathy that have reached us from far and near. May the Lord find us all ready when He calls."

—Brother Elmer E. S. Johnson, who has taught church history for many years at Hartford Theological Seminary, will retire from his teaching position there this year. He will keep on as pastor of the Mennonite Church at Bally, Pa.

—Violet Miller, Senior at Bethel College, has agreed to teach the Bible School of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, the coming school year. Sister Miller is a very skilled pianist, but she did not hesitate to milk cows at Bethel College when there was a shortage of help. Watch for an article by her this month or next. She is at home at Hurley, South Dakota.

—Clarification: The Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, has ten young men in C.P.S. camps. The pastor says that his church is strong for the C.P.S. program.

—Bulletin, Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: "The committee of our church representing the Mennonite Aid Union has written over $18,000.00 worth of insurance." "Last Sunday evening a large number of our members visited with the Mennonite Brethren at their church at 1702 W. Second Street, while a group of our folks furnished the program. Such meetings will do much towards bringing about greater cooperation among churches. . . ." "Could the three Mennonite churches of Wichita have a retreat at one of the Wichita camps this summer? . . . The time could be spent in Bible study, a study of our peace problems, and methods for making Christ more real to our fellowman."

—Wanted: Little Pigs: "No, we are not turning the Chronicles into a page of advertisements. This is only a call for help. Most of our C.P.S. camps are seriously seeking to help themselves as much as possible so that they may not be a greater burden than necessary. With that thought in mind the camp at Weeping Water, Nebraska, is contemplating putting out a garden to supply vegetables for the camp. Also they are hoping to supply their own meat as much as possible. They are making arrangements to raise their own pork provided a few friends can be found who have a little pig they would be willing to donate to the camp. Two from the community have already responded. If you feel that you are able to help in this cause give your name to the pastor. . . ."

Thus writes Brother Walter Gering, pastor, in a paper put out for members of the Eden Church.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Our church has again met its C.P.S. quota for the recent three months period, figured on the basis of five hundred members. Thank you for the fine response.

—Brother Willard K. Claassen, pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, is conducting special meetings at the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota.

—Brother J. J. Regier has resigned as pastor of the Burrton (Kansas) Mennonite Church and has accepted a call from the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota. He will begin his service there on June 6.

—The Deer Creek (Oklahoma) Mennonite Church recently dedicated eighty new Mennonite Hymnaries. They are working out an Easter song service with four songs out of the cantata "Life Eternal" and songs out of the Hymnary. This congregation with a membership of 110 has 6 boys in C.P.S. camps. The church was organized in 1899. The meeting house was built in 1902 and remodeled later.

—Mutual Aid: Members of the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas, participated in a shower for Brother and Sister Herbert Claassen whose house, with almost all of its contents, burned down recently. Among the gifts were sugar, coffee, and canned goods. Mrs. Bernard H Wiebe, Corr.

—Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa: "On February 21 the congregation witnessed the licensing, by the pastor, of one of its young men, Howard Raid, to preach the gospel. Brother Raid has for some years filled appointments as the occasions presented themselves and plans to enroll in a seminary to prepare for the ministry as soon as possible. The sincere prayers and best wishes of the brotherhood bid Brother and Sister Raid God-speed in the calling to which they have dedicated their lives."

—Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa., "We are starting a study class for all Sunday School Teachers and others interested in a course called 'My Christian Belief.' Some of the topics will be God, The Bible, Sin, Salvation, Jesus Christ, The Cross, The Church, Immortality, etc." "Mothers, do you know that we have a nursery in charge of some person every Sunday during the church hours?"

Rev. Jacob H. Janzen, Waterloo, Ontario, who was the main speaker during Bible Week at Bethel College this year.

—Brother Arthur Wenger, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California, was recently ordained as Elder by Brother J. H. Langenwalter, who also brought the morning message. Every Thursday afternoon a large class of boys and girls meets at the home of Mrs. Jake Neufeld for Bible instruction. The lessons are being taught by means of flannelgraphs.

—The Salem Mennonite Church of Freeman, South Dakota, again fully met its C.P.S. quota for the period just past.

—At hand are eight year books from churches which await review. Thank you for sending them in. May still more do so.

—C.P.S. figures for church Bulletins: "With a total Mennonite membership of about 118,000 in the United States, and with a cost of nearly $60,000.00 per month, it takes about fifty cents per member per month. The cost to date has been about $6.75 per member. (The six months quota were $ .50, $1.00, and $1.25 up to August 1, 1942. Since then it has been $ .50 per month.)" Thus writes Brother Walter H. Dyck in a letter of March 1 to the churches of the Western District.

—George Dick of Lima, Ohio, writes, "No doubt you have read the timely article 'Religious Liberty for Latin America,' by Ganzalo Baegcamango as printed in the March 3 issue of The Christian Century. The arguments for evangelical propagation in that country are well taken . . . it bears repeating. All Christian should read it."

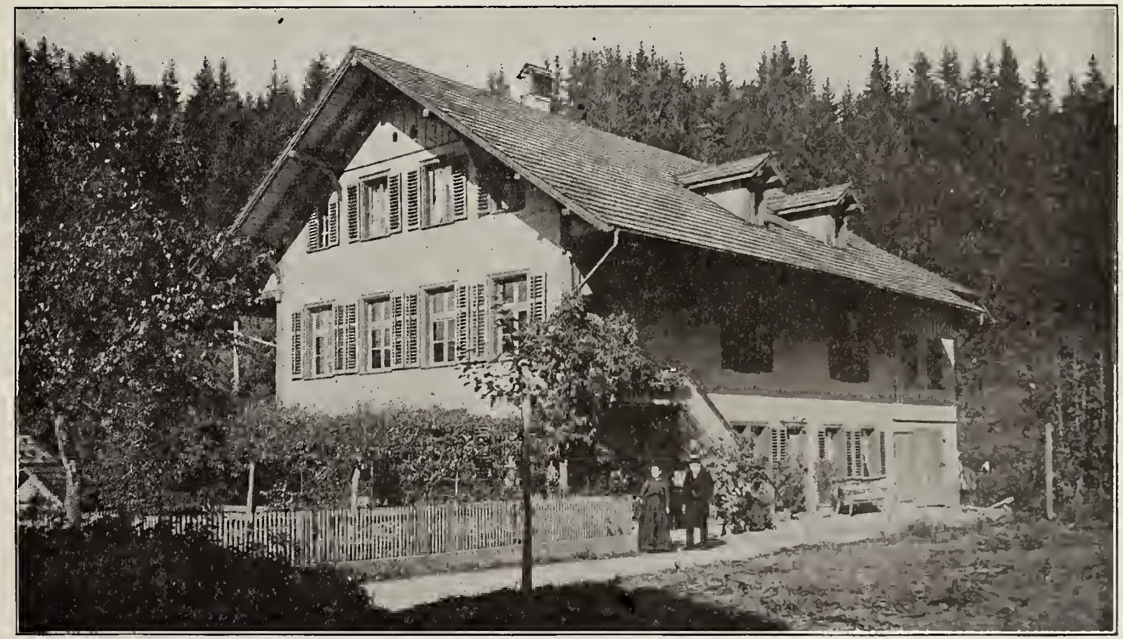
"Church" and "Meetinghouse"

"Here is a picture of our church." "We built our church in 1915." "The church roof leaks badly." "We go to church every Sunday." In such common statements as these a building is referred to as being the "church."

Once this was not done. When Paul wrote to the "churches of Galatia" he did not have in mind a number of buildings but rather groups of believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. When he confessed that he had persecuted the "church of God" he did not mean that he had destroyed a building but rather that he had molested believers in Jesus Christ. He taught that the "church" was the body of Christ. He regarded the "church" as a group of believers in Christ, called out from the world.

The term "church" is still being used in the sense that Paul used it, but it is also being used in another sense. Very frequently it is used to designate a building in which Christians meet to worship. In the minds of some "church" means very little, if any more, than such a building. In this skyscraper, thing-minded age people have become much interested in having a great and magnificent "church." It is always much easier to lay brick upon brick than to add grace upon grace to the heart of a believer. Wood and stone strike our senses; the things of the spirit are not so easily laid hold of. It is considerably easier to write a history of the building and remodeling of a "meet-



A Mennonite "Meetinghouse" At Kehr, Near Langnau, Switzerland
The group which built this meetinghouse had held their meetings for many, many years in private homes. As the membership again increased (About two hundred members in 1892) the concern for a meetinghouse arose. The above building, which was erected in 1888, has a family dwelling place on the first floor and an assembly room above which contains about 350 seats. This was the first meetinghouse of the united baptism-minded groups (Mennonite were called the baptism-minded or Brethren in Switzerland) and, undoubtedly, still stands. In the sixteenth century baptism-minded groups in one section of Switzerland met in forests and in the wildest, most desolate places. By 1811 considerable pressure was still exerted upon them.

inghouse" than to write the history of a "church" and treat its constitution, its adherence to doctrines, and its spiritual life as viewed according to Bible standards.

As suggested the term "church" really means "called-outers." This suggests to us many wonderful truths as how we should be separate from the world and one with God, representing and serving him as his sons and daughters. A number of sermons could be based on the term "church." It is a floodlight on the meaning of "church" membership. It is a precious word.

Conrad Grebel, George Blaurock, and Felix Manz, had some definite ideas as to what the "church" really was. Our spiritual ancestors met in secluded spots where the persecutors could not find them easily. They had "meetingplaces" at first and only later "meetinghouses." They were a strong "church" without buildings for worship. To them the "church" was first and last of all a fellowship of regenerate beings called out by God through Christ.

Should not that be our emphasis today? Do we not stand in danger of detracting from that emphasis when we use "church" to mean a building? Let us permit the word "church" to do the work that it is capable of. —rw.

OUR HISTORICAL LIBRARY

As the farmer rejoices when he sees the fields grow green in spring time, so it is a real joy to see the Historical Library grow. During the last few months many friends have made valuable contributions in money, books, pictures, documents, etc.—too numerous to list them all, but we would like to mention a few.

The first Mennonite Mutual Aid Society of the Mennonites which came from Russia to America was organized on February 11, 1874. The original document of the constitution and by-laws, (the Schnurbuch) was in the hands of the I. J. Friesen family, Henderson, Nebraska. Brother Friesen has turned it over to the Historical Library, where it is carefully preserved in the David Goerz safe in the vault. A typewritten copy is being made for practical use.

The collection of 120 editions of Mennonite hymnbooks has been increased by donations of U. S. Amstutz, Rev. Micheal Waldner of the Hutterite Colony Bon Homme, I. J. Friesen, Mrs. A. Esau, Henry Boese, J. F. Sawatzky, and others.

Mrs. P. R. Schroeder donated twenty-two old photographs of schools, conferences, and groups. Beside that, she gave some "Wunschbuecher" of the time before the great migration in 1874. We have been searching for them for over five years and had not been able to find any. This gift therefore is much appreciated.

The Library is also grateful for all clippings which have been sent in. They are a valuable contribution if the exact title of the paper or magazine and the date are given.

A most hearty "thank you" to all contributors.

—A. Warkentin, Librarian

The recent Western District Ministers' Conference was distinctive for its evangelistic emphasis. The hour of sharing experiences with God led to a union of spirit that was felt throughout the conference. A resolution was passed to encourage the Evangelism Committee to work out a method for an evangelistic effort by our churches during the Lenten season. It was suggested that since there is strength in a united effort our churches be encouraged to make the week ending with Palm Sunday (April 11-17) a Week of Evangelism.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Peter J. Friesen was assistant minister for many years in the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and in the Salem Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota. His son, Arnold, is in a C.P.S. camp. Brother Friesen is the older brother of Gerhard Friesen, Newton, Kansas, and J. John Friesen who formerly taught at Freeman Junior College. Brother Friesen attended Bethel College from 1895-1899.

P. A. Penner, missionary to India for forty-one years, hardly needs an introduction. He was born April 2, 1871, at Bilisirkow, South Russia, the son of Abraham Penner and Marie Buhler-Penner. His first wife died in India in 1906. One of his children also lies buried there. His older daughter, Mariam H., is the wife of Dr. Herbert Schmidt, Newton, Kansas. The second marriage of Brother Penner was to Martha Richert, Goessel, Kansas, in 1909. Schools attended are: Preparatory School, Mountain Lake, Minnesota; Bethel Academy, 1895-1897; The Missionary Training Institute, Brooklyn, New York, 1899. He has the honorary degrees of Th. B. and D. D. He was missionary in India from 1900 to 1941. There he did outstanding work in organizing and building up the Bethesda Leper Home at Champa, India. The Penners are now at home (when not out serving churches) at 108 South Walnut Street, Newton, Kansas. Boys and girls should order his story, Strange Experiences from the Literature Committee of the women's missionary association.

(The above facts are taken from the forthcoming book Who's Who Among the Mennonites, edited by A. Warkentin and Melvin Gingerich.

Mrs. A. S. Bechtel is the wife of the pastor of the Einsiedel Mennonite Church, Hanston, Kansas, who was also formerly the editor of the Sunday school section that appeared in this paper. Sister Bechtel has served with her husband in these four pastorates: Mennonite Church, Normal, Illinois; Mennonite Church, Pulaski, Iowa; Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois, and Deer Creek Mennonite Church, Deer Creek, Oklahoma.

A Letter from Our Peace Committee

Good Record for January

The month of January was a fine month for financial support by our Conference to the Mennonite Central Committee C.P.S. Program. (See financial record below.) The quota for the next quarter—March, April, and May—remains the same: 50 cents per member per month.

Detached Service Taking Many Men

Present estimates are that by the end of May, 1943, there will be a total of approximately 3,100 men assigned to the Mennonite Central Committee, either in camps or on detached service. Of these it is estimated that there will be approximately seven hundred on detached service, and approximately 2,400 in Mennonite Central Committee Camps. Camps in operation at present have a total capacity of more than 2,700 men, so that it is evident that if detached service develops as indicated now, our camps will not be filled to capacity during the present period.

Men In Camps Give

The boys in the camps are setting us a good example in doing their share. From ten camps in two months $1,144 were contributed to relief by missing meals or Sunday School collections. The president of our Conference reports that none of the treasuries for Conference work have been affected in a depreciative way by our giving to the Mennonite Central Committee program. This is indeed encouraging.

Parachute Jumpers

Some plans are under way now to have a training school in Montana during the summer months to train parachute fire fighters in order that they may gain access to places too difficult to travel by automobile.

Civilian Bonds

Civilian Bonds are now available in $18.50 units . . . . Four areas of relief work are being planned: England, the Near East, China, and South American Mennonites . . . . The problem of the High School Victory Corps is receiving attention. An effort has been made to find a suitable alternate program for boys and girls in high school. As soon as there is some information concerning it, it will be printed in our Church papers.

Conscription of Women

The National Board for Religious Objectors has detailed to the Council on Civilian Service the problem of the drafting of women in the WAAC, WAVES, SPARS, or other uniformed auxiliaries of the armed forces. A plan of alternate service is being suggested in any type of hospital work, religious work, agriculture, health service, nursing and educational work. (March 8, 1943)

CHURCH COLLEGE

I like colleges that nestle
In quiet little towns,
And seem to offer something more
Than credits, caps, and gowns.

I like the classes filled with friends
Who have a smile for me.
I don't like the profs who know me as Row thirty-one, seat three.

I hate to meet a former prof's
Unrecognizing stare;
I like the kind who know your name,
Your hopes, your love affair.

I like church-college profs who teach
Like wise, inspired crusaders;
Who take time to read your themes,
And don't hire student graders.

I like colleges, which strive to learn
Years later where you are;
Yes, even though you've never been
A campus queen or star.

A mammoth institution holds
Within its office space,
Along with proof of my degree,
A photo of my face.

The most it knows about me is
My city, birth, and class.
I like my old church college best;
She doesn't think en masse.

She'll gaily cheer each grad's career
With faith that's optimistic;
To her a former student is
No musty old statistic.

The friends I met at Heidelberg
Passed not like ships at night;
They send me lengthy letters still,
Though I forget to write.

I like colleges that nestle
In quiet little towns,
And offer students something more
Than credits, caps, and gowns.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

The Earth Is Good

The most common things all around us are the one most frequently unappreciated. If familiarity doesn't always breed contempt it surely always breeds indifference. The most precious things in the world are those closest to us, yet at the same time these precious things are the ones least valued. A good illustration of this generalization is the earth on which we live and move and have our being. The soil under our feet; the ground in our gardens, the turf in our back yards, how often do we think of it as good? If we think of it at all, it is usually in a negative attitude as so much extra bother when sticking to our shoes or when dragged into our houses. How often is the tiller of the soil sour and complaining if his fields are not of just the texture he would like them to be? How quick we are to complain about the soil when our crops don't produce as abundantly as we think they should.

God Made It Good

Whether we recognize it or not the earth is good because God made it so. God created the dry land which He called earth, He saw that it was good (Gen. 1:10). So too after He had created the grass, the birds, the animals and man out of the earth, He saw that it was all good. If we stop to think about it we too will say that the earth is good. From it we derive all our energy, our sustenance and our clothing. All food, shelter, and raiment consumed by us comes directly or indirectly from the good earth. The Psalmist must have felt this as he enthusiastically bubbled over with words such as: "The earth is full of the goodness of God," "The earth is the Lord's and the fullness thereof," "How aimable are thy tabernacles, O Lord of Hosts," "I will lift up mine eyes to the hills."

God's Creatures Think It Good

To every bird the air is good. To every fish the water is good. To every beast the food is good and its time of sleep is good and every man knows these things are good if he is worth being a man. The man of the soil knows down within his own heart that there is goodness and wholesomeness in a refreshing rain, in the wind, the soil, the sea, the glory of a sunrise, in the breezes that ring through the trees and in the numberless living things of nature. Surely then the earth is divine. Man did not make it. He is but a part of its creation. If God created the earth it is hallowed, and for this reason we, his stewards, must deal with it devotedly and with care that we do not despoil it and exploit it. We should consider it religiously: "Put off thy shoes from off thy feet, for the place whereon thou standest is holy ground."

A RESPONSIBILITY

By P. A. Penner

To find a suitable area in which to open missionary activity for our General Conference in India was indeed a great responsibility. Much depended upon what the Brethren Kroeker and Penner would do. No one knew this better than we. Various trips were undertaken before negotiations for the section we now hold were begun.

A Hot Trip and Filthy Water

The trip that this picture represents was undertaken in May, 1901. I was alone. Brother Kroeker, my fellow missionary, was unable to accompany me because of illness in his family. I also felt that I had some reason to remain in Dhamtari, where through the kindness of the Old Mennonite Mission, we were privileged to remain ten months, i.e., until the time that we were ready to occupy our own field. But they were not important enough to deter me from undertaking this trip. May is the hottest month of the year; the thermometer often being 110 to 115 during the day. Being ignorant of Indian conditions and especially of its climatic conditions, I did not give enough time to necessary details for such an undertaking during the hottest part of the year. The water problem, e.g., is always the most serious, and preparations for enough drinking water were unfortunately not made. Wells are scarce and often unclean. Tanks (artificial larger or smaller lakes) are the swimming and bathing pools of the young and old of the village to say nothing of cattle that enjoy water during this time of the year. Drinking unboiled water may have serious results as in my case.

What I Looked For

The accompanying photo shows three carts. The first was my cart with the Indian driver. The second that of my catechist and his driver, and the third the cook and his driver. Both the evangelist and the cook were graciously loaned us by neighboring missionaries. When looking for a mission field we had four objectives constantly in mind. First, the field to be chosen must be an unoccupied field, i.e., not worked by any other mission. Second, it should be reasonably healthful. Third, one where, humanly speaking, results in the way of converts might be expected, and fourth, we had been requested by the Mission Board to locate as near to the Old Mennonite Mission as possible. Did our Board visualize an eventual union of our two missions? I don't know. I feel very strongly even to-day that the Lord, whose guidance we frequently sought, has brought us to the field that we now occupy. The field was unoccupied, is healthful, and has given us a rich harvest of precious souls. As I traveled alone through the numerous villages from Akaltara, the railroad station, to Seneorain and finally to Janjgir also on the railroad, I made many notes as to the conditions of this area. I jotted down the names of the villages through which I passed, as well as the names of the near by villages. Then whether the population was predominantly Hindoo or Mohammedan, effects of the 1899-1900 famine, how many orphans, lepers, etc. Of course, I took for granted that the villagers to whom I was a perfect stranger would tell me the truth. But I have learned to know my brown friend better since those early days and have found out that sometimes he has a queer way of telling the truth. I was still in the "believeth all things" stage.

Lack of Appetite for Hot Cakes

Aside from the almost unbearable heat, I did thoroughly enjoy my trip. I had plenty of time to make some observations and learn some things really Indian. Just one instance to show how simply a person can live and how primitive the preparations for meals can be. I, of course, had my cook who made my meals and incidently made "some extra money" from this "green-horn." But each driver made his own meals. They could, of course, not have a common mess being of different castes. I swung my hammock between two trees, and because of the scorching heat I could not sleep; so I watched my driver make his noon meal. I will not go into details of the entire meal, but just the bread making part of it. He scoured his brass plate. Then out of a dirty, rather dirty, bag he took two or three handfulls of wheat flour. This he put into the brass plate and added some dirty tank water. With his fists, none too clean, and certainly black-rimmed finger nails, he kneaded the dough. When finished, he took small pieces of this dough and flattened them into cakes about one-half inch thick. I was wondering, as I looked on with interest, where he would bake these cakes. But he had that all figgered out. Four or five cow dung cakes were soon aglow, and on these live coals he put these cakes, but not to bake, as you may readily realize, but to scorch black. They were not baked inside at all. When these were done to his satisfaction, he brought forth out of another bag a dirty bottle with some oil, and with this he gave the black bread a good coating. Now he was ready to have his meal. But before he began, he asked me to share his bread with him. I had no appetite, but did not say this. I simply politely refused. Nothing went to waste. When I refused to partake of his meal, he gave my part to his oxen.

Victory Through Difficulties

Upon my return to Dhamtari I reported the result of my trip to Kroekers and my wife. We agreed, after much consultation, that if the Lord would help us secure land in Janjgir and Champa, that we would consider this to be God's will to locate there. I doubt if any of my readers not acquainted with Indian conditions have any idea of how extremely difficult it is to secure land for mission purposes. Many visits were necessary to both Indian and European officials before the contract had finally been registered. One incident in regard to such difficulties stands out clearly in my mind. I called on the Zamindar (landowner, feudatory chief) in Champa and asked him whether he would grant to the General Conference a suitable location for a mission station, pointing out the benefits of having a mission within his kingdom. He gave a favorable reply, and when I asked him where this might be had, he replied, "Just go and look for a place and then let me know." Thank you.. After a day or two I returned and pointed out the parcel of land that might be suitable. "No," said he, "that parcel of land I cannot give you."

"Well," I replied, "may we have the Jagdalla Garden?"

"No," said he, "there I intend to build another palace." (Until now that palace is still "in the air.")

Finally I said, "What parcel of land would you be willing to give us?"

"I will give you no land."

Here was another man who did not take the matter of a promise seriously. But in this case I was not satisfied. I called on a higher official and asked him to persuade the Zamindar to keep his promise. This he did. Thus we soon had our contract in our hand. That was forty-three years ago, and during that time we have succeeded in winning the friendship not only of the Zamindar and the succeeding Zamindars, but also of the village of Champa.

A CHANGE IN SISTER KUYF'S PROGRAM

Since the published dates did not suit all churches, the following changes in the program were made.

April 18 Hanston, Rev. A. S. Bechtel
April 19-20 Ransom, Rev. A. Albrecht
April 21 Oakley, Rev. J. H. Epp, Colby, Kansas
April 22-23 Vona, Arthur L. Boese
April 24-25 Colorado Springs C.P.S. Camp No. 5, Harry Martens
April 26-27 Fort Collins C.P.S. Camp No. 33, Rev. J. F. Schmidt
April 28-29 Madrid, Rev. J. F. Sawatzky
April 30-May 2 Henderson, Rev. A. W. Friesen
May 3-4 Beatrice (country), Rev. Walter H. Dyck, 1408 N. 9th St.
May 5-6 Beatrice (town), Rev. A. Claassen
May 7 Weeping Water C.P.S. Camp No. 25, Rev. Erwin Goering

WHY A CHURCH PAPER IN EVERY HOME?

The Apostle Paul writes to Timothy, "Give attendance to reading—Meditate upon these things—give thyself wholly to them." Note: Read! Meditate! Give!

Reading is like eating. It feeds our souls. Reading gives vision. Where there is no vision the people perish. They say that no chain is stronger than its weakest link. No church or conference is any stronger than the spiritual interest of its individual members in that work.

Next to the Bible and hymnary, Christian periodicals should claim our highest attention. You may say, "I do not care to read." Certainly there are but few who do not read the daily paper. A patient who says to the doctor, "I do not care to eat," will become a concern to him, especially when he learns that the patient has a craving for less wholesome foods. Our health depends on good food more than we realize.

What digestion does to our food, meditation does to what we read. Our church papers contain Bible expositions, daily devotionals, suggestions for practical Christian living, news about missionaries, relief work, C.P.S. camps, items of interest in local churches, etc. We cannot all travel to these various places, but we can "keep posted" by spending at least a part of an afternoon or evening each week in reading and thinking through the mass of thought-provoking material found in both papers, The Mennonite and Bundesbote.

For this reason we think it necessary that a church paper be sent into each of our homes. If the family or individual is unable to pay the $1 per year which it actually costs, we want it to be paid out of our church treasury: Then all members have equal chance to read, meditate, give!

WOMEN'S DRAFT

Complete exemption for conscientious objectors, in the event of a women's draft, will be the first goal of the groups represented on the N.S.B.R.O.'s Council on Civilian Service.

Failing that, the Council thought it would be wise to designate several broad fields in which women might reasonably work if the proposed National Service Act is passed.

Attending the Council's meeting Feb. 15 in Philadelphia were representatives from the three service committees, the F.O.R., Methodist Board of Missions, Episcopal Pacifist Fellowship, Women's International League A.C.C.O. and the N.S.B.R.O.

The Council felt that the following fields might be suitable for women C.O.'s as well as for the men that might come under the provision of the act: education, social welfare, public health, safety and welfare, agriculture, religious work, co-operatives—as a vocation, and government agencies connected with such activities.

It was agreed to press for absolute exemption, or if that is impossible, deferment on conditions the C.O. enter or stay in one of the designated service areas. If this also is not possible, the groups will ask for both government units under civilian control and civilian projects privately financed.

It was also agreed that establishment of camps for women similar to the pressent C.P.S. camps would be both difficult and undesirable. —The Reporter

HOW LONG SHALL I GIVE?

"Go break to the needy sweet charity's bread;
For giving is living," the angel said.
"And must I be giving again and again?"
My peevish and pitiless answer ran.
"Oh, no," said the angel, piercing me through,
"Just give till the Master stops giving to you."

Commonplace Things

Lord of all pots and pans and things,
Since I've no time to be
A saint by doing lovely things,
Or watching late with Thee,
Or dreaming in the dawnlight,
Or storming Heaven's gates,
Make me a saint of getting meals,
And washing up the plates.

Although I must have Martha's hands,
I have a Mary mind;
And when I black the boots and shoes,
Thy sandals, Lord, I find;
I think of how they trod the earth,
What time I scrub the floor;
Accept this meditation, Lord,
I haven't time for more.

Warm all the kitchen with Thy love,
And light it with Thy peace;
Forgive me all my worrying,
And make all grumbling cease.
Thou who didst love to give men food,
In room or by the sea,
Accept this service that I do—
I do it unto Thee.

(This poem which touches the hearts of all those who serve at home, was written by a servant-girl who learned that there is glory in commonplace things if they are done unto God.)

Milk Cows for Relief

At the annual meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee, I presented, perhaps out of turn, the idea of looking ahead to relief work that goes beyond handing out powdered milk, soup, etc., to a more lasting program of rehabilitation. Specifically, I suggested that we start a program now for raising milk cows which could be set aside for shipment to Europe as soon as safe transport and distribution could be assured. The idea was rather graciously smiled off the floor. I still think it is a good idea. Nor is it new.

The Brethren Service has for some time been working with the advice of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Bureau of Dairy Industry, and the Office of Foreign Agricultural Relations, etc., working out an organized system of raising heifers for Europe. The National Lutheran Council has also been actively interested in the project. The Belgian government in exile has agreed to ship the cattle from the U.S. to Belgium as soon as it can be done safely.

The need is tremendous. If we could send 100,000 heifers, that would merely replace one-third of the milk cattle loss of Belgium alone! There are innocent women, children, babies, dying of starvation in all countries in Europe!

Farmers can give calves; they can feed and shelter calves purchased by city folk. City folk can either buy the calf or pay for its food, or both.

An organized channel should be provided for such giving. A Mennonite in a city came to me and asked whether the Mennonites were doing anything along this line; offering to buy a few calves and to pay a farmer for sheltering and caring for them. There would be a fine response to this truly humanitarian project. What are we going to do about it? If we do nothing, those who are interested will be forced to work through the Brethren Service Committee, and the M.C.C. will lose prestige, as well as an opportunity to serve in a large way. —George S. Stoneback

AN OPEN DOOR

"Now it seems to me that if Paul were here today and would take a pre-view of the missionary status of the Mennonite Church, he would say that the door to the rural field is open wider than any other, because this field offers so much fruit to be harvested in what time is left before the Lord returns. I do not mean to say that there are more people in the rural field than elsewhere, but that they are more receptive. Rural people generally are steady, hard-working, and neighborly. Even naturally and materially speaking, they are interested in and concerned about one another. These qualities, when taken over into the converted life, are in the new Christian's favor. As a rule, they have contacted less of the lure and lust and temptations of the world. They are usually less soiled by its rottenness and are less involved in the more vicious types of sin. Work among them brings an appreciable degree of stable response."

HIS GIFT AND MINE

Over against the treasury
He sits who gave Himself for me.
He sees the coppers that I give
Who gave His life that I might live.
He sees the silver I withhold
Who left for me His throne of gold,
Who found a manger for His bed,
Who had nowhere to lay His head;
He sees the gold I clasp so tight,
And I am debtor in His sight.

"It isn't any wonder that children long to grow up. We ignore them in so many different ways. Here, too, my mother was kind. Before a little visitor was seated at the table she would go to a drawer in the desk and get a bib to tie on, as a protection to the dress. We always had a play box at a convenient place, too. To me no home would be entirely equipped without these two furnishings. I have found also that, while an old alarm clock in a play box doesn't add to the comfort of the grown people, it delights the heart of a boy."

MY TEACHER

A Sunday school teacher,
I don't know his name.
A wonderful preacher
Who never found fame.
So faithful, so earnest
When I was a boy—
He stuck to his task
Though I tried to annoy.
He never was missing,
In heat or in cold,
The moment we'd meet.
He taught by example
As well as by word,
This splendid old teacher
Who honored his Lord.
He helped my young life
More than ever he knew.
Later years I remembered
And tried to be true.
I suppose that he has gone now
To join heaven's ranks,
May it be my good fortune
Some day to say thanks.

What I Expect of a Husband

Do you boys ever daydream? I hope so. We girls do—often! The psychologist may tell us that it is not good to live in a world of make-believe, but we do it anyway. We daydream about many things. However, among the many dreams that we girls have, probably, those that occupy the most time are those that we have about our possible husbands and homes.

Every girl wants to have her own home some day. She may be planning to teach school for a while, or to become a nurse, or to be a business girl but do not worry; more than anything else in the world she wants to be a homemaker. She may not tell you this, but she does. God created her that way.

Girls want to be good homemakers, too. At least, Mennonite girls do. They want to be good mothers, too. They dream of their families-to-be and of the happiness that they hope will abound there. A girl's home is going to be her everything after she is married. She is going to give it her best. Someone has said that a good home is the place which is the most nearly like heaven that we can hope to find here on earth. How every girl hopes that her home will be one like that, and that it will really be a haven of refuge from the madness and worry of the outside world!

But a girl cannot make such a home alone. It will require her noblest efforts plus the love, sympathy, and cooperation of her husband. In fact, her husband is going to furnish the incentive for all her efforts.

I do not know what you boys think of when you think of getting married. I do hope, though, that deep down in your heart of hearts you share with us the honest desire for such homes. I know you are not so dreamy and idealistic as girls. But I know that I want my husband to want a good home—a place that has an atmosphere that shall serve to enrich the personalities of all those who shall come to call it home, I do not want to marry a man who seeks only to satisfy his biological urge for a wife. I want marriage to mean far more than that. I hope it will mean a lasting companionship that shall grow more beautiful as the years go by.

If my husband is to mean that much in my life, he should possess a few qualities that shall fit him for that role. First of all, I hope my husband is a true Christian, the kind of Christian who is not ashamed of his religion, who really tries to live by Christian principles and lets them guide his life. I want him to pray and to go to church. I want him to help me teach our children by word and by example that we believe in Jesus and His teachings.

Then, I expect my husband to have high moral standards and clean habits. These should be the natural outgrowth of a Christian's religion, but I

HOBBIES

We are living in a day when almost everyone is very much interested in one particular thing, and should it be something fascinating and of interest to us, we often select it for our hobby.

About a year ago I, too, became especially interested in one particular thing, namely, pictures of meetinghouses. I was asked not long ago, "How did you happen to select this as your hobby?" This I shall try to tell you.

As I have worshiped in many different meetinghouses, I have been impressed by the effect of the appearance of the meetinghouse on the worshiper. Some of them were well-kept, well-lighted, simple but beautiful, and immediately created an attitude of reverence and worship, while others were poorly-kept, disorderly, and were a small reminder of God. Then one day I discovered I had a group of pictures of meetinghouses. Somehow it hurt just to throw them away—for they seemed sacred to me. Since no one else was especially interested in them any longer, I put them into an album to preserve them. I now began cutting pictures of meetinghouses out of magazines and leaflets; friends also began sending me pictures, all of which were added to my collection.

Today my album contains 133 pictures of meetinghouses. Some of these I love because they are of meetinghouses in my home state, others because of their beautiful architecture, still some others because they are historical. Another picture I selected because in that particular meetinghouse I had many blessed experiences which I don't ever want to forget.

Thus, almost before I realized it, I, too, had a hobby.

What is yours?

—Mrs. A. S. Bechtel

shall mention them anyway. I hope I shall always be able to respect my husband because he is honest in all his dealings, because his thoughts are upright, because his speech is clean, and because I shall never have occasion to mistrust him even when I do not know of his every action.

I shall list courtesy as the next quality that I hope to find in a large measure in my husband. I mean more than knowing what Emily Post says about the correct use of the silverware on the table or whether it is proper to wear gloves or not. True courtesy goes far deeper than that. Courtesy should come from a heart which is filled with a desire to express kindness to others. Where there is this desire, the outward action is almost bound to be correct most of the time. This does not mean that it will be unnecessary to polish manners by reading about what is correct, or by observing others, or by constant practice to acquire grace, but first of all, there must be an honest desire to be kind.

All women admire a kind, well-mannered man. Then why do so few men take the time and trouble to become one? Anyone could improve if he really wanted to. I am hoping that my husband will have been ambitious enough to improve himself in this area. All girls want their husbands to know how to act at home and elsewhere. They want their husbands to be polite, not only to them, but to all whom they meet. A courteous person has lifted himself onto a plane that a discourteous one can never hope to attain.

Then too, I hope that my husband realizes that because he is living in a community of people, it will be his duty sometimes to help the needy, to assist in worthwhile projects, and to be alert to opportunties for service. I hope he will find joy in making others happy. I do not mean myself here. I want him to be broad-minded enough to see beyond the confines of his work and his home. I would not want my husband to be selfish.

Another quality that I hope to be able to admire in my husband is his neatness and cleanliness of person. I know that as long as he is still my boyfriend he is going to try to look his best. But I hope that he does not become careless of his grooming after we are married. I know that work often necessitates the wearing of clothes that are not very clean and not very attractive. This cannot be helped. But one need never forget the essentials of cleanliness to and strive to do his best. Someone has said, "Cleanliness is next to Godliness." I hope my husband realizes this.

Some of you may accuse girls of wanting only good-looking boy friends. Not long ago we studied, in a good grooming class, the question, "What does it mean to be good looking?" We soon learned that a pretty face and a fine figure were of rather minor importance. Instead, we found that to be good looking we must begin our inner selves. A person whose eyes are bright because he lives a good life, who keeps himself clean and dresses as well as he can, and who is genuinely friendly to others is far more good looking than his neighbor who just happens to be tall, dark, and handsome.

In these days there is a great deal of argument about who is to be the "boss" in a home. I am hoping that my husband will be worthy of being the head of the house; I want him to be that. By this I mean not that his word should be law. I think the time is past when a husband was a sovereign and a wife dared not express her opinions. Today we girls find it almost necessary to go to school and then to work in public for a time. This causes us to become very independent sometimes. It might be a good thing to remember this when we get married. It will help us to be more patient with each other while we are learning to live together. When I say that I want my husband to be the head of the house, I mean that I want him to be the stronger member and to possess a larger measure of stability and courage, whatever comes. This a woman rarely has to the extent that a man can possess it. To me this, as well as the qualities I have mentioned, will make my husband the person to whom I will need to look up.

Some time ago a boy said that today girls did not seem to care whether a boy had real character if only he was handsome or had a car. I doubt whether most Mennonite girls deserve such a verdict. They may seem frivolous on the outside; and then too, during the years of adolescence they may do silly things, but they know better. I really believe that Mennonite girls are looking for quality, and it will make little difference whether that is attached to an extremely handsome face or not. Deep in our hearts we know that we want our husbands to be Christian, to have high moral standards, to be courteous, to be neat and clean, and to be stable and courageous.

REMEMBER YOUR TEACHERS

"Remember them which have the rule over you, who have spoken unto you the word of God: whose faith follow," Heb. 13:7

Here is a wide field open before us. However, we wish to remain within a narrow margin; hence we think of two teachers, in the face of the above injunction, without whom it would be difficult to imagine our school, Bethel College.

Anyone acquainted with our school, will already have guessed to whom we refer: Rev. David Goerz and Prof. C. H. Wedel. They were called from their field of labor long ago. Others have stepped in and have continued the work. But these two belong to our school in a peculiar sense. And the writer of Hebrews says, "Remember your teachers," (as the German translation says). "Whose faith follow." What does that tell us? It wants to remind us that we are to place our thinking, our will, and our doing at the disposal of the same interest. For the text continues, "Whose faith follow." What kind of faith did they have? The next verse tells us (verse 8), "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, and today, and forever." There lay the source of their power; that was the inspiration for the work they had to perform: the founding of our school, Bethel College.

In the story of centurion's servant, Luke 7, 4 and 5, we read, "That he was worthy for whom he should do this; for he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue." We, too, may say of these our teachers, they loved our people and built us a school.

Remember your teachers. They were our teachers, given of God, instruments sent by God for a special purpose. So we want to write this admonition into our hearts again and again and call it to our remembrance: Remember your teachers, who have spoken unto you the word of God. And we want to follow in their faith, so that the work may be blessed of God, and that it may prosper and be expanded to the glory of Christ.

Such remembering is followed by a double result and a double blessing. For such a remembering brings a blessing and gives a blessing. Consequently the failure to remember would also entail a double hurt.

Most likely that is what the writer of our epistle saw, for he says in verse 9: "Be not carried about with divers and strange doctrines. For it is a good thing that the heart be established with grace."

Paul writes to the Ephesians, chapter 4:14: "That we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive." So we see that it is necessary to be clear and firm in order not to lose the direction God has given us.

Today there is still much wind of doctrine, even as in the apostles' time. However we must not let that confuse us but remain true to God and our task.

There are different stewardships in the Kingdom of our God. There are Methodists, Baptists, Lutherans and others. We as Mennonites have our God given stewardship; we must be true to the charge entrusted to us. For that reason we think of our teachers who set us a good example in this respect.

And when we look back over the progress of our school, we are happy and thankful to note that there has been a steady growth.

May the spirit of Christ control all efforts, so that God's glory may be furthered and His Kingdom built.

It is also very desirable and of great blessing and also helpful to the school when representatives often visit the congregations, in order that all may become established in the faith.

We recall the much-appreciated lectures Brother A. Warkentin brought us when he was with us to share his rich knowledge of and experience with the word of God. We hope that such opportunities may soon be repeated.

PROPHECY AND HISTORY

Dean Stanley, who certainly did not "go to seed on phophecy," in speaking of the Book of Daniel once said:

"The prophets of the Old Testament in a marked and special manner looked forward into the future. They personated and expressed the hope of Israel and the kingdom of God. Standing on their lofty watchtowers, and looking to the farthest horizon, they saw events unseen by ordinary men, and spoke of things to come long after the generations they served had passed to the tombs. They were the first in antiquity to perceive that the old East was dead. They celebrated its obsequies in advance of the dissolution they saw to be inevitable. They were the tragic chorus of the awful drama that was unfolding itself in the Eastern world. As kingdom after kingdom passed away, they sang the funeral dirge of each. There can be no question that the Book of Daniel, containing the first mention of the great idea of the succession of the ages and of the growth of empires and races, is the first outline of the philosophy of history."

OUR HERITAGE OF FAITH

(A statement of position for the guidance of workers and prospective workers under the Mennonite Central Committee.)

As an expression of what we believe to be basic convictions commonly held by all bodies cooperating in the work of relief, peace, and civilian public service conducted by the Mennonite Central Committee, and as a testimony of our own faith, we set forth the following statement of position. The cherished principles of faith and life which it contains have been the basis on which we have labored together ever since the establishment of the committee in 1920, and on which we purpose to continue our labors under Almighty God and in His Name in the future.

I. With all evangelical Christians:

(1) We hold steadfastly to the Gospel of Jesus Christ as the power of God unto salvation, believing that it is only by grace through faith in Christ's atoning death on the Cross and His glorious resurrection that men are saved from their sins and receive eternal life.

(2) We believe that all who receive the Lord Jesus by faith are born again of the Holy Spirit with power to overcome sin and live a life pleasing to God.

(3) We likewise hold that the Holy Scriptures of the Old and New Testament are the inspired Word of God and accordingly the Word of life and the supreme and final authority in faith and practice.

II. We are grateful for the noble heritage of faith from our Mennonite and Brethren in Christ forefathers which we most heartily accept and cherish, holding:

(1) That the whole of life must be brought under the Lordship of Christ and that obedience to His will in all things is the ultimate test of discipleship.

(2) That a way of life is taught by Christ and the Scriptures which is God's plan for the individual and for the race, and that those who espouse discipleship of Christ are bound to live in this way, thus manifesting in their personal life and social relationships the love and holiness of God. We believe that this way of life means the fullest exercise of love, Scriptural non-resistance to evil, and complete avoidance of the use of violence, including warfare. We believe further that the Christian life will of necessity express itself in nonconformity to the world in life and character.

(3) That the Christian Church consists only of believers who have repented from their sins, have accepted Christ by faith, are born again, are baptized on confession of faith, and sincerely endeavor by the grace of God to live the Christ-life of holiness and love.

(4) That the Church is a brotherhood in which all bear one another's burdens, and in which each considers himself a steward unto God of his life and possessions, and consecrates all that he has to the kingdom of God.

(5) That the Church, the Bride of Christ, has a high and holy calling, not only ministering to its own membership, but testifying to the will of God to the world at large.

(6) That it is the duty and privilege of all believers to witness for Christ and his Gospel to all men everywhere, to teach all things commanded by Him, and in His Name and Spirit to minister to the needs of all men both spiritually and materially.

(7) That while, in this world, true believers will suffer tribulation, yet God is faithful to His own and will give the crown of life to all who are faithful unto death, and that accordingly we should always abound in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord.

We commend this statement to all our officers, representatives, and workers as a guide in the formulation of policies, in the direction of work, and in the choice of workers. We also commend it to all prospective candidates for service as a description of the basis of faith and life on which they will be expected to labor.

The Runaway Wife

Women in India are looked upon as property and not as equal partners in life. So sometimes this "property" kicks over the traces and pulls off some independent escapades. Among non-Christians such unpleasant home events are fairly frequent, but they also occur among Christians. Our brother Miller is a quiet modest man, but his wife is one of those "go-getters." One of their neighbors, Brother Brijnand is also a "go-getter."

So brother Brijnand and sister Miller sometimes get mixed up together. Brother Miller is a poor man. He has to work hard to earn a living for the family. When he is away at work his wife is in danger of pulling off pranks. So it happened last week. Miller was working, and his wife runs off with Brijnand. Miller comes to me for advice.

"Must I leave my earning and go to hunt my wife?" My first impulse was to say, "No, she knows where her home is; let her come back of her own accord." But I did not say this. I asked him what he thought. "Well," he said, "I need somebody to cook for me, so I better hunt her and bring her back." It sounded rather stoical, but I told him to hunt her and bring her back.

So he did. He found her too and brought her back, and all was well again. But as far as the church is concerned not all was well. The church cannot wink at such stunts. Where there is no church discipline the body of Christ deteriorates.

Newport, Washington

We are having a long winter. After two weeks of sunshine there are still fourteen inches of snow on the ground.

Brother Philip Wedel from Aberdeen, Idaho, has brought us some soul-stirring evangelistic messages. The Victory Quartet from Spokane visited recently, and Reverend Cooper spoke.

Norma Kliewer and Sgt. Richard Shirmer were married. Mrs. Shirmer will live in Newport while Mr. Shirmer will be stationed in Alaska.

Some men of the church got together last month and cut wood for the church. Whosoever did not provide wood for all winter has a hard time getting some now.

Brother P. D. Unruh, our pastor, is donating his fourth Sunday afternoons for bringing the message to the small group of Mennonites at Deerpark.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Aberdeen, Idaho

Henry Dalke and Mrs. Michael Wenger passed away during the holidays. Mr. Dalke's children from California, Oregon, Idaho, and two government camps came to the funeral. Sister Wenger was "highly favored. . . among women." Two of her sons, Ira and Frank, are pillars in our church, having served as treasurer and deacon respectively. Another son, Paul, has served in our mission field in India for two terms. Daughter Sadie ministered to her invalid mother and is now waiting upon her aged father.

Our pastor, Philip A. Wedel, officiated at the dedication of a chapel at the Downey, Idaho, C.P.S. camp in January. Campees had converted a barracks into a chapel, having utilized the skilled talent in the group for making pulpit and pews. Several members of our church attended the dedicatory services.

H. B. Wiebe and Ed Moser were our representatives to the conference sessions of the Mennonite Aid Plan of the Pacific Coast.

Recently our pastor conducted evangelistic services at Newport and Deer Park, Washington.

Brother Abe Baumgartner, a member of long standing in our church and a pioneer in this community, leased his farm here, held a public sale, and with his new wife, Mary Shirmer Baumgartner, and two adopted Indian children, left here for their recently purchased farm near Columbus Grove, Ohio. For thirty-six years Sister Mary Shirmer Baumgartner served faithfully at the Hoteville, Arizona, mission station with gratifying results —H. C. W., Corr.

GRACE MENNONITE CHURCH
Pandora, Ohio

We have just concluded our pre-Easter services with Rev. Paul Ross Lynn, professor at Hartford Theological Seminary, as the speaker. He used as his general theme "One Man Tells Another" with the various subjects, "About a House Built with Hands," "About Going on a Journey," "About a Few Fundamentals," "About What Endures," "About the Little and the Small Town Spirit," "About the Fellowship of Kindred Souls," "About Visions and Dreams," "About People Who Hear the Gospel," and "About the Love of God."

Special music was furnished at each meeting by the church choir, and there were also special numbers by other churches of the town, and by the high school groups as well.

The pastor, Brother Musser, is beginning a new series of prayer and study services based on some of the vital principles set forth in the Sermon on the Mount.

The picture, "The Life of David Livingstone" was recently presented by the young married people's class of the Sunday school. The Men's Fellowship will present "The Life of St. Paul." This picture portrays the life of Paul in three parts: "The Road to Damascus," "The Way of Salvation," and "Faith Triumphant."

New members will be received into our fellowship on Palm Sunday. They will join in the Communion Service which will be held on Easter Sunday.

The Ladies Missionary Society recently had as guests Ernst Harder of Paraguay, South America, student at Bluffton College, who spoke on "The Mennonites of Paraguay," and Mrs. Paul Ross Lynn of Hartford, Connecticut.

The church recently purchased copies of the new Mennonite Hymnary, and they were appropriately dedicated at the time of their initial use.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Colfax, Washington

During the absence of Rev. W. Harley King, our young people Christian Endeavor societies occupied the pulpit. It was surely inspiring to hear them give talks on the advantage of Christian Endeavor, as well as lead in the reading of God's Word and in prayer. The Junior society sang their theme song as part of the program.

Upon his return from the meeting of the Home Mission Board in Chicago, Rev. King gave a very interesting report on his visit to the Grace Children's Home, Henderson, Nebraska. He was especially impressed by their fine singing, also by the gratitude of the children to the "Home" and it's supporters. His report was given at the Women's Society.

Our church recently drilled a well, which has proved to be a good, strong one, and laymen of the church are now doing the plumbing necessary for changing from the former water system. An electric system is being installed, and it will supply water for the schoolhouse near by, as well.

Preparation is being made to celebrate our fiftieth anniversary in July.

SERVICE AT A GENERAL HOSPITAL

By James M. Shank

During the early part of December, 1942, twenty conscientious objectors arrived at Duke Hospital and began working as hospital attendants. The unit, under Methodist administration, represents thirteen C.P.S. camps, six different religious denominations, and pre-Civilian Public Service backgrounds of various experiences. Even though our rating among hospital personnel may be near the bottom rung of the professional ladder we believe that here we can render in more concrete way a service to those who really need physical and spiritual help. There are also ten men serving at the Highland Hospital, Asheville, North Carolina, a hospital under the general direction of Duke. The group there is serving on the psychiatric ward, while here the unit is divided with ten men on the psychiatric ward and ten in the operating rooms.

The men in psychiatry work are on an eight hour day basis, which includes a two hour class period. Each week three of these periods are clinical; the remaining three are usually the lecture type, and are given by Dr. Richard S. Lyman, M.D., head of the Neuro-psychiatry Department at Duke University. This group is also doing some research work which will be an aid to the hospital as well as to themselves.

Those of us who are in the operating room face duties of a different nature. We are responsible for transporting patients to and from the operating room, equipping operating tables properly for specific operations, and placing the patients in the proper position on the table so that all is ready when the surgeon arrives. Before the operation begins lights must be adjusted and proper standing stools provided for the surgeons and scrub nurse. There are other things to be done and thorough cleaning is not of least significance. There are floors to scrub and mop, walls to wash, lights to dust and sterilizers to clean, all of which are necessary to reduce to a minimum the possibilities for infection.

Our coming to Duke was not too highly favored by all, but we're glad to say that many misconceptions of C.O's. have been changed. One young doctor after noting our interest in turn became interested in us. Although a commissioned lieutenant in the Navy he has gone the 'second mile' in assisting us. As a result of his effort we are now having a class in human anatomy and physiology. It meets from one to two hours four times each week. With this course as a basis it has been planned that we receive some training in sterile, nursing, medical, and surgical techniques. Lectures in anesthesia and the psychology of the patient have been arranged and will be given by those competent in these fields. It is with this training that we hope to be capable of rendering a greater service to Duke Hospital and to its patients.

The hospital provides us with room, board, health service, hospital uniforms, and $2.50 per month. We occupy two log cabins which are located a few minutes walk from the hospital.

We appreciate the fine hospitality typical of the South.

May we in return radiate the true spirit of C.P.S. with a living Christian testimony.

FORGIVE US OUR DEBTS

A pathetic story told by a state's prison chaplain was about a little girl whose father had been murdered by a man awaiting death in the prison. The little girl was motherless, and the father had been everything to her. When he died from injuries received from the man who wanted to rob him, the child in an agony of grief cried:

"The wicked man! I hate him! I hate him!"

She repeated this for several days, until praying the Lord's Prayer one morning, she stopped at the petition "Forgive us our debts."

For days she wrestled with the anguish of her heart, and then she went to the warden and asked to be admitted to the cell. She stood before him and with trembling voice, not trusting herself to look into his face, she said:

"I forgive you! I forgive you as I hope to be forgiven!"

The criminal, whom nothing had moved up to this time gave way to tears, confessed his crime, sent for the chaplain and asked for his prayers. The child had "gained" the wicked man by her forgiving spirit.

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, has this beautiful verse on its cover. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. And let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Reasons for publishing the year book are given as (1) To become better acquainted with each other, (2) To know who is on the membership list and where they live, (3) To list the various organizations and officers for reference. The desire is expressed that the pastor or church secretary should be informed of any change of address, births, marriages, and other important items. Mrs. S. F. Pannabecker is correspondent to The Mennonite. The church has a brotherhood. Bible study is held on Thursday nights at 8:15 p.m. during the winter. The church council and the Christian Education Committee meet monthly. In the membership list, which totals 495, there is an asterick after the names of those in "Selective Service." The name "Bixtel"—given twenty-three times—appears most often. The budget for 1943 lists $100.00 for printing expenses.

—The year book of the Salem-Zion Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, states that on March 1, 1943, Rev. Albert Claassen terminated his services, that P. A. Penner then served the congregation for three months, and that various ministers have served since then. (J. J. Regier from Burrton will begin to serve this church on June 6, 1943). Mrs. Albert Schwartz is the correspondent to The Mennonite. Floyd Graber and Carl Miller are the subscription solicitors for our church papers. (Would that more churches had such.) The church also has a "College Welfare Committee." A program of special music indicates that at least once every month there will be an offering for C.P.S. Every quarter there is a Sunday school offering. The church has a total membership of 390. If a member is in arrears in his church assessments, then a figure indicating the number of assessments he is in arrears appears after his name. A minus mark indicates those in arrears more than five years.

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, states that the "church now owns a parsonage." Brother H. T. Unruh is pastor. Sister L. J. Thomas is correspondent to The Mennonite. The collections on the second Sunday of the month are for C.P.S. camps, etc. Membership dues per annum are $6.00. For minors $3.00. Dues on a valuation of $1,000.00 are $1.25. Membership dues of absentee members are $2.00 and $1.00 for minor absentee members. The membership list gives the year when each member joined the church. The total membership is 336. The booklet also lists "Church Members and Others Attending the First Mennonite Church Now in the Services." Of the twenty-five listed two are in C.P.S. camps.

—The pastor in the forward to the very interesting and comprehensive year book of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, says, "Whether it is gas rationing or the rationing of man-power let us put God first." The church has a choir librarian. (The way some choir music material looks and lies around in some places would indicate the importance of this office.) The church also has a "Freeman College Welfare Committee." Ed. P. Graber is the correspondent to this paper. The congregation gave $2,396.00 to C.P.S. during the calendar year 1942. A total of 185 peace certificates were issued. The Sunday school statistics are very interesting in that they show the average, high and low attendance and collection figures. Average attendance was 305. The average collection was $13.06. The church membership is given as 501. The various quarters are also compared. (This is a good use of statistics. Without comparison figures mean little.) The members pledged $6,749.35 for the debt reduction campaign of Freeman Junior College. Of this amount $5,099.35 has already been paid. The pastor is chairman of the literature committee. Thirty-one new books were added. Four boys are in military service, seven in non-combatant, and fourteen in Civilian Public Service. The pastor made 410 pastoral calls. Nine issues of the Friendly Visitor, a monthly news letter, were sent out. The congregation gave a total of $9,259.30. This makes $32.00 per member per year and $.61 per member per week. One thousand copies of the church constitution are to be published. At the annual meeting it was "Resolved, that the correspondents to The Mennonite and the Bundesbote work on the possibilities of ordering the church papers for all members of the church through special club offers and report as soon as possible." A complete program of special music for Sunday mornings is given, as well as a program of "Interlude Music." Members are conveniently listed by families. The closing paragraph of the year book reads, "Treasurers of the various church organizations are requested to make copies of their annual reports with lists of new officers, for the next year-book."

—Bulletin, Butterfield Mennonite Church, Butterfield, Minnesota: "Your pastor (Albert Schultz) has been granted time to serve at Berne (Indiana) starting March 28, at Goltry, Oklahoma, in May, and at Henderson, Nebraska. The dates for the last two places have not been fixed." "You will be approached this week about purchasing civilian bonds. The latest word is that you can buy bonds in $18.50 units. You can buy bonds and donate them to the church or buy them for yourself. It might be a good way to get our parsonage debt paid."

—The Northern District Conference is to have its next session June 5-9, in the Bethel Mennonite —Bluffton College: Musical concerts from the tower of College Hall will be continued during the spring season. Grace Geissinger from Allentown, Pa., is in charge of these. The school now has a recreation room equipped with games and a refreshment counter. In his dedicatory address, President Ramseyer stressed the point that a very strong, positive use of the room should be made by the students. Herbert Fretz from Lansdale, Pa., gave the address when the Men's Gospel Team recently conducted services at the College Church. The College Women's Gospel Team presented the play "Two Masters" by Bertha Cooper Fraser to the local Mennonite Church.

—Camp Director, Erwin Goering of the C.P.S. camp at Weeping Water, Nebraska, together with a chorus of sixteen members and Mrs. Erwin Goering, their leader, visited the Mennonite churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, on March 14. Brother Goering brought the message and the chorus offered several selections to the Second Mennonite Church on Sunday morning. A song service was given in the First Church meetinghouse in the afternoon. Brother Schmidt, a campee from Walton, Kansas, gave information on camp life and activities. The programs, as well as the personal contacts during meal times, were much appreciated and enjoyed by all who participated therein. We are looking forward to another visit by the members of this camp. —W. C. A., Corr.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

REPORT OF THE FOREIGN MISSION BOARD MEETING held February 17-19, 1943, Newton, Kansas

The session was opened by the president of the board with the reading of Psalms 123 and 124, which emphasize our dependence on God and our need of "looking upon the hands of the Lord" for both guidance and support. A brief season of prayer followed.

The board members were all present: P. P. Wedel, A. E. Kreider, H. G. Nyce, A. P. Waltner, D. J. Unruh, J. E. Regier, and P. H. Richert, as also the General Conference Pres., C. E. Krehbiel, and the officers of the Women's Missionary Society—Mrs. R. A. Goerz, Mrs. Frieda Regier Entz, Mrs. A. M. Lohrentz, and Mrs. W. C. Voth. A part of the time also Rev. C. E. Rediger of the Congo Inland Mission Board was present, as also P. A. Penner and F. J. Isaac.

1. Resolved that we send a letter of condolence to the widow and family of missionary H. J. Kliewer expressing our appreciation for their faithful service in the mission cause for so many years.

2. Resolved to send greetings to Mrs. F. J. Isaac in the hospital and wish her a speedy recovery.

The first report read was that of the treasurer, J. E. Regier. The following is a brief summary of the same:

Expenses		$116,711.95
Disbursements		$113,939.54
Balance in Bank, Jan. 1, 1943		$ 2,773.41

3. Resolved to accept the treasurer's report as read with sincere thanks.

Oklahoma

4. Resolved to approve the following budget for Oklahoma:

Canton, Longdale, and Fonda:
Reshingling the Canton house	$ 100.00
Native helper acct.	600.00
Station acct.	300.00
	$1000.00

Clinton, Hammon, and Thomas:
Station acct.	$ 300.00
Paint and Painting	200.00
Native helper acct.	800.00
	$2300.00

5. Resolved that we at present do not favor the selling of the land near Canton, unless the government wants to buy it.

6. Resolved to pay the deficit of $53.89.

Africa

7. Resolved in view of the wide spread interest in our churches, and with the realization of the leading of God in the matter, that steps be taken at once to make arrangements to do mission work in Africa.

8. Resolved that we authorize the Executive Committee of our Board to meet with a similar committee of the Congo Inland Mission Board to work out the details pertaining to the cooperation of these boards in doing mission work in Africa.

9. Resolved that we express our appreciation to the Congo Inland Mission Board and to Brother C. E. Rediger as a representative of that Board for extending to us the facilities and co-operation of their Board to do mission work in Africa, and we further express our appreciation for the fine Christian spirit and fellowship we enjoyed with Brother Rediger while he was in our midst.

Montana

10. Resolved, to allow the Montana budget as follows:

Ashland	$ 200.00
Busby	100.00
Birney	200.00
Lame Deer—Budget	200.00
Frank's Salary	180.00
	$765.00

11. Resolved to express to Mr. Jennings at Lame Deer our appreciation for the painted portrait of Missionary R. Petter as a jubilee gift, as also for his fine spirit of co-operation with our missionaries.

12. Resolved that we express our willingness to send one or two young people to assist in Bible school work in Arizona and Montana, paying traveling and living expenses.

13. Resolved to keep Brother P. J. Boehr on our list for China.

Arizona

14. Resolved to allow the Arizona budget as follows:

Moencopi	$ 195.00
Hotevilla (House repair etc.)	820.00
Oraibi (Deepening well etc.)	640.00
	$1655.00

15. Resolved to encourage Brother and Sister Suderman to arrange for a jubilee celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the establishment of our mission in Arizona.

16. Resolved to correspond with Brother and Sister Suderman, asking them to take a year's furlough, and the Board will look for a substitute for one year or so.

17. Resolved that we express our sympathy to the family of Mrs. C. J. Frey, former missionary in Arizona, who recently passed away.

China

18. Resolved that we appoint one of our missionaries to make special effort to study the possibilities for returning missionaries to China particularly West China, and to ask Brother S. F. Pannabecker to serve in this capacity.

19. Resolved that the salaries of our interned missionaries be paid and deposited in the Kansas State Bank, Newton, unless otherwise instructed by the missionaries.

India

20. Resolved to accept the budget for India, totaling $21,603.00.

21. Resolved to send at least two sisters, Mary Becker and Alida Schrag, to India this year, if passage can be secured.

22. Resolved since it is unlikely that Brother and Sister Wenger can return to India soon, we permit them to spend one semester in the Biblical Seminary in New York, and meanwhile make plans to return to India as soon as passage can be secured after that.

23. Resolved to return Brother and Sister F. J. Isaac to India in 1944 as early as possible.

South America

24. Resolved that we thoroughly investigate the possibility of starting new work in South America.

25. Resolved to ask the brethren, H. G. Nyce, member of our Board, and Missionary S. F. Pannabecker, to visit Latin Ameirca for the purpose of investigating prospective mission fields to start a new mission there under our board.

General Matters

26. Resolved that we do not extend furloughs except under circumstances beyond our control.

27. Resolved that we add to the salaries of all missionaries on the field a 10% bonus on account of the much increased living expenses.

28. Resolved that we allow $200.00 for the Foreign Missions Conference budget for 1943.

29. Resolved to send again a delegate to the Foreign Missions Conference in 1943.

30. Resolved that we register disapproval of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America to be affiliated with the North American Council of Churches of Christ.

31. Resolved that we as a Foreign Mission Board give our approval to the plan for a central treasury which is now under consideration by the Executive Committee of the General Conference.

32. Resolved that we make provision for the preservation and filing of the secretarial records of the Foreign Mission Board.

33. Resolved to ask the Publication Board to publish our treasurer's reports as he sends them in.

34. Resolved that the members of the board take their turn in writing the annual board letter to the missionaries.

35. Resolved whereas we are vitally concerned in safeguarding the faith of our missionary candidates, we recommend that those candidates who desire further training consult with members of the board in reference to schools that are thoroughly sound in the faith.

36. Resolved to continue our present arrangement with Brother P. J. Wiens. (He works with filing our mission material and labeling it.)

37. Resolved to authorize the Trustees of our General Conference to accept the annuity gift from Mrs. Henry Unruh.

38. Resolved to permit the Retreat Committee of California to call Missionary A. Habeggers to serve on their retreat program in 1943.

39. Resolved to allow $15.00 for the budget of the Committee on East Asia.

40. Resolved to express our appreciation to the East Swamp congregation of Quakertown, Pa., and commend them for their missionary zeal in pledging themselves for the support of missionary candidate Brother J. W. Boehr as expressed in their letter of Jan. 3, 1943.

41. Resolved to allow Brother J. B. Epp $50.00 for support in 1943.

42. Resolved that we plan to send a board member to each American field annually.

43. Resolved to thank the Kansas State Bank officials for the free use of their fine Director's Room.

44. Resolved to thank Brother C. E. Krehbiel, conference president, for attending our sessions most of the time.

45. Resolved to thank all our mission friends, churches, Christian Endeavor societies, and Women's Association for their faithful and sacrificial support of mission work. We appreciate especially the spreading of mission news through the News and Notes.

46. Resolved to thank all our mission workers for their faithful and sacrificial service, both on the field and during furlough at home, and for their inspiring articles for our church papers. All help to account for the large income of $116,550.88.

47. Resolved to thank God for His blessing upon the work in spite of the war conditions, and for His protecting hand over the interned missionaries as far as information has reached us. While this information mentions only the four missionaries in China by name as being well cared for, we infer the same from reports from the Philippines regarding the six missionaries there.

48. Resolved that we continue the work undismayed, watching, and praying for the re-opening of closed doors, and looking for new open doors.

49. Resolved to accept the total budget for 1943, amounting to $83,765.89. While this is about $3,000.00 more than last year's budget, the unusually large income of the past year gives encouragement for a larger budget. Thank the Lord.

50. Resolved to adjourn.

The chairman led in the closing prayer.

MONTANA

"IT IS FULFILLED"

By R. Petter

"It is fulfilled," cried Jesus on the Cross before He yielded up His Spirit to the Father. He meant that God's full plan of salvation for mankind had then and there been perfected and accomplished. A far greater power than the power of sin had been made available. It was the power that forgives sin.

The above picture shows Missionary Rodolphe Petter and four young people, who were baptized by him in August, 1942. The mother of these children is a member of the Lame Deer, Montana, church and is part Indian. The girl in the picture has graduated from the eighth grade. She then began attending high school in Tacoma, Washington.

This atonement in Christ which alone is the basis for forgiveness of sin, is the very kernel of our entire mission service to these Cheyenne Indians. Our task has been and still is to offer and make available this greatest of all treasures, the salvation of the human soul. The appropriation of all this is wholly the duty of the individual Indian. He must either accept or reject. He must not merely adapt himself or conform. He must appropriate.

Why does it take Indians so long to come to this? Why do mission successes add up so slowly in number and import? Friend, consider how it was with the people of God who had "fathers in the faith," who had the mighty prophets of the ancient past, and who had the promises of God for thousands of years. The Lamb of God which was to come had been proclaimed so definitely and so clearly to the Jews. Isaiah had portrayed it in that matchless fifty-third chapter. What did they do when it came? Have we not read "He came unto His own and His own received Him not?"

But for our comfort it is also written "As many as received Him, to them gave He the right, the authority to become children of God." See John 1:12. The following verse explains more fully what such acceptance, such appropriation implies. It is not merely an adaptation, an imitation, an outer varnish or whitewash, a skin-deep civilization, an outer manner or custom of life, a modification of personality, of dress, of hair, of finger nails. Such aping changes are a mere patchwork and the Indian has quite enough of such religious patching which give him no sufficient garment. Out of such cobwebs, comes no woof, no cloth, no covering. Salvation in Christ is a treasure that cannot merely be put on. It must be appropriated. There must be an inner saving experience of this eternal treasure.

Out of such who appropriate these healing saving powers arise the multitude of the redeemed described in Rev. 7:9-17. They come not only out of all nations and all tribes. They come especially out of the great tribulation. What they were and what they had is washed in the blood of the Lamb, which means that they appropriated what Christ accomplished for them, by following Him through sufferings and much labor.

When you, dear mission churches and mission friends, seem to see often long years of labor but few sheaves garnered on the Montana harvest field, it is possible that some might say it were better to turn to other fields that seem more promising. If so, kindly read Rev. 7:9-17 and notice that it speaks in the ninth verse of a "great throng" . . . out of all nations, all tribes, all languages. According to that, the Cheyenne are definitely included. God's Word says it and not only mission reports.

Yes, a small company of Cheyenne Christians, better known to God than to us, is already there. Others will gradually be added to that number, insomuch as here and there, one or the other comes out of this great tribulation, in possession of the treasured salvation accomplished for him by Jesus on the Cross. All of those over there, as well as those still here, are for you, dear mission friends, and for us personal witnesses and conclusive evidence that the salvation wrought in Christ avails also for the Montana Cheyennes in God's own time and counsel, and not according to our measure, our figuring, or our conceptions.

GROWTH IN PERFECTION

"Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect" Matt. 5:48.

In connection with this scripture passage I think of God's love, kindness, and mercy, and how we should develop into maturity of Godliness. All true Christians strive to be like their Lord and Master even in trying conditions. It brings us much joy when Indian Christians show growth into maturity of Godliness.

One such Christian great-grandmother was called to her Heavenly home in January. She is released from her physical handicaps, pains, and sorrows. I had known her for almost twenty-five years, during which time she was always a radiant Christian, loving her Lord. She did not have the opportunity to attend services as she desired, for she lived ten miles from the church. She appreciated the many visits we made to her home and was ever ready to hear passages of the Word of God. She was called upon to lead in prayer at the services, and her sincere prayers made a deep impression on the children. At different times she stayed in our home when she wanted to attend a series of meetings, sometimes staying a week at a time. One time she said, "I wish you were not so busy, so that we had more time just to sit and visit and read." For a number of years she was totally blind. This condition came quite suddenly, and when she realized that she was blind she became almost hysterical until she could resign herself to this great trial. She lived alone with a son, and her condition was extremely pitiful, with no one to give her personal care. She suffered much from lice, filth, poor food, and above all loneliness. Her last illness was not severe; for a few days she had a fever and then died suddenly and unexpectedly. Due to the severe cold weather we were not notified of her death, and she was buried in the hills, with only three of her relatives present. We miss her and wish there were more Cheyennes who attained the maturity of Godliness that she reached.

Another Christian grandmother loves her Lord and Master very much. For some time she has been attending three meetings weekly. She is not very well, is rheumatic, and it is not easy for her to walk almost a mile in cold weather. She has known much sorrow, has been a widow for nine years, and has had six deaths in her family since we know her. Her youngest son is ill with a heart ailment that followed after an illness, and the doctor can give her no hope that he will get well again. During these trials she has been very patient and loving, and trusting her Lord. Her greatest trial has been concern. for her daughters. Three have brought her illegitimate children to take care of while they went away to work. One daughter came home recently and is to become the mother of a third illegitimate child. She told her daughter she could not stay at home, that she would not take care of her children. She asked her to leave with her two children. Did she do right in this matter? Will you remember her in your prayers?

While teaching the children in a regular class in religious education at the school I taught them about the abundant life, using the verse, "While we were yet sinners Christ died for us," Rom. 5:8. I asked, "Are we all sinners?" Answers, "Yes, No." I asked, "Who is perfect?"expecting them to answer, The Heavenly Father." One little boy answered, "YOU." O, that we might always show the love, mercy, and kindness of our Father.

FIERY TRIALS

"My grace is sufficient for thee," II Cor. 12:9.

Times of testing, temptation, sickness, and death come to all homes, congregations, and communities. Sorrow and disappointments often weigh heavily on the hearts and minds of believers. Comfort sometimes comes only in the assurance that no matter how heavy the load, God still loves, and that His grace is sufficient for all trials, that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord, to them that are called according to His purpose.

In the family of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Yellowrobe, a son named Theodore, became lame in one of his hips a year ago. He had been attending the Boarding School at Busby, going back and forth to his home on the school bus with a brother and sister. The lameness was attributed to a fall. However, it later developed that a tuberculor condition was present, and therefore the boy was placed in the Agency Hospital and a cast put on him. This cast was to be taken off in about three months. When it was removed the physician soon put on another cast. The parents go to see their son at the Agency Hospital about sixteen miles from their home as often as they can. They hope the boy can come home in spring when the weather is warmer. One day the father told me that his wife threatened to leave him, if the boy died at the hospital. While visiting the boy at the hospital at Lame Deer, the father happened to be present; he had come down on horseback. The father and son were both very appreciative of the prayer I offered for them there. Recently the father walked to church with two younger sons, one Sunday evening when the temperature on that Sunday had not risen to above twelve degrees, that night went to thirty degrees. The father had already walked to church in the forenoon. The distance is about two and a half miles.

Esther, the lovely Christian daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Littlewolf, had gotten a position as helper in the hospital at Lame Deer. However, she soon got married and lived near the outstation on the Upper-Rosebud. A year or so after that she had a baby boy, and for the most part they were happy together. She attended the services at the outstation and also read Christian literature which we gave out to such who could read. They stayed with her father and mother at times, and then again with her husband's folks. One day she discovered that when she bent over that in her side there seemed to be some liquid moving about. She then had an examination by the Agency physician, who advised her to come to the hospital. The liquid was drained from her side. It was hoped that she would get well again in a few months. However, she patiently stayed in the hospital for many months. The liquid kept forming; her flesh wasted away, and she became very pale and thin. During all these days of weariness she was a very patient, uncomplaining patient, and whenever we visited her she as always pleasant and had a cheerful smile on her face. However, the distress in her father and mother and husband became very great. When it became evident that she could not get well, she was taken to her folks' home not very far from the mission station. In their desperation, even Indian medicine-men and women were called, but all to no avail. The father had long ago lost his faith in the Indian medicine-men, but the mother and her relatives urged the matter. The sick patient in her weakened condition simply lay there helpless. She passed into a coma, and then finally the end came. This sorrow, plus a trying seige of rheumatism, with plenty of financial worries greatly burdened the father. Yet he has come through this difficulty, saying that, only in this Christian life does he get comfort and strength. His wife is doing better again, also finding new comfort and hope in God's Word.

Regular Sunday morning, Sunday evening, and mid-week services are held throughout the year.

Accessions since work started	1

The Catholics have a large mission station here, having worked for over fifty years among these Cheyennes.

Ashland town is just off the reservation. It exerts mostly a baneful influence over whites and Indians . . . Every effort is made to stem the tide of evil and to bring the gospel. It has been well said, "All the darkness in the world cannot put out out one small candle light."

Mary (wife of Mr. Ben Shoulderblade) had been a pupil at the Mennonite Mission School at Darlington, Okla. at the time it burned. She was well acquainted with all the early mission workers, including Dr. and Mrs. S. S. Haury.

She has been a staunch supporter of the mission workers at Ashland and maintained her Protestant faith through her long illness and up to her death last summer. . . She deid at the Lame Deer government hospital and was buried from the Lame Deer Church.

OKLAHOMA

OH, HOW THE INDIANS NEED SALVATION

The Preacher says in Ecclesiastes 10:17,18, "Happy art thou, O land, when . . . thy princes eat in due season, for strength, and not for drunkenness! By slothfulness the roof sinketh in; and through idleness of the hands the house leaketh."

In these days every one is encouraged to do his part to help win the war. The farmer is to increase production; the city family is to grow a garden. To burn anything is sabotage. Wise Solomon of old said, "He also that is slack in his work is brother to him that is a destroyer." (Proverbs 18:9) Here, I believe, lies the cause of much of our evil. Paul tells Timothy, "The love of money is the root of all evil," but it is also true that idle hands are the devil's tools.

Early this year the government agent, or the Indian Farmer as he is sometimes called, a white person, was asked to prepare some statistics for the government. He was to show the number of Indian men of this district in the armed forces, the number of men between the ages of eighteen and fifty and what they were doing in civilian life, and to list the able bodied men over fifty years of age. Out of 122 men listed between eighteen and fifty: sixty have no job and of these fifty do not care to work. Fourteen work part time but have no steady jobs. Three are in the penitentiary. Eight are unable to work because of sickness, mostly tuberculosis. Ten are in defense work and away from home and out of reach just now. Only twenty are farming. The other seven are either in school, work in a service station, or work steady on farms. Of the twenty-five men over fifty years of age, fourteen do nothing and do not want work, only six farm. Five have part time work.

From these figures we see that only a very small percentage, seventeen and two-thirds per cent are farmers, and yet by far the biggest majority of the Indians live on land of their own. About half of the men do almost nothing.

Here is a significant fact. Of the twenty-six farmers, seventeen or sixty-five and one half per cent have been church attendants, the most successful, the more regular. The two go hand in hand. A good worker takes more interest in his church; or is it that an active Christian makes a better worker? As interest in church has dropped, other interests have taken possession, and farming has also become careless.

Yes labor is a dignified and honorable thing. It also fascinates many. They can sit down beside it and look at it for hours. Neither are they afraid of it. They can lie down beside it and go to sleep. Two hundred years ago a great country pastor said, "I do not want to labor in some easy pastoral charge where I can be at ease. I want a work no one else wished to do; and which will not be done unless I do it." The Indian service. whether as missionary or in some government agency, is a great challenge to young people.

INDIA

MISSION CONFERENCE IN INDIA

One of the high points of the year on the mission field is the yearly conference. This is usually convened during the last quarter of the year.

All year long each works at his or her task alone. Often the winds are contrary. Usually, it means rowing against the stream. Many of the social props of the home land including church music, inspiring large congregational worship in the mother tongue, are absent as we face entrenched evil, the non-Christian world, and the devil. At times discouragement makes one see blue and think black.

But as we come together, the fires of fellowship burst forth into new warmth. The common life, faith in each other and God, the common viewpoint are again built up. Unity of spirit and purpose are again established. As conference days pass one after another, we realize how rich is our fellowship and how graciously good is our heavenly Father.

Why should it not be thus? For it is a task to which each one contributes. One brings a committee report in which three or four have shared. Others bring devotional messages. New missionaries are welcomed. Returning missionaries are most attentively listened to as they report from the homeland. One member, famous as a fudgemaker, may bring fudge. Another, with a reputation for cake-making, may bring a cake for the anniversary dinner. Those with bounteous gardens contribute vegetables and fruit. Those whom God has endowed with voices thrill the group with duets, quartets. In the old days men's quartets and choruses were famous. Of more recent years the missionary personnel has been depleted of its tenors, making mixed quartets more favored. Korba missionaries have furnished some fine mixed selections. This year to our delight one of our number brought a delightful warbling song bird whistling accompaniment to a well known sacred selection. Rev. J. R. Duerksen brought a fine series of devotional messages. Peaches from Kansas were contributed by Mrs. Ratzlaff.

Conference time is divided giving about two days to prayer and the Word of God, and about three days to so-called business. Each of the business sessions is prefaced with half to three-quarters of an hour of devotional messages. It is during these two days of devotional meetings that our hearts and minds and souls are knit together in a new warm way. We have learned that if we spend at least two days together in prayer and the Word of God, that then our so-called business sessions run so very much more smoothly!

The evenings are free from business and are given over to special features. Birthdays and wedding anniversaries are celebrated. Missionaries from America are given a special welcome. At least one evening is given over to nothing but music. Another may become a social evening. If children are present, one evening is given to them.

This year we were delighted to have the two younger Thiessen children with us,—but of late children have become scarce in our mission.

Conference organizes itself for the business end into four standing committees and a number of temporary committees. Evangelistic work, educational missionary work, medical missionary work are fostered by three standing committees. Other essential committees include budget, catering, building, placement, etc. Of late years the women of the mission have organized a "Council" which fosters special interest amongst the women missionaries. There is a conference chairman, vice-chairman, and sec.-treas. These three office bearers constitute a fourth standing committee, the executive.

Conference this year convened in Champa, September 10 to 16. Special social events, including the celebration of the fortieth wedding anniversary of Rev. and Mrs. P. W. Penner, and the twenty-fifth anniversary of Martha R. Burkhalter's coming to India. Both events were high points in recalling the grace and blessings of our Lord and Saviour during the years.

Much of the business this year centered about working out ways and means whereby work now assumed almost entirely by the missionaries may be assumed more completely by the youthful Church in India. Constitutional means were worked out to provide for the church in India to carry the essential tasks of the enterprise as Primary schools and evangelism. Some years the resolutions growing out of the agenda items ran up to forty or fifty or more in number. This year we had only sixteen!

To keep the fires of soul-winning and evangelism burning brightly the last two or more hours of conference are given over to informal reports on evangelism. Time is given to each phase of the work and to almost every missionary to report. Thus schools, and hospitals, Bible women and evangelists and their efforts at soul-winning are heard. This year we heard of baptisms in five new villages where previously there were no Christians of new churches established, of one new field pushing forth, the Mauhaid Field, as it never has before, or enlarged efforts elsewhere, of some most hopeful inquirers most everywhere, in growing numbers. One cannot sit through a session of this sort but be deeply stirred as he listens to the great work God is doing. We wish all in the homeland could listen to these sessions.

A TRIPLE PARABLE

Those who sat in the new Basna meetinghouse as it was dedicated, yesterday; made comments about the beauty and simplicity of the building with its open triple arched windows. They were very kind in not mentioning the defects such as uneven, rough plastering, asymetrical lines, crooked beams, and other points that are not as they should be for the eye of a trained builder.

Most likely there were very few who gave any thought to the hard work, planning, and praying that has gone into its construction. Nothing was said of the making of many sketches, the correspondence, and the difficulty in getting a permit for steel. Before the trusses reached the railway station ninety miles away, restrictions were put upon gasoline such as to make it very difficult to get the trusses hauled to Basna. It was no small task to get the trusses properly placed with only man power and wit to do it. Likewise, the problem of transporting the fragile asbestos concrete sheets used in the roof, was not so easily solved. Now the joy of a suitable house of worship far overshadows the difficulties involved in its construction.

The above is only an outline of some of the building factors. The second part of the parable is this that in looking over the audience of five or six hundred people one needed to remember that this group represented the fruit of many years of work, hardships, and heartaches. We saw the audience in terms of a well established congregation, where there is fellowship and nurture in Christ. To have a more complete picture one must remember the sacrifice of those who have gone before, through swollen streams, over roadless territory, who with difficulty cut a clearing in the jungle, and with greater difficulty obtained land as a nucleus for this Christian community. One needs to appreciate the hardships of touring, the heartaches occasioned by those who are untrue to their Lord and Master, the broken relations caused by family and church quarrels. These are all woof and warn of the present church.

The third part of the parable is the great love and patience of our Heavenly Father as represented in the gift of His Son, our Lord and Master. Pen can never tell the story of His works of grace in the lives of those present in worship yesterday, of His call to men, His gracious economy in making "all things work together for good" in the building of His Church. May His Church here ever stand as a light to those in the dark, and as a bulwark against the forces of evil.

CHINA

WHAT MESSAGE TO US FROM CHINA?

What about our mission work in China? What has become of it, and how are the Christians faring? Have you any message from them?" These and similar ones are live questions today. Some thoughts our evangelist, Brother Sun, expressed when we left China come to me as an answer to these questions.

Brother Sun speaking: "In John 17:21 Christ said that he prayed for his followers 'that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me and I in thee.' You Christians in America allowed Christ to dwell in you and became one with Him in Spirit. We see that you were not selfish to keep the good news of life in Christ to yourself. You took to heart what he says in the eighteenth verse, that each true follower of His is sent into the world and shall witness for Him. We feel that you were sent by God to bring the Word of Life to us, so now we, too, are children of God. Had you American Christians not brought us the Light in Christ, we in this part of China would still be in spiritual darkness and sin. But now we know you are one with Christ over there and we feel we too are one with Him over here—does it not follow as the day the night that you and we are one with each other in Christ? We have not seen your faces, but in spirit we have joyous fellowship with you, and this fellowship is bound together through the bond of missions. This is due to the great grace of God and your 'hot-heartedness' for Christ. Daily we thank the Lord for all of the Mennonite congregations in America. We pray much that our God may give you power and grace to continue to be a blessing to our common fellowmen."

When one catches the spirit of the Chinese Christians and the Church as a whole, one is impressed with the vigorous life and faithfulness with which the Church is so courageously facing the tremendous problems during the present struggle. One feels confident that there are great possibilities for the future growth and influence of the Church of Christ in China. It becomes a source of inspiration and joy to us to be aware of the wonder-working power of the Spirit of God in China today.

(Mr. Sun was the first fully ordained Chinese pastor on our mission field in China. He was the chairman of the Chinese Christian Conference at the time we left China. It is interesting that his given name, "Ch'ung Sheng," means "born again.")

A PLEA FOR PRAYER FOR CHINA

With the gracious personality of China's Christian first lady meeting us these days over the radio and in newspapers and magazines, China is kept in the public mind. We come now asking that other Chinese, men, and women, who have learned to know Christ, may be kept in our minds and hearts. Always as missionaries go home, the Chinese friends say, "Tell the friends in America to pray for us."

Now, with all our missionaries off the field, Brother and Sister Brown, Sister Goertz and Sister Regier are evidently in Peking, according to a short wave radio message), these Chinese friends are 'on their own' in a new way. They have had the use of all the mission property (now except that which the Japanese wish to use) and the responsibility for all mission work. This fact alone will suggest some of the difficulties that our Chinese friends are facing. Problems in administration and finance is the way we talk about these matters in abstract reports, but let us look at the flesh and blood that covers these skeletal parts.

There are men and women on committees who must make decisions about the use of mission land, for instance, and there will be charges of favoritism. All will have to be busy with the work of making a living, since mission support has been cut off since December, 1941. Even this will present new angles, because the teaching members of the mission, for instance, if they take work under Japanese auspices, and it may be hard not to, in occupied China, will undoubtedy be subject to pressure to engage in non-Christian practices.

We thank God that among the leaders of our Christian family in China there are many who will see things straight, but we realize too that we will have to continue to pray that they may have the mind of Christ in making all their plans and decisions.

For the Christians in the ranks, the ones who hold no special office, but who are part of the body of Christ, the Church, we need to pray that they may keep to Christian practices that will enlarge and deepen their spiritual lives, that is: daily family and individual worship, regular church attendance, carrying Bible and hynmbook openly, Sabbath observance (this is hard—because the need to work is so ever-present with them), and a continual witness to their non-Christian neighbors as to the sufficiency of their Christ. We must pray too that they may have a new vision of their own brothers and sisters, those who do not yet know the Christ as Saviour. We are grateful as we realize that the work of adding to the number of those who join the followship of the church goes on. In the first six months after the missionaries in China were interned, seventy people were added to our church. As Sister Goertz wrote, "Those who come now are pure gold, none have an ulterior motive." However, as we think of the numbers of people in China, we realize how greatly the work of spreading the gospel must increase.

For the present, we cannot send funds to China, but friends, do not let us fall into the way of thinking our work there is therefore ended. God has not left Himself without a witness. We are committed to continue to pray for those whom we all have introduced to the Saviour that they with us, may grow in grace, and in the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, so that they may stand firm in this time of testing.

PUNCTUALITY

Napoleon once invited his marshals to dine with him, but as they did not arrive at the moment appointed, he began to eat withou them. They came in in just as he was rising from the table. "Gentlemen," said he, "it is now past dinner, and we will immediately proceed to business."

TODAY

Upon the threshold of "today" I stand—
It before me, fresh from God's own hand.
Without a blemish—mine, for good or ill.
But, if I trust to self, to my weak will,
To keep it spotless, I shall surely fail;
Thy strength and guidance can alone avail.
So now my heart goes out in earnest plea,
That, for today, Thou wilt abide with me.
Life's yesterdays forevermore have passed
Beyond my reach; and now, O Lord, Thou hast
Them in thy keeping. Let Thy righteousness
Hide the dark stains they bear. Help me to press
On toward the mark. Humbly, dear Lord, I pray,
I may surrender all I am to Thee,
And that Thy presence may abide with me.
For, so abiding, doubt and strife must cease
With Thee to lead me on, the perfect peace
That passeth understanding I shall know;
Alike through calm and gale I needs must go
My way content. Then, on that morrow fair
Which brings deliverance, grant Thou my prayer—
That immortality my part may be;
So shall I evermore abide with Thee.

The Bible in a Famous Laboratory

Dr. George Washington Carver, famous negro scientist who died recently, had been honored with offers from Henry Ford and the late Thomas A. Edison. He had seen his discoveries grow into million-dollar businesses, and shortly before his death he declared that he believed the Bible was just as important to his work as his laboratory.

Dr. Carver—whose parents were carried off by slave raiders—had a strange desire for education. When he had learned all the one-room school had to offer, he earned his way through high school by doing "white folks' washing." He was accepted by the University of Iowa, only to be rejected upon his arrival because he was a negro. Undaunted, he opened a laundry and earned enough to go to Simpson College. From there he went on to study agriculture at Iowa State College. Upon graduation, he was offered a place on the faculty.

Carver's research has revolutionized life for Southern negro farmers. They will receive $70,000,000 as a result of his experiments. Even going to the extent of becoming an expert dietitian and cook, Dr. Carver practically wiped out pellagra in Macon County, by preaching kitchen gardens and showing how to prepare and preserve vegetables.

One of his favorite verses, Proverbs 3:6, he called his "light" passage: "In all thy ways, acknowledge Him and He shall direct thy paths." The other was his "power" passage: Philippians 4:13, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me."

"Non-Resistants" or "Peacemakers"?

Jesus, who said, "Resist not him that is evil" also said, "Blessed are the peacemakers." Matt. 5:9, 39, R.V.) We have held to the name "nonresistant" as scriptural. Pacifists claim that "peacemaker" is also in the Bible, and that it says more nearly what Jesus meant. The first is a negative statement; the latter positive. We wish to show that the one is incomplete without the other. Both are important.

A Christian should be against sin and for that which is good. These are the two sides of the same purpose. Rom. 12:21 insists on the importance of both. "Be not overcome of evil, but overcome evil with good. To withdraw from war is negative; to live and preach the whole gospel is a positive way of making war impossible. To be against evil is not necessarily being for good. Herein lies our danger.

We, Mennonites, remain negative when we merely withdraw from evil. We have a command, "overcome evil with good." Our relief work, our C.P.S. camps, our foreign and home mission work, our hospital work, our church schools, and our church work are positive efforts each should support.

Some pacifists emphasize a "peacemaking" not based on Christian conviction, while some of us emphasize our "anti-war" attitude without sacrificing in a "pro-peace" way. Some try to "do" without "being." A number of us "are" possessors of the Waw of Peace. Shall we prove it by "doing"?

THE WORKERS CREED

I will start anew this morning with a higher, fairer creed;
I will cease to stand complaining of my ruthless neighbor's greed.
I will cease to sit repining while my duty's call is clear:
I will waste no moment whining, and my heart shall know no fear.
I will look sometimes about me for the things that merit praise;
I will search for hidden beauties that elude the gambler's gaze.
I will try to find contentment in the paths that I must tread;
I will cease to have resentment when another moves ahead.
I will not be swayed by envy when rival's strength is shown;
I will not deny his merit, but I'll strive to prove my own.
I will try to see the beauty spread befor me, rain or shine;
I will cease to preach your duty, and be more concerned with mine.

COMMENDING THE F.B.I.

One of the delicate tasks of government, especially in wartime, is that of inquiring into the reliability and patriotism of a large number of people within our country, both citizens and aliens. Unless the necessary investigations are conducted carefully, injustices may be done and resentment created against the intrusion of the government upon private lives and personal relations of citizens.

Considering these difficulties of the task, we become very grateful to the Federal Bureau of Investigation for the intelligence, courtesy and insight of its staff. Without making any careful study, we have become impressed by the large number of entirely voluntary commendations which have come to our attention from those to whom agents of the Bureau have come for information about people under consideration for assignment to important federal positions, about aliens in our midst, conscientious objectors and others. Out of a considerable number of experiences the consistent testimony is that of appreciation for the high calibre of the men involved in a delicate task. Our congratulations to the Federal Bureau of Investigation!

IN HIS SANCTUARY

Come to the Sanctuary of God's peace—
Out from the world with all its ills,
Into the presence of Christ our Lord,
Who all our troubles stills.

The battles in the world rage fierce,
And hearts of men do fail for fear;
But here—near to the heart of God,
We are sheltered as His children dear.

"A WORLD VISION CONFERENCE"

Held February 21-28, 1943. After an inspiring missionary address at this conference, a negro lady, in front of me and my companion, turned to the lady next to her and asked her in a most cordial tone of voice, "Are you a missionary?" The lady replied in the negative and a somewhat slighting air.

Standing right behind her as she put on her wraps, I helping her, said, "We too are missionaries (my companion and I)." Her face just beamed with appreciation. She grasped our hands and said, "Oh, how very glad I am to meet you. In what country?"

We told her, "China."

She then wanted to know if we knew a certain missionary there. Naming her she said, "I am supporting her, She represents me, since I cannot go. I can be there with my prayers and my money by sending her anl supporting her.". . . She had caught the real meaning of the Great Commission: Work locally, the state, the country, the uttermost part of the world. . . .

And,—what grace, what a privilege for a white person to be deemed worthy to be the missionary of a negro couple. (I saw her later with her husband.)

She told us she would like to have our names also, "you see I would like to help you too."

This conference was deeply touching and inspiring to me. It meant for me to re-consecrate myself to my missionary call. It gave me a new and wider missionary vision. The desire born in my heart was strengthened that our churches, too, as a unit would sponsor a missionary conference. This conference here in New York was sponsored by one church alone it seemed, the Calvary Baptist Church. The conference lasted a whole week, including two Sundays, meeting three times daily for seven days. The large auditorium with gallery was filled to capacity three times daily. One session lasted over three hours, and only missionaries spoke. Praise the Lord, the spirit of missions is not dead!

Wherever there is a live church, there is a living passion for Christ and for His commission: "Go ye, Tell ye, Teach ye, Heal ye, Baptise ye!" The burden of every address was that the challenge to work "in fields ripe unto harvest" is greater than ever before. In Christ's service.

HOME MISSIONS

HOME MISSION BOARD MEETING

About 9 a.m. on Tuesday morning, Feb. 23, five members of the Home Mission Board gathered in the First Mennonite Church, Chicago, Ill., for our annual meeting. Rev. David Toews, veteren member of the board, could not be present. We were thankful however, to have the assurance that he was well enough to be taken from the hospital in Saskatoon to his own home in Rosthern. All the members present joined in prayer giving thanks to God for blessings of the past and interceding for our other member and asking the Lord for guidance in our deliberations.

As the different Home Missions fields were studied and reports read, we were greatly encouraged to find numerical and spiritual growth could be reported in almost every instance. That our mission churches are becoming stronger and the members more willing to give for the work of the Lord was evidenced in the fact that almost every station at one time or another during the past year assumed a greater proportion of their pastor's support. In some instances the increase was not very large, but it showed the spirit and willingness of the members. We hope and trust that assuming this added responsibility will result in corresponding growth and strength of the church.

Far be it for the board to hold one station up above another. Worthy of mention, however, are the improvements made by the Mennonite Bible Mission, 4221 South Rockwell St., Chicago. Before Christmas a movement was started to purchase new pews. Anyone buying pews knows how much they cost. Gifts came and friends subscribed for this cause. The chapel was painted. Then the old floor looked so bad, and again the decision was made to get a new floor covering. Again members and friends contributed liberally of their gifts and tithes. The pews arrived a week before they were expected, and members of the board saw the new addition to their chapel. At the dedication, February 28, the gifts were sufficient to cover everything. Praise the Lord for such devotion and cooperation.

It is also worthy of report to say that Grace Mennonite Church, Albany, Oregon, Rev. P. A. Kliewer, pastor, decided to assume all financial responsibilities and thus become independent. Our prayer is that the Lord might abundantly reward them for their faith and courage and increase their numbers rapidly.

Colonization and Visitation Work

At the last General Conference, held in Souderton, Pa., 1941, the matter of the colonization work was laid in the lap of the Home Mission Board. For a whole year we labored to find a committee that was willing to assume this task on a volunteer basis. We could not find anyone able and willing to assume the leadership of this work.

At this board meeting we decided to engage someone for full time to undertake this difficult task. As though the assignment were not big enough in itself, the board added to this task the one of visitation of our General Conference young men in the C.P.S. camps.

In looking around for a man interested in, and acquainted with the matter and problems of colonization, and who were also interested in our C.P.S. campees, we found Rev. William H. Stauffer, Sugarcreek, Ohio. We as a board commend him to your prayers and intercession, that he might be abundantly used of the Lord to help our rural people to remain on the soil and thus best conserve and carry on our Mennonite heritage.

Rev. Stauffer is to visit the various camps under the direction of the M.C.C., and as he travels he is to visit the different district conferences in their annual conference sessions. We trust he will be accorded some time on the program to present his work.

In order that everyone might have an idea of his tasks, we herewith present a five point program for Rev. Stauffer's activities:

1. Outline and plan colonization work program to conserve our people for the cause of Christ and the Church, and the soil.
2. Contact churches and conferences and present plans and enlist aid in this cause.
3. Visit our C.P.S. camps where our General Conference young men are stationed. Minister to them in things spiritual in groups and also by individual contact and conference. This to hold for such groups in detached service.
4. Contact such young men in the C.P.S. camps who are definitely interested in making their future homes on the farm.
5. Contact such sources that can give aid in colonization work, as the government, national and state, agricultural experiment stations, and other sources that can aid in this work.

Our Canadian Work

The board was deeply impressed with the willingness and eagerness of the Canadian churches that borrowed money to erect or renovate their churches to pay it back. Our Canadian treasurer, Rev. David Toews, feels the improvement in crops immediately in larger contributions. Read the German reports if possible and see how often they report new additions of converts to Christ.

The itinerant work, the looking after the scattered groups and families, is indeed a large but also a worthwhile task. The girls' homes continue to fill a real need, although some girls now find employment in factories as well as in homes.

We praise the Lord for your continued faithful support of our work.

WE BOW IN SILENCE

To a God of Mercy: 'Tis past midnight and we cannot sleep—These reports: Missing in Action—They leave us with such a heavy feeling—Yes, they were in our Sunday school—some of them—Did we teach them the Truth—Did they know the way of salvation—Did they know the danger of taking the sword—as Jesus taught it—Yes, there are several hundred of them—former scholars—now in a life and death struggle—Did we make it clear?

We shall write letters of sympathy; we shall express our sympathy in person where we can, but what shall we say? These days are days of searching, of searching past lives, rethinking past sermons and Sunday school lessons. We have had the opportunity of teaching and preaching between two wars, twenty years of this privilege, with four hundred years of background of faithful witnesses.

What is our duty today? We shall try in various ways to help where we can. First of all, by prayer; every Wedneday is prayer night in church. We pray for loved ones who are away from home. We write to the boys. As a pastor I write about spiritual problems, not about the weather. I send them copies of songs, such as Rock of Ages, and appropriate scripture verses. Those at home we try to prepare for those things that may happen. We try to strengthen them spiritually to be able to stand and to be able to help others who need comfort. Can you help us with your prayers?

DEDICATION SERVICE

At The Mennonite Bible Mission, Chicago

We give thanks to God for His goodness to us in making it possible for us to have new pews in our meetinghouse. On Sunday morning, February 28, we dedicated these pews.

The people of the church gathered in a side room before entering the newly decorated chapel. We all marched in together and remained standing for the dedication. They sang, "Fling Wide the Gates" led by Walter Dick. Scripture reading followed from Psalm 43 and Psalm 122. The dedicatory prayer was offered by our pastor, Brother Neufeld, followed by the Lord's Prayer by the congregation.

The scripture text for the sermon was, "My House shall be called The House of Prayer." The sermon was centered around the word "Pews" in order to make it more emphatic to the children. The new pews shall be a place of

Prayer and Praise
Education in God's Word (Christian Education)
Worship
Salvation and Sanctification

Prayer was again made unto God with thanksgiving for opening the way that we might have these pews and the redecorated Chapel, and that many might find their way into the church and find salvation and help in time of need.

The Junior Choir sang several numbers. The pews were bought and paid for by the people of the church, and on the day of dedication the amount of cash received was already more than the cost, thus establishing for our church the credit that is generally enjoyed by people who believe in paying their bills. The new pews were delivered one week ahead of the promised time showing that God had opened the way in a time when orders are for the most part delayed weeks and months. To God be the honor and praise.

CALVARY MENNONITE CHURCH
Mechanic Grove, Pennsylvania

It is our purpose to carry out the command of our Lord, to present Christ to the unsaved, minister the Word for the building up of the saints, and to visit the sick and needy.

During the past months the usual church activities were carried on with few exceptions, the Lord enabling us. On the whole, attendance is fair, but we long and pray that the Lord will visit us with a genuine revival and time of refreshing from above. There is here, as in many places, a lack of zeal by some, indifference, and neglect of the opportunities offered by the church. Present conditions, war, rationing, cause some problems; however, when zeal and desire are manifest a way to attend services is found. May I give an object lesson to inspire prayer for the furtherance of the cause of Christ.

Some years ago, on a Sunday morning a family, strangers, attended Sunday school and church services, manifesting interest in various ways. A few days prior to attending their oldest son died suddenly; as a result they were now desirous to heed the claims of Christ. For a long time their faces could be seen regularly, to the extent that the mother desired to unite with the church. In due time, however, interest began to wane until it became extinct. Through the years, the pastor has visited frequently always being received with consideration, but the results were disappointing. A recent visit reveals the following: the father is now engaged in defense work, working on Sunday, stating; "then I make the most money." The mother has no way to come and furthermore said, "What will you do if the children don't want to come." The pastor answered, "Take them to the services like we do ours.'' We pray that the Lord will once more put a desire in their heart and really live for the Lord before their children.

We praise the Lord for His continued blessings to us in service for Him. We hope and pray that in all our efforts for Him mutual helpfulness may result and the Lord Jesus Christ may be exalted.

MENNONITE MEMORIAL MISSION
Altoona, Pa.

We greet you all in the spirit of Psalm 36:10—"O continue thy lovingkindness unto them that know Thee; and thy righteousness to the upright in heart."

The past few months have been very busy ones for us. As is always the case when one changes from one field of labor to another, we have had to reestablish ourselves, get acquainted with the people of the church and the new neighborhood and the work. We have experienced many things in a few brief months and have had numerous occasions to compare and contrast the new field with other fields in which we were permitted to labor.

During the latter part of February the mission carried out a plan of visitation evangelism. The following were our objectives. 1. To secure decisions for Christ. 2. To interest folk to make decisions to transfer their membership if that membership was in a church outside of the city. 3. If not active anywhere but interested in the fellowship of the mission to make a decision. 4. To become reinstated as active members if not on the active membership list.

Although we are not able to give a complete report at this time, we do feel grateful to God for what He has accomplished thus far. Several made the decision to accept Christ as their personal Saviour. We hope that they will present themselves for instruction and baptism. Sunday evening March 14, eight were received into the fellowship of the mission. Six were taken in by transfer of church letter and two by reinstatement upon their reaffirmation of faith in Christ as their personal Saviour. The Lord has answered prayer.

We wish to acknowledge the interest which so many of you have manifested and also the receipt of contributions and gifts for the work, for which we all want to express our heart-felt gratitude to the Lord and to you. We would be happy indeed to have the Mennonite Memorial Mission and ourselves on your prayer list. Pray that the Lord Jesus Christ may be uplifted in all our work here, that the will of our Heavenly Father may be done, and that many may find Christ as their Saviour.
—Rev. and Mrs. Delbert E. Welty, 2204 11th Ave., Altoona, Pa.

HERBERT MENNONITE CHURCH
Herbert, Saskatchewan

The membership of the Herbert Mennonite Church, about three hundred, is scattered over a large area, necessitating services at several points. The field being large and the laborers few it has not been possible to visit the seven points regularly. The gasoline and tire situations are rendering the task increasingly difficult. Especially so as we ministers have not our own cars.

The church in Herbert is served every Sunday morning and every second Sunday evening. In Morse, about nine miles distant, we have services every second Sunday evening. Three points, twenty and twenty-five miles from Herbert are served once a month when the weather and road conditions permit.

Another point, about fifteen miles away, has not had a service for an entire year except for a young people's Bible study group which has progressed very favourably. Also during the summer months a young lady conducted a Sunday school with the children, some of whom walked six miles to attend.

The Gouldtown point has been served faithfully by Rev. John Wiens, resident farmer minister. He, however, is now planning to leave.

From Herbert, Rev. I. H. Wiens and the undersigned have served the five stations mentioned above as well as possible. The writer, the only one in full-time service for the Herbert district, has been on the sicklist for a few weeks and is just getting back to work.

The aged and sick occupy a large part of our ministry in Herbert. My wife and I have shared many blessings in visiting these shut-ins. They greatly appreciate the scripture portions and prayer as well as the songs we often sing for them.

As several families have moved away, our Sunday school has suffered considerably. However, there are still about seventy-five left. May they be won for the Kingdom of God. We also hope and pray that the efforts now being made may bring increasing numbers and greater efficiency in our teaching staff.

One evenin a week we have a young people's meeting. This has not been as successful as we had hoped. If any readers can offer suggestions for winning and holding young people, these would certainly be appreciated by the undersigned.

However, the church choir has been on the increase lately. We now have twenty young people with heart and voice for the cause of song.

May it please God to give us the Spirit of prayer, perseverance, and intercession that every phase of the work might prove successful to the glory of God, to the salvation of souls, and thereby to the furthering of His Kingdom.

MEETINGS FOR SCRIPTURE STUDIES

Our Mennonite churches in Manitoba are mostly country churches. In winter the work on the farm is not as urgent as in the short Canadian summer. Therefore we arrange prolonged meetings in our churches during the winter for scripture studies and for revival.

We have also had such services in our old country, and generally it has meant days of devotion and consecration.

Here in our new country we arrange these meetings at different places every time for two days in each place, namely, on Saturdays and Sundays.

The church which is to hold such Bible study meetings invites some ministers of the neighboring churches. One of the ministers introduces the Scripture which is chosen for discussion and calls then for supplementary deliverances from the other ministers or even from the midst of the congregation. That gives the audience the opportunity to ask questions, some one to answer these questions, to deliver testimonies, and in the whole to gain blessings from the meetings.

These meetings are crowded; our people like them. It shows courage when people come to these meetings even in subzero weather; men and women come and are eager not to miss any of the meetings.

The parts of the scripture which are studied are mostly from the New Testament: the Sermon of the Mount; chapters 10,13,24,25 of the Gospel of Matthew, chapters 3,10,14-17 of the Gospel of St. John, some chapters of the Acts; chapters 2,3, of the Revelation and the Epistles almost entirely.

We believe in the importance of these services for our churches. Many souls in this way are enlightened, strengthened, comforted, and guided.

When I parted from one of our meetings a brother shook my hand and looked at me with a firm promise to consecrate his life to our Saviour, to trust the Lord, and to obey Him more closely. That is the purpose of these meetings.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Hutchinson, Kansas

It is always a pleasure for mission workers to report items of interest for the "Mission Number" of The Mennonite. The work in Hutchinson is progressing most encouragingly. We are living in an age of change, and this has been most noticeable in our work here. Some of our members have found it necessary to move to other localities because of their work. We miss their "labor of love" in our church. Then we are finding many new families moving into our city, due to the increased opportunities for employment, and many of these are fine church workers. At present there are about two hundred prospects, including children, besides our members who are attending our services at various times. Most of these have a Mennonite background. Some are regular in attendance, and quite a number have already expressed their desire to join this church fellowship. We like to call it a fellowship because we have about twelve denominations represented in our present membership.

Contributions in our church during 1942 have been the best in our history, and this is a sign that many of our people are learning the privileges of stewardship. Every conference treasury receives an offering from our church. We are trying hard to keep up our quota for C.P.S. Camps and help support our colleges besides sharing in our other conference activities.

The Working Girls' Fellowship is again meeting in our church on Thursday afternoon and evening each week. At this writing there are about thirty-five Mennonite girls working in our city. The attendance at these meetings is very good. The girls meet for a time of fellowship in the afternoon, have their supper in the church basement, and then have a devotional hour in the evening. The church has become a haven of rest for these girls and is very much appreciated by them. It is also a great opportunity for the Church to make new contacts and to serve.

This Church is making plans for pre-Easter evangelistic services to be held April 4-11. Dr. A. C. Schultz, Professor of Bible at Bluffton College, will be the guest speaker this year. Evangelistic meetings have been a great help to our church in past years and we eagerly look forward to great blessings again this year.

Passion week services will be conducted by the pastor during which time we will also have the communion service, a city-wide three-hour service on Good Friday, and closing the week with special Easter services, consisting of a sunrise service conducted by the young people, Easter worship service, and a cantata by the choir in the evening.

Plans are now being made for our annual daily vacation Bible school to be held in June. Our church cooperates with the Brethren and Presbyterian churches in our neighborhood. Last year we had an attendance of 102 pupils. The school was conducted in cooperation with twenty teachers and workers. For the second consecutive year the Mennonites have had the largest number of pupils attending. We are looking forward to even greater opportunities in this field this year due to the many more children who have moved into our city.

We deeply appreciate the interest and help of our mission friends and our constant prayer is that you may be "steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord for as much as you know your labor is not in vain in the Lord."

WHAT HATH GOD WROUGHT?

When one attempts to write something that will be of interest to others who, perhaps, never were at Smith Corner or never will be, it often turns out to be quite a task. However, after prayerfully considering it, I felt that a brief report of the growth and development of the work here over a number of years might be enlightening and interesting. Having worked out the report sometime ago for my own satisfaction I am herewith sending it to you. It gives the membership, attendance, offerings, and gains for the past eight years.

*Lost Seven
Lost Eight

One thing I should like to report is that here in Smith Corner we are learning anew, as perhaps others are, that adversity serves to unite us into a closer spiritual life; it also teaches us the greatness of God.

During the past year some of our boys have been scattered over the world in such a way that we never even would have dreamed could happen. One is in the South Pacific and others are scattered where we do not know.

The prayer burden for these does not fall upon one family but upon many, thus bringing us united to God in prayer for them. Our prayer is that the teachings received here in our little church may go with them wherever fate may take them, and that one day they may come back to us with a greater respect and appreciation for the church and the things of God.

Last year at the Easter season one of our young men came back into communion and we were glad. It seemed that thereafter life took on a different meaning for him. Later in the year he was called into service. He went as a non-combatant, and today he is writing to me such wonderful letters telling of his love for the Bible and the things of God, and how he is striving in the camp to live for Him Who died that he might live.

I am glad for this and it proves what I have often said—that only in eternity will we know what a little mission church has done toward the salvation of souls.

This brother writes that he tries to the best of his ability to explain to others the meaning of the Bible. May God bless his efforts. We are looking forward to the time when he and others will come back and be a power and a pillar in the Church of Christ.

bulletin for bringing vital facts of conference work to the church members.

—The Bethel College Summer School Bulletin is out. You can secure a copy from A. J. Regier, Director of Summer Session and Teacher Placement Bureau, North Newton, Kansas. The first term is from May 20 to June 25. The second term begins June 28 and ends July 30. The accelerated program enables a student to earn sixteen quarter hours of credit during the summer quarter. This compares well with the amount of credit which can be earned by a student during any one quarter during the regular session.

—Bluffton College commencement activities will begin May 22 and end on Monday, May 24. No great deviation from the program of last year is being planned. The annual Booster Banquet is to be held on the evening of April 2 in the high school gymnasium with Lt. Gov. Paul Herbert as speaker. The Bible lecturer next November will be Dr. Rufus Bowman, president of Bethany Biblical Seminary, Chicago. The Junior Class presented the play, "Prexy and Son," written by Fred Eastman, on March 30. The college did not change time when the state did on February 21. All college activities run on Eastern War time.

—Bulletin, Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa., "From the start a large group stayed for these 'hymn-sings,' for they seem to have a function and a flavor which supplement admirably the more formal preaching service. Directly after the benediction our organist started off with a well-loved old time gospel hymn, which put the gathering group into good humor, for some never do get their fill of hymn-singing in any preaching service."

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: Brother Willard Claassen, pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, represented the Northern District Conference's interests of Peace and Christian Education in a recent Sunday morning message. The needs of the Church Building Fund are almost supplied now. The pastor has introduced into the bulletin an interesting series of biographical sketches of our conference leaders. Introducing Brother C. E. Krehbiel he writes, "He was educated in the Halstead Preparatory School, Halstead, Kansas; in Kansas State Normal, Emporia, Kansas; in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary, Bloomfield, N. J.; and in the University of Berlin in Germany. He has served for many years as editor of the Christlicher Bundesbote, our official German Conference paper. He served as Secretary of the General Conference many years before he was elected its President." The bulletin also says, "We suggest that families of the church who have boys in the service send to them our weekly church bulletins. Most of the boys will be interested in them. The church sends all absentee members a bi-monthly Messenger now, but this does not take the place of the bulletins."

—"Wings Over Jordan" Choral Ensemble to appear at Bethel College: "As an expression of appreciation to kind friends who have made generous contributions to Bethel College during this school year we have made arrangements with the nationally known Wings Over Jordan Choral Ensemble for an evening's entertainment early in May. The exact date will be announced later. This Booster Concert will substitute for the twelfth annual Booster Banquet."

—Bulletin, Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington "Your pastor (Edmund Miller) has been invited to the C.P.S. Camp in Belton, Montana, . . . to preach the dedication sermon for the new chapel and to give some other messages to the boys. The service next Sunday will be conducted by the high school, Junior high, and Junior-Intermediate groups." "If the church building fund contained $10,000 in these bonds (civilian), the interest alone would amount to $250.00 yearly. This would add up to a tidy sum by the time the building could begin."

—Bulletin, Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas: "Would someone volunteer to take it upon him or herself to see that someone of our church writes to all of the boys (in service) each week and enclose the church bulletin in each letter?"

—Frank Manning, recently came from Detroit to Berne to speak at a missionary meeting at the latter place. Brother Manning is a Mennonite missionary serving under the African Inland Mission. The Mannings plan to embark soon for Africa. They plan to leave the children here. P. A. Penner spoke to the Berne Mennonite Church in the morning.

—A. C. Schultz, Bible teacher at Bluffton College, will conduct pre-Easter services for the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, from April 4 to 11.

—First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho: "Brother Philip Wedel held evangelistic services at Newport and Deer Park, Washington. D. B. Unruh is pastor at Newport. Brother Wedel is to hold a series of meetings in the Downey, Idaho, C.P.S. camp. Ora Keyser is the director, and the camp has about 145 campees. A truckload of potatoes was given to this camp in February. We installed our new pews this week. The order had been placed over a year ago. The Garnett Church Furniture Company of Garnett, Kansas, manufactured them. The grave question confronting the churches of the Pacific Conference Churches is: "Can we have a conference or not?" —Corr.

A Mind That Found Itself

A Mind That Found Itself is the name of a book by Clifford W. Beers who once lost his mind and then found it again. It is "The true story of a Man Who Came Back—after wandering two years in the wilderness of unreason." It is a remarkable book in face of the fact that many lost minds are never found again. It is a very remarkable book because it holds forth the hope that many lost minds can be found again. It is a classic. It lies at the bottom of the mental hygiene movement.

Clifford Beers has put on the printed page the thoughts that turmoiled in his mind when it was not in its rightful state. He tells of how he felt towards the "insane asylum" in which he was kept—what is a "mental hospital" today was an "insane asylum" in the early 1900's. In conclusion he hammers in the fact that "what the insane most need is a friend!"

This book should be of great interest to us not only because of the light that it throws upon the recovery of lost minds, but it should also attract us because it presents many of the problems and the opportunities which lie before our C. P. S. "boys" who are engaged in mental hospital service.

This book is an encouragement to the "peacemakers." The world says that you can't deal with those who are "insane," "wild," "irresponsible." The greater the violence that you use against such, the better you will be able to overcome them. So assert the worldly-wise. But Christ did not cast out devils in such a manner. Neither does it work in mental hospitals.

Administrators of such institutions admit that what is needed for the regaining of rightful minds is not violence, but love and understanding. Because of this fact our C. P. S. "boys" have a peculiar part to fulfill in such hospitals. He who once cast out "demons" is saying, "follow me." The poise and kindness of a man with a quickened conscience brings about stability and right thinking such as a mind grooved to violence and animosity can never effect.

This book should be available at nearly any public library. It might well be included in our church libraries. —rw.

What Kind of a Program Shall We Have?

"What kind of a program shall we have?" asks a member of the C.E. program committee, and the tussle with this problem begins. Some of our societies turn to an interdenominational C.E. quarterly for the answer, and some rely upon the program given in the youth section of The Mennonite.

The editors of the material in The Mennonite would like to know why some societies do not use it. There evidently are reasons. These reasons should be laid before the editors, so that they can consider them and adapt their material accordingly. Precious space is devoted to this material, and hard, consecrated effort is spent in working it out. Send your reaction to the editor of this paper and he will pass it on to the topic editors. —rw.

I Love to Tell the Story

Do we love to tell the story of Jesus and His love? If we do, then we ought to make good evangelists. If we do, then we ought to be active in telling the good news to others. If we do, then we ought not "blush to speak His name," or feel self-conscious in our talk about Christ and the abundant life. If we do, then, undoubtedly, our stories will be similar to Christ's parables. If we do, then we will have little room in our life for that which detracts from the story of Christ. If we do, then we will cooperate with our minister as he initiates a program of evangelism for his church. What about my relationship to Christ if I do not love to tell the precious story?

In this Lenten season pastors are reaching out for unsaved souls. You can help them. In another part of this paper is an article entitled, "Six Basic Plans for Evangelism Week." In it are good suggestions for action. Do you feel the need for instruction in personal work? Then you may enjoy studying the sixty-five page, pocket-size handbook on Personal Work by Milo Kauffman who is president of a Mennonite Bible School and College. The cost of it is twenty-five cents. Decide to help your pastor, inform yourself, and go to work, for the fields are white unto harvest. —rw.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

RURAL CHURCH CHOIRS

The reason generally given for having choirs in churches is that they enrich the worship services. I have long wondered if choirs really accomplish the intended purpose. It has been my privilege to attend a great many churches of different denominations and of different sizes and in various parts of this country. Most of these churches, other than Mennonite had choirs. Some were good, others in need of great improvement. Regardless of the size of the choir or the quality of the music I should still like to raise the question whether the worship service is actually enriched by the presence of a choir?

Do Choirs Help or Hinder?

It is not only a matter of the worship service itself but the effect of the choir on the morale of the whole church that needs to be considered. Perhaps, there is no other auxiliary in the church that has caused as many problems as has the choir. Many ministers jokingly refer to the choir as the war department in their church organization. Is the processional a part of the worship service or is it a time for some of the members to "go on parade"? Do choirs and processionals become rural people who are not given to pomp and show? Does the presence of a choir improve congregational singing or does it tend to weaken it? Does the choir play a vital need in the rural church or is it an imitation of an urban setting with entirely different circumstances?

Singing at Mennonite Services

It has been my observation that congregation singing tends to suffer when choirs are used. It stands to reason that when the best singers are withdrawn from the congregation and concentrated in one place they cannot help and encourage the poorer singers around them. It seems to me that there is greater merit in spending time developing general singing in the congregation than to confine the training to a dozen or two of the members. In the Old Mennonite Church, where neither choirs nor musical instruments are found, one can hear some of the finest congregation singing in America. This is in keeping with the Mennonite principle of simplicity and avoidance of superficiality and show. It is not providing an opportunity for a part of the congregation to be put on display in the show case as is the case with the prominent location of most church choirs. If choirs must be used why not place them to the rear or in the balcony rather than to the front on an elevated platform? I believe Mennonites could enjoy a richer worship service and contribute more to the art of public worship by preserving and cultivating hearty congregational singing than by unsuccessfully aping non-Mennonite forms of church music and choir singing.

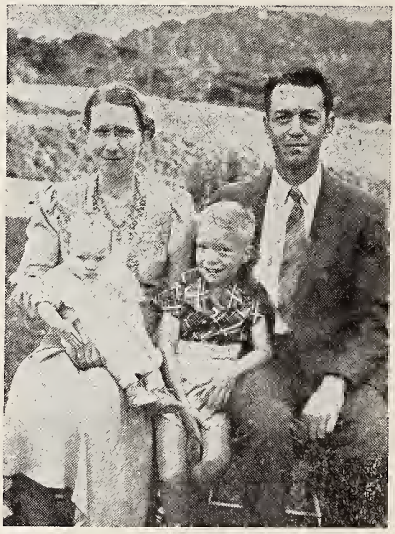
Marvin Dirks Heard From

C. B. Willard, Home Service Secretary of the Harvey County (Kansas) Chapter of The American Red Cross, sent the following letter to Rev. P. H. Richert on March 27, 1943:

"I am in receipt of a letter today through the Headquarters of the American Red Cross in Washington, D.C., in regard to Rev. and Mrs. Marvin J. Dirks and children, who appear on the unofficial list of American civilians interned at Baguio, Philippine Islands. This information was forwarded to the State Department from England on an incomplete list compiled by a former British internee in the Baguio camp, who was later transferred to Manila and included among the first group of British repatriates.

"According to the State Department's information, the camp at Baguio was moved some time in May, 1942, to Camp Allen, a Philippine army barracks in Trinidad Valley, where conditions are somewhat better.

"We are happy to be of this service to you and to send you this information."



This picture of Brother and Sister Marvin J. Dirks and children was taken in the Philippine Islands after they had been there for a short while. They used it on a Christmas greeting card in 1941. It is the last picture of them to arrive in the U. S.

ANNOUNCEMENT

As an expression of appreciation to kind friends who have made generous contributions to Bethel College during this school year we have made arrangements with the nationally known "Wings Over Jordan" Choral Ensemble for an evening's entertainment early in May. The exact date will be announced later.

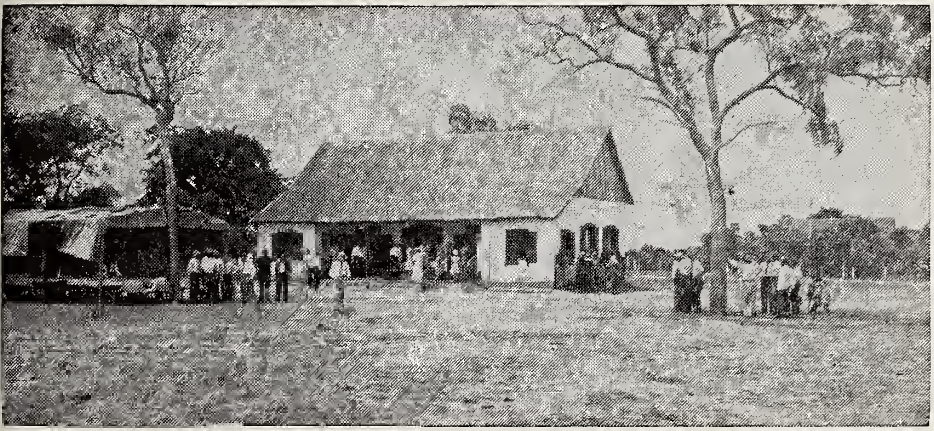
This "Booster Concert" will substitute for the twelfth annual "Booster Banquet."

MEETING-HOUSE DEDICATION IN PARAGUAY

January 31, 1943

On the above date, I had the privilege of attending what I believe was one of the most interesting meetings held in Colony Fernheim for a long time—the dedication of the first building put up expressly as a Meetinghouse! The group or denomination that put it up is known as the Evangelische Menonitische Bruderschaft—name important mostly because there are three groups of Mennonites here in this colony.

There were two sessions—forenoon and afternoon—crowded with songs by the congregation and specital songs, one poem, several short sermons, one report about the building process, and the dedicatory sermon—the latter being given by Brother Nicolai Wiebe, the head of the church. There were 253 people, including children, at this service. The baptized members numbered 114, from 36 families. An interesting comparison was given about the growth of the church since they came to Paraguay about 1930—there were at that time only 44 members; since then, 13 have died from this group. At present there are 9 preachers and 1 deacon there. Another interesting item is that this is the farthest north Mennonite meetinghouse in South America, as far as we know. There is one church house in Menno colony, the group who came here from Canada a few years earlier than the group from Russia, and who live just east of this Colony Fernheim, but their meetinghouse is a couple miles further south than this one.



The main part of the building is about 18x50 feet, and holds a crowd just about like Sunday's—250 make it full. It also has two small rooms on one side, and it is planned later to have a small kitchen nearby, where lunch can be served on special occasions—Sunday we had bread, soup, and watermelon. Last July the group started plans for the building—had almost no money, made no assessments, but "All who had a mind to work came and worked!" In the seven months the woods were cleared, tree trunks cut down, hauled to the sawmill and sawed, grass for the roof collected, mud bricks were made and dried, and the entire building constructed. For actual construction, about 550 man-days work were donated by the members. Nails, window glass, and lime for white-washing and a few other items had to be purchased, which amounted to about $50. There are yet a few finishing touches to be done, but the house is practically finished, and paid for!

Previously, most of the church services have been held in schoolhouses, or the colony's house in Philadelphia—but this house will have a special significance—dedicated expressly for service to God! Let us hope and pray that it will always be an inspiration to these who worship there to remain true and loyal to their God who has cared for them so far, and like the Psalmist said: "The Lord has done wonderful things for us, for which we are glad!"

MENNONITE SONG FESTIVAL

The spirit of the Mennonite Song Festival is undaunted in spite of present conditions, so plans are again in the making for this year's program.

The festival will be held May 2, which is about a month earlier than previous years. This is being done so that the singing groups who have been together during the winter months can be represented at the festival before they disband for the summer.

Since the place for the festival will again be Memorial Hall at North Newton, it is believed that most groups will be able to manage the problem of distance—this being as centrally located as possible.

The afternoon will be on the order of that of last year, with individual choirs presenting one or two numbers each. The evening program will be made up of a massed choir. To this group we wish to invite any persons who like to sing, whether they appeared in the afternoon or not. The music for the evening will consist of hymns and chorales with variations to add interest. We hope to include the entire audience in the evening program to help us sing some of our good church music.

Now, if ever, is the time for all churches to keep singing. We cordially invite you to be some part of our festival May 2.

—Esther Ratzlaff, Sec., Hillsboro, Kans.

SIX BASIC PLANS FOR EVANGELISM WEEK

1. Where churches of a community cooperate in the "Week of Evangelism," the ministers might call all the volunteer workers together for several preparatory meetings. After this period of preparation, the workers could go out in twos for envangelistic house visitation in the evenings during the "Week of Evangelism." All those who take part might meet early in the evenings for sharing of experiences, for new assignments, and for prayer, and then go out again for the evening's work. Common evening meals contribute greatly to the fellowship in this service, but are not essential for a blessed work.

2. Churches that must work at this alone, without the cooperation of other churches in the community, might follow the same general plan, but carry it out on a smaller scale. The pastor will need to take the lead.

3. The C. E. Society might send out teams of young people to visit homes and give short testimonies of what being a Christian means to them. The homes should be contacted beforehand and informed of their coming. They might also include singing of songs as a testimony of the Christian life. This method might be especially well adapted to homes where the non-professing people are shut-ins. County old people's homes should be visited by such teams. County jails would be other places where this type of witness would be well received, and where the need to present the Saviour is great.

4. In some rural communities it might be possible to arrange for an evening program in a country school house, a program in which Christian people might give talks on subjects like, "What I Have Found in Christ," "What Christ Means to Me," "What I Owe to the Christian Church," "Why I am Glad I am a Christian," etc. In such short talks an effective testimony could be given, and the claims of Christ presented to the hearts of non-professing people. Special songs selected for their testimony value should help to make such an evening both enjoyable and meaningful. The unchurched people of the community should be especially invited and warmly received.

5. Sunday School classes might be asked to be responsible for seeing to it that certain people of the community be invited to church, and the way of salvation made clear to them with a warm invitation to accept our Lord.

6. Sunday School teachers might be made responsible to direct each pupil of the class to invite someone to church. If it is not possible for the pupils to go in person to see those who need to be invited, encourage them to write letters or cards of invitation, mentioning what the worship service or Sunday school means to their lives and that they should like to have their friends share in these good things. Especially should it be urged that Christian people seek to win non-Christian relatives to the Lord and His Church.

LOYALTY

Editor, The Mennonite:

Imagine how God's overwrought prophet felt when he was assured that things were not as bad as they had seemed, that instead of being the only faithful servant there were as many as seven thousand in the land!

Isn't it encouraging today to know that God knows how to keep the just from falling from grace and that there is also a "remnant according to the election of grace"?

Mennonites have proved themselves to be good stewards in all things including the "manifold grace of God." (I think).

Now this "grace of God that bringeth salvation" is supposed to appear to all men and teach all men to deny ungodliness and worldly lusts, that "we should live soberly, righteously and godly, in this present world, looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Saviour Jesus Christ, who gave Himself for us that He might redeem us from all iniquity and purify unto Himself a peculiar people zealous of good works."

At the present time, I realize how important it is, how encouraging, to know that our God is a "God of Hosts" of armies, "a Lord of Sabaoth," and not only of a minority group.

So I find your message found in the article on the conscription of women to be most encouraging indeed. It is a joy to know that thousands will read this message and grow in strength and determination to remain unswervingly loyal to God.

MIDDLE SCHOOL AT JANJGIR

Log Cabin, Northpoint
Janjgir, C. P., India,
October 8, 1942.

Dear Brethren of the Mission Board:

Greetings in the name of our Saviour, Jesus Christ, and the words of confidence found in Psalm 85:12 and 13.

In reporting my activities in the mission work for the quarter just ended, I can testify to the protecting hand of God. One of the most difficult hot seasons that our Christian people can remember came to a close when refreshing showers came late in June. We at Janjgir were forced to postpone the opening of primary and middle schools with the boarding for a week because there was not water for washing nor cleaning purposes. Instead all of the local pupils and outsiders as they came in were given cholera injections as a very hard siege of it was taking the people of the nearby village Janjgir. Before it subsided over 150 adults and children had died, but God saw fit to protect the Christian community. They do not fear as the Hindus and surely have advanced in the measures of sanitation and precautions against disease which they observe.

The enrollment in the middle school shows a slight increase over last year, mostly in that more boys are coming as day scholars from their homes instead of going to Jagdishpur where they belong. I am happy to be able to report that Miss Nellie Penner, B. A., and trained in England, joined our staff as headmistress. She had had over a year of teaching experience in a large high school in Ranchi and came to us at a real sacrifice of salary. I feel that we can be sure of her sustained interest in the spiritual life of the girls and her loyalty to the mission, and I have been happy to have her live in the bungalow with me and share my board. We have had to exercise great patience this year because of a long hard epidemic of high malaria fever and influenza which disrupted the attendance more than any other year when I have been principal. This came just as we were in the midst of a stirring revival and has not yet run its full course, though I did leave for Darjeeling and a rest since an efficient nurse, a former F. M. S. girl, is most conscientiously taking care of the sick girls. I teach fifth grade English and several times as I came into the classroom I found a child who could scarcely hold up her head; when we measured the temperature it was 104.2. Dr. Dester rendered a great service to the school by performing nine tonsilectomies recently.

Funk Memorial Girls' School, Janjgir, Central Provinces, India. Miss Helen E. Nickel is principal of this school and Miss Nellie Penner is headmistress.

General supervision of schools and the boarding have taken my time, but missionary service which I enjoyed most during this quarter was to teach daily in the Bible course, the book of the prophet Ezekiel to a class of twenty-one, mostly young mothers, all literate. Mr. Moyer had prepared helpful outlines so I had the courage to undertake the teaching of a rather difficult prophetical book. The class at the close of study expressed their thanks for blessings received; so I also could truthfully say that I experienced more deeply the desire of God that His children walk in holiness of life and uprightness of heart. I have referred very briefly to the revival that followed; it not only touched the school girls and led many of them into definite assurance of salvation and a desire to witness, but some of these younger women in the church were also helped very much. An Indian brother, who was formerly the pastor at Basna, came from a large industrial city to conduct the meetings at Janjgir.

Following the revival Conference convened early this year at Champa. You will have received the minutes to tell you about our deliberations. We especially are grateful that doors for evangelism are still wide open, and through the school we are trying hard to make some contribution to the work of witness from Janjgir station.

Very sincerely yours,
Helen Nickel

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. AMANDA RUSH, daughter of Levi and Mary Oberholtzer Fretz, was born August 19, 1872, in New Brittian Township, Pa. First member of Deep Run Old Mennonite Church. Married Isaac M. Rush on September 19, 1891. With him she joined the West Swamp Mennonite Church, October 11, 1913. Members of her family that survive are: Alpha, Allentown; Mrs. Mary Geissinger, Old Zionsville; Mrs. Cora George, Quakertown; William Lloyd, Spinnerstown; Wilmer, Milford Square; Elwood at home, and Mrs. Anna May Hillegass, Spinnerstown. Death came on March 12, 1943.

MRS. ADELINE CLYMER BAUMAN, daughter of Abraham S. and Elizabeth Clymer, was born November 21, 1871, and died March 3, 1943. She became a member of the West Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., on March 30, 1888. On November 15, 1913, she was married to Jacob Bauman, who survives her.

CHRISTIAN BAEHR, son of Jacob and Marie Hege Baehr, was born May 12, 1871, at Heilborn, Germany, and died at Newton, Kansas, February 25, 1943. In 1886 he was baptized at Giebelstadt, Bavaria. When twenty-one he settled with his parents on a farm near Wisner, Nebraska. In 1916 he was married to Helen K. Mueller, who with Marvin, the only child, mourns him. In 1921 he came to Halstead, Kansas. The next year he purchased a farm west of Newton, which became the family home. Brother and Sister Baehr became members of the First Mennonite Church, Newton. While in Nebraska Brother Baehr served as Sunday school superintendent for many years. In Newton he served as teacher of the older men's Sunday school class for a number of years, and he also served on the church committee.

FERDINAND A. HINZ, son of Julius and Marie (nee Ratzlaff) Hinz, was born September 1, 1895, on a farm near Corn, Oklahoma, and died on March 9, 1943. In 1915 he was baptized by Elder John Flaming. For a number of years he was church janitor. On November 7, 1915, he was married to Sarah Ediger. Three years ago the family moved from a farm to Corn, where he trucked for the Reimer Bros. Mill, driving 125,000 miles without accident. He is mourned by his wife and his children: Elmer Hinz, Turpin; Mrs. Henry Franzen, Jr., Alfred, Verna, Robert, Norma Jean, and Jimmie.

J. A. FREY, a member of the Eicher Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa, died February 21, 1943, after residing in the community for fifty-seven years. He was interested in the welfare of his community, school, and church. He was a man of few words, and his counsel was much desired. He attended church services up to the second week before his departure.

ANDREW J. GOERING, son of Jacob and Katharina Goering, was born November 28, 1867, in Russia, and died February 24, 1943. At seven he migrated with his parents to America. They settled on a farm near Moundridge, which has been his home ever since. In 1886 he was baptized by Elder Jacob Stucky and received into the membership of the Hoffnungsfeld Mennonite Church. In 1925 he became a member of the Eden Church. In 1897 he married Caroline Waltner. He is survived by his wife and the children: Reinhold, Herman, Menno, and Daniel, Matilda, Clara, and Ena.

FRED PETERS, son of Jacob D. Peters and Katherine Thieszen, was born January 4, 1898, in York County, Nebraska. When nine years old creeping paralysis set in and left him a cripple and finally an invalid for life. On May 20, 1918, he was baptixzed by Elder H. H. Epp and accepted as a member of the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson. Since the death of his parents he lived with relatives, at the Salem Home near Hillsboro, and at a convalescent home in Beatrice, Nebraska. He was patient in the bearing of his cross.

MRS. MARY (RITTLER) MAST died on February 28, 1943, at Wayland, Iowa, at the age of eighty-four. Though she was in poor health for some months she kept up her interest in the work of the church. She leaves to mourn two sons and their wives, one daughter-in-law, and two sisters.

Relief Workers Now In Germany

Through the State Department in Washington the Mennonite Central Committee has been informed that Brother Henry Buller and wife and Sister Lois Gunden, erstwhile relief workers in France, have joined the diplomatic group in Baden Baden, Germany. Here they await exchange and repatriation, as did Brother M. C. Lehman a year ago. There is no way of knowing at what date this will be possible.

Reports indicate that they are well treated. Exchange of mail with relatives is possible through official channels.

CENTRAL CONFERENCE ACTIVITIES

MENNONITE OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Meadows, Illinois

Motto: "Cast me not off in the time of old age; forsake me not when my strength faileth." Ps. 71:9.

One of the youngest of the institutions established through the cooperative effort of the Central and Defenseless conferences is the Mennonite Old People's Home. A home for the aged was a vision of leaders in both conferences as far back as 1905.

The first step towards the realization of this vision was taken when the conferences appointed representative committees in the fall of 1917. These brethren presented the matter further at a joint mission board meeting held very early in May, 1919. A corporation was founded on June 6, 1919, and the project had really begun.

After careful investigation of location it was finally decided to build the home at Meadows, Illinois. In this small, quiet village now stands the home with modern equipment and having the atmosphere not so much of an institution as that of a home.

The Home was built in the year 1922 and was completed in the spring of 1923. It was dedicated on Sunday, May 20, 1923. Approximately 2,000 attended the services.

The first superintendent and matron were Brother and Sister Klassen, who served from 1928 to March, 1925. The first old people were received in April, 1923. Rev. and Mrs. George Gundy were appointed as superintendent and matron in January, 1925 and began their work March 1, 1925. They have served faithfully and efficiently these years.

The building and grounds present an attractive appearance, especially, in the summer when the well-kept lawn is green, and the flowers are in full bloom, and the highway is green.

At present eighteen elderly people are cared for in this home. Rev. and Mrs. Gundy are not only interested that they shall be cared for materially in a Christian way but also that their spiritual needs shall be met. There is a large chapel in the home where prayer meetings and various religious services are held. The home is filled at present, and applications are on file of those that wish to enter.

The institution is supported by the churches of the two conferences and by the gifts of many friends of the home. This home, as Rev. Gundy says, makes Christian fellowship possible and Christianity practical in manifesting the spirit of the Good Samaritan.

THE MENNONITE OLD PEOPLE'S HOME

Meadows, Illinois

This institution was not built for fame,
Nor for any to make himself a name;
But for those who are left, as it were alone,
With no one to comfort and give them a home.

For if there be such who deserve loving care,
It is the aged and infirm found everywhere;
Whose eyes have grown dim by sorrow and toil,
Through the storms of life and the world's turmoil.

A Haven of Rest is the Pilgrim's deep need,
Where they are free from care and may rest indeed;
With their wants supplied for body and soul,
How happy the home where Christ has control.

The Mennonite Home is a Haven of Rest,
For all who may enter we believe will be blest,
The Spirit of Love and Infinite Grace
We trust will prevail throughout the whole place.

A place of sweet refuge, this Home will be,
For the friend who is out on life's rolling sea.
Come into this "Ark," there is room for you,
It will lighten your burden and others, too.

My dear aged Friend, this message of love
Is for you, who will soon join the ranks above.
Come to this Home. Come, its blessings to share,
It may help you to gain a Home "over there."

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

Two Hundred Fifty Men to Go into Dairy Farm Labor

Due to labor shortage in dairy counties Selective Service has approved the selection of at least two hundred fifty men from Mennonite camps for distribution on dairy farms in five counties in Wisconsin, three counties in Ohio, two counties in Michigan, and one county in California. Twenty-five men will be assigned to each county.

The offical understanding drawn up by Selective Service System calls for the farmers to pay a prevailing wage for the service of the men to the National Service Board for Religious Objectors. From this wage will be deducted expenses for the transportation of the men from camp to farm, workmen's compensation, medical care, and an allowance to cover clothing and other personal expenses. The money above the maintenance expenses will to to the U. S. treasury where, according to present understanding, it will be "frozen" for the duration of the war.

Civilian Public Service Parachute Unit

In cooperation with the U. S. Forest Service arrangements have been completed for an assignment of men from C.P.S. camps to train for "smoke jumping" or parachute fire fighting. This work consists of fighting forest fires by dropping men with parachutes from planes over the scene of the forest fire and thus effect a great saving in time, energy, and manpower in the extinguishing of the fire.

A unit of men, all volunteers, will be stationed at Missoula, Montana, for training around the 15th of May. Brother Roy Wenger, now at Colordo Springs camp, will be director of the unit. Mrs. Wenger will serve as dietician and Marie Ediger as nurse-matron. Because of the nature of the work only those will be admitted to the unit who are physically fit and who are proven to be steady and fearless.

On Disposition of Money Earned in Emergency Farm Program

Quoting from Camp Directors Bulletin No. 52: "A plan to segregate all funds earned under the Emergency Farm Program until after the war has been approved by the Secretary of the Treasury and the Comptroller General of the United States. This means that no money earned by men on the Emergency Farm Program will be used for war purposes. This ruling is retroactive and includes all monies previously earned since the beginning of the Emergency Farm Program."

Cooking School for C.P.S. Men

Beginning in April and lasting for three months there will be a Cooking School for C.P.S. men at the Grottoes, Virginia, camp. The school will train cooks for "C.P.S. camps operating on frugal budgets and under food rationing difficulties." It will also prepare men in working for mobile disaster units and post-war relief and reconstruction purposes.

Sister May Emma Showalter, dietician of the Grottoes Camp will be in charge of the school. About fifteen men will be selected to attend the school from camps east of the Mississippi.

A Field of Need

When C.P.S. can be useful in areas of acute need it is indeed gratifying. Such is the privilege of the C.P.S. Unit in Puerto Rico. In this impoverished island someone has said it is possible to find all the ills and diseases of society concentrated. Malnutrition, large slum areas, tropical diseases, poor housing, lack of hospitals—all these together with unemployment, deficient transportation and real lack of foodstuffs have made Puerto Rico a land that needs relief and reconstruction.

The Puerto Rican Reconstruction Administration is a government agency which has sponsored projects such as road building, soil conservation, reforestation, scientific agriculture, public schools, medical dispensaries, hospitals, resettlement and rural rehabilitation. It is under this agency that the C.P.S. unit is working.

A Service Rendered

Last August the C.P.S. unit arrived in Puerto Rico, being flown there by airplane. The unit consists of eleven men and is directed by a medical doctor. The boys on the unit have mechanical skills, are trained in First Aid and can carry on a varity of jobs ranging from laundry work to teaching health practises.

Since the arrival of the boys on the island they have remodelled a barrack into a hospital and generously given of their services to a resettlement project in the western central part of the island. Over two hundred operations have been performed, hundreds of vaccinations have taken place, and the medical needs of the community have been met by the boys acting as doctors' assistants, nurses, cooks, laundrymen, and office assistants.

Milk Cows for Relief

Hillsboro, Kansas
March 25, 1943

Dear Editor:

I can not refrain from writing a response to Mr. Stoneback's article "Milk Cows for Relief" in the last Mennonite. His suggestion to the M.C.C. is very much in place. With his plan of procedure equal opportunity would be given to city and farm folks.

Mr. Ewert is building up a Milking Shorthorn herd out of which selections would be made for just such a purpose when the chance is given.

I well remember the time when my father went about soliciting milk cows for relief in Germany after World War No. I. But I remember also how depressed he felt when people responded, not with "milk cows" but with "scrubs" out of their herds. When that is done, it's no longer a gift, but a liability. Can we ask for a greater reward than to let a "prize heifer" be the means of restoring health and hope, or even life to God's innocent victims?

So don't lose confidence in your idea, Mr. Stoneback, there are those within the Mennonite circle whose support you have. Very sincerely,

Mrs. D. P. Ewert

A. E. Janzen Delayed in Voyage to South America

Following is an interesting exerpt from a letter received by Mrs. A. E. Janzen from her husband who is on his way to visit the Mennonite colonies in Paraguay and Brazil. Professor Janzen left Hillsboro, Kansas, the first part of February and waited in port until his ship sailed sometime later. Part of the letter is as follows:

Since our ship had a number of passengers and a small amount of its freight destined for the port of Guayaquil, Ecuador, and also took on new passengers and freight, we stopped here. Guayaquil is some three hours up the river from Puna. In order to save time the boat anchored in the Bay of Guayaquil toward the mouth of the river in a position about a mile from Puna. a small tug and large port which landing operations were handled. Later this proved disastrous.

In Bay of Guayaquil

A heavy rain bade us welcome. It continued long enough to delay the unloading and loading activity for over three hours. The boat had sounded two long blasts announcing our arrival, and before long a motor boat arrived, bringing the port officials with their necessary formalities by means of which vessels in transit can make contact in foreign parts. Then several tugs came bringing barges for the freight, other boats through native laborers to do the work, some brought peddlers of Panama hat, billfolds, and other small articles constructed in Ecuador for sale to tourists on board, so that soon we were surrounded by twelve or fifteen small craft of all shapes and sizes and it looked as though the whole town had turned out to meet us. Since unloading was delayed the natives gained access to our steamer to escape the rain. Soon the population of our vessel had doubled, and was it a sight! The peddlers trying in broken English to sell their fares, the crew men shouting orders to their workers, new passengers waiting to be shown to their cabins, old ones ready to disembark, people milling to and fro just to look at each other. Besides other passengers a half dozen Catholic student priests joined the list. These are dressed in white costumes, the crown of their heads being shaven while the edges of the hair are left long and sort of curled up. I was told they are of the Dominican order.

Loading and Unloading

Unloading and loading was done simultaneously, continuing all night. Towards morning large barges full of bananas and pineapples were carried onto our boat. The natives carry them on their backs, going goose file. An occasional tree-ripened one among the bunches was thrown to eager looking passengers on deck. The banana of Ecuador tastes delicious. After a few days we had all we could eat at meals.

Boat Stuck in Mud Bank

Later the boat was ready to pull out but found itself stuck against a mud bank. The flow of the Attention, W.D.C.E. Members

How many of you have never had an exciting moment in your life? How many of you have never been fascinated or overwhelmed by beauty or the majestic appeal of some event or act? How many of you have never had anything happen to you which was inspiring, ennobling and uplifting? Or how many of you have never been filled with joy and graditude because of a gift which you received or some event which occured? Or how many of you have never experienced events which were extremely unhappy, lonesome, or humiliating?

Now that you've answered these questions, I believe that there's not one of you that can truthfully say "No" to all them; is there? Good! That means that every one of you has a story to tell—something has happened—some experience has been yours that others would like to know about.

It is for this reason that the Western District C.E. Committee has arranged for a "true story contest" in which all of you, including boys in C.P.S., can participate and in which all of you can share your experiences. All that you need to do is to describe some experience of yours which you feel was interesting and meaningful to you and then mail your entry to Harley J. Stucky, Northwestern Campus, Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois. Your entries must be post-marked not later than June 1, 1943. Awards will be given to the best entries in both a Junior and Senior division. For other questions about the rules of the contest, please consult the March issue of the Tidings, or see your C. E. president to whom has been mailed a news letter, or mail your inquires to the above address.

Some Mennonite cleared this spot of land in Brazil and erected a dwelling place. Since the Mennonites first settled in Brazil the laws of the land have become much less conducive to a strong Mennonite way of life.

river fighting against the incoming tide develops a tremendous current at this point. This heavy current had dragged the boat over a mile, anchor and all, against a mud bank. Seeing what had happened, the officials had some cargo removed at once to make the ship buoyant. In order to lighten the load a barge was engaged into which freight from the bow hold of the ship was loaded for hours. By one o'clock in the afternoon a ridge of mud was seen sticking out of the water on the right side of the ship, an awful predicament for a vessel of this size to be in. While the tide was at its lowest the lower hull of the ship, usually below the water line, was seen lifted out some ten feet. Aside from unloading ballast no efforts to get out were made during these hours for fear the ship might list to one side. After four o'clock the tide began to come in. By seven it had risen some fifteen feet and remained long enough to try in every way to pull the ship off the mud bank by its own power. Every effort failed. Not even the anchor could be pulled out of the mud at a right angle. At high tide the next morning a freighter of the Chilean line came by. The men from our boat tried to draw a rope across to it by means of one of the life boats driven by a motor. But the current was too strong, they never got it over. The plan was to draw the rope over first, then by means of it have the freighter pull over a wire cable, fasten it, and pull the stern end of our vessel to one side in an effort to slide it off the mud bank.

By noon a tug from Guayaquil arrived with barges, and some one hundred laborers. These were engaged first to throw overboard the three hundred tons of bananas taken on. At the price they were selling in New Orleans when our boat left there, these would have sold for $118,000.00 Another thousand tons of other freight was loaded into barges. By that time, 9 p. m., the tide was in again, and a strenuous effort to move was repeated by working the propellor first backward, then forward. After an hour's attempt nothing but a slight list to the starboard side of the boat was the result. Unloading operations continued all that night until nine o'clock the next day. Again the boat tried to move without success. Additional barges were obtained from another steamship company. Unloading continued almost without interruption for four days. On the fifth day, beginning at about 9:30 a. m., another great effort was made, employing all the self-propelling vessels afloat around Puna. Five tugs were hitched to the post side of the ship, pulling forward with might and main. A freighter of the Chilean line on its way to Panama was stopped the day before in reserve for the concerted effort and hitched to the front of our boat, pulling sidewise to the right in an effort to tilt it loose. This was kept up for over an hour. Then finally all five tugs were harnessed in one row to the front of the ship, pulling forward at an angle of forty-five degrees to the right. Our own propellor was working until the waters about us churned and the machinery on deck rattled, but the boat would not budge an inch. It was now about noon, the tide receding, and all in vain.

Passengers were becoming restless and dissatisfied. The company agent had investigated means of sending them on some other way. But there are no railroad connections from this part of Ecuador, no other boat sailing south at this time, and a month's waiting lies ahead of those desiring to go by plane. The one hotel at Guayaquil, three hours up the river, could not accommodate the number on board. So more waiting was the only thing in prospect.

The next day, Sunday morning, at 8:30, all male passengers were ordered off the ship on life boats. These were rowed about a mile away from the ship towards the shore, and anchored. The few women were left on board. Having continually unloaded cargo up to Sunday morning and also taken off most of the passengers, and all the native workers engaged for unloading, another serious effort was made to slip from the mud bank at high tide. Only one freighter was used to help pull towards the right front. The whole Ecuadorian navy was out watching the operations. (Ecuador's navy consists of one gunboat with two guns). After about two hours' trial two blasts from the ship's whistle announced again the futility of the sixth day's efforts. The life boats made for the ship, getting there in time for lunch. Unloading operations were again resumed by four or five of the ship's eight cranes. A tanker from Callao, Peru, had arrived to take off 320 of the ship's 800 tons of fuel oil.

On Monday after we had been on the mudbank for a whole week and after more of the heavy articles of freight like cars, trucks, heavy steel plate, and part of the fuel oil had been removed in addition to what had ben taken off during the week, and after the tide had risen to its highest at 12:30 p. m., and after the Ecuadorian navy boat and a tug, both hitched to the front of the port side of our ship, and after our own propellor pushed for all it was worth, in the Lord's good Providence the boat began to move and got off the mudbank. It will take three or four days to get all the cargo back on the ship.

The passengers are all well aside from some minor ailments which might occur on either land or sea. I am feeling fine, have gained some weight, and am all tanned from the tropical sun.

No. 1 of Series on Church History
SETTLING IN AMERICA
Based on the Booklet, "Mennonites in America," by Dr. C. Henry Smith

I. Worship Service:

(1) Songs: "The Lord's My Shepherd," No. 579; "Holy Father Cheer Our Way," No. 254. (2) Reading of scripture passage, Ps. 90:3, leader's remarks and prayer. (3) Book review, "Rosanna of the Amish," (first half of book; the next half at the next meeting—this may be done in Amish costume) (4) Offering for Home Missions of the General Conference.

II. Leader's Introduction

Many of us have heard our parents tell of the trip from Europe across the ocean and of the joys and hardships connected with the early years of pioneer life in America. Practically all of our forefathers came to America where they expected to be able to live according to their faith, free and unmolested. For this privilege they were willing to leave what had been their homelands. They did not want to have their sons go to war and desired for themselves religious tolerance.

Simple and frugal in their tastes and habits, honest and sincere in their dealings with their neighbors, pious and filled with simple trust and faith in God, of sturdy character they settled in various parts of the United States and Canada. They built their meeting houses, or churches, their schoolhouses, their plain homes. They soon began to prosper. These early years brought much hard work, but also a strengthening and deepening of their Christian faith and life.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. "Early Settlements" 2. "Expansion of the Pennsylvania Settlements before 1800" 3. "In the World But Not of It." 4. "The Nineteenth Century" 5. "The Coming of the Mennonites from Russia."

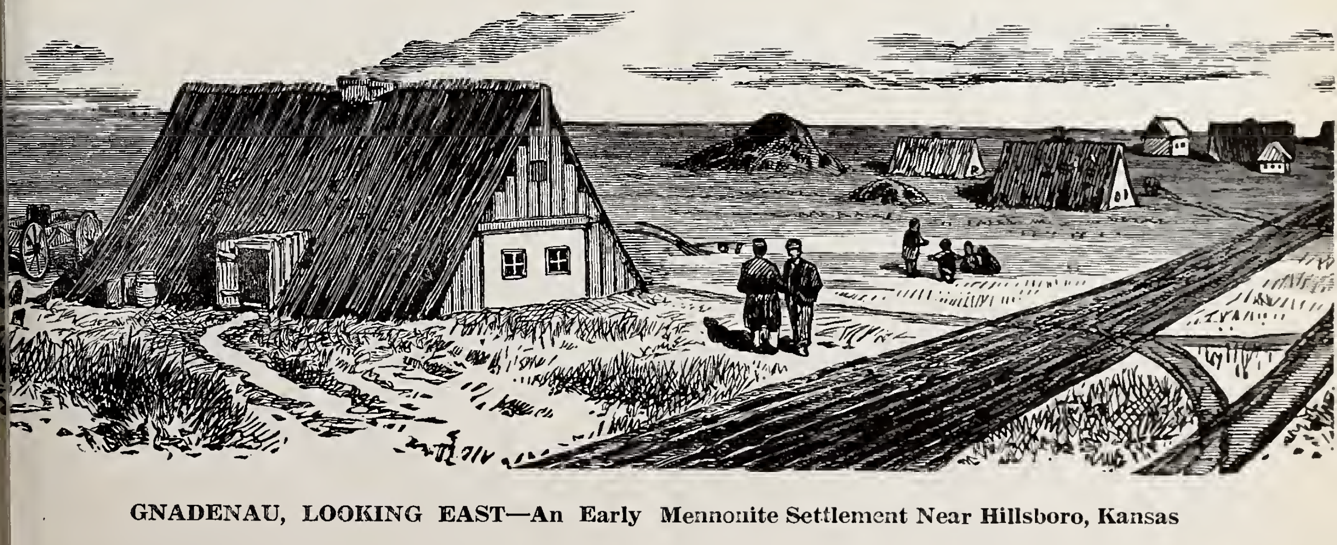
IV. For Discussion:

1. In what ways did the Mennonites who settled in Pennsylvania differ from those who settled in Nebraska and Kansas? 2. What did they have in common? 3. What petition, or declaration, regarding war did the Mennonites and Dunkers of Pennsylvania send to the provincial assembly at the breaking out of the Revolutionary War? 4. How does that agree with the Mennonite position today?

V. Facts for Study:

The Mennonites from southwestern Germany, who were the first to come to America, found a home in Pennsylvania; some of these moved to Ontario later, and others finally joined in a westward trek to Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, and other states. The immigration of the Swiss from central Europe came at a somewhat later date. The colony at Berne, Indiana, was begun in 1838. At about this time the Amish, coming from Alsace and Lorraine, settled in Waterloo County, Canada. Later Mennonites of this group made homes in New York, Ohio, and Illinois. A group of Dutch people came to Elkhart, Indiana, and later became part of the "Old Mennonites." Some Hessians also came to America.

Then the large immigration of Mennonites from Russia came in 1874-1880. They found homes in various parts of America, in Manitoba, Minnesota,



GNADENAU, LOOKING EAST—An Early Mennonite Settlement Near Hillsboro, Kansas

Dakota, Nebraska, Kansas. Some of these received aid is one way or another from those Mennonites who had come earlier. Another group came in 1923-30 to escape conditions in war-ridden Russia. These found a welcome in Canada.

Thus from various parts of Europe have come smaller and larger groups, bringing with them their customs and ways of their respective homelands and adapting them to the conditions as they found them here in the different parts of America. where they settled. They all have a common heritage of faith and belief and while there have been differences and all too many little quarrels between them, they have found strength and unity in common interests and work, such as education, missions, and relief.

VI. Food for Thought:

Pressure and oppression has served to strengthen the convictions and deepen the religious life of our fore-fathers.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

CHRIST, THE SUFFERING AND VICTORIOUS SAVIOUR

Suggestions: If at all possible, use the visual aids suggested, since more is learned through the eye than through the ear. If colored slides and projector are available use these; if not, use pictures, substitutes if need be, found in Sunday school picture rolls. (The whole program should proceed without announcement of numbers, except those in which the whole group participates)

Worship Center: Hofmann's "Head of Christ" or Sallman's "Son of Man."

Prelude—"When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" (M.H., 106)

Call to Worship:

"When I think of how He loved me,
While a sinner far astray,
Let my love find sweet expression,
Serving Him from day to day."
Let us praise, forever praise Him,
Let us glorify His name.

Worship in Song: "When I Survey the Wondrous Cross" by the whole group.

Worship in Scripture: Matthew 16:21-26.

Worship in Prayer

Leader: Let us follow Christ from suffering to triumph, from agony to victory, through the last week of His life.

(Picture changes to Copping's or Plockhorst's "Triumphal Entry.")

First Intermediate: On Sunday we find Jesus riding into the city of Jerusalem, offering Himself to the people as King. (Read Mark 11:1-11)

Music Group: A "Hosanna" chorus or "Ride On, Ride On in Majesty" (M. H., 101) verse 1.

(Picture changes to Kirchbach's or Hofmann's "Cleansing the Temple"

Second Intermediate: Monday. (Reads Mark 11:12-19)

Leader: Tuesday is a day of teaching, and Wednesday, a day of silence. But Thursday, the last day—

(Picture changes to Leonardo da Vinci's "Last Supper.")

Third Intermediate: (Reads Mark 14:12-26)

Leader: (Reads poem "Last Supper," beginning "At first they may have talked of little things," if this is available.)

Leader: After the Last Supper has been instituted, Christ and His disciples go to the Garden of Gethsemane where Christ spends an hour of agony.

(Pictures changes to Tayor-Green's "Vision of the Cross" or Hofmann's "Gethsemane.")

Music Group: "Alone" (Songs for Service, 137) or " 'Tis Midnight" (M.H., 103)

Leader: Judas invades the sanctity of this hour and betrays his Lord. Another of His disciples, Peter, fails Him later. Christ is taken before the high priest for trial and then before the Roman governor.

(Picture changes to Munkacsy, "Christ before Pilate.")

Fourth Intermediate: (Reads Matthew 27:11-17, 20-25)

Leader: (Reads words of song "What Will You Do with Jesus." If preferred, music group may sing it.)

(Picture changes to Mungacsy, "The Crucifixion.")

Leader: And so Christ is led forth to Golgatha to be crucified, the Innocent is placed in the midst of the guilty to bear the sins of the guilty.

Fifth Intermediate: (Reads Luke 23:33-47)

Music Group: "There is a Green Hill Far Away" (M.H., 104) or "Alas and Did My Saviour Bleed" (M.H., 109)

Leader: But thanks be to God, Christ did not remain in the grave, for He was victorious over sin and death. Death could not hold Him, but on the third day He rose again and lives forevermore. And He has promised, "Because I live, ye shall live also." What a glorious promise! But there is something He expects of us. What shall our answer be to the question He now asks of us?

(Picture changes to Holman Hunt's "Light of the World.")

Music Group: "I Gave My Life for Thee," verse 1 only (Gospel Hymns, 21)

Audience answers: "O Come to My Heart, Lord Jesus" (Chorus of "Thou Didst Leave Thy Throne." Use melody found in Gospel Hymns, 188. Both this and the preceding should be played in the Key of C as one number for unity of effect. The audience should be instructed before hand.)

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

SOUTH AMERICA, OUR SISTER CONTINENT

Ps. 33:8-12

A Good Neighbor Meeting

Jesus said, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations baptizing them in the Name of the Father and the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Matt. 28:19,20.

Airships have brought the continents very close together, in fact, within a few hours' travel. Right at our back door lies the great South American continent, where millions have never heard of Jesus.

If we cannot go ourselves, we can give and pray. The Lord can use our pennies, nickels and dimes, to help send others with the gospel message. Maybe Jesus will even call on you one day to go for Him, with his gospel. We know the Lord called Samuel when he was but a child, and he answered, "Speak Lord, for thy servant heareth."

Brazil

This is the largest country of South America, here is also the largest river in the world, the Amazon. Here are many people who are wanting instruction, someone to teach them the way of salvation. People are hungry for the word of God, and how happy our missionaries are to give it to them! It may be that right now some of our own missionaries are going to be sent to South America, since China and India are closed for the war period.

Homes and Schools

A missionary relates these experiences. Here is a small village with perhaps two churches. The people have been warned against the missionary. They spread a false story that everyone who is converted must go to war, and the people here have a horror of it.

The finest meeting he has is usually the children's meeting. At one of these meetings, when their own leader was away and there was nobody to spy on the children, the hall was packed with children and even grown ups, and they did sing and even shouted, they almost brought the roof down with such choruses as "Jesus is the Way," and "Seek ye the Lost."

Argentina

Many nationalities live here, Spaniards, Italians, Russians, Poles, Danes, Dutch, Syrians, Jews, and even Autralians and New Zealanders. What an opportunity lies before the missionary. When a convert accepts Christ, the others make it very hard to remain faithful, but when once he has found Christ he is willing to undergo severe persecution from his own family.

We should bring these people often to the throne of God. Surely we can have a great part in helping those whom the Lord has called to carry the message of life in Christ to our South American friends.

The Question Bee

1. Who is my neighbor? 2. Where is Latin America? 3. What is your church doing for the South American countries?

The Prayer List

Pray for the missions which are preaching Christ's pure gospel to the lost multitudes in many countries of South America. Pray that the United States may set a Christian example, that we may seek spiritual gain and not material gain only in our contacts with South America.

These are Lengua Indians in Paraguay. They too need to be told about Christ. Mennonites are doing missionary work among some of the Indians of South America.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Peace Section Handbook

Just off the press is a new handbook of information published by the Peace Section of the Mennonite Central Committee. The book contains a brief history of the background and purposes of the Peace Section and the scope of its activities in the past year. The problems of non-resistant people in local communities in relation to war financing, and in relation to the draft—all these are covered by the manual.

A considerable part of the handbook contains a detailed manual of instruction regarding classification and appeal. The handbook should be in the possession of all ministers and others who are responsible to give advice to young men facing draft problems. The price is five cents and can be obtained from the Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.

Government Favors Shifting to Farm Labor

The shortage of labor in agriculture and the prospects of reduced food production are the reasons for the present policy of the government to advocate shifting of labor to agriculture and placing such labor in a deferred class. Anyone of draft age now engaged in what is considered non-essential work by his local board can anticipate being drafted as soon as his order number is reached. Dependency is being eliminated as a basis for deferment.

It should be clear that for a person in non-essential labor to enter some phase of food production activity is quite agreeable to the government and is in fact considered a patriotic thing to do.

On Releases from Camp

With the opening of spring work on farms numerous inquiries are made as to the possibilities of securing releases for boys now in C.P.S. camps. There is no disposition on the part of the government to release boys for return to their farms on any basis different from that in practice heretofore. This means that unless a death or serious illness of a farm hand has occurred at home there is no valid reason for discharge. The people in home communities are urged not to press a case for discharge unless the above conditions prevail, Any procedure for release should begin by securing the consent of the local board to reclassify the campee.

HELP FOR DAILY VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL

The importance of the vacation Bible school to the churches is evidenced by the fact that every year an increased number of churches are offering their children a concentrated Bible course. In times like these we need to teach our children the fundamental Bible truths in a manner that they can understand them and learn to love and to know their Savior.

As in the past years so again this year the Education Committee of the Western District Conference is offering assistance to set up a program suitable to conditions and circumstances, to order material or help in finding teachers capable and trained to teach. The members of the Education Committee to whom you may write for information are:

Dr. A. J. Regier, Chairman, Bethel College, North Newton, Kansas; Prof. E. E. Kaufman, Treasurer, Buhler, Kansas; and Rev. H. N. Harder, Secretary, 320 West York, Enid, Oklahoma.

—Rev. John F. Schmidt and family from the C.P.S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, where Brother Schmidt is director, visited with relatives and friends at Hillsboro and Newton while on a short leave from camp. On April 3 and 4 Rev. Schmidt participated in a regional meeting of C.P.S. directors and campees which was held in North Newton. There were representatives from the Colorado, Nebraska, Dakota, and Arkansas camps. Brother Schmidt reports that a director is responsible for very many records and that these are continually becoming even more extensive. The departure of many men from detached service also adds much to the responsibility of the director.

They will make their home on the Bethel College campus where Brother Von Riesen is continuing his studies.

—The Upland Mennonite Church, Upland, California, was host to a Mennonite Sunday school and Christian Endeavor Convention on April 2, 3, and 4. The theme was, "Christ for the Crisis."

—Relatives of Marie J. Regier, missionary in China, recently recieved a Christmas card dated November 3, 1942, on which was written: "Merry Christmas. We are happy but may peace soon come. May true Christmas joy be yours. Sincerely, Marie J. Regier, In herzlicher Liebe, Marie." This card was received March 23 and is the latest that has been heard from Sister Regier.

—The Junior Messenger subscription list is growing rapidly. At least twenty Sunday schools have ordered it as their Sunday school paper since the beginning of this year. The fact that is has become a weekly, perhaps, helps to explain this wholesome growth.

—Brother Lester Hostetler of the Bethel College Mennonite Church reports that he has twenty catechetical students and that these students came into his class in a body from the previous classes they had been in.

—Freeman Junior College, Freeman, South Dakota: In the March issue of the bulletin of this school there is an article, "How to Carry on in Wartime" by J. D. Unruh, president of the school. In the first place, the school intends to continue its emphasis upon an education which strengthens Christian faith and character and builds our peace testimony. All in the school are to give service to the community, nation, and world as conscience directs. It intends to promote giving to relief and reconstruction, the support of C.P.S. and the sale of Civilian bonds. Secondly, it expects a decrease in enrollment, but it hopes to take off the sharp edge of it by securing the attendance of Mennonite students who heretofore have not been attending their own church school. Third, it hopes to retain nine of the eleven teachers and present all necessary courses for the training of teachers, teaching being considered a vital profession. Fourth, it hopes to secure increased support from the churches by laying before them the facts of the situation. The results of the debt reduction campaign launched last fall show that $16,257.67 was donated and pledged. The Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, is responsible for $7,085.35 of this amount, having given or pledged to the amount of $14.03 per church member.

—Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dak.: Willard K. Claassen, our pastor, conducted extended meetings for the First Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, recently. While there he spoke to surrounding community churches in the interest of Christian education and peace. With thirty young men drafted from our church, the choir feels the loss especially. The men's chorus has therefore joined the mixed choir, making it a strong and well-balanced organization. Farmers are anxious to work in the fields (written March 23). February was a warm month, but March came in like a lion and stayed thus for three weeks. A colored choir from the Pilgrims Baptist Church of Sioux Falls rendered a musical program to our church on March 14. Our membership now is 501.

—E. P. Graber, Corr.

—Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minnesota: Our church membership increased by two when Brother and Sister Abe Fast became members. (Year Book membership is given as forty-six.) A catechism class has been begun.

—Jake Quiring, Corr.

—The Walton Mennonite Church, Walton, Kansas, recently enjoyed a program of songs and short talks by the Student Volunteer Organization of Bethel College. In referring to the coming Bethel College Fellowship drive the pastor mentions the fact that those who will give $10 or more will be given a complimentary Booster Concert ticket to see and hear the "Wings Over Jordan" Choral Ensemble and that one extra friend will be admitted to this concert for $1.

—The A. E. Kreiders and the "Uncle Davey" Richerts are each the new grandparents of a grandson. The children of both families were married on successive days in the same month, and now the grandsons were born in the same order.

—Rev. A. M. Fretz, Elder of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Perkasie, Pa., suffered a stroke and is now confined to his bed. His left side is affected. His youngest daughter, Agnes, came to be with her father and to assist her stepmother, the faithful companion of Rev. Fretz, who also is not in the best of health. The Elder is much missed by the congregation which he has served for many years.

—E. E. Landis, Corr.

—Brother H. N. Harder writes from Enid, Okla., "It is now certain that we will relinquish our pastorate of the Grace Mennonite Church sometime in May to become pastor of the First Mennonite Church at Geary, Oklahoma. By then we will have served here nearly eight years under the auspices of the Home Mission Committee of the Western District Conference."

—Rev. J. J. Balzer, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, has not been able to leave his house for quite a while due to illness.

—Bethel College: Under the leadership of Dr. A. Warkentin, a group of ministerial students has organized its work for the spring quarter. The group includes Ronald Von Riesen, Edwin Stucky, Arnold Graber, Orlando Goering, Henry Goosen, Paul Barkman, Garman Wedel, Jacob Friesen, Verney Unruh, Ben Rahn, Waldo Kaufman, and John Graber. The state Peace Oratorical Contest will be held on the campus on April 12. The subject is "Conditions Necessary for Peace in the Post-War World."

—Rev. J. H. Janzen's low-German play "Utwaundre" will be given in the Tabor College Auditorium, Hillsboro, Kansas, on April 8. The purpose of the play is to give a true-to-life picture of conditions and customs of the Mennonites which came to Canada from South Russia in the years 1922-27. The scenes portrayed are based on actual experiences of the Mennonites of which the author was an eye-witness.

—Rev. H. J. Dyck, Elbing, Kansas, writes that he and Sister Dyck just returned from Fredonia, Kansas. Brother Dyck served the Mennonite group there from March 21-23.

—Bluffton College: The Booster Banquet was held April 2 with Lt. Governor Paul Herbert as speaker. The farm house on the Bluffton College (Thutt) farm, near Bluffton, has been reconditioned. The college also has some farms near Ashland, Ohio. Bluffton College students are cutting down on the number of organizations and separate meetings on the campus. The decrease in enrollment is, perhaps, the main reason for this.

—Pretty Prairie Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Tschetter is conducting meetings for a week at Turpin, Oklahoma. —Corr.

—Colorado Springs C.P.S. Camp: Irvin Richert, whose home is in Los Angeles, California, and who has served in the camp office as secretary to the director, is to be transferred to the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa. Pete Ens, infirmary attendent, recently recieved four days of instruction at the Bethel Clinic, Newton, Kan. Dr. Herbert Schmidt, who had recently visited the camp, gave the instructions. "The boys are thankful that they can do their business in a city like Colorado Springs. They are met in a friendly and considerate way at every place, and their business dealings are very happy . . . yes, indeed, we are happy that this camp is located near Colorado Springs." "Members of the agriculture class have recently enjoyed the presentation of a number of interesting films. Namely: Democracy in Action in Puerto Rico; The Forest Ranger; and Trees and Men." The films were obtained from the University of Colorado for a very small fee.

—The Bible School and Seminary Board met at Chicago on March 22. Members of this board are: Lester Hostetler, A. S. Rosenberger, Ed. G. Kaufman, E. W. Baumgartner, J. N. Smucker, and C. E. Krehbiel.

—Oak Leaves From Home is the name of the four page, mimeographed paper put out by the San Marcus Mennonite Church, Paso Robles, Calif., for those who have gone from home. It gives newsy little items as to who the Sunday school teachers are, etc. It also gives short resumes of the messages given not long ago by Brother Homer Leisy in a series of meetings.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Upland, Calif.: "Word has been received of the marriage of Henry Buller to a Mennonite girl by the name of Beatrice Rosenthal who was secretary of the relief work in France. This marriage occurred some time last fall. Mr. and Mrs. Buller and Miss Lois Gunden are at the present time interned in Baden Baden, Germany . . . they are well and are receiving good treatment. Mail and small food packages may now be sent to them."

—Bulletin, Swamp Mennonite Charge, Quakertown, Pa.: Bluffton College mite boxes are used in this charge. The pastor reports in the bulletin that the Commission on Christian Social Action of the Evangelical and Reformed Church asks their churches and members to support their men in C.P.S. (They had eighteen on February 15), "who receive no pay for their work. They even pay for their Subsistence ($35 per month) and furnish their own clothes." The Reformed Church is asked to contribute $500 per month to "discharge" their "brotherly obligation" to the men in the C.P.S. camps. On March 11 thirty men from this charge were in service, two of them in C.P.S. camps.

—Bulletin, Deep Run Mennonite Church: The pastor refers his members to the book, "Abundant Living" by E. Stanley Jones and informs them that is can be ordered from the Mennonite Book Concern, Berne, Indiana. (Might more pastors remind their people of this book supply house.) The Senior C. E. decided to sponsor a project of raising some extra poultry, hogs, vegetables, etc., for the purpose of giving to relief. The church council has decided to have two special offerings for Bluffton College, with the first one on April 11.

—Bulletin, Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon: "Rev. Baumgartner, the church treasurer, states that there is an increase in the regular use of the church envelopes this year. This is to be commended. The weekly envelope helps us to give systematically for the Lord's work. There are two compartments in the newer envelopes, the one for the general church treasury and the other for specified gifts such as War Relief, C.P.S. Camps, Missions, etc."

—"Camp correspondence is of greater importance than many churches and pastors realize. Many of our young men taken from home and church contacts naturally become lonely. Has your church a definite plan through which letters from a wide circle of friends come to them regularly? A number of churches prepare lists of young men regularly, cut them apart and hand them to members of men's classes, young people's groups, etc." —Walter H. Dyck, Corresponding Secretary of the Western District Peace Committee, in a letter to all pastors.

MENNONITE PUBLICATION OFFICE,

—Eden Chronicles, Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The C.E. society has undertaken for this year to sing regularly for the sick and aged who find themselves confined to their homes. Members are asked to invite neighbors to the services. Rehearsals are again in progress for the rendition of Handel's "Messiah" during the Easter season. Approximately eighty-five members rehearse. Benj. Zerger conducts and Fern Goering is in charge of the orchestra. Ruth Wedel from this congregation is the camp nurse at the C.P.S. camp at Terry, Montana. Over two hundred boys and girls are enrolled in the Junior Department of the Sunday school.

—Data on gifts from Mennonites to Bethel College during the past year shows that the Hoffnungsfeld Church, near Moundridge, had the highest average gift per church member. The amount was $11.32. The Eden Church, near Moundridge, contributed $6,309.

—The Bethel Deaconess Hospital conducts a worship service every other Sunday morning in the corriders of the hospital for the benefit of the patients and the family of sisters, student nurses, and house-hold helpers. From January 1 to April 1 the following ministers brought helpful messages from God's word to this group of worshippers: Rev. James Reyburn, Rev. H. T. Unruh, Rev Gerhard Friesen, Rev. W. F. Unruh, Rev. A. J. Dirks, Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, and Rev. Adolph Friesen. A men's quartet and a ladies' trio from the First Mennonite Church of Newton, and a ladies' trio composed of students from Bethel College have added much spiritual refreshing to these services. The quiet moments in the presence of God help to make the Sabbath a day of inner "rest and gladness" to all who can attend.

—In a list of suggestions for an enjoyable and successful every-member-visit in the interests of Christian education at Bethel College is the following interesting statement concerning the workers:

"The most effective workers are those who are:

1. Consecrated Christians concerned about God's work and their neighbor's welfare
2. Convinced about the importance of Christian education
3. Not 100 per cent involved in the business of making a living
4. Capable of seeing how things might be if we would seek first the Kingdom of God
5. Patient with petty-minded friends
6. Not apologetic in requesting gifts from Christians for Christian education
6. Not afraid of unjust criticism
7. Genuinely interested in others
8. Willing to work and to pray
9. Able to direct the conversation to the four vital issues:
   (a) The needs of Bethel College
   (b) A cash gift, in size and proportion to the donor's interest, ability and faith.
   (c) Prospective students
   (d) Criticisms of and prayers for Bethel College."

The Mennonite

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOLUME LVIII NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, APRIL 13, 1943 NUMBER 15

Entered at the post office at North Newton, Kansas, as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103. Act of October 3, 1917. Authorized January 22, 1919.

A Triumphal Entry Today

It was in 1943 that Jesus came triumphantly into Anyone Town. How the streets did ring with loud hosannas to the King. Not one radio in five thousand was any longer tuned in to jazz or swing music. Somehow all such music seemed out of harmony with the thoughts and feelings that came into one's heart when Christ came in. The music dealers discarded all popular, secular music and stocked up heavily on the great hymns of the Christian Church and such other pieces as make a beautiful mosaic in the floor of God's great plan. They did all of this because of conviction and not because they no longer could make any profit on their former line.

Storekeepers refused to sell you something when they felt that it would not meet your needs. No longer did one have to beware of shoddy merchandise or of getting the wrong change. Everyone had a burning desire in his heart to be his brother's keeper and to love his neighbor as himself. The attainment of this goal was worth a great deal more than the accumulation of any huge bank deposit. In fact, all of the banks lost in importance because of the new emphasis upon treasures in heaven.

The theater? Oh, it was still a great gathering place. You see it had been made into a prayer headquarters. After Christ came into Anyone Town very many of the citizens felt constrained to go into all the world and to win its people for Christ with the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God. So daily many of the people turned from main street into this place of prayer and prayed for those fighting on the Christian front all over the world. And oh, what victories those Christian soldiers did win over yellow, black, brown, red, and white! Instead of killing their bodies, they were successful in having the souls of these people made alive through Jesus Christ. And oh, what a just and durable peace there was among all these different nationalities after they had become one in Christ! As Christian soldiers expended themselves on fronts all over the world, those on the home front prayed, worked, and gave. Somehow they had much more to give for missions than formerly. The elimination of wasteful habits and the adoption of a simple way of life enabled them to give much more generously than formerly. Taxes were also lower, for no police force was needed and neither any city jail. Believe it, all the policemen became teachers in the grade schools where they did their bit to teach the children to love the Lord Jesus Christ. They knew that that would take care of all the usual problems that the police usually have to deal with.

By the way, all the notary public officials stopped asking people to swear. It wasn't necessary, for the simple yea and nay of everyone was sufficient to keep any agreement from being broken and any false statement from being willfully made. Gossip no longer existed. People were enraptured with all the good they discovered in everyone else. Most of the advertising signs were very greatly changed.

Church attendance? Why it took on a new meaning. Everyone physically able went to the services. Furthermore, everyone heard in order to do. Monday, Tuesday and the rest of the week one could see one concrete illustration after another of some part of God's Word that the minister had emphasized. And oh, what spiritual growth took place in the lives of the people as they applied the light they had. It was amazing how God gave them greater light. People became afraid of doing their own will instead of God's will which was so very satisfying to them.

Did it become a dull town? Oh no! The people became filled with a deep, joyous peace such as the people of the world just don't know anything about. They had someone to live for. They came to know just what Paul meant he said, "For me to live is Christ." These people were busy with things that really counted and satisfied. They really were integrated personalities, for all parts of their living really fitted together to make a beautiful Christlike whole. How the streets did ring with hosannas to their king!

It was during the Lenten season of 1943 that some Christian citizen dealt with the thoughts just read. He thought of how Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem could have turned out. He thought of how glorious it would be if Christ should enter really triumphant into some city of America on this

Palm Sunday. Jerusalem once—it might have been. Anyone Town today—it can be. But before it will ever be there will have to be those who will go forth and tell of the real Christ and His real Kingdom that He came to establish in the hearts of men and women now living. —rw.

Faith . . . Living Still?

(Below is given the main body of a letter sent out by the Northern District Peace Committee and signed by E. J. Waltner in its behalf.)

" 'Faith of our fathers living still In spite of dungeon fire and sword; Oh how our hearts beat high with joy, Whenever we hear that glorious word. Faith of our fathers! Holy faith. We will be true to thee till death.' These are the words of the old, familiar hymn we sometimes sing in our services. I am just wondering how true to the faith of our fathers we still are. The fathers of the Northern District came to South Dakota, Minnesota, and Nebraska, when Prussian militarism decreed that our fathers must serve in the army or leave the country. They were true to the faith of their fathers and left the country.

"In South Dakota, the largest group settled in the vicinity of Freeman and Marion. I have before me the Marion Record, a weekly paper published at Marion. In this paper is a list of the 'Boys in Service' from the Marion vicinity. As I look through this list I find many familiar names. Names that have been common in Mennonite history for a long time. There is a total of sixty-four names in this list, thirty of these are names of Mennonite parentage. Almost fifty per cent. It is only reasonable that we ask, why are these boys in the army when they have had the privilege to do Civilian Public Service work instead. The theme song on the Hour of Charm of the General Electric program is 'We must be vigilant, we must be vigilant.' Can it be that the Mennonites have been too 'complacent' since coming to America and have forgotten to be vigilant? Have the principles of our faith been emphasized as much as they should have been?

"When we ask why these boys have chosen the army rather than Civilian Public Service work we get many different answers. The following are some of the answers we get: 'The boys who go as conscientious objectors are too poor examples of what a conscientious objector should be.' 'My boy could not afford it; it costs too much to buy his clothing.' 'What would my neighbors say?' 'How much pay do they get in Civilian Public Service?' 'Will I get my job back when I return from Public Service Work?' 'If the church will have to maintain these camps financially, the boys will starve.' Let everyone decide for himself if such reasons are worthy. So far the church has been able to maintain these camps, and we have had no reports of anyone starving.

"We have about 500 boys from our conference in camps now. At $25.00 per boy per month we need an average of $12,500.00 per month. We almost made it for January. The quota for the next quarter—March, April, May—remains the same. Fifty cents per member per month.

"The boys in camps, who are working without pay, are setting a good example. From Sunday school collections and by missing meals they have contributed over $1,100.00 in two months for relief."

The Mennonite Quarterly Review

A publication that deserves to be widely known and supported by Mennonite ministers and leaders is The Mennonite Quarterly Review. It is a quarterly journal devoted to publication of material dealing with the history and life of the Anabaptist-Mennonite groups.

Its first issue appeared in January, 1927. Since that time it has established a wide reputation as one of the most scholarly magazines in church history, and numerous colleges, universities, and seminaries receive it and have complete files in their libraries.

The current issue, January, 1943, has an article on "Peace and War in the Old Testament," by Dr. G. F. Hershberger, and a review by the same writer of Boetner's new book upholding war, which is entitled The Christian Attitude Towards War. Those of us who have been disturbed by the bitter attacks of certain Fundamentalists upon the doctrine of nonresistance will profit by reading these two articles.

Another scholarly article of twenty-four pages in the same issue discusses "The Origin of Mennonite State Service in Russia, 1870-1880." This contribution is made by Jacob Suderman, a Mennonite born in Russia and a professor of German. A third article gives a brief biography of Leupold Scharnschlager, a Swiss Anabaptist elder and hymn writer of the sixteenth century.

Not only are its articles of wide interest to all Mennonite groups but the Quarterly's board of editors come from various Mennonite backgrounds. The General Conference Mennonites are represented on the board of editors by Dr. C. Henry Smith of Bluffton College and Dr. A Warkentin of Bethel College. Dr. Cornelius Krahn of Tabor College represents the Mennonite Brethren. Dr. H. S. Bender of Goshen College is the editor-in-chief. There are ten editors on the board, nine of whom hold the doctor's degree. All ten have had wide experience in research and writing.

The subscription price of The Mennonite Quarterly Review is $2.00 per year. Subscriptions should be sent to Dr. John C. Wenger, Circulation Manager, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana.

When Doctors Leave

Since I failed to send in a second quarterly report I shall go back a little. This hot season was a very unusually hot and dry season. Many plants and even trees dried up. The water in the wells was very low. This seemingly resulted in a severe epidemic of cholera. In some villages nearby as many as eight to ten people died every day. We had a very sad case in the hospital where both parents died of cholera, leaving five little children as orphans. But in our area the Christians were protected, for which we praise the Lord.

Dr. Harvey Bauman operating in the hospital at Champa, C. P., India. The Baumans are now on furlough in the United States. Note the native attendants. Sister Pauls was, undoubtedly, operated on in this very room.

During May I took two weeks of vacation in Pendra Road. But due to Drs. Baumans leaving it was cut short. Considerable changes have had to take place in the hospital since Drs. Baumans have left. Our lady doctor—Dr. John—resigned before the doctors left. Then we got Dr. Rewani for three months. But since she did not prove satisfactory we could not keep her. This left us without a doctor. Dr. Dester left his hospital in Jagdishpur and has helped us out for quite some time. I have appreciated this very much. After much prayer a lady doctor promised to help us out until we could get another doctor. It was a difficult task, but before the conference was over we had an application from Dr. Matthie. After an interview we accepted him, and we hope and pray that he will be a real help and blessing in the hospital. He was to start his work in October. These changes have been hard on the workers, and it was not easy for those in charge, but God's grace was sufficient.

When I thought that I had plenty to do at the hospital and to get ready for conference then I had to submit to a major operation. I had a small tumor on my breast which the doctors thought was very suspicious for cancer. So they advised a complete breast amputation. It was rather strange to get the operating room things and the patient room ready for my own operation, but such was the case. A missionary lady doctor from Bilaspur, Dr. Nichoson, and Dr. Dester did the operating and an Indian lady doctor from Champa village gave the ether. Mrs. Jantzen came in twenty-five miles on an elephant to take care of me. The Lord heard the many prayers that went up to His throne in my behalf and all went along well. I praise the Lord for what He has done for me, and may it please Him to restore me back to full health again.

At present I am taking a vacation in Darjeeling which is a real beauty spot. We are enjoying the lovely views of the snow covered mountain peaks. We will probably stay till the

Dressing up for Easter

By Arnold J. Regier

A lady was riding in a bus when she confided in a fellow-passenger next to her that she bought a new pair of work shoes. Suddenly she came to the realization that she had used her number seventeen ration stamp and bemoaned the fact that she would not be able to buy another pair for her new Easter outfit. The expression on her face was interesting to behold. There, no doubt, will be others who will find themselves in a similar situation this year.

Many of our churches in this country will again be filled to overflowing on Easter Sunday morning. It is a disgrace that to so many the Great Day of the Resurrection of our Lord and Saviour is merely an occasion for a dress parade. Shall we stop for a few minutes to think through the significance of dressing up for Easter.

Dressing Up for Special Occasions

It is only natural that we dress specially for certain occasions. In 1 Chronicles we read how that when the Ark of the Covenent was brought back to Jerussalem there was much rejoicing and David, we read, "was clothed with a robe of fine linen." Such outward attire is expressive of an inner experience. The occasion for which David and the Children of Israel had looked forward to for such a long time had finally been realized and as such warranted a new robe and all the finery which went with the celebration.

The Sunday of April 25, 1943, should be of greater significance to the Christian World than the festive day of David's time. Though the world is filled with terror and suffering it will still be a day of rejoicing. On that day we shall again commemorate the greatest victory that has ever been won in this world, namely, the victory over sin and death. Don't you think it should call for a new hat, a new dress, a new suit, or maybe even a new pair of shoes?

Clothed in Righteousness

As we enter the Easter season and are again reminded of God's Grace as manifested in the sacrificial death, burial, and resurrection of His Son; we are made aware of an inner adorning. Even the prophet of old was permitted to vision it:

> "I will greatly rejoice in the Lord. . .for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness." Isa. 61:10

True righteousness is not manifested only in outward appearances but also by being adorned by an inner spiritual raiment.

We recognize the fact that man is sinful by nature, and though he endeavours to cover this nature it is so often exposed before the sight of God and to his fellowmen. Our own righteousness is as filthy rags. Thus God's provisional covering in the blood of Jesus Christ should mean a great deal to us. It is through His infinite mercy and love that He has provided it for us for our own adornment as we accept it by faith.

Truly it is a beautiful sight to witness all the colorful array of hats and new clothes that fill a church on Easter Sunday morning. But as the minister of God stands in the pulpit have you ever stopped to notice the garb of his countenance? Does he also have a new robe? No, I'm not speaking of a new suit, but a robe of righteousness granted to him by God; or does he have to wear the filthy garments of unrighteousness, bearing the sins of His people even as Joshua the High Preist did in Zechariah's great vision? (Zechariah 3:4) We are aware of the many temptations that are besetting us this day. The hoarding of money, aloofness toward our neighbors, desecration of the Sabbath, hatred toward our enemies, or many other things which so often desecrate the sancity of the Church of Jesus Christ. Let us search our hearts and pray that God would throw off these filthy rags so that we might be clothed in His righteousness as we enter the Easter season.

Dressing for Easter

It is here that we might also bring to bear the simplicity of dress that has been handed down to us by our forefathers. Those who have read the book, Rosanna of the Amish, have learned anew to appreciate the simpler mode of life. The writer feels that in this day when there is so much suffering and heartache about us that extravagance is out of place. Let it not be said of our churches as in some of the more aristocratic parishes that on Easter Sunday everybody must have a new outfit, but rather let it be said of us as we greet the Risen Lord on that morning that we are clothed in His new garment of salvation which we accept by a simple faith through His Grace.

end of October since the doctors have ordered me to take a three months vacation.

Our conference devotional meetings led by Rev. Duerksen were a great blessing and inspiration to me.

Wishing you all a Merry Christmas and God's richest blessings in the year to come.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

IN NORTHERN SASKATCHEWAN

The mission fields and churches allotted to me in the northwestern Saskatchewan have been visited twice in the past year. At these times I preached, conducted Bible studies, performed Baptismal services and commemorated the Lord's Supper. In addition, families were visited, and as we had opportunity we did personal work with many about their soul's salvation. Although no extraordinary things happened, one could notice a growth and real hunger for God's Word. Eight souls found peace in Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour. After these were instructed they were baptized.

Last December my visit to Timberlost was a real joy to me. This is a four-year-old settlement. Eleven Mennonite families live here with fifty children. Ten of these families come from the "Old Colonier" group. They had been separated for some time from their own home churches, having lived at different places in Northern Saskatchewan. At this last visit I noticed a definite hunger and thirst for salvation. This hunger was kindled by several efforts; namely, Summer Bible School for three years, led by teachers from the Rosthern Bible School, for three or four weeks. In these years I made six visits to these families. This last time I felt impelled by the Lord to speak very plainly about their relationship with God. I asked how many wanted special Bible teaching on this subject? To my great delight, almost every young person arose. Praise the Lord for His help through the Holy Spirit.

The cut below shows the Bible School at Timberlost. The young woman in black, marked with an x, is the teacher. The building is made of slabs, and the space between the inside and outside walls was filled with saw dust. (How many children in the U.S.A. would like this kind of a school house?) The children carry in wood for heating from the near-by woods.

May the Lord bless you as members of the Home Mission Board and all mission friends. May the Lord give me more humility and a greater desire to be faithful in His Service,

Your co-worker,
Johannes Regier

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Chicago, Illinois

Our Program for the Easter Season

Another Easter season is here, bringing to mind the great victory that was achieved through our Lord Jesus Christ when the stone was rolled away from the tomb and he arose triumphant over the powers of sin and death. In every Christian heart it should be a time of gladness and rejoicing. The song of Easter is a song of victory proclaiming the wonderful truth of our salvation and peace with God.

Five Boys Want to Follow Christ

Our special services in this Easter season will begin on Palm Sunday. At the present time we are nearly through with the course of catechism instruction which was started in November. The five boys that are attending the class have expressed a sincere desire to follow the Lord Jesus Christ and wish to be baptized. The baptismal service will be on Palm Sunday morning.

Easter Pageant

Another important item in our Easter program is the Easter pageant which is being prepared by the young people. We have about twenty active members in our young people's organization, and they enjoy preparing and giving the Easter message in story and song. "The Voice in the Garden" is the title of the pageant they have chosen for this year.

Communion for Students

During this season special effort is to be put forth to reach our Mennonite students in the city. There are nearly a hundred young men and women of our faith attending school and working here. A special communion service is being planned to bring them together for an hour of worship and fellowship sometime during the Easter season. Karl Baehr, president of the Mennonite Fellowship, and Rev. John Neufeld are helping to arrange the program for this service.

Good Friday To Be Observed

In most of our Mennonite communities Good Friday has always been set apart as a day of worship and prayer. In the city this day has not always been observed as a day of worship by the great majority of people. However there is an increasing emphasis to make it a day of worship and many churches do have services on Good Friday. We are planning our service for the evening so that those working will be free to attend. Good Friday is an important date in our church calendar and should not be neglected or taken lightly.

Reaching The Unsaved

In the great city of Chicago we like to think of Easter not as only another season in which the Christian's faith may be renewed and strengthened, but as an opportunity to reach people who do not know the Lord. We try to arrange our Easter program so that it will interest and attract people who are not Christian and who have no fellowship with the Church. One of the questions we must consider is how to bring others into the fold. Going to Sunday School and Church is not a "family" affair like it is in most of our Mennonite communities. It is the exception rather than the rule to see father and mother and all of the children coming to Sunday school and church. In many cases just one parent comes, or the parents send the children. However, they do take an interest when there is a special program and the children have a part in it. So the Sunday school hour on Easter morning is given over to a special program by the children. Many of the parents do come to this program and remain through the church service. We always hope and pray that the seed that is sown will find a receptive heart and that some of these people will continue to worship with us. —E. A. Albrecht

CORRECTION

In a letter sent to ministers and peace treasurers on March 1 by the Western District Peace Committee it was stated that "the cost to date" of C.P.S. work "has been about $6.75 per member." This was not correct. This is the amount due as of April 1, 1943. Hence, the amounts contributed by individual members of congregations was higher than indicated in this letter. To state it again, each member's share in the cost of C.P.S., as of April 1 is $6.75.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

RURAL STUDY GROUPS

One of the most pleasant experiences I have recently had was to be invited to the meeting of a rural women's study group in the Gnadenburg community east of Newton, Kansas. About twenty rural women had gathered for their regular monthly meeting in the spacious and comfortable farm home of one of the members. The day was beautiful, and the setting was perfect for the purpose for which these women had gathered.

The Purpose

It is the custom of this group to meet regularly to study problems that are of interest to them. Most frequently the discussions center around religious subjects and especially portions of the Bible. At other times guests are invited to discuss economic and social problems that confront the Christian in this day and age. To be certain that all members study and work the group has adopted a small Bible work book which requires searching through portions of the Scriptures for information and answers to practical questions. At this particular time the women are studying the Book of Acts.

The Significance

The demonstration of this vigorous group of Christian women is a healthy counteraction to the all-too-common notion that rural women have no time for mid-week study groups and fellowship meetings. Many people think that such things may be all right for town and city folks who have more time, at least so country people think. Rural women need an occasional period of release from their routine duties—a period of relaxation—a change of activity just as much as do all others in society. Such a study group offers a splendid opportunity for the industrious housewife to get away from household duties and nourish her mind and soul through wholesome fellowship and through useful and intelligent study. The president of this group remarked that a regularly planned program and a fine spirit was a splendid preventive for idle gossip. How much more constructive is such a gathering than the thousands of women's groups throughout America who gather weekly and monthly to play bridge, drink cocktails, and "lay each other low" through malicious prattle and idle chatter. There are undoubtedly other rural groups of a similar nature. There should be many more. Men's groups or even family or neighborhood groups would similarily profit by such meetings.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Verney Unruh, North Newton, Kansas

April 18—Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord. Mark 11: 9b.

Today is Palm Sunday, the beginning of Passion Week. It marks the triumphal entry of Christ into Jerusalem a few days before his death. He did not enter the city secretly, afraid to show his face openly. He rode in triumphantly on a young ass with crowds shouting. Even the thoughts of the approaching suffering did not discourage him.

The people welcomed him. Blessed is he that cometh. The long promised, long expected Messiah had finally come. Not all the people hailed him as Lord and King. It was only those who still remained faithful to Him and those who were won back by this triumphant entry. The others despised and rejected Him and soon hanged Him on the Cross.

What does the triumphant entry mean to us as Christians? First, Jesus Christ comes in the name of the Lord. He was sent by God as a mediator; Him hath God the Father sealed. Secondly, the coming of Christ in the name of the Lord is worthy of all acceptance. We should all say, Blessed is he that cometh. His coming is worthy of all the praise, honor, and glory we can give him, Blessed is he, for it is through him that we are blessed.

April 19—It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves. Matt. 21: 13b.

When Christ came into Jerusalem the first place to which he went was to the temple. Here he found the people were buying and selling, and changing money. He cast them out saying, It is written, My house shall be called a house of prayer. That justified his actions. The temple was intended to be used as a house of prayer. (Ias. 56:7), but they had made it a den of robbers. Buying and selling in the temple courts was lawful, had it been done honestly. They pretended to buy and sell for spiritual purposes. They were misusing God's Holy Temple to attain worldly gains. Of this Paul says, From such practise withdraw thyself. (I Tim. 6:5)

APRIL 20—Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind, and with all thy strength: This is the first commandment.

Tuesday is known as the day of conflicts with the authorities. In every possible way the scribes tried to corner Jesus. One of their questions was, which is the first commandment of all? The verse for today was his answer.

When we love God with all our hearts love controls our souls completely. The desires to fulfill duties become spontaneous; they are an outgrowth of our love towards God. When love does not control our lives, nothing we do is well done, done aright, or acceptably. Loving God with all our hearts arms us against those things which are not pleasing to Him. It will engage us to do everything by which He may be honored and with which He will be pleased.

April 21—Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.

This is the second commandment. It is an outgrowth of the first. We love God because he is divine and infinitely better than we are. We love him because he first loved us. This love for God then manifests itself in love for our neighbor. He is of the same nature as we are; our hearts are alike; our bodies are alike; we live in the same Christian society. Hath not God created us? (Mal. 2:10) Has not one Christ redeemed us? All the more reason there is for loving him.

APRIL 22—And they seized him, and led him away —But Peter followed afar off. And when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the court—Peter sat in the midst of them. (Luke 22:54-55) They said therefore unto him, Art thou also one of his disciples? He denied and said, I am not. John 18:25b.

We have in these few lines the story of Peter's denial of His Lord. In the upper room he pledged supreme loyalty to Christ, but a few hours later he denied and cursed his Lord.

The first step toward this downfall was his following afar off. He wanted to remain loyal to Christ but he was afraid of persecution and prison—so he followed afar off. He could not decide which side to take. This led to compromise. When he arrived at the house of Caiphas he sat with the officers and warmed himself. Inside Jesus was on trial, but he was not greatly troubled. Here by the fire there was no danger. He was with people who were neither for nor against Christ. He was on safe, middle ground. It was dangerous ground, though, for it led to the denial of his Lord.

Let us take Peter's history here as an example. If we are following afar off or compromising, let this example help us to make up our minds to remain loyal to Christ. If we do not, it will lead us to a denial of Christ just as it did Peter.

APRIL 23—It is finished. John 19:30b.

With these words Jesus bowed his head and gave the ghost. His work here on earth was finished. When he had entered upon his suffering he had said, Father thy will be done. Now he could say with joy, it is finished.

It is finished. The work of man's redemption is finished. His salvation is now completed. Now all we have to do in order to obtain salvation is believe on the Lord Jesus Christ. We do not have to observe ceremonies and offer sacrifices as was required under the law. All we have to do is believe on the Lord Jesus Christ because it is finished.

APRIL 24—So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch. Matt. 27:66.

The enemies of Jesus did what they could to prevent His resurrection. They were really afraid he would rise again, but they were also afraid his disciples would come by night and steal him away. They sealed the sepulchre to keep His body in the tomb, but not trusting entirely to that, they set a watch to prevent his disciples from stealing him away. Here was all the power of earth and hell combined to keep Christ a prisoner. It was all in vain. When his hour came nothing could hold dominion over him. To attempt to overcome the power of God was useless, and still remains the same today, for he is an all-powerful God.

News from the Wuthrichs

(Brother P. H. Richert recently received another letter from C. B Willard of the Harvey County (Kansas) Chapter of the American Red Cross, which contained the following:)

"I am in receipt of a letter through the headquarters of the American Red Cross in Washington, D. C., in regard to Rev. and Mrs. Lester Wuthrich, who appear on an unofficial list of American civilians interned at Baguio, Philippine Islands. This information was forwarded to the State Department from England on an incomplete list compiled by a former British internee in the Baguio camp, who was later transferred to Manila and included among the first group of British repatriates.

"According to the State Department's information, the 'camp at Baguio was moved some time in May, 1942, to Camp Allen, a Philippine army barracks in Trinidad Valley, (in) which conditions are somewhat better than in Baguio.'

"We are happy to be of this service to you and to send you this information."

Camp Food Rationing Problems

With food rationing becoming more and more inclusive brief mention is made of the fact that to date the camps have been generally successful in obtaining their quota of foodstuffs.

Concerning the problem of food for the camps, Brother John M. Snyder, camp auditor, reports:

"The present food rationing program results in many problems for the camps, especially those who are not located in areas which produce quantities of vegetables, fruit, and other foodstuffs. The camps have generally done a splendid job in following the policy of economical feeding without sacrifice as to quality and quantity of food served. Camp staffs are keenly aware of their responsibility to the supporting constituency along this line.

"Food costs have been running a little more than two-thirds of the cost of operating the camps, excluding Akron and Washington overhead, and it will be appreciated that proper feeding is one of the most important phases of camp operations, both as to finances and the maintenance of high camp morale."

What Can I Expect of a Good Husband?

By a Mennonite Girl

In introduction I might mention that it would be good training for any girl to write out a paper on what she really expects her husband to be and thus produce a striking gauge for her own conduct if it is to be a worthy one.

The modern world has seemingly taken on the term husband as something worth having as long as material advantages tip the balance. However, from the beginning God has attached a very sacred meaning to the word by means of metaphor in Jer. 31:32, referring to the Lord bringing the Israelites out of Egypt, "my covenant they brake although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord." Even more plainly and certainly more beautifully we read in Eph. 5:23, "For the husband is the head of the wife even as Christ is the head of the church and he is the savior of the body."

Fellows, I'm confident that a host of us girls at home consider the fact that you are here in camp as one of the finest traits of loyality and true heroism you will ever show us. We are anxious to live our married life with a man that believes—and believes it so firmly that nothing will shake him from that foundation. That belief (though its details may vary) must be founded upon Him, who is, and the only truth.

A minute ago, I mentioned heroism. I mean just that. Every girl needs to find in a husband some quality which is superior to hers. I want to be able to recognize some real purpose, the culmination of which I shall aid with my whole self but shall find realized in my husband.

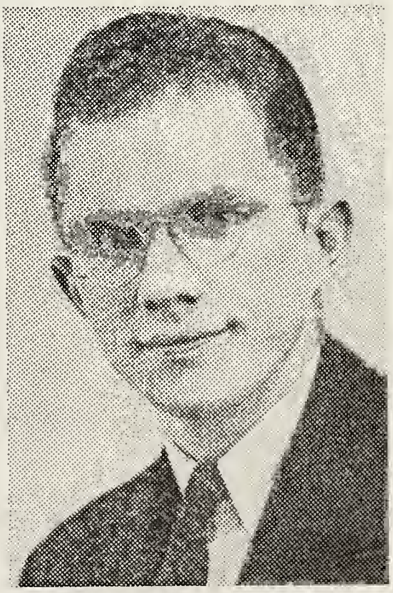
Please, understand that I'm not speaking of Utopia, no one would ever learn anything there—life is much more real. Perfection?—no, there's no such thing here. We'll make mistakes; let's learn beginning now to admit frankly where we fall short and go on with a lighter load.

Can you remake a California redwood?—Agreed? O. K., then let's not, any of us, try to make anyone over. Let's take each other as we are and work together from there. I believe we'll all grant that plenty of improvement can be made beginning right now,

Yes, I know your mother bakes the best apple dumplings you ever ate, but modern cook books just don't have your mother's recipe. Incidentally, perhaps your "dream come true" spent time learning a few things your mother didn't have the chance to learn when she was young. If you are patient enough to take her I'm betting you'll be saying the same about her apple dumplings—some day. (By the way that doesn't go for apple dumplings alone.)

Maybe fellows think I'm expecting you all to turn into husbands by the turn of a few numbered pages. Really, I'm not—that's just my topic. Seriously though, I hope each one of you has definite plans as to life's purpose for you, a way to make a moderate living, and a sense of direction before you vow to God to establish a home in advancement of His kingdom on earth.

You, by God's appointment are to be the head of that house. Are you prepared to be the head? Can you now manage your own affairs adequately, with decision, and brotherliness? Do you accept and



Elmer Ediger, Educational Director at the Weeping Water, Nebraska, C.P.S. Camp, was so kind as to submit the above article and two others for use in the youth section of this paper, after they had been used in a course in the camp. Perhaps, other educational directors may find the opportunity to do something similar.

weigh advice considerately? Can you be contagiously confident? Are you patient? Can you radiate joy and courage in thunderstorms? Is God the Co-master of you?

It's a big order, but by God's grace you can be that husband—the husband a woman shall surely love, honor, and cherish. Not only can you be that good husband, but you must help your wife to be that good wife you expect. It must be as George MacDonald thought when he said to his wife, "I want to help you to grow as beautiful as God meant you to be when He thought of you first." Samuel Rogers suggests in "A Wish," that marriage vows are as the village church taper spire—pointing to heaven.

In a husband I seek such character as that which Channing forms when he says, one who is willing,

"To live content with small means,
To seek elegance rather than luxury, and refinement rather than fashion,
To be worthy, not respectable and wealthy, and rich,
To study hard, think quietly, talk gently, act frankly,
To listen to stars and birds, to babes and sages, with open heart,
To bear all cheerfully, do all bravely, await occasion, hurry never,
In a word, to let the spiritual, unhidden and unconscious,
Grow up through the common."

Perhaps, this sounds too much like books. Let me deviate to a few traits that make the good husband best. An appreciation for something beautiful be it a bouquet of flowers, a piece of pottery, an act of chivalry, a thoughtful favor, a gentle caress—they'll all go a long way in making hearts warmer now, but it will be more than now—always!

I have a right to expect a very pure, self-controlled sex life of which we are not afraid to talk, openly, frankly, and objectively—remembering it in itself as one of the most sacred treasures—God-given, to man indeed the treasure of life.

Husband, continue your gentle, thoughtful ways as when you were a lover. Have your host of friends,

TRUE PRINCIPLES

Newton, Kansas.

Dear Sir:

From time to time I have been reading copies of The Mennonite. I like the paper because it is not afraid to speak out the true principles of the Mennonites.

Enclosed find a one dollar bill. I want to suscribe for it. Start me with a few copies back where Dr. John Schmidt writes about the Mennonites in Paraguay.

Yours truly, welcoming them as you welcome her. (So much the better if they're in common.) Make finances, difficulties, decisions all home affairs. Make this conscience-guided life a liveable one in the home as well as in camp.

All this has been, or is meant to be, a rambling talk. I hope you yourself will have had your own resolutions that will really become a part of you. May I close with a section of an anonymous poem. I quote it in realization of the fact that the man God wants is surely the husband a Christian girl hopes to be worthy of.

God wants a man—honest, and true, and brave:
A man who hates the wrong and loves the right;
A man who scorns all compromise with sin,
Who for the truth courageously will fight.

God wants a man—in lowly walk or high,
Who to the world by daily life will prove
That Christ abides within the yeilded heart,
Fitting that heart for service and for love.

God wants a man who dares to tell the truth,
Who in the market-place will stand four-square;
Whose word men trust—a man who never stoops
To hurt his fellow or to act unfair.

God wants a man of action and of faith,
Whose life is something more than cant and talk
Who lives each day as though it were his last,
And proves his faith by a consistent walk.

A Faithful Nobleman Beheaded

Marinus, a nobleman who lived in Jerusalem during the middle of the third contury, had a sincere affection for the Christians who were enduring severe persecutions.

When those envious of his nobility accused him, before the tribune, of embracing Christianity he emphatically declared that he was a Christian. The Tribunal Judge ordered that in three hours he return and be prepared either to die like a Christian or sacrifice to the gods and Emperor.

The bishop, while leading Marinus to the meeting house, encouraged him to be faithfully bold. In the meeting house a sword and Bible were placed before him. When asked to choose between the two, he reached for the Bible.

At the appointed time, Marinus returned to the Tribune. Before they asked him, he expressed his choice. He said he had considered the two alternatives and concluded that God must be obeyed rather than man; therefore, he would accept the fate of God's child.

The judge gave the sentence which caused Marinus, the Christian Nobleman, to suffer beheadment for his faith. —by Jesse Roth

THOUGHTS FOR VICTORY

By Paul Goering

An estimated audience of two thousand people heard Kirby Page speak on "The Resources for Victorius Christian Living During A Crisis" in Memorial Hall, North Newton.

Although Mr. Page did not speak directly about the war or the issues involved, nevertheless, one could see that the basic content of what he said undergirds the whole pacifist position. He effectively brought to light the positive aspect of conscientious objection to war.

Mr. Page sought to reveal the resources for living with joy and power during such times as the present. First of all, he said, we must share with others our knowledge, experience, our insights, and our materials. We must, in the second place, sow consciously the seeds of goodness because the harvest is inevitable. We will reap that which is undesirable unless we knowingly and earnestly implant in mankind through our everyday relationships the seeds which make for peaceful living. Too long have we stood idly by in our complacency and luxury and as a result, reaped a harvest of evil.

Mr. Page declared, thirdly, that we must suffer with others in the real sense of suffering as Christ suffered. It must be of a higher type and above the self-satisfying suffering expressed in charity. It must be complete identification in which we are able to weep with others in their sorrow, their burdens becoming our burdens, and their pain our pain. In so doing, says Mr. Page, we establish a bond basic to brotherhood.

A fourth resource for effective and joyous living is to be found in genuine friendship of man with man—a friendship that is based on a real appreciation for each other and a sincere effort to improve his welfare. This is necessary even though it runs counter to the element in our culture which justifies selfishness. It is friendship in the two-fold sense; the one of direct, intimate and holy fellowship of man with his fellow and the one expressed in the indirect influence and contribution to society.

This friendship between men leads to a fifth resource, that of communion with God in which we enter into the richest, the most intimate and holy relationship we may experience and enjoy. By living with God in complete repose and in harmony with his moral and spiritual universe we restore our depleted and exhausted lives. Our lives will have purposiveness, and from them will spring forth a vitality and a love that is the expression of Christ. That which before was pain to us becomes joy, and we rejoice in it as Christ did.

This latter insight is relevant to the conscientious objector to war in view of the unpopularity of the belief to which he adheres and the probable difficulties that accompany such a conviction. It serves warning to those who are prone to compromise their convictions so as to avoid the pains of unpopularity and discrimination. It serves warning, also, to those who, inversely, intensify their belief because of the satisfaction they derive from being a martyr to the cause.

There is a sixth resource and that, Kirby Page explained, comes from personal solitude. For in the fast and complex living of today there is little time for solitariness, for comtemplation, and for pondering our past experiences and in them seeing the hand of God. This, of course, is practicing the discipline of Christ from which He drew strength and composure for his victorious living. When one accidently learns that the speaker is speaking from his own experience and discipline in this matter and not form book theory, it is evident that his own personal life testifies to the power awaiting those who earnestly seek Christ in periods of silence.

Kansas Sunday School Convention

The fifty-ninth annual Kansas Mennonite State Sunday School Convention will be held on May 30 in the First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas. The afternoon session will begin at 2:30, and the evening session at 8 o'clock. The main theme will be "The All-Sufficiency of Christ." Various topics will be discussed by outstanding men and women. Music by three different groups will precede the sermon of the evening. Watch the papers for later announcements. All churches are asked to dismiss their Sunday evening meetings, so that the people can attend the convention. This request is by the executive committee of the convention.

CLOTHING TO PARAGUAY

A total of 17 bales of clothing that weighed over 2,200 lbs. was sent to Paraguay during March. The shipment contained large quantities of babies' and children's clothing together with some clothing for adults.

As with previous shipments, distribution of the clothing will be made by our workers to the Mennonite families of the colonies in Paraguay.

CORRESPONDENCE

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Upland, California

On March 17, John E. Krebill, who for many years has been a faithful member of the Upland congregation, was called to his heavenly home, He was seventy-two years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Krebill came to Upland from Donnellson, Iowa, thirty-two years ago, residing here until in recent years they made their home in Long Beach, California, on account of Mr. Krebill's failing health. Mr. Krebill is survived by his wife Clara (Krehbiel) Krebill, three sons, six grandchildren all residing in California, two sisters and three brothers of Donnellson, Iowa.

Miss Gertrude Eymann has been a patient invalid for some time, bringing joy and a blessing to all who enter her sick room, by her happy disposition and undaunted courage, (in spite of all obstacles).

Mr. and Mrs. A. K. Toews of Alta Loma have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Frieda Toews of San Diego, to E. C. Weyhchandt of Honolulu, manager of the Honolulu branch of the Sperry Gyroscope Company of San Diego.

Following are the Lenten sermon themes which our pastor, the Rev. Earl Salzman, is presenting to his congregation during the Lenten Season: "Twin Virtues—Liberty and Loyalty," "Love Never Faileth," "Persuasion and Coercion," "Penitence that Makes a Difference," "Seeing the Invisible," "Communion Meditation."

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH
Bluffton, Ohio

A Sunday evening supper once a month, prepared by three women of the church, is a feature which the Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society of the First Mennonite Church of Bluffton, Ohio, always enjoys. After the meal the regular program is presented, and then games are played. On Sunday evening, March 28, the supper was held in the parsonage, the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. N. Smucker, On this particular evening the meeting was recorded on records with each one of the twenty-seven young people present taking part. The theme was the "Beatitudes" which proved interesting material to record.

Truly a Dorcas has gone from our midst. Mrs. Levi Oberly, who with her husband would have celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary next year, went Home on March 29. Her mother-in-law at the age of ninty-six years passed away a few weeks ago. Her son Millard's wife went Home, and left four children to be cared for a number of years ago. Seven members, representing four generations, were Mrs. Oberly's care and responsibility. Besides this she had time to assist in ushering into the world all of her twenty grand children. Truly she deserves the Father's recognition, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

HOFFNUNGSAU MENNONITE CHURCH
Inman, Kansas

The Hoffunugsau C. E. had a very interesting type of program on March 28. The program committee sent subjects for topics to some of the C. O.

boys in camp which they worked out and sent back and were read by their friends. This created a closer fellowship between the camp boys and their home C. E.

Another project our C. E. is sponsoring is that the president appoints one person each month to write a church letter to all the boys of our church in the various camps informing them of the church doings, synopsis of the sermons, and local news of the church members. These letters are very much appreciated by the boys in service.

On March 21 our church had a pre-election for a deacon. Since Brother A. B. Reimer, who has served so very faithfully since June, 1918, resigned his position as deacon, the vacancy must be filled. On April 18 the final election will be held of the two candidates.

Rev. Jacob Janzen of Ontario preached in our church March 16, both in the afternoon and evening. The next day our pastor Rev. A. J. Dyck had to serve on the program at a Bible convention held in Pretty Prairie.

The last two Sundays of March our Sunday school had their bi-annual S. S. teachers election. Only a very few changes have been made.

FRIEDENSTAL MENNONITE CHURCH

Tampa, Kansas

Among the services in connection with our church here is one especially for the young people. The young people meet at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Walter H. Regier regularly twice a month. At this service the group takes part in a Bible study and the singing of choruses. We have on the average about twenty-five young people present. After the meeting the group is given opportunity to practice special songs for the Sunday service. We believe this has proved to be a blessing to the church services in general.

We are planning on having daily vacation Bible school beginning the week after Easter for three weeks. We hope that these weeks of studying will not only teach the boys and girls more about the truths in the Bible, but that it will also bring them to a saving knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The church has Sunday evening services every Sunday. Oftentimes we have visitors come to take part in these services. The services are very well attended, and we are sure they are a blessing, too. Among the recent visitors were Rev. Garman Wedel, a student at Bethel College, and Rev. Waldo Wiebe, of Tampa, Kansas.

Arnold Regier is pastor of the Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon. He comes from Elbing, Kansas, where during his boyhood days he was very much interested in farm activities.

Melvin Gingerich is professor of history and government at Bethel College and a contributor to various periodicals. He is the author of The Mennonites in Iowa and is scheduled to lecture at the University of Iowa some time this summer.

Emil J. Waltner is a member of the Northern District Peace Committee. He is a member of the Salem Mennonite Church, Freeman, South Dakota, and farms near Hurley.

Paul Goering is a Bethel College Junior, majoring in economics. He is active in Christian young people's work.

Eva Pauls is the nurse at our mission hospital in Champa, C. P., India. Sister Pauls comes from the Bethel Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas.

E. A. Albrecht is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Chicago, Illinois. He is a graduate of Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Connecticut.

—Bulletin, Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota: On the afternoon of April 4, Dr. H. A. Fast spoke on recent developments in C.P.S. "The Christian Endeavor Society is an expressional opportunity for followers of Christ. It develops leadership, promotes service, and stimulates consecration. Every young Christian ought to be active in Christian Endeavor, and older ones will profit much themselves and will inspire others by giving their support to C. E. work." Upon the invitation of the Christian laymen of several nearby counties, Dr. C. W. Butler, President of John Fletcher College, recently spoke in the meetinghouse of the Bethel Church. The congregation is beginning to plan for the entertainment of the Northern District Conference to be held June 5-9. "Mrs. P. R. Schroeder, our church worker, has been granted her request for a leave of absence from her work for the month of April. She will spend this month at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Dehnert, Lodi, Wisconsin."

—Bulletin, Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio: President L. L. Ramseyer of Bluffton College visited us on April 4. On March 26 Brother P. A. Penner showed us his pictures on India.

—Zoar Mennonite Church, Goltry, Oklahoma: "We enjoy reading The Mennonite. May the Lord bless the paper. It was a joy to have Miss Kuyf with us on March 28. We plan to have evangelistic meetings, the Lord willing, from May 2 to 14, conducted by Rev. Albert Schultz from Butterfield, Minnesota. We covet your prayers. —Corr.

—Gnadenberg Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas: Brother J. F. Schmidt, director of the C. P. S. camp at Fort Collins, Colorado, delivered the morning message (April 4), giving us a better understanding of C.P.S. life and administration. Next Sunday we expect Brother H. J. Dyck of Elbing, when he exchanges pulpits with Rev. J. J. Voth. Recently the Women's Study Class had the pleasure of having an informal talk by Dr. J. W. Fretz.

—Brother Albert Schultz recently conducted two weeks of evangelistic meetings for the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana.

—Brother Edmund Miller, pastor of the Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, recently visited the C. P. S. camps at Terry and Belton, Montana.

—The men's chorus of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California, recently gave a program to the First Baptist Church of Fresno. This program was much appreciated.

—The ladies of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, recently planned a grocery shower on Mrs. F. J. Isaac. Missionary Isaacs are now living in the Leisy home on the Bethel College campus.

—Brother H. E. Nunemaker, pastor of the Zion Mennonite Church, Donnellson, Iowa, is to be the speaker for Passion Week services for the North Danvers and Carlock, Illinois, Mennonite churches.

—The churches of Pennsylvania take turns in providing services for the people in the Home for the Aged at Frederick.

—Bulletin, Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Pa. The church will be host to the 145th session of the Eastern District Conference, April 29 to May 2. "Do you wish to bring a letter of transfer or join our church? Please do not hesitate to speak to the pastor or one of the deacons." Ten new subscriptions for The Mennonite, our denomination's weekly (English) paper, were given to the ushers last Sunday morning. The ushers will again be near the doors this morning to take anyone's subscription given to them." (Perhaps, our church papers would be placed in more of our Mennonite homes if all pastors pushed subscriptions in such or a similar manner. Agents push secular papers into the homes. Ought we not to present the papers that deal with the work in God's kingdom?)

—The First Mennonite Church, Colfax, Washington, has a membership of 116 and an average attendance of 136 of all ages. Of the total number of 158 professing Christian worshipers, 42 are affiliated with other denominations. The average per member contribution for all causes in 1942 was $37.43. Contributions for benevolent purposes are received in envelopes, giving the contributor the privilege of stating for which cause he wishes to contribute.

—Miss Olga Rempel, the superintendent of nurses in the Concordia Hospital at Winnipeg, Manitoba, arrived in Newton on April 3 on a surprise visit to the Bethel sisters. She plans to spend her well-deserved vacation of one month at her Alma Mater.

Miss Remple was born in the Donets basin region of South Russia and came to Canada with her foster parents in 1924. She was able to procure a student's visa to enter the United States in November, 1927, and after completing her training as a student nurse in the Bethel Deaconess Hospital, returned to Canada in February, 1931.

The Concordia Hospital at Winnipeg, a fifty-bed institution, was organized and developed by the immigrant Mennonites from South Russia. Sister Magdalena Wiebe, now of Wichita, and formerly superintendent of the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital of Beatrice, Nebraska, served in the same capacity in Concordia for a number of years but was forced to resign her position because of ill health. Miss Olga Rempel became her successor in November 15, 1940.

—Brother E. A. Albrecht of the First Mennonite Church, Chicago, Illinois, writes, "A large percentage of our home mission funds go direct to Miss Grantland, who is a member of this church and who is doing mission work in the hills of North Carolina—Only a portion goes to Rev. Plenert." He also states that a special communion service will be held here on Palm Sunday afternoon at 4 p. m. for all of the Mennonite students and others in the Chicago area. There will be a luncheon for them after the service, and all are invited to stay for the evening when the young people of the church will present "The Challenge of the Cross."

—Johannestal Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Brother John F. Schmidt and family of Fort Collins, Col., recently visited home folks. On Sunday evening Brother Schmidt brought the message and gave an interesting report of the C.P.S. work. That same Sunday pictures of Bethel College were shown by Willis Rich.

—Brother P. H. Unruh of Goessel, Kansas, recently made a trip to Winnipeg for a session of the M. C. C. Executive Committee.

—The Bethel College Fellowship Committee of the Inman Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, made arrangements with a local produce man to give the Fellowship all the profits from a certain Saturday's sales. The postcard ad gave the price of cream, eggs, and chickens and stated in conclusion, "Help your college and help your town by patronizing Inman Produce, Inman Mennonite Church, Fellowship Committee."

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, states, "About 240 could be considered resident members and the balance of the 351 may be classified as non-resident members. It is gratifying to say that a number of non-resident members, even though unable to attend and receive the benefits of the worship service, still value their membership here sufficiently to make substantial contributions from time to time."

—The year book of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, states that the church has an evangelistic committee. From October 1 to April 1 Sunday school begins at 10 o'clock, otherwise at 9:30. "The church constitution requires that non-resident members, unable to attend services in the home church, report annually to the church board with a letter and some financial contribution to the support of the work of the church. When this is done non-resident members remain on the Active Membership List." In 1942 there were 239 active members and 49 inactive members.

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas, states that the church has a "committee on Peace and Order" and also a "Peace Committee." The church has one children's Sunday school class that is conducted in German.

—From the Reports of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, from October 31, 1941, to October 31, 1942, we glean that of twenty-two young men in service, nine had gone into C.P.S., six had gone as non-combatants, and seven had accepted full military classification. This report shows how much each member gave for church support, the building fund, and C.P.S. It says this about inactive members, "An inactive member is one who for two years or more has shown no visible signs of interest in the church either by regular attendance, or by contributions, or by satisfactory explanation to the church board. Inactive members may again become active members by attending services, by paying dues, or by explaining satisfactorily that they cannot do the same."

—The year book of the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, states that "at present we have twenty boys in government service. Seventeen in C.P.S. camps and three in non-combatant service." Among the church officers are listed "District Collectors," "Church Collectors," "Reception Committee," and "Nominations Committee."

—The year book and directory of the Ebenezer Mennonite Church, Bluffton, Ohio, also lists what the various members contributed during the past year. Under the subject of "Budget" it says, "At the annual business meeting the membership dues for the year 1943 were set at $5.00 for males, and $4.00 for females, $1.00 of each to be used to reduce parsonage debt. Plus dues at $3.00 per $1,000 of valuation owned, first permitting deduction of legal debts." A total of $404.28 was expended for radio broadcasting.

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Hutchinson, Kansas, shows that the pastor spent forty-three days in holding evangelistic services for four churches. A total of 492 visits are recorded. Of the 128 members, 14 are inactive.

—The year book of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, is a fat one and contains a neat and complete index. Four former members are listed as having lost their memberships because of marrying without announcement which is a violation of the constitution. "The tax on all property owners for 1943 should not be less than $1.50 per $1,000." a list of tax assessments is then given. Membership as of December 31, 1942, was 1,282. Members of the Sunday school totaled 1,429. Books in the library amounted to 1,074. Number of children under fourteen were 458.

—"Child delinquency . . . in the state of Michigan ... has increased fifty per cent among girls and twenty per cent among boys."—The American Friend

—The Peace Section of the M.C.C. has put out a "Peace Section Handbook With Draft Manual," which may be gotten for five cents a copy.

—"The migration from farms to cities increased from about 500,000 in 1940 to about 1,000,000 in 1941. There has apparently been a steady stream of workers out of the Mountain states and the Dust Bowl to the Pacific Coast and other defense production areas."

—Freeman Junior College: A recent study reveals that of all the men students inducted into service who are graduates of Freeman Junior College Academy 71 per cent have gone into the C.P.S. camps, while 29 per cent have gone into the army. A preliminary study for eight churches in the Northern District Conference area reveals that of seventy-eight men inducted only 36 per cent have gone into the C.P.S. camps while 64 per cent have gone into the army. At Henderson, Nebraska, where the community is almost solidly Mennonite and where Mennonite teachers have usually been engaged in the public schools, a recent survey reveals that 78 per cent of the inductees have gone to C.P.S. while only 22 per cent have gone into the army. Could this deduction be made—if we want our young people to retain the principle of non-resistance we will be more successful by sending then to our own schools!

Long ago Clodus made supplication to the gods of Olympus for victory in battle, and received the oracle, "Thou shalt surely destroy a country." King Clodus set forth exultantly to the battle field, but in the end his own kingdom was destroyed. In anger he went to demand an explanation at the temple of Olympus. The priestess replied, "When I said that you would destroy a country I did not necessarily mean that it would be the enemy's country. Is not your kingdom a country?"

—On April 8 students and faculty of Bluffton College donned overalls and slacks and built a new bridge on the campus path, put the tennis courts, field track, and ball diamond into shape, cleaned the rock garden, waxed the chapel floor, and did general work. Arthur Thiessen, from India and president of the Junior class, was chairman of the clean-up program. President L. L. Ramseyer spoke to the Wadsworth, Ohio, Mennonite Church on April 4 and then spent several days in eastern Ohio contacting the constituency and prospective students. On April 20 the choir will give DuBios' "Seven Last Words of Christ" at the meetinghouse of the local Mennonite Church. A total of 340 tickets were sold for the booster banquet, which was the best supported one since it was initiated five years ago. Dean Harold S. Bender of Goshen College spoke at a recent Sunday vesper service. The play "Two Masters," which centers around a woman who serves two masters until the young daughter of missionaries to China finally brings her to her senses, has been given at a number of places by the Women's gospel team.

—The Grace Mennonite Church (Lansdale, Pa.) Messenger: When Howard G. Nyce was sick for two weeks, Dr. Bauman and Walter Temple brought the messages. On April 18 Brother Abraham Unruh is to be ordained to the ministry at the meetinghouse of the East Swamp Mennonite Church. He is to do missionary work in the mountains of Kentucky. The Swamp Charge Brotherhood has undertaken to erect the Leader's cabin at Men-O-Lan. John Fretz recently arranged to have four young men from the C.P.S. hospital unit at Farmhurst, Delaware, visit the service of Grace Church. About thirty persons from the Grace Church went to the Montgomery County Prison to give testimonies and musical numbers. After the pastor had given the message several responded to the invitation.

—From Brotherhood Briefs, published by the brotherhood of the Eastern District: Telling how Americans raised over seventy million dollars for the relief of Russians during the great famine twenty years ago, the editor concludes with this interesting fact: "A few days ago, Mr. Walter Duranty, now a well-known author and for twenty years an American news correspondent at Moscow, said that one still hears expressions of deep appreciation everywhere in Russia, from the common people for this help in their hour of of greatest need." The Brotherhood stressed programs on the theme of "Mennonites and Their Heritage" during a recent month. Next they want to center on the different branches of Mennonites. Rev. Isaac Friesen of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, Canada, who is a member of the graduating class of Westminister Seminary, addressed a joint meeting of the Lansdale Brotherhood and the Ladies Missionary Society recently. East Swamp reports that John Boehr is studying for the ministry at Dallas Theological Seminary and that his two brothers are at Wheaton College. Robert Geigley, who has sailed for South America with Rev. A. E. Jantzen, is the son of A. W. Geigley, pastor of the Fairfield Mennonite church. Rev. Jantzen is scheduled to return around September 1, but Brother Geigley is to remain for a somewhat longer period.

—The Nebraska All-Mennonite Sunday School Convention was recently held in the meetinghouse of the Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson. The theme was "Training for Worship and Reverence." Topics discussed were: "Training for Worship and Reverence in the Home," Eph. 6:4, and Deut. 6:5-9; "Training for Worship and Reverence in the Sunday School, (a) the Teacher, (b) the Superintendent," Titus 2:1-10, and Prov. 9:10; "Training for Worship and Reverence in the Church, (a) the Pastor, (b) the Layman," Titus 1:7-9 and 15-16, and Isa. 6:1-8; and "The Resultant Blessings from Sunday School Work," Matt. 10:40-42, and Eccles. 11-1. Sermons and musical numbers were also given. —Ted Schmidt, Sec., Program Committee

—J. E. Hartzler recently took part in a special service of supplication for Greece at Christ Church Cathedral in Hartford, Connecticut, according to an account in the Hartford Times. Brother Hartzler, who was lecturer for two years for the American University of Beirut and the Near East School of Theology, Beirut, Syria, delivered the message.

—Bulletin, Second Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: The adults recently had an interesting C.E. program on Mennonite History. Brother P. A. Penner is to serve the two Mennonite churches at Beatrice during Passion Week. Brother Benno Toews, son of David Toews of Rosthern, Saskatchewan, will be with the Second Church on Easter Sunday morning.

He Was Expended for Us

They Were Expendable is the name of a book which tells the story of a squadron of soldiers who fought in the Philippines. Very many of this group lost their lives in carrying on the war. They were expendable. Their lives were used up just as gasoline, food, and medicine were used up—all for the sake of war. Can any believer in war live a fat, complacent life back home when some of his dear friends are expended in fox holes, in the air, and on the ocean. He cannot live wrapped up in selfish desires if his heart is right.

". . .he was wounded for our transgressions. . ." Yes, he was expended on the cross for each one of us. He was sinless and not worthy of death or punishment. He died. Not in the attempt to destroy men's lives, but to bring life to every last human being in this world. He did not cling to His life until it was snatched from Him; He voluntarily gave his life that we might have life and have it more abundantly. No human sacrifices or expenditure can compare with that of Jesus Christ upon the cross.

If that is true, then we owe to Jesus Christ our Lord and Savior an expenditure of effort and life that surpasses the expenditure of effort and life for Caesar's sake. If that is true, then we ought to give more to God than Caesar. Too long has mankind given its mightiest efforts and greatest sacrifices to Caesar rather than to God to whom they belonged.

Once we would not go to foreign lands as missionaries. We would not go to Asia, Europe, and Africa as doctors to fight disease and, perhaps, to lose our lives. We would not restrict the use of material goods so that we could carry a love-give program to all the needy of the earth. We would not drive more slowly so that lives might be saved in our country and that some other people who needed rubber badly might have it. We would not do voluntarily, lovingly, a great many things for Christ's sake that we are now asked to do for Caeser's sake. We refused to consider Christ and His Kingdom worthy of such effort. And now—.

Dear Christ upon the cross, we are unworthy of Thy fellowship and Thy peace. On many a good Friday we—called Christians after Thee—have seen Thee bleeding and broken on that old rugged cross. But we let the hardness and selfishness of the world encompass us, and we went on our way, not loving Thee with all our heart, with all our soul, and with all our mind. We have broken the greatest commandment—we have turned every one to his own way—and today we are broken because of it. We hung a cross around our neck or pinned one on our coat. But we refused to put it in our heart as we should have. Out of the darkness and lightnings of this present world are

At the Cross

Let me walk to the Cross
With the Saviour of men,
Let Him tell me the story
Again and again:
How He counted all glory
But loss for the gain
That my soul might be freed
From its bondage and stain.

Let me walk to the Cross,
Let me see, let me hear,
From the heart of the Saviour
The story so dear:
How He loved me till anguish
And pain and the Cross
Was the price that He paid
For my sin and my dross.
Let me stand at the Cross!
At this bless'd, holy shrine
Let me kneel, let me worship
This Saviour of mine.
I would give Him forever
My heart for a throne—
I would plead that He reign,
That He live there alone.

—Joanna S. Andres

hewn crosses that we must now bear because we were not found with Thy cross in our bosom. "Thy Kingdom come. . ." Lord, Thy cross is the key to it. Steady our trembling hands and direct our touch as we seek to use it in this terrible darkness. We would be expended for Thy sake, and no other. Thy will be done, and no other. Amen. —rw.

HE LIVES

The first question in one of our catechisms reads, "What should be our chief aim in this life?" The answer: "To live in God's fellowship, enjoy his favor, and obtain eternal happiness thereafter."

Were there no Easter in the Bible, then the above question would be null and void. There would be no Jesus Christ—except, perhaps, a tiny, dim figure of history—with whom to fellowship. There would be no life beyond the grave to be certain of. Because Christ lives, we can truly and abundantly live now and hereafter.

He lives. Do I live near Him? Do I talk to Him every day? Am I conscious of His living presence as the voices of this world thunder and crash around me? Do I try my utmost to know His will and to do it? Do I feel His love lifting me, or do I grow weary pulling at the bootstraps? Is He such a constant companion of mine that I am naturally led to introduce Him to others with whom He would like to become acquainted. He lives!

But unless I live near Him, Easter loses its significance for me. He lives. I can live with Him. Easter has taken place. Has my choice of intimate fellowship with Christ taken place? —rw.

Resurrection Morn

At dawn, before the break of day,
An angel rolled the stone away.
The keepers in their fright have fled,
And suddenly became as dead.
Then Christ arose victorious.
The sight must have been glorious.

While His friends were in despair,
Bringing precious spices there
Early at the dawn of day,
Found the stone was rolled away.
And the women mourned and wept;
Saw the place where Jesus slept.

There as shining angel said
He is risen, is not dead.
And the angel told them go
Tell His true disciples so.
Frightened from the tomb they fled;
There the Lord Divine they met.

An Easter Meditation

By Helen A. Penner

"The Lord is risen indeed." What a glorious thought! He who said, "I am the resurrection and the life. He who believeth in Me . . . shall live," has voluntarily paid the price, has atoned for our sins, and has broken the bonds of death; for He lives! And because He lives we, too, shall live. What joy to know, to be certain of this. No matter how other things may change, or how uncertain they may be; no matter what the future holds to the believer, this remains the same.

Let us note that the word used is live. Jesus did not say, "Ye shall exist," but "ye shall live." In another passage we find that Jesus stressed it even more. He explained that He not only came that we might have life but that we might have life in a fuller measure than ever before; that we might have it more abundantly.

There are many in the world at the present time whose physical life scarcely can be called more than existance. Worst of all, they not only are starving physically, they are starving spiritually. Some have lost hope and faith in God, as well as their fellowmen. Who is at fault? Has God changed? Has God failed? Has He who said, "I am the Light of the World," failed to shed abroad His light? Hardly! He also said, "Ye are the light of the world. Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."

How can they know that God is Love and that He is the ruler still, unless the lives and deeds of His followers show them the power of that love? "God has no hands but our hands to do His work today. . ." What a responsibility—but also, what a privilege!

"The world is groping in darkness today because so many Christians have let their lights go out." Let us watch and pray.

Blessed indeed, is the individual who believes, and sincerely can say, "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and because He lives I, too, shall live!"

(This meditation was written following an Easter Communion service shared by a small group of Protestants Easter Day, 1942, in a little mountain church in the Pyrenees at Vernet-les-Bains in France.)

LETTER FROM MILTON WHITEMAN

Birney, Montana,
January 27, 1943

To all who have put their trust in the Lord:

In writing this bit, relative to being led by God to finally become an ordained minister of His Holy Word, it is with joy that I write here. It is all a beautiful realization to me to enter this full time work of our Lord, who came to seek and save that which was lost. It is in this attitude that I have "rolled up my sleeves" to do His holy will, and God helping me, I mean to do just that! Hallelujah!

Before I was born again, I had no idea that I would ever be an ordained minister. I was floating down the stream of time with nothing in view. I lived for the world and for the flesh. I indulged in all kinds of pleasure. I thought I was "sitting pretty" until I met my present companion, who had been a member of the Mennonite Church for many years. She was a widow and had two girls three and five years of age. I would hitch up the team and take them to church, five miles away on Sunday, but I did not go into the church with them. I would again come for them after services.

The girls grew, and both joined the church. They are Julia and Alice Yellowhorse, both nice girls . . . Alice has gone to her heavenly home, and left a son, Norman Spang, who has also joined the church. Julia teaches in the Sunday School. Sometimes while my family was worshipping at the Mennonite Church, I would go with some friends to the Catholic Church. But I never felt satisfied there. . .

Once, when communion services were being held in the Mennonite Church, I went with my wife and the girls. When the time arrived to receive the gifts of God, the Christians were segregated and I had to move back from where I was, because I was not a child of God and could not partake of His holy communion. It was then and there that my eyes were opened and I decided that I too would join the church.

After the services I went to the pastor (Missionary Petter) and told him that I would never let this happen again. He asked me what I meant. I told him that I had been counted out at the communion and not counted in with the rest. I told him that I had never felt so ashamed of myself in all my life. I was forty-two years old then. . . .I was then instructed and baptized in April of 1926. Since then I quit being a slave to tobacco and liquor and I thank God for all His goodness and mercy to me a poor sinner. Praise His holy name!

Upon becoming a member of our Mennonite Church here on the reservation I was at once very anxious to do my part, so I offered my services in the Sunday School and in the church services. In those first years we had good support from the Indian Affairs Office in Washington, D. C., which was very encouraging. It ruled against all idol worship. Indian ceremonies, sun dances, peyote worship, and other evils that hindered the Indians. Many joined the church as the records will show. But sad to say when the administration changed hands in Washington, the Indian Commissioner was also changed, which changed everything else. Restrictions were removed, idol worshiping was again allowed, and heathen ceremonies encouraged. The doors of evil were thrown wide open. This change set our Indians back fifty years, and for this reason our church membership has decreased 80 per cent. . . .

Praying God to still save my people, I am,

Milton Whiteman

I Pledge Christ and My Church

More Christian deed and less creed,
More Christian giving and less greed. . .
More Christian bearing of other's load,
More God-speed on life's dusty road. . .
No kicking the man who is down,
More Christian smile and a little less frown. . .
More golden rule in the marts of trade,
More sunshine and a little less shade.

O, The Silence of the Savior

O, the silence of the Savior
As they led him to be tried!
How the scribes, the priests, the elders,
Cried that he be crucified.

O, the silence of the Savior
As he stood condemned to die!
So oppressed and so afflicted,
Yet he murmured not a sigh.

O, the silence of the Savior,
As to Pilate's hall he came!
What reserve! What calm assurance!
Glory to the Father's Name.

O, the silence of the Savior
As they spit into his face!
How they smote his cheeks and put him
To an open vile disgrace!

O, the silence of the Savior
As King Herod, so absurd,
Tried to ask for signs and wonders!
Jesus—answered not a word.

O, the silence of the Savior
As the Lamb so meek and mild!
What devotion to His purpose;
Thus would man be reconciled.

O, the silence of the Savior
As God heaped on Him my blame!
What repentance this should kindle
In this weak and falt'ring frame!

O, the silence of the Savior
As it searches through and through!
'Lord, I yield, my will is conquered.
Thou hast proved what love can do.'

A C.P.S. Camp Library

By Irvin W. Horst

A C.P.S. camp without books would be intolerable. In camp as elsewhere reading is a pass to some of the greatest and best things of the abundant life. The event of camp life may have taken from us many pleasures, but we retain the enjoyment of reading. In fact, camp life for many of us, has increased our opportunities to read in that it has provided more time for us to read and access to a greater variety of books.

Significance of a Camp Library

We have come to regard C.P.S. not only as a service to be rendered to the nation, but also as an interim in our lives for personal training and preparation. It is in this connection that the library performs its most significant function. It may provide books to interpret and supplement the work project, but more especially it will provide materials for education and personal development. But after the work is done and the lessons are over the library is still a place of interest, a place for relaxation and release. It also provides a medium of intercourse with the world and all that is going on about us.

This picture shows a C.P.S. camp library. Suggestive of great opportunities for self-education are the many books on the shelves.

The Books

Our library at Grottoes has a few over a thousand books. Most of these are personally owned by the the campers and staff members. This fact makes the collection unique and especially valuable. The shelves stand fullest in the religious section, particcularly in the fields of personal religion and missions. There are special collections on war and peace, and on Mennonite history. The library also provides commentaries and other resources for research, and a number of books on shop practice and useful arts. It would not be complete without some good stories and biographies.

Library Life

Life in the library begins shortly after the evening meal. A few campers in blue denim—everything in C.P.S. is done in blue denim—find their way to the library with a writing portfolio and a book. There is a letter to be written before the book is opened. But sometimes, alack, the book is opened before the letter is written. Others come to study Spanish or to read an assignment from On the Trail of the Russian Famine or Nutrition and Food Supply. Others come for unadulterated relaxation, and they drift toward the magazine rack for a copy of Reader's Digest, Gospel Herald, Farm Journal, Field and Stream, or perchance Christian Century or Atlantic Monthly. Then there are always the exceptions, the precocious who take big chunks from the technical books and college text books.

Throughout the latter half of the evening many campers are found reading their Bibles. Several boys have resolved to read their Bible from cover to cover while in camp. At this time of the day many boys are reading devotional books, The Power of Prayer, The Man God Uses, etc. This hour also finds those who are captivated by a story—Silver Trumpet, As the Earth Turns, or Lost Horizon.

There are things to do in the library apart from reading books and magazines. There are maps and a globe. Every camp usually contains one geography enthusiast. And one should not forget the picture books, the National Geographic's and Birds and Animals of North America. Some boys find relaxation in them. There are also open files of peace literature for special study, files of camp papers, and miscellaneous pamphlets. There is a window with official bulletins and circulars. There are tables to write letters. At an attempted minimum, there are other boys to converse with.

Camper Interest in Books

Not all campers come to the library. And not all that come, come to read. That is not to be misunderstood. Considering the lack of libraries and reading habits in our lives before we came to camp, the interest in the library is a bit surprising. It is as one camper said, "We never had very many books at home, and even if we had a lot, we never had time to read." All campers, however, manifest some interests and loyalties, and the work of the librarian is to find the interest and then get the right book and the right man together. We are hoping that many who lead bookless lives will be able to say, "I never read very much until I went to camp."

A Challenge

C.P.S. is an unprecedented projection into our national life. The world has an intense interest in our way of life much of which is unsympathetic. Men in camp realize that they must act and live well. To do our best requires a background of knowledge and conviction. To help provide the knowledge and strengthen the conviction to the glory of God is the challenge that comes to every C.P.S. library.

ALBERTA COMMUNITY CHURCH

Portland, Oregon

The work among children in our church cannot be over-emphasized. Though the number of them attending Sunday school this year seems to be slightly lower than last, we have tried to intensify this work from time to time. It is very important that we teach these little youngsters those familiar, beloved Bible stories, hymns, choruses, and scriptures verses. Especially may this be said in regard to those who come to us from non-Christian homes.

In this regard the work of our teachers and officers in our Sunday school is to be commended. Yet we feel that the time alloted here is not long enough to teach and train them in the Jesus' way of life. It is for this reason that we stress our two week vacation Bible school in the summer.

Last year was our second attempt at this and the results were indeed gratifying. A great increase in the number of pupils registered was very encouraging. The school was under the leadership of Mrs. H. Anderson, assisted by seven teachers. The boys and girls all enjoyed the opening singing period, especially, the shorter choruses like "The B-I-B-L-E." The lesson periods were divided by each teacher as she or he saw fit, but in general consisted of memory period, book work, story hour, and recreational work. The last ten minutes of the morning were always spent together as a singing period, thus creating a more church-like atmosphere.

Alberta Community Church, Portland, Oregon

At the close of the V. B. S. we had a program presented by all age groups. We are always pleased to see the church filled for such an occasion. Indeed many parents attend these programs who otherwise never come to any church service at all. Much interest, too, was shown in the display of the handwork, which was arranged in the church basement.

We have tried to carry this interest of the children on through the whole year and find it very satisfactory. Miss Etta Davis, assisted by Mrs. H. Schierling, started this work with the younger ones the previous year, but this year we have enlarged on this and included the older ones. At present we have four teachers and an interesting and eager group of youngsters. They meet every Wednesday after school, and this group is called, "The After-School-Bible-Story-Hour."

Our work along this line is greatly aided by having a source for suggestions and supplies within a few blocks from the church. A lady in the neighborhood spends most of her time creating mimeographed materials for Sunday school, after school, and vacation Bible school. Thus we are able to secure our lesson helps and handwork at her home, making the whole more interesting for all.

We are indeed grateful that we have the privilege of working in the city among these children. The work is always varied and interesting. As the months pass by we only hope that many of them will learn to know their Saviour, and we hope and pray that these little meetings we have with them may be instrumental in bringing them to Him.

MEDICAL SUPPLIES FINALLY REACH POLAND

A shipment of medical supplies valued at $2,000 was made to Brother M. C. Lehman from New York for Polish relief in October of 1941. Transportation difficulties detained the shipment which failed to reach Brother Lehman in Germany before his internment at the outbreak of war in December, 1941.

The supplies, however, reached Lisbon, Portugal, and later Geneva, Switzerland. Through the International Red Cross at Geneva the gratifying news has recently come that these supplies have now reached Poland where distribution was made to the inhabitants of Polish cities.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SATURDAY NIGHTS

In America Saturday afternoon and evening have come to be thought of as a kind of holiday. It marks the end of a week of work. It is the time we look to for relaxation, recreation, and change. It is a time of preparation for the sacred day which is to follow. When young people ask you from Saturday evening to Saturday evening: "What shall we do tonight?" "Where can we go?" "How can we have some fun?" What is your answer to them?

When We Were Young

One of the most frequent answers to the above questions is to talk about "what we used to do when we were young," as if this were the solution to the problems of the youth in this generation. Many of the recreational activities of our parents were the result of economic and social necessity rather than of voluntary choice. The husking bees, the cider "makings," the hay rides, the sleigh riding parties, the skating and coasting frolics, the "sings," the two or three day celebrations at weddings, and other forms of social activity were a reflection of the times. They also had great merit in that they were centered in the home or at best in the local neighborhood among intimate acquaintances. Furthermore, they were wholesome because they were non-commercial and all could participate in the activities.

But Now It's Different

But we don't solve the problem of what to do with our Saturday nights in this present age by longingly looking back and saying "that's what people used to do." Our modern young people are not confined to the local neighborhood or the distance a horse can travel in a single evening. The autombile, as a means of conveyance, makes it possible for people to drive far out of the local area and back again on the same evening without anyone knowing where they have been or what they've done. This may be hard on local gossips, but it is also hard on community solidarity and local social control. The temptations and attractions of modern recreation, whether wholesome or unwholesome, is almost one hundred per cent commercial.

The movies, the theatre, music concerts, ball games, swimming pools, roller skating, golf, tennis, horseback-riding, canoeing, boating and even picnicing are commercialized. Recreation is a business operated for profits. In most forms of modern recreation people pay money to sit and be amused. They are no longer participants but mere on-lookers. Since all of this recreation is taken out of the home and much of it out of the community the local church exercises no control over its quality and much of it is very low. In a Christian community the agency of God should be concerned about the kind of recreation its young people indulge in. The wholesomeness of our Saturday nights, in a large measure, will determine the quality of our meetings for fellowship and worship on the Sabbath. What is the Mennonite Church going to do about this pressing problem?

"When you dig another out of trouble, you find a place to bury your own."

"One way to break a habit is to drop it."

CALVARY

They took my blessed Lord away,
Reject condemned to die.
They led Him on to Calvary,
And there to crucify.
They mocked Him, struck Him on the head;
Then on to Pilate led.
They made a crown of cruel thorns,
And put it on His Head.

They put a gorgeous robe on Him
To represent a King.
And Pilate too consented thus.
To such an evil thing.
They bent their knees to worship
Him.
They greeted Him with scorns.
They took a reed and struck Him with,
Upon that crown of thorns.

When Pilate tried Him to release,
The cruel mob would cry,
Away with Him, away with Him.
Crucify Him, crucify.
They led Him on to Calvary.
His cross they made Him bear.
They pierced His hands, His feet with nails.
And crucified Him there.

The soldiers did their cruel task.
It was the best they knew.
Forgive O Father, Jesus prayed,
They know not what they do.
He died. They laid Him in the tomb.
Three days He did remain.
They sealed the tomb and set a watch,
Although it was in vain.

How to Win Certain People

In dealing with the three types of people whom we wish to help, the following approaches might be made:

I. How to deal with non-professing people. If the person who is visited says that he is not a church member, you might ask him one of the following questions and then seek to direct the discussion so that he will feel led to a decision to give his life to the Lord. (1) Wouldn't you like to be a Christian? We wish you were one. Do you know how to become a Christian? Let us tell you as best we can. (2) Have you ever given yourself to the Lord? Do you feel that you belong to God and that you are saved? Do you know how to do this? Let us tell you as best we can how to do this. (3) Do you have peace with God? Do you feel that you are rightly related to God? Let us tell you how to get right with God. (4) We wonder whether you realize how much you are missing by not being a Christian. Let us tell you what it means to us to be Christians. (Personal testimony) (5) We wonder whether you realize what Christ has done for you and all of us. Let us tell you something about this. (6) We wonder whether you realize what it will mean to you if you never accept Christ as Lord and Saviour. Let us face this thing.

II. How to deal with a lax church member. In visiting an indifferent church member, the following questions might lead to a profitable discussion. (1) What is the reason why you do not come to church services? (2) Is there anything we could do to make it easier for you to serve in the church again? (3) Would you prefer to go into another church? (4) Are you satisfied with Christ? And do you think Christ is satisfied with you? What do you think church membership implies? (5) Do you think you are true to your church vows? (6) We wonder whether you realize how much the church needs you and misses you. (7) How can the church perform its mission without the whole-hearted support of its members?

III. How to help those who have their church membership elsewhere. (1) Do you think you can serve the Lord in the best way when you hold your membership in a church of another community? (2) Have you considered the advisability of joining a church here? (3) Where do you feel most at home? (4) Do you keep up contact and support of the church to which you belong? (5) Is the church keeping in touch with you? (6) Would you be interested in transferring your membership? (7) Would you like to have one of the local ministers call on you?

Evangelism Committee

THE PACIFIC DISTRICT CONFERENCE OF MENNONITE CHURCHES OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF MENNONITE CHURCHES OF NORTH AMERICA WILL CONVENE AT REEDLEY, CALIFORNIA, JUNE 17 THROUGH JUNE 20.

After sending out a questionnaire to which all of the ministers in the district replied, we found that a majority of the churches favored having a conference in spite of transportation and rationing difficulties. At the invitation of the Reedley church, and due to the aforesaid difficulties, the Paso Robles church is willing to forego the privilege of entertaining the conference and is withdrawing in favor of the Reedley church.

Therefore, the Executive Committee of the Pacific District Conference is calling the conference to meet as mentioned before.

Pray much that the conference may be used and blessed of God to His glory.

EASTER MORN

O 'twas a joyous Easter morn
Where Christ, the King, arose
And left the cerements of death
Within that darkened tomb.

The sun shone forth in splendor;
The lilies burst in bloom
To greet the Lord and Saviour
Arisen from the tomb.

The angel of Jehovah
Had rolled away the stone
And Christ the Redeemer of Israel
Came forth unto his own.

To the watchers, aweary and heartsick,
And Apostles bowed in gloom
Came the Resurrection tidings,
He has risen from the tomb!

Hosanna, sang the Angels—
The victory is won!
Hosanna in the highest,
The Prince of Peace has come!

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Verney Unruh, North Newton, Kansas

APRIL 25—But thanks be to God, who giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ. I Cor. 15:57.

Today is Easter. It is an important day in the Christian year. Perhaps it is the most important, for it marks the victory of Christ over death. As a result new hope and meaning are added to the Christian life.

What is this victory? It is the lifting of the terrible weight of sin from man's shoulders. Sins are forgiven; burdens are lightened. All we need to do is go to the Father and cast all our cares upon him for he careth for us.

This victory is also the clearing of all doubt. We do not need to worry any more whether God is all-powerful or not. We can have victory through Lord Jesus Christ by believing on Him and living in harmony with His will. On this Easter let us reconsecrate our lives in service to Him.

APRIL 26—Did not our hearts burn within us, while he talked with us by the way? Luke 24:32b.

Christ's message was plain and simple. This is clearly shown here on the walk to Emmaus. These two disciples did not know who the preacher was; yet he was so powerful, his message was so clear and plain that their hearts burned within them.

Christ's message is still clear and plain today. The reason that our hearts do not burn within us is that we do not have His message in them. When we are concerned about the salvation of others, when we are concerned about being in harmony with God's will, and when the love of Christ dominates in our lives then our hearts will burn within us also.

APRIL 27—Blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. John 20:29b.

Many people could be Christians today but they lack faith. They cannot believe without seeing. True faith is more than this. Faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. (Heb. 11:1)

This kind of faith is exemplified in the Old Testament saints. There is something laudable and praiseworthy about it. It shows greater zeal in searching after truth. It is noble. Greatest of all it shows the divine power of the grace of God. Peter was blessed in his faith, because flesh and blood had not revealed to him that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God. Faith had revealed it to him. We, too, shall be blessed if we see not, yet believe.

APRIL 28—Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep. 21: 17d.

Three times Jesus had committed the care of His flock to Peter: Feed my Lambs; feed my sheep; feed my sheep. The lambs and sheep are Christ's flock, the Church which he hath purchased with his own blood. He is the chief shepherd. In this flock are lambs, young, and weak. The rest are sheep grown to maturity. It is the duty of the shepherd to care for his flock, to feed them.

The Church today is still the flock of Christ. The shepherds are ministers. It is their duty to feed the flock. Feed them then, also, if there are any which stray from the flock it is their duty to go find the lost and bring them back again safely to the fold.

APRIL 29—Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. Mark 16:5b.

Christ spoke these words to His disciples shortly before His Ascension. Before this they were to go only to the Jews. Now they were to go into all the world. Their duty was to preach the gospel of Christ to every creature. This meant Gentile as well as Jew.

What is the gospel? It is the history of Jesus Christ; His life, death, and resurrection. His blood saves us from the sin of the world. This is the gospel. Let it be preached everywhere to everyone.

This message is still as true today as it was then. The commission is also there. What are we doing about it? Are we testifying for Christ at every opportunity? Are we preaching the gospel to every creature?

APRIL 30—And many other signs truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name. John 20:30-31.

Jesus accomplished much here on earth. So much that all the books in the world could not record his works. These (the Gospel of John) were written that we might believe that Jesus is the Christ, and that believing we might have life. They were written first, to direct our faith. We must have these signs set before us to show that Jesus is the Christ. Secondly, it encourages our faith and invites us to believe. Men venture far to obtain advantage. Where can they find a greater advantage than having life and having it more abundantly?

THE CHURCH IS—

A teacher giving knowledge to the spiritually ignorant.
An evangelist carrying good news to the lost.
An altar for the meeting of God and His people.
A servant whose field of service is the world.
A minister bringing good cheer and hope to the lost.
A center for the rallying point of all community forces for good.
A starting place where souls begin their journey toward eternity.
It consecrates the cradle. . . sanctifies marriage. . . hallows the Christian grave.
How then can I do less than support it?

John P. Klassen, Mennonite Artist

John P. Klassen, Professor at Bluffton

The Mennonite church is fortunate in having produced an artist with the training and ability of Professor John P. Klassen. Born at Choritza, Ukraine, Russia, Mr. Klassen prepared for the university in the local schools. He then spent four years at the Predigerschule in Basel, Switzerland, where he studied theology. Later he spent five years at the Universities of Berlin and Munich in Germany where he received a thorough training in art. He and his family came to Canada as refugees in the fall of 1923. Since the fall of 1924 he has been teaching art and German at Bluffton College. Being well versed in all the major fields of art, Mr. Klassen has produced many fine paintings, sculptures, plaques, pottery, and sketches.

Professor Klassen believes that Mennonites have ideals and a history worthy of representation in art. His ambition has been to present the best of our traditions in various types of art, and the visitor to the Bluffton College Campus is always delighted to see the display of hundreds of pieces of art made by Mr. Klassen and his students.

Among other things Mr. Klassen has made busts in marble of Menno Simon and other leading Mennonite personages, as well as plaques and paintings of such leaders. He has vividly portrayed the sufferings of the Mennonites in Russia following the first World War. He has expressed the Mennonite ideal of peace in many ways, especially in a plaque based on, "They shall beat their swords into plow shares." He has treated many other religious and secular subjects, but space permits the mention of only a few of the many things he and his students have made.

The accompanying photograph of the "Horse and Fallen Rider" which recently appeared in the Bluffton College Bulletin is typical of his interests and work. This statue made by Dietrich Rempel while a student at Bluffton, under the direction of Mr. Klassen, shows what students inspired by their teacher have accomplished. In this statue Mr. Rempel, a young man in the Russian Ukraine during the Revolution, commemorated the death of his brother who was killed by bandits. Mr. Rempel escaped to America in 1921 and studied at Bluffton, graduating in 1929. His parents, like his brother, lost their lives in Russia. No wonder he portrayed the evident sympathy of the horse, when human good will seems to have been lacking and forgotten.

Mr. Klassen has prepared a series of slides of his work which he presents in illustrated lectures as opportunity permits. The devotion and noble spirit of Mr. Klassen make him a worthy representative of Mennonite conceptions of art.

This bronze statue of the "Horse and Fallen Rider" stands in the Bluffton College Library, near the entrance to the reading room.

GREATER THAN KINGS AND PARLIAMENT

"Here is a man who was born in an obscure village, the child of a peasant woman. He grew up in another obscure village. He worked in a carpenter shop until he was thirty, and then for three years He was an itinerant preacher. He never wrote a book. He never held an office. He never owned a home. He never had a family. He never went to college. He never put His foot inside a big city. He never traveled two hundred miles from the place where He was born. He never did one of the things that usually accompany greatness. He had no credentials but Himself. He had nothing to do with this world except the naked power of His divine manhood. While still a young man, the tide of popular opinion turned against Him. His friends ran away. One of them denied Him. He was turned over to His enemies. He went through the mockery of a trial. He was nailed upon a cross between two thieves. His executioners gambled for the only piece of property He had on earth while He was dying—and that was His coat. When He was dead He was taken down and laid in a borrowed grave through the pity of a friend.

"Nineteen wide centuries have come and gone and today He is the centerpiece of the human race and the leader of . . . progress.

"I am far within the mark when I say that all the armies that ever marched, and all the navies that ever were built, and all the parliaments that ever sat, and all the kings that ever reigned, put together have not affected the life of man upon this earth as powerfully as has that One solitary life."

TOO MUCH PLAY?

Below are some interesting quotations in regard to the relationship of play to health. They are taken from the April Hygeia, from an article written by John O. McReynolds.

"Work judiciously chosen and diligently performed, is much more satisfying and gratifying and also far more conducive to the joy of living than any form of play. Especially, before the war, an undue emphasis was placed on shorter hours of work and longer hours of play, with too much energy expended in the promotion and interest of play . . ."

"In the past few years, physicians have seen an increasing number of young college students with eye distress caused by the failure of play to perform its proper function of real relaxation. In order to play successfully, according to modern standards, the hardest work is often required. The high tension spirit of modern play often is the most exacting work, and it leaves its mark in the form of an exhausted state of the nervous system, with an actual elevation of blood pressure and also various digestive disturbances that react unfavorably on the delicate mechanism of the visual organs. This is not a theory but a fact repeatedly brought out in consultation with young boys and girls who are complaining of eye deficiencies that are not, as they think, primarily of ocular origin but are due mainly to nerve exhaustion."

"Therefore, the fundamental fact with regard to all play, all exercise and all work is that in no case should this activity be carried to the point of exhaustion. There has been developed in our country a kind of obsession to the effect that the strength of the individual is in proportion to the energy which he is required to expend. It is generally believed that for the earlier years of life he can afford sometimes to put forth excessive efforts and still return to a practically normal state through the recuperative powers inherent in youth. The records show, however, that the young men of pronounced athletic habits, showing extreme exhibitions of physical force, are not the ones who in the long run have the greatest longevity."

What "Sociology" Is

By Harold Gross

Sociology can be broadly defined as the science which studies society in an effort to understand it better: to discover the "laws" or general tendencies along which it develops; to locate and diagnose the "illnesses" and infections which affect it: to prescribe remedies for its ills; and to discover, if possible, the end or purpose toward which it is moving. Such a statement as to the function of sociology is too simple, but is sufficient for our purpose at the moment. In short, the main business of sociology is to learn about the relationship between people and the institutions which they produce and which in turn influence them for good or ill.

The best sociologists today recoginze that society progresses and is healthy only to the extent that it provides for the well-rounded development of persons (personality or character). Furthermore, it is a fact that the progress which has been made in this field has been along lines of truth taught nearly twenty centuries ago by Jesus. He held emphatically to the supreme worth of persons—but primarily because they are creatures with possibilities put there by God, and not merely because man reasons that they are precious.

Some sociologists (not all) and some people who profess being Christian have contended that the evils in society are caused only by social institutions and bad education. This is partly true, but is too simple an answer for what ails society. Bad education and perverted institutions do produce anti-social individuals. But culture and institutions are man-made! Sins and social evils are the outcome of evil choices by men. History gives ample evidence of this. Apart from education, individuals are born with a tendency to sin. The Kingdom of God on earth will come only following a redeeming act by God Himself within the hearts of people, and not through man's efforts alone with secular education or social planning. Society needs, however—along with the Christian Gospel—individuals who have a scientific knowledge of social truth taught by the best sociology.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

HISTORY AND CONTRIBUTIONS OF THE VARIOUS MENNONITE BRANCHES

Based on Booklet "Mennonites in America" by Dr. C. Henry Smith

I. Worship Service: Songs: "Come, let us all unite to sing," No. 439; "Lord, it belongs not to my care," No. 253. 2. Reading of Ps. 91, leader's remarks, and prayer. 3. Book review: Rosanna of the Amish (last half). 4. Offering for relief.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Each group of these Mennonites in America had its own background, its own experiences and therefore its own contribution to make to the denominational life. They did not speak the same language, did not use the same hymn books, nor the same forms of worship, but they all had the same Bible and held the same tenets of faith. Some of the differences were due to difference in temperament, the emotional emphasis meant much to some, to others the intellectual approach; but all of them agreed that religion must find expression in practical everyday life. They became known by their neighbors as a trustworthy and helpful people whose family life was one of integrity and wholesomeness. They gradually included Sunday school, prayer meetings, and the mission work in their church program. A healthy, normal growth was to be noted, despite incidents and happenings that are not praiseworthy.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. "The Pennsylvania Mennonites." 2. "The 'Old' Mennonites." 3. "The Amish Groups." 4. "The Russian Mennonite Groups." 5. "The General Conference." 6. "Related Groups."

IV. For Discussion:

Secure a good leader and discuss the chapter, "Keeping the Faith."

V. Food for Thought:

The various kinds of apples, Winesap, Grimes Golden, Delicious, and Roman Beauty have different flavors but they are all good and useful. Each group of Mennonites should acknowledge the fine qualities of other groups.

(Those desiring good material on the development of the General Conference might write to Mary Becker, Goessel, Kansas, for a paper on that subject. She might be willing to let those interested use it. —rw.)

The Origin of Mennonite Divisions in America (As given in "The Mennonites" by C. H. Smith)

Leader: Where can we find God?

First Intermediate: We can find God in nature. (Reads a poem bringing out the fact that God is seen in nature. Suggestions: "A Garden is a Lovesome Thing," "God's Autographs" by William Stidger, etc.)

Music Group—"This is My Father's World" (M. H., 48).

Second Intermediate: We can find God in the Bible. (Reads "Holy Bible, Book Divine.")

Music Group: "Wonderful Words of Life" (M. H., 494).

Leader: How can we make the presence of God real?

Sponsor: (Gives a ten minute talk on making God real. A few suggestions: The difference in knowing God and knowing about Him—the same as the difference in reading about a place in geography and taking a trip to this place, an actual experience. Some things must be done to know God: We must have faith, we must love him, we must commit our all to him and live for him, we must serve him.)

8. Worship in Offering

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

AN EVENING WITH THE BIBLE, Ps. 1:1,2;119: 97-104.

The Lord's Prayer

Prayer is man's opportunity to speak to God, and expect an answer. It is the ladder by which the Spirit may climb to the Father. Prayer should never be for display.

The Lord's Prayer is the model prayer. Many people do not know how to pray; some do not get into a prayer attitude, they look around, talk, or visit, and some can't pray. Why all these conditions? Chiefly, because they have not learned to pray and have not practiced prayer. That is a sad condition. Every Christian ought to be able to pray under any and all circumstances. It should not be vain repetition; prayers should not be said, they should be prayed.

God is often grieved by the way we pray to him. We should say a thousand informal prayers to God each day, as we work, or study or just walk along.

Our Lord's Prayer is true worship to God; it recognizes God as the Father and Creator and giver of all.

The Ten Commandments

These laws are God's will for us. They were given not to repress or hold us down, but to show us how we could have finer lives.

Jesus lived by these commandments. Christ summarized the ten commandments as the twin obligations of love to God and love to one's neighbor. When a person accepts Christ, he enters a world where he does things not because he has to, but because he wants to.

The first four laws are religious, defining the duties man owes to God, the last six laws are moral, telling us the duties men owe each other. These laws are practical and are very useful in our every day living.

The Twenty-Third Psalm

This is one of the finest pieces of literature in the Bible. This Psalm has meant more to more people than has almost anything else ever written.

This Psalm tells us of God's loving and powerful care for his children; it is also personal. He says, "The Lord is my Shepherd." Sixteen pronouns of the first person—I, me, my, mine are found in six brief verses. "The Lord is my Shepherd" everyday of the week, every month of the year, at home or in China, in peace or in war, in abundance or in famine, its meaning can never be exhausted.

This Psalm is the picture of a shepherd and his sheep. There is nothing in the world more helpless than a sheep. Its chief characteristic is its trusting gentleness. We humans are constantly called sheep in the Scriptures, we think we are strong, but not strong enough to keep wars out of our land.

In Palestine, the shepherd names each of his sheep and knows them intimately. On the road, the shepherd goes first and the sheep follow. The sheep know their master's voice. We too, follow a voice. But the person whose leader is God, will never want; God will care for and protect him. There are many voices calling, but the true sheep will not get confused, for the Lord is his shepherd, he knows his voice and will follow him.

WHAT SHOULD I DO WITHOUT JESUS?

Friends, though the burden seems hard to bear,
And no one round you seems to care
Just go to Jesus and kneel down in prayer,
He'll help you bear them all.

What would I do without Jesus,
The Lamb of Calvary?
What would I do without Jesus,
Who means so much to me?
He died on the cross to set me free
That I might live eternally
What would I do without Jesus
The Lamb of Calvary?

(The above lines were jotted down on the leaf of a calendar by Fred Peters of Henderson, Nebraska, shortly before his death. Fred was forty-five when he died. At the age of nine he became afflicted with creeping paralysis which left him an invalid.)

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

Three Camps Closing by May 1

Latest government policies, based on the desire to use conscientious objector manpower in direct food production, are responsible for the disbanding of certain C.P.S. camps. Camps at Howard, Pa., Marietta, Ohio, and Weeping Water, Nebraska, are the first on the list of Mennonite camps to be liquidated. These three camps will be closed by the first of May.

Men from the above camps will be transferred to forestry camps now in operation, to mental hospitals approved for C.P.S. labor, to individual farms in areas approved by the government, and to other forms of service.

Distribution of Mennonite Men in Camp

As of March 31, 1943, following is the distribution of Mennonite men in camp according to branch:

Mennonite	1060
General Conference Mennonite	499
Old Order Amish	298
Mennonite Brethren	155
Church of God in Christ Mennonite	104
Conservative Amish	83
Brethren in Christ	67

Reformed Mennonite	3
Reformed Amish Christian	2
Old Order River Brethren	1
Total	2,468

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Campees and Farm Labor

This note is presented with the view of correcting certain impression that are received as a result of prospective changes in the C.P.S. program.

(1) Men are being deferred for farming purposes, but it does not follow that men in camp will be released to return to their home farms.

(2) The increasing use of men in farm labor does not mean that they are reclassified. On the contrary, men placed on detached farm service are still in IV-E and their service is still under government and church supervision.

(3) Only government-approved areas can avail themselves of C.P.S. labor. Farmers outside this area cannot expect to secure this labor.

Civilian Bond Subscriptions Pass Million

As of March 24 a total of 6,896 bond subscriptions had been made. These subscriptions totaled $1,063,293.50. Of this amount $914,440.00 has actually been covered by bond issues, the balance awaiting further issue of government bonds. Mennonite subscriptions total $818,688.00.

IN MEMORIAM

REV. H. H. BARTEL was born on October 26, 1866, at Gombin, Poland. In 1876 he emigrated to the United States with his parents and settled with them in Kansas. There he married Mary Schroeder in 1887. In 1906 he settled thirty-five miles south of Humboldt, Saskatchewan. He died February 19, 1943. Ministers who took part in the funeral service in the North Star Mennonite Meetinghouse were: J. Gerbrandt, B. Ewert, Winnipeg; Rev. Schlabach, Guernsey; and Peter Janzen, Watrous.

FRED ROUPP, son of Goerge F. Roupp and Annie Senner Roupp, was born at Marion, South Dakota, October 30, 1886, and passed away at his home in Hesston, Kansas, February 25, 1943. He was baptized on March 4, 1906, and united with the Pennsylvania Mennonite Church near Hesston. On July 7, 1912, he became a member of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas. In 1910 he married Elisabeth Miller, who now survives him with the children, Mrs. Edith Zehr, Sweet Home, Oregon, and Weldon of Hesston.

HELEN REGIER CLAASSEN was born in Fairmount Township, Butler County, Kansas, on September 15, 1902, and died on February 24, 1943. She attended Bethel College for four years and taught school in Wyoming for two years. In 1928 she was married to Paul Claassen. She is mourned by her husband, Carolyn, age eleven, and Olin, age ten. The funeral was held in the meetinghouse of the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas.

HENRY P. GOERTZ, son of Rev. Heinrich Goertz and Sara Pankratz Goertz, was born October 14, 1860, in Alexanderwohl, South Russia, and died in the Bethel Home for the Aged, Newton, Kansas, on February 22, 1943. He came to America with his parents in 1874 and settled with them in Marion County. In 1881 he was baptized and joined the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. In 1887 he was married to Susanna Isaak. In 1937 they celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary.

JAKE WARKENTIN, a member of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Los Angeles, California, was fatally injured on January 13 and died at the age of forty-five years. He was the son of Brother and Sister J. K. Warkentin of Inman, Kansas. His wife, the former Matilda Heidebrecht of Hydro, Oklahoma, and two daughters, Elaine and Adell, and one son, Gary, survive him.

BETHESDA MENNONITE CHURCH

Henderson, Nebraska

"Christ the Lord is ris'n today, Alleluia!" It is a blessing, joy, and comfort that in these trying days we can worship a living Redeemer; in Him we can have the victory that overcometh the world.

We rejoice that also in our church we see advancement. The basement has been improved with Sunday school equipment. Orange crate chairs have been replaced by permanent chairs and benches. Little tables and coatracks have also been added. In a Junior department of over 200 children up through the sixth grade such improvements are very important so that teachers can do their best work.

Our C.E. is remembering the army and C.P.S. camp boys with letters. With more than fifty boys gone from our church the C.E. has quite a task and mission. The Young Women's Missionary Society also remembers a group of the boys every month by sending them packages, most generally something to eat.

In March the offering for our C.P.S. camps was $328.98. In February it was $458.71.

Our choirs are rehearsing an Easter cantata, "He That Liveth," to be given on Easter Day. Even with gas rationing our farmers will come to town for choir practice. Our pastor has a catechism class of twenty-six members. Last year seventy-five were added to the church through baptism.

The Nebraska All-Mennonite Sunday School convention will convene in the Bethesda Church on May 9. The convention theme will be, "Training for Worship."

—Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota: In March we were visited by a quartet from the Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp. Their message in song was a real inspiration. From March 28 to April 4, Rev. J. J. Esau of Bluffton, Ohio, conducted evangelistic meetings in our church which were well attended. —Mrs. Theo W. Nickel

—The hymn, "When I survey the Wondrous Cross" was written by Isaac Watts (1674-1748) an English Congregationalist minister, the "father of English hymnody." Matthew Arnold called this the "most majestic hymn in the English language." It is based on Galatians 6:14—"God forbid that I should glory save in the Cross of our Lord Jesus Christ, by whom the world is crucified to me, and I unto the world."—Bulletin, Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas.

—Walter H. Judd, congressman from Minnesota and formerly a missionary in China, recently demanded the repeal of the 1924 exclusion act (in regard to Chinese and Japanese) and it is understood that he may introduce a bill for repeal. "To date, 3,015 Japanese-American evacuees have been resettled and there are 3,434 more who have received permission to leave the Relocation Centers but who are unable to do so because they have not as yet obtained jobs on the outside."—Fellowship.

—Under Dutch law, conscientious objection is recognized as a ground for refusing military service subject to a C.O. undertaking some kind of alternative service.—Reporter

—John Reimer of Inman, Kansas, who now is working in the office of the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, has charge of the government C.P.S. property record. The property is about a half million dollars.

—Gerhard Wiens who died in Los Angeles recently wrote a story of his life which was to be submitted to the Rundschau. In this article he mentions that he and H. A. Goerz started the German Teachers' Institute in Hillsboro, Kansas, which existed for twenty years and then gave way to the English. The school was founded in 1893, and also at that time Wiens served as superintendent of the Sunday school of the Hillsboro Mennonite Church. From 1895 to 1898 he served as instructor in the German school of the Emmaus Church near Whitewater, Kansas. Later Wiens went to Elkhart, Indiana, and from there he went to California at the request of the Santa Fe. He viewed large tracts of land suitable for Mennonite settlement and chose the region around Reedley, California. When August Eyeman of Moundridge, Kansas, also decided upon this region, the Mennonite settlement began. Wiens worked out an illustrated brochure of the San Joaquin Valley for the Santa Fe. Ten thousand copies of it were printed. Wiens moved back to Hillsboro where he worked with the paper now known as the Hillsboro Journal, and then he moved back to California to remain there. His wife lives at 4918 Grenshaw Boulevard, Los Angeles.

—Brother Albert Schultz while conducting evangelistic services at the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, recently, spoke on the subject "God's Medicine for the Ills of His People," in which he told about the Pearl Harbor catastrophe.

—"According to the Bureau of the Census, the German speaking group is the largest (of the foreign language groups) in the United States. There are 4,949,000 German Americans born and raised in homes where German, not English, was the spoken language." (There are more people of German descent in the United States than the figure given. However, the number mentioned spoke German in the home rather than English.) In this country there are 149 German language newspapers. The second largest foreign language group is the Italian American. The Polish group is third.

—West Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., Sister Augusta Schmidt, missionary from India and now a student at Biblical Seminary, New York City, spoke to our church on April 4. She talked of the children in India and of the school life of the Indian children at our mission. Mrs. Sarah Oberholtzer was ninety-one years old on April 5. Brother and Sister Samuel Bauman, parents of Dr.

Harvey Bauman, completed fifty years of married life on April 8. They were married by Rev. A. P. Shelly.—Shirley Ingalls

—The Johannestal Mission Society plans to celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary on April 23, 1943, at 8 p.m., at the church.—Mrs. J. A. Ewert

—The East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa., ordained its first missionary on April 18 when Abraham Unruh was ordained by Brother Sylvan Lehman, President of the Eastern District Conference. Brother and Sister Unruh and family plan to begin their work soon after May 1 near Manchester, Clay County, Kentucky. The pastor writes, "Mr. and Mrs. Unruh . . . will be our first full time Christian workers to enter the Lord's work." Mr. Unruh is a brother to Rev. D. J. Unruh of Pratum, Oregon. Ministers who participated in the ordination service were: A. J. Neuenschwander, Howard G. Nyce, Howard Landes, Olin Krehbiel, Sylvan Lehman, and H. D. Burkholder, pastor of the East Swamp Church. From the bulletin of this church we take this announcement: "Many of you are interested in the progress made through the mission box placed in the vestibule for the purpose of supporting the Unruhs in the Kentucky Mountains. You have averaged approximately $10.00 per Sunday. . . .Children have been bringing their pennies . . . God can do much with the little fishes that are yielded to Him."

—In announcing a meeting of the church council of the Deep Run (Pa.) Mennonite Church, the pastor states, "The purpose of these meetings is to see in what way we can improve our work at the church and increase its effectiveness. Our church should not stand still, but it must go forward. This requires the united effort of both congregation and pastor. If you have some suggestions regarding the work of the church contact one of the councilmen and he can bring it with him to the meeting where it can be discussed."

—Bluffton College students participated in a nationwide survey of opinion on vital questions affecting the post-war world on April 13. The survey, sponsored by the National Intercollegiate Christian Conference and the National Peace conference, with the Gallup Poll acting in an advisory capacity, was conducted locally by the Bluffton Y.W.C.A. Answers will be tabulated and turned over to the National Opinion Poll for inclusion in a national tabulation to be released to the press of the nation and to officials of the United States government. Rev. W. B. Weaver of Danvers, Illinois, will conduct three pre-Easter services on the Bluffton college campus, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. Dr. L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, announced Friday that students would be granted vacation from classes on Good Friday, April 23, and Saturday, April 24, preceeding Easter. The Bluffton College Board of Trustees met on the Bluffton campus for their semi-annual meeting, all day Tuesday, April 13. Annual election of officers was held at that time. In the evening of April 13, "Prexy and Son," three-act play by Fred Eastman, was presented for the Board by the Junior class of the college. The story of the play is based on the ever-growing conflict between the old church-supported liberal arts college and the new state-supported technical institution.

—The First Mennonite Church, Colfax, Washington, will commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of its organization on June 13. The congregation has a beautiful meetinghouse and a parsonage which cost $4,500 in 1937. Some of the labor for building the latter was donated. Harley King is the pastor of this congregation which consists of Mennonites and Methodists. The Methodists have been there over fifty years.

—Rev. C. F. Plett of Freeman Junior College was the special speaker at services held by the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, April 21-23. We quote from the bulletin of this church, "We welcome to the church today Miss Marie Peters, one of our members who is doing missionary work near Redby, Minnesota, and her friend, Miss Esther Iceman, an Indian Christian who accompanies her.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: "Miss Helen M. Epp, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. J. B. Epp, Lincoln, Nebraska, has handed in her application for mission work in Africa under the Sudan Interior Mission. We are praying that other members of congregation will heed the call to 'full-time missionary service.' " Missionary and Mrs. P. A. Penner are to serve the two Beartice churches from April 20 to 26.

—A pastor writes, "They have, by the way, subscribed 100 per cent to The Mennonite or Bundesbote last year and this year. This helps to keep church causes and needs in front of them continually."

—Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary of the Home Mission Board, went to Ontario, Canada, to be there April 12-15 for a meeting of the home mission committee of the Ontario churches which considered problems also of interest to our board. The brother also spoke in Waterloo, Toronto, Vineland, and Leamington as the representative of our home mission board. Brother Neuenschwander also recently spoke to the New York Mennonite Fellowship on home mission work. Speaking of C.P.S. support this pastor states in his bulletin, "The spirit of brotherhood would vanish if only those churches should contribute that have men in these camps."

—Freeman Junior College: Special efforts are being made to impress upon the Freeman Junior College constituency the importance of Christian training in these days. To this end programs have been given in most of the surrounding churches and in some of the churches in Minnesota. Before the end of the summer such programs are to be given in all of the churches in the Northern District Conference area. Churches have been very gracious in opening their doors to this type of work. Not only is the importance of Christian training stressed at these meetings but also the importance of retaining our rich Mennonite heritage. This work will be continued after the close of school by Rev.

C. F. Plett and Gerhard Toews who will also contact prospective students in the various communities. On Thursday of each week during the regular chapel period the Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. have their separate meetings. During this period the members of the faculty have also been meeting alone for a season of prayer. Members of the faculty have been taking turns to lead these prayer sessions and the arrangement has proved very satisfactory.

—J. D. U.

—"I can remember faces, but not names." So says many a person who wishes that he knew the name of someone. This statement brings out the point that most of us are able to recognize that which we have seen once or more times with our eyes when we see it again, but that it is difficult for us to remember thoughts of what we saw. The same principle holds true in taking pictures. When we take them we are so full of what we take that we think we shall never forget the people and the circumstances. Later when we show the picture to others, we discover that we have forgotten a great many interesting details about the picture. Now it happens that missionaries, church workers, and others take pictures of which cuts are later made for our church papers. If these cuts are to have their maximum value, then an interesting and adequate description or story must accompany them. This means that whoever submits a picture for a cut must take special pains to "tell" others about the message or story that is evident to him in the picture and which impressed him even more when he took the picture. Pictures with an interesting story to them are very valuable. —rw.

—The Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, has a chorus and orchestra numbering approximately 125. They have been rehearsing faithfully for the annual rendition of the "Messiah." It will be sung for the home church and also for the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman. An interesting and inspirational C.E. program was held when the program committee worked out a program but did not assign the numbers and then on the night of meeting asked volunteers to draw their assignment.

—Bulletin, Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, Nebraska: The Freeman Junior College Ladies Quartet is expected on May 2. Missionary Wilhelmina Kuyf is to be there from April 30 to May 2. On April 25 the church choirs will sing the cantata, "He That Liveth" by Ira B. Wilson. Baptismal services are to be held on June 13. The Young Women's Mission Society plans to have a mission sale next fall. On March 21 a quartet from the Denison, Iowa, C.P.S. camp visited. Brother Dave Suderman came along and gave an inspiring talk on the C.O. faith. A number of boys on their way to service in mental hospitals stopped at home. In the Sunday school notes of this little paper it says, "Have you arranged for your mission chicks? . . .Or if you want to have a garden plot, or any other project, see ... about it." The Bible school of Henderson gave its closing program on February 28.

—Bulletin, Menno Mennonite Church, Lind, Washington, ". . .To come late is to disturb the teachers or the superintendents. Especially is this true in the children's department. Children arriving late invariably upset the group and spoil the effect of the story or other activity being carried on. Please, be considerate of others. Come on time."

—Brother E. W. Baumgartner of Berne, Indiana, recently gave the dedicatory address when the new infirmary of Adams County was opened.

—Grace Mennonite Church, Lansdale, Pa., "In spite of severe gas rationing the church and Sunday school meetings are very well attended. We are indebted for that to the good shepherd of this flock, Rev. Olin Krehbiel, who always have very inspiring messages. The past three Sundays his sermons dealt with "The Face of Jesus," "The Hands of Jesus," and "The Feet of Jesus." All three topics proved to be quite interesting and bound us closer to our Saviour and Master. Our young people's society is actively engaged in helping relieve duties in the church and community. Twenty-six of our young men are now in the service of their country. Only one of these is in a C.P.S. camp. We hope that soon all of these boys will again be able to return to their homes and that 'peace' will soon reign upon this troubled earth. We know that some day the Prince of Peace will come into His own, and then all our cares and heartaches will be no more."—Mrs. Geo. H. Frazee, Jr., Corr.

—Brother Elmer E. S. Johnson, who is retiring from his teaching duties at Hartford Theological Seminary, writes that at present there are seven Mennonites at this school. (Perhaps, Dr. Johnson will now find time to put down on paper some of his vast knowledge of church history.)

—Brother Edmund Miller states in a recent bulletin that he and his wife made forty-six pastoral calls the first quarter and covered a distance of 1,345 miles to do so. They try to visit each church family several times during the year.

Touch Not Mine Anointed

Hazel Gray

The warm sunshine of an early spring afternoon shone through the iron bars and reflected on the haggard countenances of two young men who waited anxiously in a prison cell. As the long evening wore on they talked of their boyhood days. In the course of their conversation the elder one asked, "Billy, why do you seem so bitter when I mention the church where we used to attend service?"

"Yes, I used to go to church with my parents and elder brothers and sisters. The services always made a profound impression upon my mind. As I listened to the preacher a feeling of sacred awe would steal over me. The holy influence would linger after the benediction and on the homeward jounrey. I couldn't understand how the members of my family could speak so lightly of the minister and his message; making his supposed shortcomings the topic of dinner table conversation. To me the services had been sacred and holy. I had longed with great intensity to tell the world about Jesus like the preacher did, only to find his message had been faulty, his conduct all wrong, and the church needed a different type of preacher.

"In the course of time a new minister would come to our church. I would listen eagerly to the dinner table conversation, hoping the new preacher was just right. He never was.

"Finally, in disgust I quit going to church. My parents pled with me to give my heart and life to Jesus. I was often deeply convicted of sin. I felt sure should I give my heart and life to Jesus that He would call me into the ministry. It seemed I couldn't bear to be criticized and held under a 'looking glass' all the time like the ministers who came to our church. In trying to get away from the conviction that was eating my heart, I fell in with a gay, pleasure-loving crowd—you know the rest of my story."

After a painful silence Billy raised his head and with tear-dimmed eyes continued: "Now, I am not blaming my family that I am here, nor trying to justify myself. I am thinking of the vast number of good, well-meaning parents who have fallen into the habit of criticizing their minister, rating him by the severest standards they know; not realizing the influence they may be having upon their children or their neighbors' children. But the most pitiable part is when their children grow up to be skeptical of all that's high and holy! They never guess the cause might lie at their own door."

(Taken from the Gospel Banner, organ of the Mennonite Brethren in Christ denomination)

The Name "Mennonite"

". . . so only those who endorse the standards of faith and life espoused by such pioneer Mennonite leaders as Menno Simons, Conrad Grebel, Dietrich Philips, George Blaurock, Felix Manz, and others through whom the Mennonite Church was brought into being have a right to bear the name Mennonite. A denominational name means nothing unless it stands for a creed by which said denomination is governed, and only they who are faithful in promulgating and exemplifying the tenets of faith and life maintained by the denomination to which they belong have a right to bear the name."

—Gospel Herold

Home Reading

It is a rare thing that I go into a home without seeing one or more newspapers. Even the very poorest have a newspaper with the "funnies." Brethren think nothing of stopping on the way home from meeting and paying ten cents or more for a Sunday paper. Our very best religious papers cost less than four cents a week, and are filled with worthwhile reading matter. Reading them draws you closer to God and to the brethren! We have thousands of homes in the brotherhood without gospel papers. But we cannot plead poverty. If any are so poor they cannot raise four cents a week for a good gospel paper, there are many brethren who would gladly donate the paper . . . . Often filthy magazines are allowed to come into the home. When I see these lying around Christian homes, I know I am in another home that does not put the kingdom of God first. The environment is not right. The atmosphere is not conducive to Christian living.—Fred E. Dennis in the American Christian Review

Peace Section Explains Bond Issue

Are the same Bonds available at local banks as those subscribed through Provident Trust Company? Many of our people are being told they can buy the same bonds locally. Much confusion has arisen in consequence. Certain of the Bonds which formerly were War Bonds are no longer in this category. This is true only of the new issues. And these new issues were to be released only after the old ones were exhausted. As a special concession to the Peace Churches, the Treasury released these new issues of non-War Bonds in advance to Provident Trust Co. to be used in our Civilian Bond program. So far as we know, these new non-War issues are not yet on the general market. We fear that some conscientious people may have unknowingly subscribed to War Bonds.

Are Bonds purchased through local banks serving the same purpose as those subscribed through Provident Trust Co., provided they are the same issues? No, they are not. The program now in operation for alternate subscriptions provides regular data for the Treasury in the adjusting of State and County quotas. It is definitely marked as conscience money. It leaves a witness of our convictions in relation to finances. This testimony is lost where subscriptions are entered otherwise.

The new Bond Drive has seven offerings. These are rather widely varied. Some are probably not objectionable in themselves; but the line of distinction, which is already thin enough, diminishes almost to the vanishing point. If subscribed through the regular War Bond solicitor, there is no witness of conscience against war financing. Subscriptions to Provident Trust Co., on the approved forms, could be given the solicitor, thus getting local recognition.

We are still striving for a better plan. We hope eventually to get a bond issued, the proceeds of which will go for relief and reconstruction. The only way that we can probably convince the Government that such a bond issue will pay is by our liberal response to the available program; that is, by sending subscriptions through the recognized channel, Provident Trust Co.

When a better plan is approved, it will be made generally known. Meanwhile we urge you to cooperate in trying to keep what we have until we get something that is proven better. Otherwise we may be in jeopardy of losing the advantages thus far gained by much effort. Will you lay these facts before your people?

Sincerely yours,
H. S. Bender, Chairman
Jesse W. Hoover, Secretary

A Further Statement

Above is a letter relating to government bonds sent out by the M.C.C. We received this notice on March 21. We urge our people to consider the notice in the March 20 issue of The Mennonite in the light of new facts presented in the above letter.—Western District Peace Committee

Wanted: Pictures

The most effective teaching is done by object lessons. God used that method in Old Testament times (Jer. 1:18,19); Christ employed that method in his day, and teachers have practised it successfully all through the ages.

Impressions through the eye-gate are usually more effective than through the ear-gate. Therefore pictures play such a tremendous part in spreading knowledge. Propagandists know that and therefore exploit those means to the uttermost.

History can be best and most vividly brought to our attention by pictures. One picture of Mennonite life of the seventeenth or eighteenth century can do more than page long descriptions. The same way people of the future will speak concerning pictures of our day.

Mennonite history is developing very rapidly today. Let us preserve pictures which characterize our life. For one, we think of our C.P.S. camps. Future generations will benefit greatly if we preserve pictures of them. The Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas, is in position to take good care of such pictures. We would therefore like to urge camp leaders to send in good pictures of general camp views as well as of characteristic phases of camp life. Such work will be greatly appreciated.

OPPORTUNITIES TO TEACH BIBLE SCHOOL

Very recently The Mennonite brought a statement from the Education Committee of the Western District Conference regarding the vacation Bible schools conducted in many of our churches each year.

In this issue the Education Committee is making an earnest appeal to those who are capable of teaching in these schools to get in touch with either the members of the Education Committee or their pastors to offer their help as teachers in these schools. It is hoped that those who have the talents, the training, and the missionary spirit to serve in such schools will at once write to the Teacher Placement Bureau, North Newton, Kansas.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

It Is Fulfilled

By Rodolphe C. Petter

(By mistake the following conclusion was omitted from Brother Petter's article in the last mission number.)

Of Cheyenne Christians now with the Lord I personally recall four Oklahoma men, sons of prominent chiefs. They lived, labored and died in the Lord, witnessing for Him among their people. Here on the Lame Deer cemetery lies also the son of an old chief. He himself, like his famous father, was also an honored chief at the time when he became a Christian. With burning zeal he embraced Christ and witnessed untiringly and unafraid for his Saviour, in life, in conduct, and on his death bed.

On the same cemetery is the grave of a noble Cheyenne Christian woman, whose father, a prominent chief in the tribe is still living. God chose such sons and daughters of prominent leaders in the tribe to be His witnesses. Is that a mere coincidence?

In November of the year just past two Montana Cheyenne men were ordained to be ministers of the Word. These are not novices, for they have already served sixteen and twelve years respectively as evangelists. The father of the one was a chief who endeavored to influence his co-chiefs, yes even heathen priests to be friendly to the mission. He himself became a Christian and now in heaven it must be a special joy to him to know his eldest son as an ordained Cheyenne minister of the Word, proclaiming the gospel message to his people.

The other one of the two so recently ordained here at Lame Deer is the grandson of a former famous Cheyenne chief who skillfully led a large number of his homesick people, taken to Oklahoma as prisoners of war, back to their former haunts here in Montana. This, in spite of being pursued by government cavalry troops who followed hard on their heels to overtake them, if possible, and force them to return to the southland. His grandson, born here, had aspirations even as a boy. In spite of the opposition of his parents he left home to attend an Indian boarding school near Great Falls in the northern part of the state. Later he was initiated into certain religious ceremonies of his tribe, and so ranks high among his people. Having heard the message of salvation in Christ he was convinced that it embraced all the lack he still felt. He became a faithful helper in the mission work and served tirelessly for sixteen years. Now he too was duly ordained as native minister of the Word.

His grandfather led his people out of the misery and bondage they had experienced in the South, and now his grandson has become a leader in the cause of Christ to lead his people out of a greater bondage into the liberty of Christ.

Besides these leaders there are also some staunch Christian women whose light shines all unknown to the outside world. Thus, as we labor, we are fully persuaded that no matter "how great the darkness of the whole world, it is powerless to extinguish even the flickering light of one small candle." Most assuredly all that was accomplished on the Cross when our crucified Lord cried, "It is fulfilled," avails also for our Cheyenne Indians and our Cheyenne field. Yes, "IT IS FULFILLED."

Questions Used In Study

High school students belonging to the two Mennonite churches at Beatrice, Nebraska, meet weekly for a study period. The first part of this present school year they took through with their teacher Walter Dyck booklet number three of the "Mennonites and Their Heritage" series. Brother Dyck worked out a series of questions for each chapter which the students then answered for a check-up on their study. Below is a list of questions based on chapter six, "Emphasis on Christian Home and Family Life." Undoubtedly, those desiring a set of these questions could secure them from Brother Dyck at 1408 North 9th Street. Others may want to work out their own. It is well to mimeograph such questions on sheets that the students can use for answering.

1. Why are there so many divorces in America today?
2. Why are social measures weak in dealing with divorce?
3. Why have Mennonites emphasized the importance of home life?
4. What did Jesus say concerning divorce?
5. Name three convictions which make divorce impossible.
6. Is divorce permitted in the Bible?
7. How does the church suffer when divorces are permitted?
8. Is remarriage permitted after a divorce?
9. What should a man or woman expect of a prospective mate?
10. What generally happens when a Christian marries a non-Christian?
11. Why is it generally inadvisable for a person to marry one outside of one's denomination?
12. For what reason isn't a home complete without children?
13. What advantage is there to making the home the center of a child's life?
14. In how far is the church dependent on the home for its success?
15. How may I help in improving the relationship in the home in which I now live?

A Negro girl, Margaret Walker of New Orleans, was chosen by Stephen Vincent Benet as winner of 1942's competition for the Yale Series of Younger Poets. She is the first Negro to win the prize since the competition was begun in 1919 for poets who give promise of contributing literature for the future of America. Her poems speak of and for her race.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE

"Wherefore Born?"

To ask this question of ourselves and of our institutions is to come to grips with a fundamental problem. If we can answer that question we have really defined what we conceive to be God's purpose in life for ourselves and our organizations. It is the failure on the part of many to ask this question and their unwillingness to struggle for the answer that results in so much hazy thinking and aimless drifting.

Our Conference

If the members of the General Conference were canvassed with the question "For what purpose was this conference organized?" I wonder how many would be able to answer correctly? And if those answering correctly were asked a second question, namely, "Is the Conference still consciously pursuing its original goal?" how many would be able to answer affirmatively?

It was a surprise to me some years ago when I discovered that the General Conference of Mennonites of North America was organized for the express purpose of uniting all Mennonites so that together they might more effectively preach the gospel. It was a surprise because I had heard so little of this original objective that I never knew it to be a basic aim of our conference. I had always supposed that the General Conference was the result of just another church quarrel.

The Beginning

A resolution of the first General Conference held at West Point, Iowa, May 28-29, 1860, clearly reveals what was in the minds of the founders. "It is a matter of gratification to every friend and supporter of the Mennonite doctrines to know that within the United States and Canada there are about 128,000 Mennonites. But at the same time it is humiliating to know that this denomination has never, since its existence in America, constituted an ecclesiastical organization; that is, has failed entirely to cooperate as a general church. But most deplorable of all, seems to us, is the fact that, just because of the lack of fraternity among those who still cling to the Mennonite doctrines, there is in many places a constant increase of factionalism and a corresponding decline in spiritual life. Because they recognize this state of affairs many ministers and members have for many years earnestly desired that an intimate and fraternal cooperation might be gained.

"Accordingly a number of ministers and members in the western states issued a call for a general conference . . . for the purpose of considering ways and means for the unification of all Mennonites of North America, conformable to I Cor. 12:12-27."

How strengthened would be our Christian witness; how much more powerful our peace testimony if Mennonites stood shoulder to shoulder today in one united body. "Come now, let us reason together." "Wherefore born?"

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Bernhard Bargen is Professor of Commerce at Bethel College. He is the author of several texts in this field and of numerous articles in commercial magazines.

C. H. Suckau is pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, which has a membership of 1283, the largest in the General Conference. Brother Suckau served as missionary in India from 1909 to 1928.

Abraham Warkentin is Professor of German and Bible at Bethel College. He also is librarian of the Mennonite Historical Library located at North Newton. He also serves the First Mennonite Church, Newton, part time.

Rodolphe C. Petter, missionary to the Cheyenne Indians for more than fifty years, reduced the Cheyenne language to writing, discovered and systematized its grammer, translated Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, large portions of the Old Testament, and the entire New Testament.

THE PREACHER

The preacher has a great time:
If his hair is gray
  he is old;
If he is a young man,
  he hasn't any experience;
If he has ten children,
  he has too many;
If he has none
  he isn't setting a good example;
If his wife sings in the choir,
  she is presuming;
If she doesn't
  she isn't interested in her husband's work;
If a preacher reads from notes,
  he is a bore;
If he speaks extemporaneously,
  he isn't deep enough.
If he stays at home in his study,
  he doesn't mix enough with the people;
If he is seen around on the streets,
  he ought to be at home getting a good sermon;
If he calls on some poor people,
  he is playing the grandstand;
If he calls at the home of the wealthy,
  he is an aristocrat;
Whatever he does,
  Someone could have told him to do better.

THE MENNONITE DEACONESS HOME AND HOSPITAL

I. The Hitching Post

Dr. H. M. Hepperlen, Sr., tied his horse to the hitching post at the corner of the hospital grounds. It was the morning for the first operation to be performed at the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital. Sister Marie Wedel, in the office, must have felt the importance of the occasion. Perhaps she commented on it; no doubt, she mentioned the heat that was already making itself felt.

Upstairs, Sister Katie Penner was waiting for him in the operating room. She had sharpened the knives on the whetstone so that they were razor keen, but he tested them with a careful finger, and gave them another stroke in honor of the occasion. One Sister put on white gown and rubber gloves, because she was to assist him. Another was ready with the cone for the anaesthetic; she punched two holes in the can of ether, and the floor nurses brought in the patient. She was Miss Katie Hamm; she was about to lose her appendix. The operation was successful, for the patient, now Mrs. Herman Thimm, still lives in Beatrice, Nebraska. Dr. Hepperlen no longer walks up the stairs to the operating room, but his son does—or he may, if he will, ride the elevator.

The Mennonite Deaconess Home and Hospital had been dedicated on July 17, 1911. The local tentmaker had put up a tent on the same corner where the hitching post stood, to protect the speakers from rain or sun, and it was that tent which, indirectly, supplied the hospital with its first out-patient. A storm arose with a high wind; the tent blew over. Miss Mary Epp was hit by a prop and had to be carried in to be revived and comforted. Probably her sister, one of the first probationers, learned an early and vivid lesson in nursing on that afternoon.

The probationers paid for their experience and training with long hours of hard work. The laundry was in the basement; there were three long flights of stairs to climb to hang the clean clothes in the attic breeze. Sister Elizabeth began her probation in the kitchen, pumping her own water, dressing her own chickens, baking her own bread, preparing and planning the delicacies that a weak stomach can tolerate. While the potatoes were boiling, she might be called to sit with a patient who was just coming out from under the anaesthetic. She would return to the potatoes, running down the stairs, hoping that they had not burned when lunch time came. She is now chief anaesthetist, and there are others who watch that the potatoes do not burn.

There were always backs to be rubbed, floors to scrub, the thousand routine tasks that the young nurse had to learn to do gracefully and well. Often the probationers and nurses in training spent twelve or fourteen hours a day caring for their patients, under the exacting supervision of Sister Marie. After that was finished, there was yet the garden to be hoed and watered with a sprinkling can. They served their turns in the kitchen, and finally, there were classes, sandwiched in when the doctors had time to give. Dr. Hepperlen's anatomy class came in the evenings, when it required devotion indeed to their profession for the young women to remember the strange words; clavicle, carotid, metatarsal, that would open the door to the miracle of the human body.

The hospital community was as rich with joy as

with labor, and ascended occasionally even to humor. The story is still told of the chicken that got loose from its pen, during the time when the sisters raised their own eggs and poultry. The caretaker and the sisters dashed off in hot pursuit after it. All over the lot she flew, squawking and screeching. They all were out of breath when she was finally caught. The caretaker held her neck in an iron grip and spoke in vigorous German. "It is not customary to kill, but you will be punished." And the punishment was duly administered.

It was Elder Gerhardt Penner who first conceived the idea of a hospital, sponsored and built by the Mennonite Church of Beatrice. "We have been here for forty years," he told his congregation, "we have been protected by the Lord. Should we not erect a living memorial to His great kindness to us?" And the congregation agreed with him. Peter Jansen donated a large plot of ground at the edge of the city, opposite his own white house. His neighbors, the Kilpatricks, gave the landscaping.

Since the Mennonites had come from Russia and Germany, it was natural that they should adopt the system of nurses' training that they had known there. In Germany, all nurses were sisters, women who had dedicated their lives to the service of God through the tending of the sick. The sisterhoods gave the only training that existed. So from the Evangelical Deaconess Hospital in St. Louis came Sister Marie Wedel to be the first superintendent. During that first year, others sisters were training, first to be nurses, then to fill positions of greater responsibility and skill: laboratory technician, anaesthetist, chief surgical nurse, obstetrical nurse. Only deaconesses were accepted for training at first, and they learned as apprentices, by watching those who had mastered the techniques, then by imitating. State Board Examinations, designed to assure completeness of training, were to come later; when they did, Sister Elizabeth was one of the first nurses in Nebraska to bear the honored, hard-won title, Registered Nurse.

Today, this hospital is not conducting the course for training graduate, registered nurses but has chosen rather to offer a shorter two year course designed for those who desire to do only bedside nursing. During the training period the student is paid a monthly salary besides receiving board, room, and laundry. The atmosphere is replete with the traditions of our forbears and is most helpful in molding young lives into useful Christian women. Enrollment for the next class begins June 15, 1943.

TINY THINGS

The murmur of a waterfall a mile away,
The rustle when a robin lights upon the spray,
The lapping of a lowland stream on dipping boughs,
The sound of grazing from a herd of gentle cows,
The echo from a wooded hill of a cuckoo's call,
The quiver through the meadow grass at evening fall;
Too subtle are these harmonies for pen or rule,
Such music is not understood by any school;
But when the brain is overwrought, it hath a spell
Beyond all human skill and power to make it well.

The memory of a kindly word far long gone by,
The fragrance of a fading flower sent lovingly,
The gleam of a sudden smile or sudden tear,
The warmer pressure of the hand, the tone of cheer,
The hush that means: I cannot speak but I have heard
The note that bears only a verse from God's own Word.
Such tiny things we hardly count as ministry,
The givers deeming they have shown scant sympathy;
But when the heart is overwrought, oh, who can tell
The power of such tiny things to make it well!

Our church is full of willing people; some are willing to work, and others are willing to let them.

The prayerful heart can be proven by the practical life.

TITHING

It is Scriptural—approved of God in the Old Testament and supported by Christ's words in the New.

It is a good start in the individual's life.

It is spiritual, for personal faith is called into play.

It is businesslike, for there is definiteness, progressiveness, and system.

It is a crushing blow against selfishness.

It causes the giver to take the initiative in Christian giving, rather than holding back one's response until the money appeal is made.

It commandeers all alike in quality giving.

It frees the church from the disgrace of deficits.

It enables the church frequently to plan for an enlarging work.

An Important Anniversary

By A. Warkentin

It is now almost two hundred years since the publication in America of the first Bible in a European language. That is a fact worthy to be remembered. In August, 1743, the last sheets of the Sauer Bible, Germantown, came from the press.

Christipher Sauer was reared in Germany and emigrated to America with his wife in 1724. Since the settlers in the New World had very little reading material, Sauer imported Bibles and other books freely from the old country. He even urged the people of his home land to donate Bibles to the poor among immigrants, and he found genuine pleasure in distributing them.

A Sauer Bible

Cut used through the courtesy of the Gospel Messenger

One of the favorite imported Bibles among the Mennonites, Dunkers, and other pietistic groups was the Berlenburg Bible of 1726-39, a now rare edition, in four volumes, of which a well preserved copy is found in the Mennonite Historical Library at Bethel College. Out of this edition Sauer took the apocryphical books III and IV Esdra and III Maccabees, while the rest of the text was taken from the thirty-fourth edition of Luther's Bible.

In spite of the fact that Sauer most earnestly endeavored to serve his countrymen, he met with bitterest opposition and had to face a storm of criticism.

The press on which the first Bible in a European tongue was printed had come from the Tunkers or Baptists in Germany. Sauer took it over in 1738 and after he had made some success in publishing the first German almanac and the first German newspaper in this country, he felt strong enough to tackle the gigantic job of publishing the first German Bible.

Even though he could print only four pages at a time, and had to battle many obstacles, the first edition of 1,200 copies was finished in a comparatively short time. The principal buyers were the Mennonites, Dunkers, and other pietistic groups. It took twenty years to sell this edition. According to Wright, Early Bibles, there are 119 copies of that first edition in the United States.

Sauer's son, Christopher, published the second edition of 2,000 copies in 1763, and in 1776 the printing of the third edition of 3,000 copies had just been completed when the Revolutionary War broke out, and "British soldiers destroyed practically the whole issue, using the paper as bedding for their horses and making cartridges." (Simms, The Bible in America). According to Wright, Early Bibles, only thirty-four copies of this issue could be traced, besides forty copies in the Sauer family. The Mennonite Historical Library at Bethel College is happy to have one of these rare books in its Bible collection.

THAT SELF

A lady was standing on her porch one bright spring morning. She did not appear happy or contented, and she confided her restlessness to her negro housekeeper. "Oh, I wish I could go away! I do so need a change!" "Now, chile," said the old negro, "wat you want git 'way fum? Dis yere beau'ful house? Now, wat you want git 'way fum? Dese yere lubly chilluns? Now wat you want git 'way fum? You gotta lug yo se'l whereber you go." This is the great penalty for wrongdoing. We cannot get away from ourselves; we have to "lug ourselves along." —Selected

SCIENCE SAYS LOVE

By B. Bargen

The Apostle Paul writes, "Now abideth faith, hope, and love." Now, science writes, "Now, faith, hope, and loves abides."

From the semi-scientific press there come increasingly books dealing with the fundamental problems of personality deviations in the modern world. If before the World War now in progress we were deeply concerned with the astoundingly large number of people who, in modern life, leave the trends of normal production and activity to spend the rest of their days in the hospitals for the mentally unfit, what is the prospect for conditions when the present turmoil ceases? The modern psychiatrist dealing with this problem comes to the conclusion that scientifically speaking the solution to these broken personalities is: "more love" like a doctor's prescription.

Prof. B. Bargen

We have just been reading Karl Menninger's new book entitled Love against Hate, in which, after developing a summary of some of the present conditions which drive people into mental depressions and insanity, he comes to the conclusion that there is only one cure for the vicious circle of hate which perpetuates itself in the family from one generation to the next, and that is love.

And this substantiates the claims of Karen Horney in her book a few years ago entitled The Neurotic Personalty of Our Times, who also pointed out that back of every neurotic personality there was the element of a lack of love; either the inability to show love, to give it, or the fact that love has not been received in the life of that individual.

Now, that suggests that science is coming to the same conclusion that the Christ Himself came to point out, namely, that our function in life is to demonstrate love. Love is the cure-all of our life miseries. Love is the central spiritual gravitation which steadies a person as a personality. This increasing agreement between the modern psychiatrists and the Christ suggests another meaning to the term "the great Physician." The Great Physician's recipe or prescription for a wholesome personality was that we should give more love and should receive more love in our daily contacts in the home and in our work.

One of the men writing from the C.P.S. camps, speaking about the work of these boys in the mental hospitals, writes that as far as he can see this is "the ideal moral equivalent to war." And this moral equivalent to war begins in the home where we as parents must demonstrate to our children what love is. And it is continued in the school room where teachers must demonstrate to children what love is and how it works. It is not so much a matter of teaching with words as teaching with our behavior. It is not so much what we tell our children, it is the way we treat them. It is not so much what they hear us say as what they see us say with our actions.

One may envisage the day when the work of restoring such crippled personalities is not the work of a few specialists, but the day when it becomes the duty and the privilege of practically every teacher and every parent in the home to sense this great responsibility, that it is far more than feeding and clothing a child and sending him to school; it is more than washing his face and combing his hair; it is the tender care of his personality through love and care and gentleness and appreciation to give him that sense of security which every personality needs.

And, then, having received that tender, gentle care in childhood, it shall become the duty of adults in a business world to treat each other further with that same sense of love and care mentioned in Galatians 6:2 and 6:5, where we are told that each shall bear his own burdens and each shall bear another's burdens.

The word of God and the word of science says: "Love."

MY PART IN BUILDING THE CHURCH

I must be in my place each Sunday—unless my reason for absence can stand before God.
Pray for my pastor, the congregation, the unsaved before coming to church.
Enter the church with a spirit of prayer and pray as I am seated.
Never engage in any conversation that will divert my thoughts and those of others from a spirit of worship.
During the period of worship and prayer thank God for all the fine work my church is doing—in Sunday school, in missions, in evangelism.
Carry no ideas of my neighbor's faults, nor critical thoughts concerning my pastor away from the Service.
During the week be attentive to telling others about my church and its wonderful people.
So live each day that my life will be an example to the unsaved of what Christ's marvelous saving power is.
Tithe regularly my income into the church and expect God to bless my gifts.

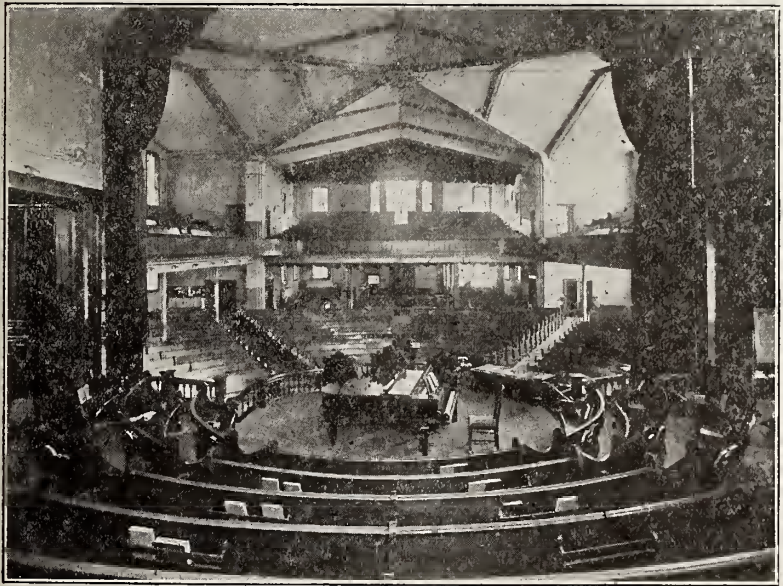
"AMUSEMENTS" or "JOY OF THE LORD"

By C. H. Suckau

The question of amusements is one of the greatest and perhaps one of the most difficult problems for Christians to solve. By reason of age this is more a problem for young people than for those who are older. Amusements and joy are terms which express feelings or emotions. Their main difference, it seems to me, lies in the objects which cause them.

The term amusement expresses a light and passing action of the mind. It lulls the faculties of the mind and banishes mental reflection upon serious things of life. It serves to kill time. The indulgence in amusements betrays an immature mind or weakness of character.



Interior of the meetinghouse of the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana. This is the largest meetinghouse of the General Conference. The view is from the back of the choir loft towards the main auditorium. There are three balcony sections. The east section seats four hundred people.

Joy, on the other hand, expresses a most vivid sensation of the soul which is caused by important events in life. The term joy expresses only a positively high degree of feelings. Joy, like amusements, may not be lasting if caused by transitory events, but, if it is the "Joy of the Lord" as the result of a Christian experience in the new birth by personal faith in, and acceptance of, the eternal Son of God as Savior, it has a sure and lasting foundation and is therefore of a more permanent and continuous nature. Though joy may be temporarily marred or even lost by sin, it can always be restored by confession of the sin which interrupted it. The psalmist David after he had confessed his sin prayed, "Restore unto me the joy of thy salvation."

Let us briefly look at the subject from a more practical standpoint. Are all amusements sin or sinful? It is impossible to set up a criterion applicable to young and old alike. There are amusements which are not wrong for children as, e.g., certain games and sports. These same amusements may be wrong in the case of adults for various reasons, such as waste of time, or that they may mar our Christian testimony. Adults should consider, and be guided by God's great admonition in Col. 3:17, "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him." The indulgence in many amusements on the part of adults would automatically cease if they obeyed God's word. The present day craze for amusements among so-called Christians indicates that they are controlled, not by the Spirit of God, but by the lusts of the flesh. As long as Christians indulge in the flesh they will not understand joy, nor find the Joy of the Lord their satisfying portion.

May I offer as suggestion for the solution of the problem of "Amusements and Joy of the Lord" the following diagram with instructions of how to use it. Amusements will be placed on the left side, whereas Joys of the Lord will be placed on the right side of the cross.

The committee is very well pleased with this splendid response from the choirs. We believe the Song Festival is an incentive for growth and development of better church singing, not only in the church choirs, but also in congregational singing, using the organized groups as a nucleus and stimulus. Group singing will be a part of the evening program. You may be interested in looking over the numbers taken from the Mennonite Hymnary. These will be used:

No. 28	"Vesper Hymn"
No. 274	"Glorious Things of Thee Are Spoken"
No. 100	"All Glory Laud and Honor"
No. 482	"Will Your Anchor Hold"
No. 472	"More Love To Thee"
No. 574	"Jesus Still Leads On"
No. 564	"Jesus, Priceless Treasure" (Choir only)

We are glad to have Prof. Walter Hohmann and Rev. Lester Hostetler, co-editors of the Hymnary, with us at the festival this year. We are sure they can help us to understand and make better use of the more worthwhile hymns, chorales, and gospel songs in this fine collection.

We cordially invite church music lovers to enjoy fellowship through song with us on May 2.

The Women's Association of Bethel College will serve in the dining room of Memorial Hall. You may buy your meal there, or you are welcome to bring a basket lunch and eat it in the basement of that building.

A MINISTER'S TEMPTATION

"We will not have been long in the ministry before we discover that it is possible to be fussily busy about the Holy Place and yet to lose the wondering sense of the Holy Lord. We may have much to do with religion and yet not be religious. We may become mere guideposts when we were intended to be guides. We may indicate the way, and yet not be found in it. We may be professors but not pilgrims. Our studies may be workshops instead of 'upper rooms.' Our share in the table-provisions may be that of analysts rather than guests. We may become so absorbed in words that we forget to hear the Word. And the consummation of the subtle peril may be this: We may come to assume that fine talk is fine living, that expository skill is deep piety, and while we are fondly hugging the non-essentials the veritable essence escapes."

WORKERS PROGRESSING TOWARD PARAGUAY

From Santiago in Chile, Brother A. E. Janzen writes: "In the Lord's good Providence our boat reached Valparise on March 29. Aside from getting stuck on a mud bank in the two mile wide mouth of the Guaya River near Guayaquil, Ecuador, and using five instead of three weeks to sail, the trip was very agreeable. No doubt even the waiting will have its compensation."

From Santiago Brethren Janzen and Geigley will proceed to Buenos Aires where they will meet the Mennonite missionaries before continuing to Paraguay.

THE CHAMELEON AND THE PORCUPINE

A chameleon once met a porcupine, and complained that he had taken great pains to make friends with everybody, but, strange to say, he had entirely failed; and now he could not be sure that he had a sincere friend in the world.

"And by what means," said the porcupine, "have you sought to make friends?"

"By flattery," said the chameleon. "I have adapted myself to all I met; humored the follies and the foibles of every one. In order to make people believe that I liked them, I have imitated their manners, as if I considered them models of perfection. So far have I gone in this that it has become a habit with me, and now my very skin takes the hue and complexion of the thing that happens to be nearest. Yet all this has been in vain, for everybody calls me a turncoat, and I am generally considered selfish, hypocritical and base."

"And no doubt you deserve all this," said the porcupine. "I have taken a different course, but I must confess that I have as few friends as you. I adopted the rule to resent every injury, nay, every encroachment upon my dignity. I would allow no one even to touch me, without sticking into him one or more of my sharp quills. I determined to take care of number one; and the result has been, that, while I have vindicated my rights, I have created a universal dislike. I am called Old Touch-me-not, and, if not as much despised, I am even more disliked than you, Sir Chameleon."

An owl who was sitting by and heard this conversation, put his head a little on one side and remarked as follow: "Your experience ought to teach two valuable lessons. One is that the world looks upon the flatterer with contempt and aversion, because he seeks to secure some selfish object by making dupes of others; and the other is that he who resents every little trespass upon his rights and feelings is sure to be shunned and dreaded by all who are acquainted with his disposition.

"You, Sir Chameleon, ought to know by this time that honest candor is far better than deceitful flattery. And you, neighbor Porcupine, ought never to forget that good humor is a better defense than an armory of poisoned quills." —Methodist Protestant.

BONDS AND COUNTY QUOTA

Do bonds bought through the church-approved plan count on the county quota?

Yes, they do. Each month the Civilian Bond Committee reports to the United States Treasury the amount of the bond purchases made by conscientious objectors through Provident Trust Co. of Philadelphia. The Treasury informs the leaders in each county of the purchases thus made by the conscientious objectors within their area and in turn the respective leaders can make the necessary adjustments for their counties.

Traveled About Three Thousand Miles To Visit Scattered Mennonites

As it is, I am not only elder of the Capeland Church, but also farmer; as such I want to report that after many crop failures, the Lord gave us a most bountiful harvest. Because of this we had so much work that we did not succeed in getting all of it threshed; in fact, half of my harvest is still standing in shocks in the snow.

I desire to express hearty thanks to all contributors, who make it possible for Rev. David Toews to send us our regular support. In view of crop failures, it would have been impossible to carry on our religious work without these gifts. May the Lord reward every giver is my prayer.

It was my privilege to serve in many places with baptismal services and Holy Communion, and to serve with the regular preaching of the Word. It was also our privilege to visit many and encourage such that were discouraged and bring the message of salvation to others who needed it.

We were permitted to baptize more than twenty persons on confession of faith in Christ and receive them into the Church. In thirteen places Communion was distributed, and the Lord added His blessing to these efforts.

All this required much traveling. At times one trip would be from one-hundred to two-hundred miles to bring to hungry souls the bread of life. From the beginning of October until Christmas I covered approximately three thousand miles to reach all these scattered groups. Praise and thanks to the Lord for health and strength and for making it possible that these trips could be made. Again and again in my weakness and inefficiency the words of the Master: "My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness," came to me.

My prayer and one desire is that the Lord might take that which was sown in weakness, that it might grow and bring forth much fruit for eternity and bring glory to our Savior. The Lord willing, I shall go to Swift Current for Sunday, March 28, to conduct baptismal service and assist them in the observance of the Lord's Supper. On the same day the Bible school closing program is to be held. May the Lord bless the pupils, the teachers, and all the work at the Bible school.

A REMINDER

Where is the Mennonite Church? We now often call our meetinghouses churches, and sometimes we call our congregations churches. For instance, it is often said, "I belong to the First Mennonite Church in Newton," but is there a Mennonite Church as a whole? There are seventeen different branches in our denomination; do they all belong to the Mennonite Church?

If the Mennonite Church was born in Zuerich, Switzerland, by men as Conrad Grebel, Felix Manz, Ludwig Hetzer, George von Chur (Bluecoat), Michael Sattler, Balthasar Hubmaier, it is peculiar, that hardly any of these knew anything about Menno Simons at all, since Menno at that time was a Catholic priest unknown to others. As Catholic priest, before he joined our denomination, Menno preached against the bloodthirsty Anabaptists, to which his brother belonged.

When in 1555 there was a large conference of Baptizers in Strasburg, Menno was not there. They sent him a letter wishing him God's blessing to his work, but admonishing him, not to emphasize his peculiar teaching of the incarnation, since they thought it not to be taught in the scriptures. One or two hundred years later the different German and the Danish governments influenced by the state church called us Mennonites, but our forefathers said: We can not avoid being called Mennonites by the government, but we are not Mennonites; we are Baptist-Minded or Baptizers.

Our forefathers believed in one Christian Church born or founded on Pentcost, persecuted for three hundred years, a church of believers.

When Emperor Constantine about the year 325 made the Christian religion the state religion, our forefathers did not accept it, but called themselves believers, saints, or brethren. These existed under different names often given by their enemies.

A Waldensian bishop in 1458 called himself "Friedrich Reiser by the grace of God, bishop of the believers in the Catholic Church, who have not accepted the present of Constantine."

The true Christians of all ages believed in one Church of believers in Jesus Christ as the Son of God our Redeemer, who died for our sins; they believed in a baptism after faith and confession by water and by the Holy Spirit. No one belongs to the true Church of Christ except he or she is baptized with the Holy Spirit.

Neither the Baptizers of Switzerland, nor the Baptist minded of Holland do call themselves Mennonites.

We, seventy-five years ago, were taught: You are called by the government Mennonites, but you are Baptist-minded or Baptizers, believers.

Menno was an earnest, faithful, efficient, industrious servant of God, we honor him as such, but he was not the founder or organizer of our denomination.

Civilian Public Service

Distribution of Men to Dairy Farms

During the week of April 12-17 a total of one hundred men from Mennonite camps over the entire country will be placed on dairy farms with the United States Employment Service as the assignment agency.

Assignments will be made later to counties in Ohio and Michigan.

As previously mentioned in these notes, the detaching of men to dairy farms does not mean that a reclassification takes place. Also it does not mean that men will be released from camp to return to their home farms. Cases for reclassification or emergency furlough can be considered only if the farm on which the assignee worked previous to induction will be seriously injured in its food production due to a father's or brother's illness. Camp directors should be approached for assistance in beginning reclassification procedures.

On Release of Conscientious Objectors Over Thirty-Eight Years of Age

A recent communication from Colonel Lewis F. Kosch states the Selective Service policy in regard to releasing men over thirty-eight years of age. Below is a paragraph from the Colonel's letter.

"Men who had reached the age of thirty-eight, as of December 5, 1942, may be placed on indefinite furlough, pending the setting up of a Conscientious Objector Reserve to which they will be transferred. It will be necessary before such furlough is authorized that the men supply us with a statement from a local office of the United States Employment Service that they can be placed on a particular farm on a given date. Upon receipt of that information, we will issue the orders indefinitely furloughing the man and at the same time we will advise the Employment Service office which has placed him that the man is being furloughed for the purpose of employment on a particular farm and will be allowed to remain there on furlough, or in Reserve, as the case might be, so long as he continues farm employment and is satisfactory to his employer. In the event that the man is unsatisfactory, he will immediately be placed on the active list and be returned to camp."

Cancellation of Furloughs and Leaves

A wire from General Hershey, dated March 27, has been sent to all C. P. S. camps in the country to the effect that all furloughs and leaves will be suspended until further notice. Only exceptions to be made are in cases of emergencies that are referred to Selective Service for prior approval.

No explanation is given for the emergency order which, however, is not considered a punitive measure.

Camp Briefs

Twenty men from M. C. C. camps will attend the Cooking School scheduled to begin at the Grottoes, Virginia, camp on April 27. Transportation costs of the men to Grottoes will be borne by Selective Service System. Besides the school serving in the interests of better cooking for the camps, it is hoped that training may be acquired which will be valuable in a relief program.

The third C. P. S. Administrators School is scheduled to be held in May. Brother Erwin Goering, director of the Weeping Water, Nebraska, camp will replace Brother Leland Bachman as director of the Camino, California, camp when the latter's term of service expires in the last of April.

Eternal Security

By J. B. Epp

It seemed already as if the controversy over this teaching had come to an end, and that the sound, clear, simple, Biblical presentations of the teaching intended, under headings more Biblical, had taken the place of the controversies. But the old headings and the one-sided arguings are apparently back again. This strong emphasis on the one side or the other will never bring out the real truth about the matter.

The subject of "Predesination," for instance, has been "debated" for centuries, and there is no satisfactory solution in sight. So it is with "Eternal Security."

Why not be satisfied with "All of Grace," God's promises to "keep His own unto the end," etc.? That includes all we need. There is no arguing needed or overemphasizing one side or the other; even ridiculing one another, and calling of "names," etc.

The current controversies in the subject can even become dangerous! What do I mean? It may please those that think they are converted and born again, but are not—and this is extremely dangerous! There will be too many already "who will say, in that Day: Lord, Lord, did we not . . . do many things in Thy name?" And they will hear the words: "Depart from Me . . . I never knew you." We do not want to add to that unholy number!

Those that are truly "His own," and know it, do not need any arguments, they can feast on the assurances of God's Word, as to His keeping power. Weak "believers" need re-assurance, and we all need it; for that purpose the promise and assurance are given us in the Word—but let us make very sure first, that people are true believers in the blood-bought salvation by the Saviour before speaking of our security "in Him." Besides, the knowledge of this is not essential to salvation.

Think of the mulititudes who are misled, and are made to believe that they are "all right,"—they belong to church, they were baptized correctly, they know(?) the truth, etc.; but are mistaught and misguided; many of them are innocent. If such read the booklets on "Eternal Security" that are out, they are in greatest danger!

Let us then, first of all, and all the time, present "Christ and Him Crucified" and all that we are and have "In Him"! Let it be "All of Grace"—"not of works," etc.—accepting that in true faith, trusting Him and following Him: then we need not worry about our "security" for eternity.

New York Mennonites Active

Here is another opportunity for you to have a brief visit with the Mennonites in New York in this brief report of the third meeting of our Fellowship which was held on Wednesday evening, April 7 at Biblical Seminary, 235 E. 49th. Street, with twenty people in attendance.

The meeting was opened with the singing of "The Church's One Foundation" which was led by Gerald Stucky. After this Miss Augusta Schmidt led us in our devotions. Brother Shelly gave a brief summary of the previous meetings and then had the new people as well as those who had been there previously introduce themselves.

We were very fortunate in having as our guest speaker Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, Pennsylvania, secretary of the General Conference Home Mission Committee. He gave a very interesting and helpful approach to the work of this committee. He pointed out the fact that in our mission work we usually begin in a place where we have a small nucleus of Mennonites. He also explained the way the committee works in cooperation with the committees in the various district conferences. He described the work in Canada and also in a few places in the United States. An interesting discussion followed his presentation.

The plans are not definite yet for the next meeting which will be held on May 5 at Biblical Seminary. It is hoped that we may have one of the representatives of the Mennonite Central Committee with us for this meeting. This will be the last meeting for some of the students in New York and plans for the future will be discussed. If anyone has any names of people living in the New York area we would appreciate it if he would send them to Gerald Stucky, 235 E. 49th. Street, New York, N.Y.

The following new people attended the meeting: Miss Amelia Basinger, R.N., N.C. Hospital, Glen Cove, L.I., N.Y., of the Ebenezer Church, near Bluffton, Ohio; Miss Sadie Klassen, 542 3. 112th. Street, Mennonite Brethren Church, Mountain Lake, Minn.; Mrs. McCarrell Leiper, Blauvelt, N.Y.; Rev. and Mrs. Frank Manning, missionaries to Africa, First Church, Los Angeles, Calif.; and Miss Jessie Shelly, Rockefeller Hospital, 66th and York, New York, Bethany Church, Quakertown, Pa.

—Emmanuel Mennonite Church, Noble, Iowa: Rev. Leonard Metzker from Fortuna, Missouri, has accepted a call from our church. He is to begin his service here on May 9. The C.P.S. offering total of our church in the Year Book for 1943 should be $409.35 instead of 60 cents. —P. P. Graber, Corr.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "On the second Sunday of May the churches of the Chaffey District will unite in their annual Sunday evening meeting. The speaker for this occasion will be Dr. Douglas, well known writer and a very capable speaker."

—Donovan E. Smucker, pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, served as special Lenten speaker for the First Mennonite Church, Sugar Creek, Ohio, of which William H. Stauffer is pastor. His subjects were: "The Failure of the Church," "The Present Status of Atheism," "The God of Hitler and Spinoza," "The Cult of Complacency," "The Christian Dynamic for a Fallen World," "The Meaning of Conversion," "I Accept Jesus Christ," "The Convictions of the Evangelists," "Fret Not Thyself Because of Evildoers," and "The Unshakable City of God." The theme was "The Conversion of the Church."

—Catherine Clegg, a sophomore at Bethel College and from the city of Newton, recently won first place in the Bethel College Anti-tobacco Oratorical Contest. Competing in the Kansas State contest a week later against four colleges she won the first prize of thirty-five dollars. She was also elected vice president of the Kansas Intercollegiate Ant-tobacco Association.

—In the bulletin of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, it states that a feet-washing service is to be held preparatory to a communion service two days later. An interesting item reads, "A call on the pastor in his study has certain advantages over visits in the homes: (1) It is private and burdens may be expressed freely, (2) It is personal for thus individual problems may be dealt with. (3) It is voluntary, 'Whosoever will, may come.' (4) It is convenient."

—Bulletin, West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: "The Mission Workers will meet Thursday. . . .There will be five guest speakers, missionaries from different fields who will be dressed in costume and will speak as native Christians of their respective fields." W. F. Unruh is pastor of this church.

—The California Mennonite Sunday School and C. E. Conference which met in Upland, California, April 2-4 had as its theme "Christ for the Crisis." Important decisions made at this conference were: 1. To continue the mission work in the Shafter Migratory Camps with Rev. and Mrs. Chris Ummel as the workers for another year. 2. To be of greater service to the C.P.S. camps by assuming responsibility for various projects suggested by the camp directors. 3. To encourage and strengthen the bonds of fellowship between the young people of the different branches of Mennonites in California. 4. To hold the annual Y.P. Retreat at Lake Sequoia, August 12-19, 1943.

—The Grottoes, Virginia, C.P.S. camp paper tells of Dr. E. Leroy Dakin, who is contacting the non-historic peace churches in the interest of C.O.'s from their denominations. It says of him, "During the World War he sold Liberty Bonds to the limit of his ability, and later he served as a pastor in an army camp. After the war he restudied his position and his Bible and took a stand against warfare. Before his appointment to the National Service Board for Religious Objectors, he was the pastor of a Baptist church in Milwaukee, Wisconsin." Bishop C. N. Hostetter, of Messiah Bible College, Grantham, Pa., recently told the campees, "...to be in camp five months is more valuable than one year in college." The men at this camp have given up Sunday breakfast and are donating the proceeds to War Sufferers' Relief. "This movement grew out of the feeling that as C.P.S. men we ought to do more to express our love for suffering humanity. It is not enough to refrain from taking life; we ought to feed and clothe the needy, be they even our enemies."

—In the December 26, 1942, issue of the Congressional Record there is a very important speech on questions about Pearl Harbor by Jeannette Rankin, representative from Montana, who voted against America's entry into the war.

—Jake Friesen, a member of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, and at present a Junior at Bethel College, has agreed to serve a three-month ministerial internship in the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, Calfiornia, this summer.

—Lorraine Avenue Mennonite Church, Wichita, Kansas: "Helen A. Penner of Bethel College told us of her experiences as a relief worker in France on April 11. Sister Kuyf spoke to our church the evening of April 14, to about 175 Bible school children the following morning, and to a record attendance of ladies at the Friendship Circle which met twenty miles in the country in the afternoon. On Friday evening, April 16, we observed Bethel College night. During Holy Week Dr. P. S. Goertz spoke three evenings. Communion was observed Good Friday evening with the reception of new members. In May a leadership training class will be conducted each Sunday evening from 7 to 9 o'clock. Rev. Paul Press will teach the second series course: The New Testament. Credits will be awarded by the Wichita Council of Churches to those completing the required work."—Corr.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: "Bethel College, our only fully accredited college, is making a commendable effort to meet the mounting current expense, due to reduced enrollment, and to cancel the $90,000.00 debt which stands against her. . . .Will you consider seriously and prayerfully the appeal of the college to make your investment in a civilian bond in the name of Bethel College? . . .The Old Mennonite Church has contributed over $100,000.00 in a similar program for their schools." "A new bill (H. R. 2082) is before Congress. . . .It provides for outlawing the manufacture, sale, and transportation of liquor in the United States and its possessions until the conclusion of the present war and thereafter until the termination of mobilization as determined by the President."

—The Bethel College Choir presented "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by DuBois to a large audience in Memorial Hall, North Newton, Kansas, on the evening of April 18. Prof. W. H. Hohmann conducted.

—The Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, had a deacon election on Sunday afternoon, April 18. A basket dinner was served after the morning services. In the afternoon Rev. A. J. Dyck made several remarks on I Timothy chapter three. After this the congregation proceeded with the election. Brother J. J. Dyck was elected as the new deacon. He is the brother of Rev. A. J. Dyck. His father, John Dyck, also served as deacon from May, 1880, to July, 1919.

—The First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio, held an Easter sunrise service. This they followed with a breakfast in their new basement.

CORRECTION

The supplement to The Mennonite of January 19, 1943, stated that the per member giving total of the First Mennonite Church, Colfax, Washington, was $8.19. It should have read $11.19.

The total for the First Mennonite Church, Berne, Indiana, was given as $6.16. It should have read $13.16. The editor is very thankful that these mistakes were brought to his attention and is very sorry that they were made.

CORRECTION

The Nebraska All-Mennonite Sunday School Convention is not a thing of the past for this year, as suggested by a mistake in a recent issue of this paper. Rather it is to be held on May 9. The Bethesda Mennonite Church, Henderson, will be host to the convention.

Boys do not wear the frocks for the last two years, but the girls and teachers wear them always while in school. It levels the rich and the poor. The really bad thing about Argentine schools is that religious education is compulsory, and, while Protestants in some towns can get exempted, students refusing to take this Catholic instruction are discriminated against quite often. In Pehuajo (where we are at the moment) the teacher says, when dismissing those who have secured exemption, 'The heathen may leave now.' "

The Ideal Mother

An old grandmother once said, "Begin to train your child ten years before birth." She here infers that if you are cross and mean your child will be so. If you are kind, loving, and cheery your child will be so. She infers that the law of God, "Like begets like," still works. Mother, it looks like this grandmother told us a great truth. Then great is your privilege, and great is your power, with your own children.

The ideal mother loves her husband and her children. She is sober-minded, chaste and domesticated, kind and submissive to her husband. She sings the love of God into the heart of her child. She takes her baby into her arms and holds it to her breast and sings softly. Do you remember that little song?

A mother sang:

"Two little eyelids blinked and drooped
And bright curls nestled on her brease.
Contentment bounty richly trooped,
Sweet innocence found loving rest.
The slumber fairies tiptoed,
And all the angles stooped to hear
When Mother sang."

This mother has love, sweet love, powerful love; for it is the nearest on earth to God's love. Mother's love never ends. One day, while sitting in the county court with a mother and her boy, the judge said, "Mother, your son is found guilty of the crime charged against him. He has been a repeater in crime and the court must remove him from society. Mother, I believe you have done all you could for your boy." The mother in her tears replied, "No, judge, a mother will always go a little farther." This is true of the ideal mother. Those wrinkled, scarred hands, lines in her cheeks, and those tired-looking eyes are love marks for you.

"The stars may fade from out their course,
The sun may lose its glow;
The moon may leave the night gloom,
And rivers cease to flow.

"God may strike from all the earth
The beauty He has given.
Life may lose its brightest charm,
And man his hope for heaven.

"But still when all things else are gone
There'll yet remain one other;
Surviving chaos, wreck and ruin,
The ceaseless love of mother."

The ideal mother is a praying mother. When she prays she sees a soul at the throne of God. She never gives up in her praying, for she is seen on her face before God crying out her heart for you and your salvation. Angels stop to listen when a Spirit-filled mother prays. One night a Christian mother woke and felt a compelling desire to pray. She prayed mightily to God for her son who had left home. That night her son was riding a freight train headed for the southland. About midnight he was suddenly aroused in the car in which he was riding. He heard a voice say, "Get up and get off this train." He thought this was just a dream, but a little later he heard a voice again: "Get up, and get off this train and take the next one." He climbed off in a small country town and jumped on a later train. South of Cenralia, Ill., his train stopped. He looked down the track to learn the cause, and there he saw the first freight train wrecked. He walked to the wrecked train and found the car on which he was riding earlier in the night lying with other cars totally wrecked. Some time later he returned home and learned of his mother's agonizing prayer for his safety, and for his salvation during the night of that wreck. Now that young man is an active church worker.

James A. Garfield said in his inauguration as President of the United States, "I am the man I am because of my mother's prayers."

More Needed Than Charity

Our heroic fathers put the Word of God above merely getting along with people. They were unwilling to take a middle way when they knew God was calling them to out and out obedience. Our Church stands historically, not for the weakness of a compromising middle way, but for that sure obedience to the Word of God which will be looked upon by many as an extreme fanaticism. Mennonites need charity and a great deal of it, but mere charity does not make Mennonites.

—Gospel Herald

The ideal mother is fully surrendered to God. She is Spirit-led day by day. She is a faithful wife and mother, true to her husband and children. Her children rejoice in her and rise up to call her blessed. She is neat and clean in her appearance, and her home is pleasant to be in. She is not a gossip, for her tongue is controlled by the law of kindness. She, with her husband, practices thrift. She is a worthy homemaker, leading and directing her family in the way of the Lord. She loves God's Word, God's house, God's people. Truly God's blessing is upon her. "Her husband praises her, and her children rise up and call her blessed."

Are you an ideal mother? If not, why not give your heart to God now? The Son of God our Saviour is ready to receive you and save you from all your sins. Will you come to Him now?

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

GRATEFULLY ACCEPTED

The love, goodness, and concern of a kind Heavenly Father are seen in many ways. In the spring time we feel that the freshness of nature shows His promise of a new crop. In the fall we are thrilled at the beautiful colors of the foliage, indicating that God crowns his labors with glory. Not only in nature, but through men, God manifests His concern that gifts might be forthcoming to carry on His work in missions, education and other benevolences.

Recently a gift of $900.00 came to the Home Mission Board through the Board of Trustees, from the estate of Elizabeth Ruth. For many years Miss Ruth was a devoted members of First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, where she manifested a deep interest in home and foreign missions.

We praise God for this gift and for all other gifts that He moves friends to give for the spreading of the gospel.

REV. J. J. ESAU TO VISIT MORE CHURCHES IN CANADA

In the summer months of 1942, Rev. J. J. Esau, Bluffton, Ohio, blind evangelist, visited all the Mennonite Churches and mission groups in Ontario and later on in Manitoba. Brother Esau's messages and visitation work were richly used by the Lord to bless large numbers and to encourage them in their Christian effort and work.

At the annual board meeting a resolution was passed to have Rev. Esau continue his church visitation work in Saskatchewan and on westward. He will be ready to start his work in Saskatoon, May 30.

While in the Canadian Northwest it is hoped that he can again attend the young people's retreats and by his wholesome faith and optimism influence many a young person to follow Jesus Christ and seek to win others to Him.

A schedule is to be prepared and if every host will see to it that Brother Esau is conveyed or aided to the next place, it will be easy for him to make trips. Let us support this messenger of the Cross in our prayers.

GROWTH

During the month of March eight new members could be added to the membership of Memorial Mennonite Church, Altoona, Pa., We rejoice with the workers, Rev. and Mrs. Delbert E. Welty, and pray that the Easter Season might bring others into the fold of Christ and the Church.

CANDIDATES FOR WORK PRESENT THEMSELVES

The board was happy to have four applications from young men who come from our General Conference churches and who will soon be ready for active church work. These promising young men appeared before the board individually. This enabled the members to learn to know them and appraise their qualities. Some correspondence is under way, and some may be used before long. All the names and addresses with their qualifications have been given to Dr. A. Warkentin, North Newton, Kansas, secretary of the Placement Committee. Churches in need of pastors might correspond with him.

GOD AND VICTORY

The teachings of the Scriptures and of history seem to be that the moral and spiritual values which have their roots in God's will and purpose have never been dependent for their existence on political and carnal force. Yet many Christians today appear to be absolutely convinced that God's cause on earth is doomed to extinction, if the United Nations do not win this war through a crushing victory over our enemies. —Edward Yoder

MRS. ALFRED HABEGGER SERIOUSLY ILL

(The following letter, dated April 28, was sent to the editor from the Bethel Deaconess Home and Hospital, Newton, Kansas.)

"We have received the following telegram sent from Billings, Montana, at 7 a. m. today.

" 'Mrs. Habegger seriously ill. Rhuematic endocarditis. Acute rheumatic fever. We sent for Jeanne Notify P. H. Richert.

Alfred Habegger.' "

"Jeanne Habagger is one of our students. She is in affiliation at Children's Mercy Hospital at Kansas City at the present time. She was due back with us on May 1."

(After the above was already set in type, the same news came from Brother P. H. Richert with the following additional statement.)

The above telegram has just arrived, and we hasten to publish it to enlist intercessors for the recovery of Mrs. Habegger, who is yet much needed both in her family and in our mission.

What An Indian Boy Wished for Most of All

By Augusta Schmidt

We all wish for many things, and as we get older some of the things we formerly wished for do not seem desirable. A young child wishes for a doll or, perhaps, a ball; later perhaps a book seems more desirable. We also grow spiritually, and as we mature we pray for different things than we do as children or as new Christians.

A young boy in India had poor, illiterate parents, but since Gundhar was a child of school age, when his parents became Christians, he had the rare privilege to attend school. After he finished the seventh grade Gundhar had to find work to help earn a living. I needed a helper to cook my food and to do many, many little tasks that saved my time for more important work.

This boy was glad to take up this work and he learned many things very quickly. He had been baptized and attended church services, Sunday school, and Christian Endeavor meetings fairly regularly. He enjoyed singing and often sang while he worked. He was tempted to take of the food he cooked for me, for he lived among people who probably don't think it sinful to take a little here and there as long as they are not found out. Even for our Christians it is difficult to become victorious over this temptation and to become honest. I thought Gundhar had improved after I had talked to him several times about being honest in order to be a true Christian.

One Sunday evening Gundhar called me as I was on my way to see the patients in the hospital. He said, "I wish first of all to confess to you that I have never been an honest servant. I now wish the Holy Spirit, and I want that gift most of all. My fear and shame to confess my sins are gone, and I also wish to tell some others besides you of how I failed and wronged them and of my desire for the Holy Spirit."

I sat there silently listening to the rapid succession of words, some so faintly spoken that I could hardly hear, and I prayed for wisdom to direct this boy how to receive this great gift. I encouraged him not to expect outward signs such as the gift of tongues, as one of our young men had done and agonized over it till he seemed insane for awhile. He responded to my advice to read God's word often; to obey this word, to pray, to try to live a new, clean, holy life, acceptable to God; and to try to serve God as well as possible daily in every task. This boy asked me to give him only small quantities of food to cook, tea, flour, etc., as he said all these things were a temptation to him. There seemed to be a new joy and a new growth, and I feel sure God gave of his Holy Spirit to Gundhar as much as he could hold.

This was not the last temptation Gundhar had nor was stealing his only temptation. Sometimes he fell into sin and needed a new infilling of the Holy Spirit. There were ups and downs, and sometimes the Holy Spirit could not rule and control as he wished. However, this boy had decided to become an evangelist soon after his desire for the Holy Spirit. He is now in our Bible school in Janjgir in preparation to preach the gospel. The last letter from India reported that he was doing quite good class work, but was often absent from classes because of illness. This boy is not very strong physically, but his shortcoming is to give up easily. Pray for him that he may become strong physically and that he may dedicate and apply his strength and health whatever little or much that may be for the best use in God's kingdom, and that he may be filled and refilled with the Holy Spirit.

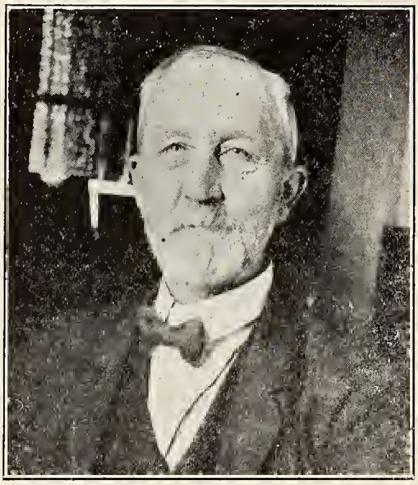
SOMETHING FOR NOTHING

It has been figured out that less than 10 per cent of the church does 90 per cent of the actual work. Less than 50 per cent of the membership comes to Sunday school, 30 per cent to morning worship, 15 per cent to evening worship, 15 per cent to prayer meeting. Yet 100 per cent want their church affiliation mentioned in their obituary and the relatives get angry if the preacher doesn't pay tribute to the Christian faith of the deceased. . .

A MEMORIAL

A man he was to all the country dear,
And passing rich with forty pounds a year;
Remote from towns he ran his godly race,
Nor e'er had changed, nor wish'dt to change his place....

This, in a poetic way, sums up the long and beautiful of life of the Rev. Allen M. Fretz who was laid to rest on Thursday afternoon April 29, 1943, at the Deep Run New Mennonite Meeting House where he had been a life-long attendant and pastor for sixty years. Commenting on the fact that he had served the same church for such a long period he said several years ago: "My call to the ministry in 1883, I felt to be Divine indeed, but as it came largely through the medium of my relatives and friends of childhood, youth and service as Sunday school worker, and as the Lord gave me evidence of his blessing on my efforts in behalf of my home church, I felt too that this was to be the field of my labors till sunset, so you have the reason why I never changed, nor chose to change my place."



Allen M. Fretz

Family Background

Allen M. Fretz was born on December 12, 1853, on the banks of the historic Tohickon Creek in Bucks County, Pennsylvania, the son of Ely Fretz and Mary Myers-Fretz. He is sixth generation descendent of the pioneer settler John Fretz who came to America and settled in Bedminster Township about 1715-20. He is one of a splendid family of eight children all of whom grew to maturity and served their church and community faithfully throughout their lives. Rev. Fretz is survived by four sisters and one brother, all living within driving distance of the home church. They are Mrs. Emeline Detwiler of Souderton, Mr. Francis Fretz of Bedminster, Mrs. Barbara Wasser of Bedminster, Mrs. Mary Landis of Springfield, and Mrs. Susan Moyer of Chalfont. Beside these is his third wife, Amanda Fretz, who has been a faithful companion during these last years. She is the widow of his younger brother, Mahlon.

Early Years

When Allen was about four years old his father moved to the old Fretz farm east of Bedminster to help his aged father. At that time there were only two buildings in what is now the village of Bedminster. The Fretz farm extended over most of the land now covered by the village. It was on this farm that Allen spent practically all of his first forty years of his life. He attended the local school in winter and helped on the farm during the rest of the year. Life on the farm was a genuine pleasure to him. He especially enjoyed preparing the ground, sowing the seed and watching it grow. He once said: "I like to see that in young people." It was from this area of life's experience that he frequently drew for sermon materials and texts. At an early age Allen acquired a reputation for his intense love of books, especially histories, biographies, and the Bible. While his brothers were fond of horses and spent their leisure moments with them, Allen would always use such moments for reading.

Education

In 1868 Ely Fretz and his wife attended the General Conference Session at Wadsworth, Ohio. The following year their son, Allen, was sent there with a number of other Pennsylvania boys to get a year's general training. He was at that time sixteen years old and had no thought of going into the ministry. After a year at Wadsworth he returned to his father's farm and attended another winter at the local school. The following winter, 1871, he attended the Excelsior Normal Institute and in 1873, the West Chester Normal School. At the age of nineteen he began teaching country school at a salary of twenty-seven dollars per month. During the time he was teaching public school he began holding singing and preaching services on Sunday evening in the school building. This was the period when the Moody and Sankey revivals were popular throughout the country.

Early Manhood

In 1880 Rev. Fretz was married to Mary Leatherman of Pipersville. However, this happy start came to a sad end in the second year when Mrs. Fretz died. Soon after this experience some friends invited him to take an extended trip to Mennoite communities in Ohio, Indiana and Ontario, Canada. While on this trip two important events occurred. One of these was a letter from home telling him that he had been given a call to become the minister of his home church. This was a pleasant surprise as he had planned to spend his life teaching rather than preaching. After careful consideration he accepted the call as the Divine will of God. The call came in 1883, and he continued to serve this congregation for the rest of his life, a period of sixty years as the full pastor and for the last two years as pastor emeritus. The other event of importance of his trip was the meeting of Annie Rittenhouse of Campden, Ontario, who was later to become his wife and mother of their six living children. These are Jacob, Lansdale; Ely, Pleasant alley; Viola, Mrs. Christian Gustman, Perkasie; Allen R., Lansdale; Agnes, (Mrs. Howard Detwiler), Chalfont; and Osmund, Landsdale. All of the children are living in neighboring communities close to their father's home.

The positive influences which shaped his life Rev. Fretz claimed to be chiefly these: His inheritance of good health from his vigorous family stock, the wholesome influences of a large family and a Christian home, the opportunity of wide reading, attending Wadsworth Seminary, outdoor work on the farm; the encouragement of men like John H. Oberholtzer and Jacob S. Moyer, and the great inspiration of men like old Dr. van der Smissen at Wadsworth.

Church Life

After serving the Deep Run congregation for ten years Rev. Fretz was called to the then newly organized congregation at Souderton, Pa. This was in 1893. He served both churches for the next seventeen years. In addition to always serving his home church at Deep Run he helped organize, and served numerous other churches for various periods of time. Some of these were the churches at Allentown, 1910, 1912; Pottstown, 1909-10; Bowmansville, 1917-27; Springfield 1913 to 1038; and the Perkaskie Church from 1918 to 1942. At Springfield an unusual situation prevails. Here the Old Mennonites and General Conference Mennonites worship in the same building each on alternate Sundays. This is a reflection of the sweet spirit of toleration and love that might be a model for many other groups.

In Appreciation

The passing of Allen Fretz of the Mennonite Church is truly like the falling of a mighty oak which leaves a vacant space against the lonesome sky. He was considered the Dean of ministers of the Eastern District Conference because of his long years of service and his fatherly counsel. At the General Conference sessions he was a familiar figure for the last fifty years. He was one of the founders of the conference paper, The Mennonite. These and many other things he did, but it is not for this reason that he will be most missed. Nor will he be missed because he was a powerful orator, a profound thinker, or a dramatic preacher. He will be missed most because of the cleansing power of his pure life. His strength lay not in the fact that he was at the head of every organization of which he was a member. He was not a seeker of offices, although he held many. His strength lay in the sterling quality of his quiet personal life and conduct. He was the embodiment of Christian humility, the personification of love in action. Throughout his life he demonstrated the beauty of simplicity in word, in deed, and in thought. He was unswerving in his duty to Jesus Christ, and one could not be in his presence long before one felt the Master's spirit radiate through him to all those around. If he was ever excited he gave very little external evidence of it. His calm, steady, and kindly disposition seemed never to be ruffled. He walked ever as though led by the hand of God.

He was truly a shepherd of human souls. Many lives were enriched, many hearts warmed by his long gracious teaching and preaching ministry. His tall gaunt figure, grey hair, white beard and blue eyes; his soft spoken but crystal clear voice and sympathetic smile as he stood behind his lofty pulpit, girded by two pillar-like posts, will never be forgotten by those who had the privilege of claiming him as their pastor. The poet's words describe him well:

At church with meek and unaffected grace,
His looks adorn'd the venerable place;
Truth from his lips prevailed with double sway,
And fools, who came to scoff, remained to pray.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Albert Ewert is pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Wolf Point, Montana, and of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Lustre, Montana. The former has a membership of seventy-one and the latter one of forty-five.

Rev. Wm. B. Weaver is a pastor of the Central Conference of Mennonites who has been asked to send articles and news items from their conference to The Mennonite. William F. Unruh, pastor of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, in a similar way sends material to the monthly publication of the Central Conference. This exchange is sponsored by the Church Unity Committee of our conference.

LACK OF DEVOTION

Our weakness in devotion is seen in the comparative lack of devotion and reverence in many of our church services. The so-called devotional period is frequently greatly disturbed by late comers and made ineffective by lack of attention. Many people feel that the service has not really begun until the preacher or teacher begins speaking. It probably is not too much to say that for some of our people worship in a real devotional sense is almost unknown.

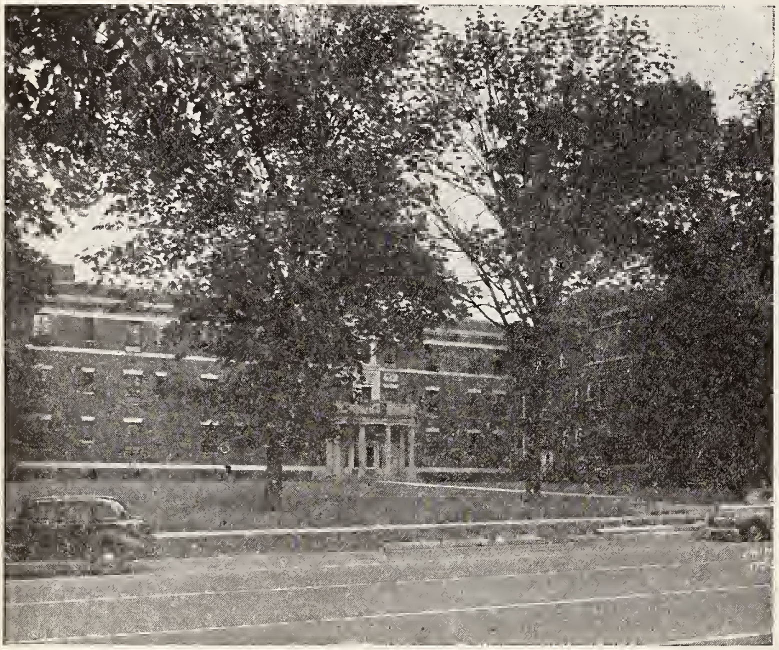
MENNONITE HOSPITAL

Another one of the cooperative activities of the Central Conference of Mennonites was the hospital. For a number of years the conviction had been growing in the minds of some of our church leaders, as well as those of the Defenseless church, that our Mennonites should have a hospital. In fact, as early as 1893 there were a few leaders who were definitely interested in the establishment of such an institution. In May of this same year the Brokaw Hospital of Bloomington, Illinois, was established by the Protestant people. The hospital opened in 1896 and was called the Deaconess Memorial Hospital. This hospital from the beginning was managed by Mennonite deaconess nurses under the leadership of Rev. John A. Sprunger, a Defenseless Mennonite of Chicago, Illinois. It remained under their supervision until August, 1907. Because of lack of support by the Mennonite churches in general our interest was discontinued. But during the time of 1897-1917 the conviction concerning the need of a hospital continued to grow. The need became all the more felt when we became interested in foreign mission work in 1906. In the 1908 Church Conference, Rev. Andrew Vercler of Meadows, Illinois, discussed the need of trained nurses for the home as well as the mission field.



Mennonite Hospital, Bloomington, Illinois. Supported by Central Conference, Defenseless, and Old Mennonites.

The real agitation, however, for a hospital began in 1919. The men who were leaders in this project were Rev. Peter Schantz and Rev. Emanuel Troyer. In our 1917 Church Conference at Hopedale, Illinois, Rev. Troyer urged action in relation to hospital work. A committee was appointed to visit the churches to see how great the interest was in hospital work. The committee was Rev. Troyer, Rev. Schantz, and Sam Stuckey. This committee reported favorably at the 1918 conference held at the North Danvers Mennonite church.

As a result of the work of this committee the first definite step in organization was taken January 3, 1919, when the Mennonite Sanitarium Association was organized. It was incorporated January 24, 1919. This association was to conduct a sanitarium, a hospital, and a training school. The brethren felt that this was in keeping with the teachings of the Master and His ministry in relation to healing. This institution was to be located in Bloomington, Illinois, because the city was centrally located, an educational center, and a Christian town. The city welcomed our hospital.

The first directors chosen for the hospital were: president, Rev. Emanuel Troyer, who remained president until his death in 1942, Rev. Benjamin Rupp, who was elected superintendent and served until March 1, 1927; Rev. Allen Miller; Rev. Joseph King; and Rev. John Kinsinger. All these men have passed to their reward except Rev. Allen Miller who is still with us. This hospital movement is a cooperative effort representing the Central Conference of Mennonites, Defenseless Mennonites, and the Old Mennonites. None of these conferences are officially represented, but congregations of these three conferences are supporting the hospital and the directors are chosen from these groups. The chief interest of the church and the hospital is two-fold: to care for the sick and to train nurses and doctors for service in the home and foreign field.

The nurse's training school was established in the beginning, and the first class graduated in 1922.

The hospital has had a very steady growth and has rendered a large service to the church and the community. A new hospital building was erected in the year 1931 and dedicated in January, 1932. This building has modern equipment and adds greatly to the efficiency of our hospital work.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

JOHN WOOLMAN

John Woolman was an Eighteenth Century Quaker who lived throughout his life in the little town of Mt. Holly, New Jersey. He is one of the greatest Americans in spite of the fact that he is not widely known. A new biography of him has recently appeared, written by Janet Whitney. It is a book about a man with whom Mennonites generally could well afford to become intimately acquainted. As a member of the Society of Friends in colonial days, and so far as this reviewer is concerned, the leading member, he has much to teach Mennonites. I suspect that many of the religious principles taught and lived by John Woolman came indirectly, through his forefathers, from the Mennonites. Early Quakers were much influenced by the Mennonites on the Continent in the Seventeenth Century.

A Sensitive Conscience

Of great value to us at the present time is the story of how John Woolman's tender conscience led him to deal with difficult social and religious problems of his day which are still problems in our own. Woolman was a man of great versatility. He was born and raised on a farm. By occupation he was a tailor but on the side he kept a small farm, practiced surveying, did the job of a lawyer, served as an amateur doctor as occasion demanded, and served as a lay minister in the Society of Friends throughout most of his life.

At the age of twenty-one he was disturbed about the evil condition in his own town centering around the taverns. Some of the offenders were members of the local Friends' Meeting. It was a difficult situation, but God spoke to his tender conscience and Woolman responded. He said: "then after some deliberation I went to the said publik house, and seeing the man of the house, amongst other people I told him I wanted to speak with him, so we went aside and there in the fear of the Lord I expressed to him the matter that lay upon me; which he appeared to take kindly and shewed afterward more respect to me than aforetime."

Tactful Testimony

This manner of dealing with evil was quite in contrast to the loud denounciatory method of shouting vehemently from street corner and pulpit as was the custom of other famous preachers and evangelists of the day. His biographer says of Woolman: "Next to his desire to see a wrong righted was his desire to preserve the feelings of the tavern keeper from hurt." He realized that the tavern keeper too had self-respect and to abuse him by a public denounciation would likely not solve the problem. Woolman tried to help him by showing him a new and a higher sense of duty. A few years later the man died, and Woolman said: "I often thought that had I neglected my duty in that case, it would have given me great remorse. And I was humbly thankful to my gracious Father that by his aid I had discharged what he lay'd upon me."

The Matter of Wealth

As a young man, a Quaker friend wanted Woolman to become his partner in shipping business. But Woolman had observed several dangers in it. One that it might lead to wealth, and wealth would dim the Christian's sense of duty. The other thing he observed was that the pursuit of wealth was the root cause of war. His friend said: "Accept war." Woolman decided rather to reject wealth. In his travels as a minister he was often entertained by wealthy slave holders, but he always felt uneasy in the homes of people who lived in comfort and ease at the expense of slave labor. He spoke to his hosts about this matter even at the risk of alienating friendships. In his business of tailoring he gradually added some merchandise as a sideline, but it soon became so prosperous that he sold it because he feared prosperity in material things would distract from search for spiritual enrichment. In his stock of supplies he tried not to buy anything that "chiefly served to please the vain mind in people."

A Non-Conformist

Woolman, acting as a lawyer to draw up wills and settle estates, refused to write wills where he had to bequeath slaves. When testators protested that what was in their wills was none of his business, he replied: "It is the duty of all to be firm in what they certainly know is right for them." In the French and Indian War he refused to pay war taxes, but he proposed raising a fund to develop friendship with the Indians and relief suffering of plundered settlers. He vigorously opposed the practice of paying a substitute for war service as was the custom at that time. To such people he asked: "What is it you are objecting to? Do you just object to you yourself being drafted? or do you object to the whole method of war? If it is the first you cannot logically claim a religious motive. If it is the second, you cannot put another man into the ranks in your place." Throughout the whole of John Woolman's life run the words of the Apostle Peter: "We must obey God rather than man."

This book is tremendously stimulating and should receive a wide reading among Mennonites. A minor criticism is its overloading of details about Woolman's relatives and family history. The book is published by Atlantic, Little Brown and Co., Boston: 1942, and sells for $3.75. It is a book that can be re-read many times with profit.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Albert Ewert, Wolf Point, Montana

MAY 9—"Plead my cause, O Lord, with them that strive with me: fight against them that fight against me." Ps. 35:1

These words came from the lips of a man after God's own heart, who went through many trials and testings. He reveals in this verse the process of prayer. David is pleading with God, and he asks God to plead with his enemies. David could not reach his enemies by personal contact even if he could have done so it would have had little effect. So he pleads with God, and he pleads with man. Yes, there are many whom we can not reach by personal contact or letter, but we can reach them by the throne of God. On this Mothers' Day many a son is far from home; miles and oceans separate them. Yet they can be reached by the throne of God. Plead with God for them, and God will plead with them.

MAY 10—"And he left them, and went away again and prayed the third time, saying the same words." Matt. 26:44

Jesus is on his way to the place of prayer. He reveals his heart's condition to the three disciples when he says, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death:" He leaves his disciples and goes a little further and there he brings his burden to the Father. He does not leave the garden until the victory is his. "And there appeared an angel unto him from heaven, strengthening him." Heb. 12:2 says, "Who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Is the victory ours before we leave our place of prayer?

MAY 11—"Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me." Acts 8:24

Peter reveals to Simon the sorcerer his relation to God and that he has need of repentance and forgiveness. Simon is quite willing to have Peter pray that he should not perish, but he did not see the necessity of praying for himself. It is not sufficient to have others pray for us but we must turn to God ourselves and pray. There are many who want to be prayed for, and yet they themselves do not know what it means to have fellowship with God in prayer.

MAY 12—"And the men turned their faces from thence and went toward Sodom: but Abraham stood yet before the Lord." Gen. 18:22

The Lord revealed unto Abraham the thing which he was to do. As Abraham heard the will of God, we find such expressions as "but Abraham stood yet before the Lord," and "Abraham drew near." He did not rush into the presence of God and leave. We find him standing and pleading with God for Sodom. Are we doing likewise? God has revealed unto us his will through his word. Do we draw near unto him and plead with him for our church, community and nation? God is seeking for an Abraham.

MAY 13—"Peter therefore was kept in prison: but Prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him." Acts 12:5

In unity there is strength. This church must have realized what prayer can do. Humanly speaking there was no hope for Peter's escape from prison or death. Nevertheless, they were in contact with him who said, "All power is given unto me in heaven and earth." So nothing is impossible. They prayed without ceasing, and God honored their prayer beyond expectation. "They were astonished" as Peter entered the room. What would really be accomplished if every church member would realize the power of a prayer meeting.

MAY 14—"And Hezekiah received the letter of the hand of the messengers, and read it: and Hezekiah went up into the house of the Lord, and spread it before the Lord." II Kings 19:14

Hezekiah, king of Judah, received a letter from the enemy through which they tried to discourage his faith in God. After he had read the letter, he made his way into the house of the Lord. There we find him talking to the Lord about it. Yes, he "spread it before the Lord." The result was victory for him and defeat for the enemy. How often does Satan try to discourage the children of God in various ways. May we, too, find victory by spreading our discouragements before the Lord.

MAY 15—"In every thing give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." I Thess. 5:18

Paul, how can I give thanks in everything? Do you mean to say that I should give thanks when friends turn against me, when my earthly possessions fade away, when death lays it cold hands on one of my loved ones, or when I am tempted and tried? Yes, Paul says in everything. For the very reason "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose." Do I really love the Lord, then I can give thanks in everything, for God will only let that come into my life by his will or permission that is for my best.

Many persons have a wrong idea of what constitutes True Happiness. It is NOT attained through self-gratification, but through Fidelity to a Worthy Purpose.

PERILOUS TIMES

By Melvin Gingerich

Paul wrote Timothy that "in the last days perilous times shall come." As we read the verses that follow, and which describe for us these perilous times, we must conclude that certainly this description fits the age in which we live. Indeed, it is easy to find many periods of history during the last two thousand years when Paul's description of un-Christian society characterized those who were ungodly.

There are two extreme answers to the question, "Is the world continuously becoming more evil?" Some shallow optimists have convinced themselves that human society is ever on the upward move. To them progress is a fundamental law of the universe. Part of the explanation for this view can be found in the wide acceptance of the theory of biological evolution. If, as some scientists claim, reasoned they, the animal world shows a continual trend from lower to higher forms of life, would it not follow logically that there is also a universal trend towards perfection in the moral and spiritual world? Some decided this was true and began teaching the Gospel of Progress. In doing so they had to close their eyes to many realities, and they began to explain away the evil in the world as the result of only poor environment which could be corrected easily. This was the basis for "the social gospel." But the World War rudely awakened many of these shallow thinkers and the Second World War finds few of them left. Nearly all of the religious modernists who had held to this theory are now humbly repentant and admit that sin and evil is much more real and powerful than they had earlier thought it was. They are no longer convinced that the world is getting better.

The other extreme has been dogmatic, too. It always believes that the world has become so wicked that its end is very near. To their way of thinking conditions are always worse than they used to be. Generally, these individuals are not students of history who are able to compare their times to those one hundred, or five hundred, or a thousand years earlier. They compare conditions now to those which existed earlier in their own life time. Since it is a law of psychology that we tend to forget the unpleasant and to remember the pleasant, most people long for "the good old days," forgetting that there was much evil then, too.

If society, and the church, too, has been gradually losing out all the way through its history, as some maintain, how could Christianity ever have gained a foothold and spread to the corners of the earth? If the church and society have been deteriorating for the last 1000 years, how is it that there are still thousands of Christians who will suffer persecution, imprisonment, and death rather than surrender their faith? It is true, of course, that some say the church is not getting worse but that the rest of the world has become so wicked that certainly God must right soon destroy it. Often, however, these prophets of doom see only decline in the Christian Church and constantly bemoan its backsliding.

This is not to contend that their observations

"I HAVE LIED. . ."

"I knelt to pray when day was done,
And prayed: 'O Lord, bless every one;
Lift from each saddened heart the pain,
And let the sick be well again.'
And then I woke another day
And carelessly went on my way.
The whole day long I did not try
To wipe a tear from any eye;
I did not try to share the load
Of any brother on the road;
I did not even go to see
The sick man just next door to me.
Yet once again, when day was done,
I prayed: 'Oh, Lord, bless every one.'
But as I prayed, into my ear,
There came a voice that whispered clear:
'Pause, hypocrite, before you pray;
Who have you tried to bless today?
God's sweetest blessings always go
By hands that serve Him here below.'
And then I hid my face and cried,
'Forgive me, God, for I have lied;
Let me but live another day
And I will live the way I pray.' "

—From The Presbyterian Survey

are entirely incorrect. When the Bible teaches that evil men "shall wax worse and worse," a statement is made that our own observation can confirm. It has always been true that evil men generally increase in their wickedness. Unless they repent of their evil deeds they go deeper and deeper into sin. It may well be true that the world and society has been getting "worse and worse." This is merely to suggest that the downward grade is not necessarily inevitable and that society may not have been on the downward path all of its last 1900 years. There may have been some periods when good was rapidly overcoming evil.

There is another group of prophets of doom whose approach is somewhat different from that of those described above. They tell us often and emphatically that our civilization is being tested now and that unless the Allied Nations win the present war, all that we have held dear is doomed. This war, they tell us, will determine whether the forces of "democracy and righteousness" will triumph over dictatorship and evil. The writer would not suggest for a minute that the philosophy of the Nazi and Japanese leaders is not an evil one. It certainly is, and God forbid that it should triumph. We must remember, however, that in the final analysis evil cannot defeat evil. And we must remember, too, that often evil military dictatorships seemed to triumph for a season, but Christian civilization did not disappear. The church lived on in spite of persecution.

Perhaps the most thought-provoking book of this decade is the one written a year ago by P. A. Sorokin, chairman of the Department of Sociology at Harvard. It is entitled The Crisis of Our Age. In it Sorokin differs with both the optimists and pessimists. He believes our civilization is facing a crisis such as it has not faced for hundreds of years. He believes, too, that our entire civilization has been decaying for the past several hundred years and that unless people see the extent of the threat and change their outlook, it will go under. This crisis, he says, involves the whole of our modern culture, our art, philosophy, religion, law, and our political, social, and economic institutions.

Those who have been inclined to praise the modern age should read through his chapters; they will be convinced that our civilization is very sick. And they will see that the winning of a war or the displacement of a dictator, or the passing of a few laws, will not cure the fundamental ills of our society. Only by getting rid of our emphasis upon physical happiness here and now, and in thinking in terms again of heavenly citizenship and the eternal principles of the Sermon on the Mount can we save our civilization from ruin. Thus writes Sorokin.

In history he sees ups and downs, not a slow gradual process towards a better and better world, nor a gradual inevitable trend towards worse and worse conditions. There have been times when for several centuries there was slow upward trend and then there were times when for centuries the trend was downward. For several centuries now there has been once more a downward trend. But perhaps the people will repent in time, and then there may again be a period of progress before there comes a final period of extreme wickedness which may bring the end of the world. Who knows? No one but God Himself; not even the angels in heaven know when then end of the age will come. We had better, therefore, not be dogmatic in our interpretation of Bible prophecy. —Youth's Christian Companion

QUALIFICATIONS FOR CHURCH MEMBERSHIP

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "We walk by faith," No. 152; "Take my life and let it be," No. 215. 2. Reading of Acts 2:41-45, leader's remarks, and prayer. 3. Ten minutes of gospel hymn singing. 4. Offering for C.P.S. camps.

II. Leader's Introduction and Facts for Study:

When Jesus called His first disciples, he told them, "Come ye after me, and I will make you fishers of men." His parting instructions to His followers were, "Go ye therefore, and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe whatsoever I command you."

These two words of Jesus give us a good idea of the qualifications for church membership. Anyone who desires to hold membership in that body of people which identifies itself as belonging to Christ must be willing to do these things: to follow Him, to be baptized, to observe what Christ has commanded, and to become fishers of men.

Following Him means walking where He walked, in the paths of obedience to the Heavenly Father, in the ways of loving and doing good to fellowmen, down the valley of suffering if need be, and up into the mountain for prayer and greater vision. Another qualification for church membership is baptism. It is the symbol of cleansing from sin and of the entrance into fellowship with Christ and His church. Baptism is "in the name of the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost." It means that the believer's heart is opened to God and is willing to let him rule and to receive God's power to transform his life.

To be willing to observe what Christ has commanded is not a grievous burden but a joyous task for those who want to belong to Christ and His Church. Their life centers around Christ. They love Him. They serve Him. They make it their business to know His will and to do it. They sit at His feet to learn of Him. They look at Him and live with Him until their own lives become Christlike. They learn to say, "Christ only, always, liveth in me."

To be willing to become fishers of men is another qualification for church membership. Christ said, "I came to seek and to save that which is lost," and those who belong to Him must have the same purpose. The life of all the disciples, especially, of the great apostle Paul illustates the inward urge to bring others to Christ. In a way, the history of the church is the history of missions. Those who have experienced the saving power of Christ in their lives will gladly lend a hand to bring others to Christ.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Coming to Christ, Matt. 11:28-30. 2. The Calling of Levi, Luke 5:27-32. 3. The Need for Faith, Luke 18:35-43, Mark 16:16. 4. What Christ Has Commanded, Luke 6:20-38. 5. Willingness to Suffer, Luke 9:23-26. 6. The Mission of the Twelve, Mark 3:13-19.

IV. For Discussion:

1. What are the qualifications for church membership? 2. What value is there in baptism? 3. What value is there in belonging to the church?

V. Food for Thought:

It is impossible to have Christ live in the heart and not reflect it in the face.

AN EXCELLENT FAMILY MEMBER

Some boys are excellent players on a baseball team. Some girls are excellent in their studies. Some boys know how to raise prize-winning heifers. Some girls know how to make prize-winning dresses. To be able to do something well brings happiness. Being an excellent member of the family also brings happiness. Let this program call attention to what it means to be a good family member. Try a project for improvement.

I. Select hymns out of the children's or youth section in the Mennonite Hymnary.

II. Have some Intermediate tell the story of Luke 2:40-52.

III. Have the group give sentence prayers of thanksgiving for their home life.

IV. Leader's remarks about the importance of being an excellent family member.

V. Talks—"How to be a Good Son" by an Intermediate boy. "How to Be a Good Daughter" by an Intermediate girl.

VI. Read to the group or give the group the following questions for a check-up:

1. Do I eat from all the food which mother prepares?
2. Have I made it a habit not to over-eat or to eat too much of any one thing?
3. Have I made it a thorough habit always to wash before eating?
4. Do I promptly get ready to eat when mother announces meal time?
5. Do I do my part to make every meal a happy and quiet time?
6. Do I ever do naughty things to get attention?
7. Do I try to make my parents happy by obeying and helping them?
8. Do I ever become angry or sulky when I can't have my way?
9. Do I always tell the truth?
10. Do I talk in a loud and noisy manner?
11. Do I get right to work when my parents give me something to do?
12. Am I always willing to go to bed as early as I should?
13. Am I afraid to things?
14. Do I practice safety-first to avoid accidents?
15. Do I bite my fingernails?
16. Do I keep my body clean?
17. Do I take good care of my clothes?
18. Do I read in the Bible every day?
19. Do I pray every day?
20. Do I try to please Jesus at all times?

VII. You might suggest to the group that they put down (at the meeting) on the left side of a sheet of paper items in which they want to improve. To the right of this mark off enough squares for one or two weeks. They can then at the end of each day check themselves and mark progress or failure. The group might want to relate their experiences with this at the next program.

VIII. Close with the song, "I Would Be True."

MOTHERS OF THE BIBLE

I Sam. 1:25-28; 2:1-11

My Mother

We know when Jesus hung on the cross He commended His mother to John. Even in His deepest agony, He was so considerate of His mother. Isn't this a lesson to us that we should honor and respect and serve our mothers while we have them with us?

One day a pleasant faced woman got on a trolly car with her two small sons. It was during the busy hour of the afternoon when many men and women were returning from work. The smaller boy sat with his mother, while the older boy took a seat opposite her. The older boy was interested in looking out of the window, but frequently glanced across the aisle to his mother. At length he called softly, "Mother! Mother!" The mother looked over and smiled. The boy's eyes lighted, and then he whispered loudly, "Mother, I love you!" The mother turned a smiling face upon her small son, and the men and the women looked tenderly from one to another. The trolly car had suddenly become a place of blessing, because a little boy had voiced the ever beautiful sentiment, "Mother, I love you."

How long has it been since you have told your mother, "I love you," and please say it throughout the year. You are indeed fortunate if you have a mother full of faith in God, who prays for you.

Hannah, a Praying Mother

Hannah longed for a son. One year when she went up to Jerusalem to the house of the Lord with her husband, the Lord promised her a son, and she promised the Lord that she would lend him to the Lord all the days of his life. This son was Samuel, and he did serve the Lord. He became one of the greatest prophets of Israel, for his life was an answer to prayer. He was dedicated to the Lord ere he was born.

The Mother of Moses, a Providing Mother

The children of Israel were in bondage. Pharoah, the ruler, had heaped terrible burdens upon them. One law was that all boy babies be killed. Moses was a baby at this time. For three months, his mother hid him. When she could hide him no longer, she made an ark of bulrushes and made it waterproof. Then she placed him on the river's edge, and Miriam, his sister, stayed near. When Pharoah's daughter came to bathe, she found Moses and immediately loved and adopted him for her own and got his own mother as his nurse. Moses became the leader of his people and delivered them from their afflictions and bondage in Egypt. Moses' loving and providing mother was used by the Lord to protect the life of Moses.

Lois and Eunice, a Grandmother and Mother

The apostle Paul loved the young man Timothy and addressed two of his epistles to him. Timothy had great faith in God, a faith which he had inherited from his grandmother and mother. They taught him the scriptures as a child, and they made him wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus. (II Tim. 3:15)

The Question Bee

1. How can children sweeten the labor of parents? 2. How do children make the misfortunes of parrents more bitter? 3. What do we owe to our homes?

The Prayer List

Thank God for Christian homes. Pray for "more love to Christ" in our homes today.

Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Hoover are superintendent and matron of the hospital and have served from March, 1927, to the present time.

The present situation of the hospital can best be described by the report of the superintendent to the annual meeting. A new addition has been built to the hospital, the construction beginning May 10, 1941, and is now nearly completed. It is a three-story, fireproof building 44 by 80 feet. This addition provides for delivery, labor, sterilizing, and doctors' waiting rooms in the maternity department on the third floor. The nursery accomodates twenty-four babies; in addition the premature babies are provided for in a separate nursery; also a room is set aside for babies which have to be isolated. The obstetrical unit was furnished by the Ladies Auxiliary of the hospital. There are now twenty-eight graduate nurses employed and forty-five student nurses in training. Superintendent Hoover reports that this last year 2,163 patients were admitted and 493 babies were born in the hospital. The present capacity of the hospital is 106 beds. Our hospital, under the efficient leadership of Mr. N. O. Hoover, is serving humanity in an efficient and Christian way in these days of stress and dire need.

Whose Side is God On

That God does use the scourge of war to accomplish the purposes of His divine plan we need not deny, but is is important to point out that in a struggle between nations of sinful men God is on neither side. When Israel, as a result of long sin and defiance of God, fell prey to the Assyrians, was God on the side of the Assyrians or of the Israelites? The Assyrians, too, were wicked men, as such books as Jonah and Nahum point out. As a matter of fact, God was on neither Assyria's nor Israel's side. He was on His own side. God stands for truth and right. Seldom or never is a human cause unmixed with human blame and error. It is vain to ask God to justify our wrong—to come down and to fight on our side as the gods of the pagan clans did. In the great controversy between right and wrong the important thing is that we accept God's conditions, that we line up with His justice and truth. It is not so much a question, which side is God on, but are we on God's side? —Gospel Herald

Sharing

(In lieu of opportunities for giving large scale relief just now, we as Mennonites have another unique opportunity for Christian sharing, for which we should be grateful. We can share with those of our brethren who are called by the military draft and are sent to the Civilian Public Service camps because of their conscience against war. The support of these camps is not to be regarded as a tolerable burden which must be taken up and carried by paying out more or less graciously so and so much money at intervals. We should rather look upon it as a precious opportunity to share with the young brethren in the real spirit of Christian faith and brotherhood. May it be the case that God intends that the present C.P.S. program shall be a training ground for the membership of the Mennonite Church, to train them in the giving of their means in a large way as never before?)

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

A Way to Help our Camps

Due to the food shortage and the consequent rationing program many of our C. P. S. camps face considerable difficulty in providing proper food for their men.

To assist in solving this problem the M. C. C. at its recent meeting approved a plan for encouraging a church-wide home-canning and drying program with a view to obtaining donations of home-canned and dried fruit and vegetables. Based on the reports of what was done by various groups last year without being solicited it is estimated that an organized effort might produce most or all the canned and dried fruit and vegetables needed by the camps.

Provision is being made in O. P. A. regulations allowing up to fifty quarts per family of home-canned goods to be given away point free.

A printed folder describing this plan is being prepared for distribution throughout the constituency supporting our camps. In the meantime any interested individuals or groups may obtain information regarding the needs and proposed plan by writing to Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pa.

Men on Maintenance Projects

As of April 9, 1943, a total of 406 men were situated on C. P. S. projects which provide for their complete maintenance. Of this number 364 were located in hospital units. Others were on farms, in dairy herd testing, and in administrative offices.

The number of men on maintenance projects has increased since the above date with the placing of one hundred men on farms and the enlargement of some of the hospital units.

Garden Projects in Camps

Reports from the camps tell of the planting of gardens in a wide variety of places: "in the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia, on the arid highlands of Colorado, in the Rockies of Montana, and among the trees of the Sierras in California."

On the whole, camp gardens of last year were successful. One camp has recently used the last of its supply of potatoes, carrots, and beets from its last summer's garden.

Besides raising vegetables, the food supply projects will include the raising of pigs and chickens where this is possible.

Camp Briefs

Twenty more men have been approved for the work at the Norristown, Pa., hospital and ten more for the Harrisburg, Pa., hospital. . .

As of April 9, 1943, there was a total of thirty-three C. P. S. units under Mennonite administration with a total of 2,672 men; 21 Quaker units with a total of 1,620 men; 19 Brethren units with 1,473 men; 2 cooperative camps with 82 men; 1 Catholic and 1 Methodist unit with 30 men each. Hawaii and Alaska each have one conscientious objector who serves in his respective territory . . .

Sister Dorothy Classen has been appointed nurse at Belton, Montana . . .

The "smoke-jumping" unit (parachute fire-fighters) is scheduled to open at Missoula, Montana, on May 3.

PEACE SECTION NOTES

Questions on the War Loan Drive and Civilian Bonds

What is the difference between bonds available at local banks and the bonds purchased according to the plan of the Civilian Bond Committee through Provident Trust Company of Philadelphia?

There is a diffference and an important one. Bonds purchased through the church-approved plan are registered with the United States Treasury as having been bought by persons conscientiously unable to finance war. A witness of sensitivity is thereby made to the government relative to the problem.

This testimony is lost when the bonds are bought locally since the United States Treasury does not recognize such bonds as having been bought by persons with a conscience against war financing.

Hereford Mennonite Church

Bally, Pennsylvania

At the beginning of the year, our pastor, Dr. Elmer E. S. Johnson, again handed us the booklet containing the readings we were to follow during the year. They centered around the general theme of "The Christian Year." He also gives one reference to be memorized for each month.

The Ladies Aid Society installed a microphone system and a loud speaker in the church. This is also connected with the Sunday School Room to be used there to accommodate large crowds. Hearing aid phones for the very hard of hearing have been installed at different places in our pews. These are very much enjoyed by those so afflicted who have expressed that they have heard everything of a church program for the first time in many years.

Our pastor performed two marriages at his home in Hereford on March 27. In a ceremony at 2 p. m., LaRue Leola Clemmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Clemmer of New Berlinville, became the bride of Private Roy G. Stauffer. At 7:00 o'clock in the evening, the marriage of Mary Elizabeth Lonacre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Milton Longacre, Pennsburg, and Russeli Walter Clemmer, son of Mrs. Sarah Clemmer of Barto, as solomnized by Dr. Johnson.

At the morning worship services on Palm Sunday, Ruth Ann Biery, young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Biery was consecrated.

With gas rationing and driving restrictions, we find that some of our people have difficulty in attending worship services, but we know their prayers are with us. We look forward to the times they can worship with us. Our attendance has been good, and the interest of the worshippers is an inspiration to the pastor.

SEMINARY BOARD REPORTS

At the last meeting of the Witmarsum Seminary Board, it was agreed that it might not be wise at this time either to reopen Witmarsum Seminary as a separate institution or to affiliate with some existing seminary. However it was decided that our best course for the present would be to make an effort to secure one man acceptable to the Mennonite colleges, who would help these colleges in their ministerial training, both undergraduate and fifth-year; and also to keep in touch with the various Mennonite Bible and seminary students, as well as plan for summer ministerial conferences, and any other similar unifying work.

This man would serve at one of the Mennonite colleges for a period of time, then pass on to the next, in rotation. Thus students interested in special Bible work or ministerial training could attend the college where this man was located at that time. Graduate students would be able to get the equivalent of one year of seminary training.

A committee is now working on the details of this plan, and further announcement will be made when definite arrangements are completed. In the meantime, it would be well for students interested to keep this plan in mind and watch for further announcements.

TO THE CHURCHES WHO ARE IN NEED OF A SUMMER VACATION BIBLE SCHOOL TEACHER

Since our last announcement in The Mennonite calling for summer vacation Bible school teachers, eight different girls have offered their services to churches who are in need of a teacher. Four of these girls are from Kansas, three from Oklahoma, and one from Ohio. Any churches who have not yet found a teacher for their vacation Bible school can secure the names of these girls by writing to:

—First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Rev. P. P. Tschetter left for Freeman, South Dakota, to conduct a series of meetings. Dean Goertz of Bethel College brought the message on May 2. A group of Oklahoma Bible Academy students presented a program on that Sunday night. Harold Graber, son of Peter H. Graber, has left for a C.P.S. camp. On Easter Sunday the church received into its membership: Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Goering, Mrs. Harvey Schrag, and Mrs. Harvey D. Krehbiel, all formerly of the Eden Church near Moundridge; and Mrs. Arthur Schwartz from the Zion Church at Kingman; and also Mr. and Mrs. Howard Schrag from Freeman, South Dakota. Our church plans to conduct two weeks of vacation Bible school. Waldo J. Flickinger, a student at the Moody Bible Institute, preached an Easter sermon on Monday morning.

—Willard E. Wedel, Corr.

—A. S. Rosenberger, pastor of the Salem Mennonite Church, Dalton, Ohio, recently gave the Bible lectures at the Eastern District Conference session. During his absence the Bluffton College Men's Gospel Team gave an evening program, and Stanley Hostetter gave the message.

—The members of the First Mennonite Church, Geary, Oklahoma, gathered on the church grounds on March 31 for a "tree-planting bee." The young married people's class purchased the trees, and a good-sized group of men dug pits and planted the trees, while the ladies of the church prepared a meal worthy of the name. To this the men did full justice at the lunch hour. Conditions permitting, our church grounds, in not too many years, should be a joy to behold. On that same night Rev. B. H. Janzen of Lehigh, Kansas, who came here in behalf of the Peace and Home Mission committees of the Western District and Bethel College, brought us a gospel message, followed by other services on Thursday and Friday nights. Rev. Janzen's sincere way of presenting his message won the love and admiration of his listeners, and we hope that his efforts were not in vain. Another important event for the church was the visit of Miss Kuyf. She spoke to the ladies aid in the afternoon and to the church in the evening, relating her experiences while interned in China and those on board the Gripsholm on the way home. Both meetings were well attended. —Mrs. A.H.W.

—The Kansas Institute of International Relations will be held at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, June 8-17.

—The Junior and Senior Classes of Bethel College are combining their efforts in the production of Moliere's classic comedy, The Miser, which will be given Saturday evening, May 15, in Memorial Hall. The curtain will rise at 8 oclock. The play is under the direction of Miss Thelma D. Reinhard, instructor of dramatics at Bethel College. Admission prices are 20, 30, and 40 cents.

EASTERN DISTRICT SECRETARY'S NOTES

The Fourth Quarterly Conference held in the First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Rev. J. J. Plenert, pastor, on April 5 was very well attended. In the afternoon the Rev. Ward W. Shelly, pastor of the Springfield Mennonite Church, read a paper on "The Mid-Week Prayer Service." This will appear in The Mennonite. In the evening the Rev. Paul R. Shelly presented a very interesting paper on "Are Ye Able?"

—Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia. Mr. Edwin M. Crawford is the student-pastor of this church. The "Happy Hour" fellowship was observed on Sunday evening, March 14. Rev. George Bacon was in charge of the Singspiration, and "Chas" Terry played several numbers on his Harmonica. The church held a fellowship banquet and social on Friday, March 26.

First Mennonite Church, Philadelphia. The Ladies Aid observed their Love Feast on Tuesday evening, March 16. Joseph N. Byler of Akron, Pa., was the speaker. Mr. Byler returned from France in December where he had been doing relief work under the Mennonite Central Committee. The choir of the church rendered the Easter Cantata "Penitence, Pardon and Peace" by Maunder, on Palm Sunday evening. The baptismal service was conducted on Good Friday evening. Mr. J. B. Bechtel, well-known throughout the General Conference, observed his seventy-eighth birthday on April 11. Brother Bechtel, we join your many friends in wishing you many more happy birthdays.

East Swamp. Sunday afternoon, April 18, was a great day for the church when an ordination service was held for Mr. and Mrs. Abraham Unruh who will be the church's first missionaries. They will work in the Kentucky Mountains. We congratulate the young workers and the church.

Grace Church, Lansdale. The Brotherhood was in charge of the service held in Montgomery County Prison, Norristown, on Sunday afternoon, March 21. The Berean Class held a Covered Dish Lunch in the church on Saturday evening, April 3. There are ten young people in the catechetical class.

Eden Church, Schwenksville. Rev. Freeman H. Swartz, pastor, delivered a message in the Norristown Brethren Church on Sunday evening, March 14, and at the Roch-hurst Santarium on Sunday afternoon March 21. The three churches of Schwenksville have again observed community Lenten services. This custom was started many years ago. The minister does not preach in his own church at these special services. The church auditorium was used for the first time on Easter Sunday morning. Later it is expected to have a conference service to celebrate the completion of the renovating program. Mr. Augustine Rose was the guest speaker on Sunday morning, April 4.

Swamp Charge. The Swamp Charge is comprised of the West Swamp, Bethany-Quakertown, and Flatland churches, of which Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander is pastor. There are ten people in the Bethany Church catechetical class. Miss Augusta Schmidt, missionary on furlough from India, spoke in the churches of the charge on Sunday, April 4. The pastor spoke at the New York Mennonite Fellowship on Wednesday, April 7. Quakertown again observed a three hour service in the First Reformed Church, with the various ministers of the town participating. The pastor, who is Secretary of the General Conference Home Mission Board, made a trip to Canada to visit several churches during the week of April 12. The Brotherhood of the charge is planning to erect a Workers Cabin at Men-O-Lan. Good work! We wish you well.

First Church, Allentown. Sixteen young people were received into the church by baptism and the right-hand-of-fellowship on Sunday evening, April 18. During Holy Week the church enjoyed the messages of three guest speakers, as follows: Wednesday evening the Rev. W. H. Taylor, district superintendent of the A.M.E. Zion Church, (colored); Thursday evening, Rev. Joseph B. Mohr, pastor of the Cetronia Lutheran Church, and Friday evening, Rev. Kenneth Steckle, pastor of the Allentown Gospel Chapel.

Upper Milford, Zionsville. The Zionsville Community observed the Ninth Annual Community Lenten Services the last three Tuesdays of Lent as follows: April 6 in the Mennonite Church, with the Lutheran pastor, Rev. D. C. Kaufman, preaching; April 13 in the Lutheran Church, with the Reformed pastor, Rev. J. N. Blatt preaching, and April 20 in the Reformed Church with Rev. Howard G. Nyce preaching. The average attendance for the three services was 199.

Springfield: Four new members were received into the fellowship of the Church, Pleasant Valley, on March 21. Three were by transfer and one by baptism. Rev. Henry Heydt, president of the Lancaster School of the Bible was with us for two nights of special services in March.

A personal note: This will be the last article to appear by me under the title of "Eastern District Secretary's Notes." Because of an extended illness and at the advice of my doctors to cease certain activities I have notified the nominating committee of the conference that I can no longer serve as Conference Secretary. I may continue these articles, but if so, they will appear under the heading Eastern District Conference Notes. I wish to thank all those who have encouraged me to write these articles during the past year. —Howard G. Nyce —Orlo Kaufman, member of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, now studying for the ministry at the Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, was home for a short visit recently. Brother Kaufman teaches a group of fourth graders on Sunday in the Kenilworth Community Church. Among them is the son of the president of American Air Lines, Inc. Harley Stucky from the Hoffnungsfeld Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, is the only other Mennonite student at Garrett. At least five or six men from the General Conference are studying at Chicago Theological Seminary, among them Delmar Wedel and Orlando Wiebe from Aberdeen, Idaho.

—First Mennonite Church, Wadsworth, Ohio: The young people presented the Easter drama, "So Great Faith" by Martha Bayly at the traditional Easter sunrise service held in cooperation with Wadsworth Christian Youth Federation. The latter organization meets quarterly and is "an interdenominational agency of the Protestant church to further the cause of Christ and His Kingdom among Wadsworth youth." After the service the young people enjoyed a breakfast served by two Sunday school classes. This was the first breakfast to be served in the new basement.

—The Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, raised a total of $37,064.98 in 1943. —Taken from statistical report to the conference.

—"The agricultural committee of the Fresno (California) County Chamber of Commerce rejected a proposal to seek conscientious objectors from mountain camps for work on valley farms on the ground the objectors were doing an essential job where they are in providing fire protection. M. A. Benedict, Forest Supervisor of the Sierra National Forest, said the 145 conscientious objectors from various midwest states now in that Forest are doing a splendid job in protecting the mountain watersheds, building fire trails and other essential work."

—Fresno Bee

—Men in C.P.S. camps who had been given inadequate physical examinations before their entrance are now being re-examined by government order.

—Freeman Junior College: Rev. Walter Gering, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, will be the Commencement Week speaker at Freeman Junior College this year. He will bring the sermon to the graduating class on Sunday evening, May 9, and the commencement address on Friday evening, May 14. The regular Alumni and Booster Banquet is to be served at 7 p.m. on May 12, in the College Gym. Miss Etta Davis, who has been directing the commercial department this year, expects to leave for her home near Philadelphia as soon as school is out. Rev. Harold Gross anticipates doing graduate work in philosophy and psychology, perhaps, in the University of Iowa this next year.

—Rev. A. J. Dyck, pastor of the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church, Inman, Kansas, recently visited the Colorado Springs C.P.S. camp and spoke to the men.

—The First Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas, gave its members the opportunity to place their gifts for Bethel College into an offertory envelope on a recent Sunday morning. This was done preparatory to the Fellowship Drive, so that gas might be saved. A total of $334.00 was given in this way. Those who did not give in this way were then visited.

—Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater, Kansas: Funeral services for John Epp, Sr., were held on April 18. The Young People's Choir rendered "The Holy City" on Good Friday evening. Orlando Andres of Newton again directed. The young people are planning on an ice cream social at the close of the last practice for this season. Dr. A. H. Unruh of Winkler, Manitoba, gave the message on Easter morning. Invitations are out for the wedding of Catherine Claassen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Claassen, to Edwin Schroeder of Shannon, California, a member of the Willow Creek Mennonite Church near Paso Robles. —Corr.

—Johannestal Mennonite Church, Hillsboro, Kansas: Missionary F. J. Isaac brought the message on Good Friday morning. In the afternoon Mrs. Isaac spoke to the women's missionary society which was commemorating its twenty-fifth anniversary. On Easter Monday morning the services were in German. —Corr.

—Summerfield Mennonite Church, Summerfield, Illinois: When Carlus Basinger, a student at the Chicago Theological Seminary, visited his home here recently, he brought the Easter message. In the evening he spoke to the young people's society and showed some pictures. During the coming months he will be occupied with home mission work in California for the Congregational Church. During the past winter he was in charge of the young people's department at the Thomas Memorial Church, Chicago. This was the first time he had a chance to come home since last September. We were all glad to see him and appreciated his helpful messages. —Corr.

—Bluffton College: The seniors are taking their comprehensive examinations which consist of three hours of written work and one hour of oral examination. These examinations were inaugerated in 1936. "Faculty members felt that mastery of a specific field of knowledge was of extreme importance. Results of these tests are recorded as being superior, satisfactory, or unsatisfactory, and are taken into accout by the faculty in determining qualification for the A.B. or B.S.M. degree." President Ramseyer recently spoke to the Mennonite Church at Fairfield, Pa., and attended a session of the Eastern District Conference. The college presented the Chicago Little Philharmonic Orchestra on April 30. Dudley Crofts Watson, from the Chicago Art Institute, spoke on "Modern Art and the Old Masters" on April 27. He illustrated his lecture with slides in full color. The college sponsored a music contest on May 1 that was attended by more than three hundred students from twenty-two high schools in Northwestern Ohio.

—The program of the coming Northern District Conference, which is to be held June 5 to 9 has just been sent in by Rev. L. H. Linscheid. We hope to bring the program in the next issue.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ."

VOLUME LVIII NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, MAY 11, 1943 NUMBER 19

TWO MENNONITES

(The following article is taken from "The Lexington Herald" of April 13. It was written by William E. Ellis)

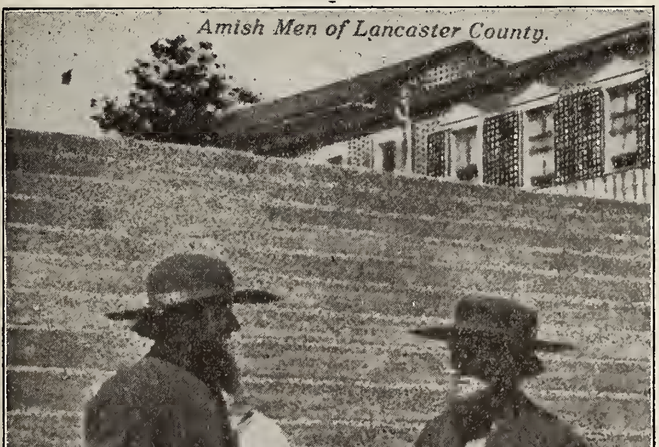
"I met two elderly Mennonites on the street, in Lebanon, Pa., and their appearance has been preaching me a sermon ever since. They wore the 'plain' dress of their church, black, without ornament or style. On Broadway they would be counted 'queer.'

"Their attire was less noteworthy than their countenances. For on their placid faces was written peace and good will. The long years during which they had lived under the consciousness of a Divine will for their lives had etched lines of contentment and spirituality and benevolence upon their faces. Life had given them of its best—though the man's black coat had taken on a greenish cast from years of use; and its threadbare spots were neatly mended.

"As they went, they preached—unconsciously of course—the Gospel which this harried generation needs. They were real advertisements, living epistles, of their faith.

"Forgive us for the heresy of worried, fearful faces, our Father. Help us to walk so surely and serenely in the presence of the Master that men will take knowledge of us, that we have been with Jesus. Amen. Read Ephesians 2:10."

(The paper from which the above article is taken was sent to A. Warkentin, Librarian, Mennonite Historical Library, North Newton, Kansas, by Menno Fast, who is studying and teaching at the University of Kentucky.)



Amish Men of Lancaster County.

These two Amish Mennonites wear the plain garb. Whether the Mennonites in the article were Amish or "Old" Mennonites is not stated.

"There are about three-quarters of a million Mormons in America. The standards of the church call for abstinence from tea, coffee, alcohol, tobacco, opium, and such "drug beverages" as the so-called cola drinks. These standards are generally, though not absolutely, observed. The far-flung and highly organized welfare plan of the Mormon church with its extensive production and distribution program for caring for its unfortunate and needy members, is a heavy burden on the membership. Yet freedom from servitude to these various drug habits probably saves more economic expenditures than are required by the whole vast welfare program."

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHURCH LIBRARIES

Rural America is largely without library service. An American Library Association study in 1926 revealed that 86 per cent of the rural population had no access to public libraries, as against 5 per cent in the cities. Since that time some real progress has been made in the country but the proportion of rural people without library service is still over 75 per cent. But what has this to do with Mennonite rural life?

Our Reading Habits

Mennonites are a part of this 75 per cent of rural America which is not being served by a place where good books are available. Some time ago a missionary, who had returned to this country and who was visiting the various Mennonite communities, said one of the greatest surprises was the scarcity of good books and reading material in Mennnonite homes. This statement might be interpreted to mean that Mennonites generally do not read, or if they read it is books and magazines of a second rate quality. In either case it is unfortunate. Wholesome books and good reading broaden the mind, enlarge one's vision, deepen one's spirit, and enrich the whole of life. Why should we not encourage good reading habits?

Church Responsibility

Who is better fitted than the Christian people to promote these ends? Shall this be left entirely in the hands of the public schools which have always steered clear of religious and ethical subjects for fear of offending some members of the community? If wise reading promotes Christian values, why is it not the responsibility of the church to encourage such activity? Our rural churches are ideal centers for such sources of information. Our people who are most interested in such things come to church once a week where they could select books they would like to read. A supply of good Christian literature for children would be an excellent substitute for the atrocious funnies (which are no longer funny) that many of our children regularly read. It would also be offering a splendid alternative to the cheap fiction that is now being consumed by many less discriminating people.

Cooperation is Economical

Good books are expensive. Two and three dollars for a book that may be read only once is a prohibitive price for most people. But if this price is distributed over the church membership or even among a group of those interested the per capita cost becomes reasonable. A church committee might select the new books and a librarian elected to take care of them. Why should the Mennonite Church not take the lead in some such step? It would be an example for other churches. It might lift the intellectual and spiritual level of the congregation and be a real help to the minister who often cannot afford to buy the books he really needs for his work.

Great Wealth Without Much Money

The farmer going out in the early morning to milk the cows is surrounded by a wealth of unusual beauty. The cooing of turtle doves, the excited chirping of the sparrows, the gentleness of the breeze that will later be racing wind, the fragrance of grass and flowers, trees and hedges silhouetted against the eastern horizon, the gentle but full smile of the sun as it lifts its face to greet everyone. This is great wealth. It comes naturally to the man who lives away from the crowded, money-making dens of mankind.

Such wealth is not within the grasp of the financier who in his limousine rolls through the car-crowded canyons of a city to an office in a skyscraper. Men may chase madly after money in order that some day they may purchase a country home, do some traveling, relax in God's quieting out-of-doors. They may succeed in all of this. Yet they cannot grasp the wealth which the farmer can daily enjoy. They can no more do so than one can make one big meal as satisfying as twelve good ones eaten with renewed hunger. They can no more do so than one can benefit from an overdoze of vitamins, good as they are. The right daily proportion of work and beauty is great wealth. The farmer can possess it without much money. —rw.

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

A Belated Expression of Sympathy

At our last Foreign Mission Board meeting a few months ago, the Board was evidently under the impression that missionary G. A. Linsheid had passed away before the 1942 Board meeting, and so made no mention of his departure in this year's report The Executive Committee just noticed it a few days ago, when in session, and expresses its regret. The secretary was instructed to send Mrs. Linsheid a belated expression of sympathy in her bereavement and lonesomeness. Yes, so these old workers are beginning to pass to their reward. We miss their faithful service. The church which Brother Linsheid served after leaving the field also misses him much. May the Lord comfort especially Mrs. Linsheid with the ever new Easter message of eternal life as a gift of grace, and on top, a time of reaping of what has been sown in faithful service.

In behalf of the Board,
P. H. Richert

GLEANINGS

By S. T. Moyer

"A college student, grandson of a Christian minister, who risked his life and sacrificed his ancestral estate and the love and esteem of his family to become a disciple of Jesus asked me a few months ago whether it was reasonable to believe in the salvation the church preaches. 'Can I hold the acquired faith of my grandfather, when Christian nations are dragging the whole world to ruin and destruction?'

"The next week a Moslem inquirer gave me an inspired answer to the anxious query of that doubting Christian youth. 'What has failed in our time?' said he, 'Not Christian civilization, not the Church, and certainly not Christ, but all else. Humanity without Christ has shown to be hopeless. Mussolini, the Fascist Messiah, Hitler, the Nazi Saviour, and Science, the god of the Western secularists, have betrayed mankind· Our only hope now IS Christ.' "

Bishop J. W. Pickett

The following epitaph on the tombstone of David Livingstone's parents carry two words worthy of consideration "poor" and "pious." But the whole world needs to remember the results of that combination in the life of David,—who has thrown an entire world to his indebtedness and before whom all England did honour, whose bones lie buried in Westminister Abbey.

ALBERTO'S STORY

By Helen A. Penner

I was born in 1928 on the Isle of Minorca. My father was a commander of the Spanish marine. When I was still small we moved to Madrid. We had lived there four years when the Spanish Revolution broke out. With the attempt of the Fascist party to take Madrid in 1936 the Republican government gave the order for the evacuation of the children into Catalonia and Valencia. Four of my brothers and a sister left for Catalonia, where the women received us with open arms and took us into their homes as if we were their own children.

In the very small village where we lived for two and a half years, we went to the village school. When I left there in 1938 I was very sad to leave these people who had been real parents to us. With my father and mother and brothers I went to Barcelona. The war was raging and bombs were falling often. Women and children were killed in the streets. My school was bombarded and several of my comrades were killed.

The Republican government had to evacuate Barcelona in January of 1939. We left as the Fascists were entering the city. After spending four days at Geronewe, we stayed all night at another village. From there we went in a truck to Cadaques, where we stayed a week. In a little boat we traveled to Port-Vendres, a French port close to the border. The French people there gave us a fine welcome after our terrible trip crowded in these little barks which every moment threatened to sink.

After spending about a week at Port-Vendres, where we were given food and shelter, we were joined by my father. He had come from Spain by canoe. Immediately we went to Vernet-les-Bains. During the year that we spent there we lived in the perfecture and I attended a French school. After that we lived very comfortably in a Mexican colony at Molitz-les-Bains. When it closed we were taken to the concentration camp at Broun, and later to the one at Argeles-sur-Mer. Life there was quite miserable. From there we were sent to the camp at Riversaltes where one is very poorly fed.

For two months I have been at the Mennonite convalescent home at Canet Plage. I like very much the life here. The members of the personnel are very good to us. We are always clean, we have good times, and we have good food to eat. The American delegates love us as if they were our real parents. We thank the Mennonites very much, and we love with all our hearts those whom we know. We shall never forget what they are doing for us.

(The above autobiography which I have translated into English tells its own story. In reading it you will realize what an interrupted and scattered education most of these refugee children have had. The talented children, such as Alberto, seem to learn a great deal in spite of this lack of formal training, while others as old as he have not advanced much beyond the level of their last years spent in school. And this is only one of the by-products of living as a refugee child!) —Lois Gunden

Alberto was one of the lovable children we had at the Mennonite Convalescent Home for refugee children at Canet Plage, France. He soon found his way into the hearts of those with whom he came in contact. —H. A. P.

RELIEF WORK IN CHINA

By Dr. D. V. Wiebe

During the present war time conditions, when most of the missionaries have returned to their home lands, many of you may be interested in China and especially in relief as administered in Free China at present.

A tremendous amount of work is being done but it does not begin to scratch the surface in this vast country with its millions of people. It is only a drop in a very big bucket. The following are some of the main organizations who are active in this field: The National Relief Grants (Chinese); The National Health Administration, (Chinese); The Chinese Red Cross; The British Red Cross; The American Red Cross; The Canadian Red Cross; British Government Grants; United China Relief (American); United Aid to China Fund (British); The International Relief Committee of China; Friends Ambulance Unit; Chinese Friends of the Wounded; Chinese Industrial Cooperatives; American Bureau of Medical Aid to China; National Student Relief Committee; American Advisory Committee; National Christian Service Council for Wounded Soldiers in Transit; National Christian Council; Associated Boards of Christian Colleges; National Association for Refugee Children; National Child Welfare Association of China; Women's Advisory Committee of the New Life Movement; Committee for the Promotion of the Welfare for the Blind; Administration Interem Committee for Chinese Mission to Lepers; The W.C.T.U. of China; The Y.M.C.A.; Y.W.C.A.; Salvation Army; China National Aid Council; and last but not least the various missions. Some of these agencies function as collecting and others as distributing agencies, while most of them both collect and administer funds.

Relief organizations in China have to wrestle with almost insurmountable difficulties. The greatest of these difficulties is that of getting supplies into China. The reason for this is well known to all of you, as the only available route at present is by air from India.

The second greatest difficulty is that of transporting supplies after they have reached China. This is where the Friends Ambulance Unit comes into the picture. It picks up medical supplies at the air terminal at Kunming. Truck loads, either single or in convoys, carry these supplies to hospitals, orphanages and other institutions throughout Free China. Through the providences of Yunnan, Kiangsi, Fukien, Kwagtung, Hunan, Kweichow, Scechuan, up to the North-West Paochi, Sian and Lanchow and as far north as Siang and Honan, these trucks ply their way. The road at times reaches an altitude of over 10,000 feet. It winds its way along dangerous canyons and over steep grades. Add to this the almost impossible situation of obtaining fuel and repairs for the trucks, as well as the danger in bandit infested areas through which the roads lead, and you are beginning to get an idea of the difficulties which have to be overcome. Trucks leaving headquarters sometimes expect to be away from two to three months before they can make their return. When supplies finally reach their destination they are often life saving necessities for which patients have been anxiously waiting. It is at this point where the job really proves to be worth while.

A third major difficulty which foreign relief organizations have to face is the wide differential between prices of commodities and the rate of exchange of foreign money. This differential places relief work with foreign money in jeopardy at present. The central government has now inaugerated a system of price control.

Another difficulty to be mentioned is to fit the work of foreign relief organizations into the present spirit of nationalism. This nationalism is essential to the unification and consequently to the progress of China.

Although the difficulties are great, they are never-the-less overcome and the work goes on unrelentlessly. Most of the provinces in Free China are probably adequately supplied with food and clothing, but there are twenty or more thousand square miles in northern Honan province which are clutched in the grip of hunger. Here swollen-bellied children are still sold for the price of grain and people are hunting roots and are eating bark of trees to fill their stomachs.

Refugees report that the conditions in Shangtung are even worse than in Honan. Five to six thousand people daily are said to be setting out on their westward march in their search for food. Relief in these areas is particularly difficult because some of the supply routes are in Japanese hands and the roads leading into western China have been cut to ribbons so as to prevent a Japanese advance. The Central Government has done a tremendous job to assist these areas. They appropriated $10,000,000 for direct relief and on top of that rushed 2,000,000 piculs of seed grain into this area. All of this was done before seeding time last fall. Up to October, United China Relief had appropriated $4,600,000 for this area. The Farmer's Bank which is the main relief agency in this area had appropriated $40,000,000 by that time, for projects such as well digging and irrigation. The latest reports are that, although conditions are still quite bad, there has been a remarkable improvement.

Just what the immediate future may hold for China no one here would want to predict, but the relief organizations are far from taking a pessimistic attitude. More and more supplies are flowing in as time goes on and we are hoping for more supply routes before things may take a turn for the worse. The New China spirit of progress, especially, along the lines of education, is a real inspiration to the foreigner. May the Good Lord give His blessing to the work which is done here, especially in Free China. January, 1943, Chungking, China.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Report from Benjamin Ewert, Winnipeg

Complying with the request of the secretary of the Home Mission Board to give a special report regarding the Bethel Mennonite Mission in Winnipeg, which has been entrusted to me, I shall endeavor to do so.

In January of this year it was five years since I was entrusted and supported by the mission boards of the Canadian and the General Conferences to take charge of this mission. Like in all mission undertakings, so also in this one, the work is not easy and the results not satisfactory. Neverthless, it can be stated that the work here has not been in vain and has not been without results. A visible result is that in the course of these five years forty-two persons, married and unmarried, were prepared for baptism and accepted and confessed the Lord Jesus as their saviour and were baptized by me at six different dates.

Families and single persons have come to the city for various reasons. I have sought to come in contact with them, to visit them and to invite them to come to our church meetings and to serve them spiritually in other ways. On Sunday forenoon, beginning at 10 o'clock, we have Sunday school in English, and at 11 o'clock general church service, conducted in the German language. On Sunday evenings preaching or programs, or special services are in the English language. The attendance of the forenoon meetings is not as good as it should be; various reasons are the cause of it: indifference, weather conditions, distance, too poor, too tired, sicknesses, visiting or visitors, work or duties to perform on Sundays, dissatisfaction for one or another reason, personalities, etc. Those attending are more the older people. If all those who ever attended would be present at one and the same time, we would have a large attendance. The evening meetings have gained very much in attendance in the course of time: forty, fifty, sixty, seventy and some times even more. These are mostly young people. And these are quite interested in religious work and are willing to prepare programs and to take active part in the same, especially, by song and otherwise. Thursday evenings we have choir practice. There is also a ladies' aid society which is active and which has been able to procure money for different purposes.

My time is taken up with different activities: visiting the sick in the hospital, taking part in different undertakings and meetings in the interest of the Kingdom of God, distribution of our new German hymn book (Gesangbuch), a large correspondence regarding church conference and Christian fellowship matters, giving all kinds of information, etc. And then there is the special work pertaining to the mission itself. In the middle of March I again started with special catechetical instruction. And so there are many opportunities to serve and to make oneself useful. And the Lord gives willingness, strength, and blessing.

Recently a movement was started among those attending our mission to organize an independent, interdenominational English church. Since the attendants of our mission come from different branches of the Mennonite church this undertaking is not so easily accomplished. Also on account of the many different churches, missions, religious undertakings, etc., in the city. This undertaking being a highly important matter, it requires much patience, wisdom, grace, and blessing from God, through the Lord Jesus Christ, who is the head of the Church, and through the guidance of the Holy Spirit. May the Lord provide for this purpose as will be needed.

Civilian Public Service After Two Years

Civilian Public Service can now look back over two years of history. No one desired to see such a system as C.P.S. become a reality; yet all rejoiced when it became known that such a system could be possible. No boy, perhaps, wanted to go to camp; yet hundreds have been glad that there have been such places in which to serve in times of war.

In Retrospect

Since the first contingent of men arrived at Grottoes, Virginia, on May 22, 1941, thirty new C.P.S. units have been authorized by Selective Service and delegated to the Mennonite Central Committee for administration. From the first nine men in Mennonite C.P.S. the number has grown to over 2,800. Instead of only men between twenty-one and thirty-one years of age in the camps, there are men now in camps from eighteen to thirty-eight. Besides men in camps a large number in late weeks have been detached to dairy farms in Ohio, Wisconsin, Colorado, and California.

It is worth taking note of the list of federal and state government agencies with which our camps have worked in this program. Following are some of the agencies: Soil Conservation Service, Forestry Service, National Park Service, Bureau of Reclamation, Farm Security Administration, Florida Public Health Service, Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission, and state mental institutions in over ten states. The wide variety of services into which C.P.S. men have gone is the result of a number of factors: (1) good work by the men on initial projects, (2) need for manpower in the respective fields, (3) untiring efforts of the leaders to secure new forms of service for the men, and (4) generous cooperation from the government agencies. Such unique projects as medical and nutritional experiments have used C.P.S. men as "guinea pigs" and a smoke-jumping unit is preparing to fight forest fires by dropping in parachutes from planes.

Support of the program by the churches has been generous. Mennonite groups have responded to the financial needs of the program by raising over $400,000 in the past fiscal year of the Mennonite Central Committee. A monthly cost of about $60,000 is cheerfully met by all the churches. The Mennonite C.P.S. program includes nearly half the men assigned by Selective Service System to do work of national importance. Around 40 per cent of the present number of men in camp are from the various Mennonite branches. Something over two hundred men of non-Mennonite background are in our camps. As in World War I so in World War II the Mennonites have the largest number of conscientious objectors of any religious group.

Hours of profitable study can further equip for service.

In Prospect

What of the future of C.P.S.? Nothing, perhaps, could be more indefinite. The leaders of the program, however, are moving forward with plans that spring from high courage and desire. Nearly three thousand able-bodied young men, if captured by the Spirit of Christ and possessed with His grace, can render to mankind in the war and post-war period a powerful witness of Another Way.

What are some of the hopes for the future of C.P.S.? First, a continued, steady, cheerful, consistent witness of service is hoped for. In forest camps, in mental hospitals, in dairy farms, in administrative offices; in all these places the men must continue to give a good account of themselves in the quality of their service and in the standard of their conduct. Nothing well done is ever without its reward. C.P.S. is no exception.

A second hope for C.P.S. lies in the field of direct service to the material and spiritual needs of mankind. A leading Christian humanitarian gives as the compelling reason for relief work, by peace groups the deep inward feeling "that those of us who are to refuse to fight can not at the same time refuse all responsibility for the tragedy that is enveloping the world, and withdraw into some calm retreat and assume an attitude of superior holiness." More and more the men in camp are convinced that they also have conscientious duties as well as conscientious objections and that the refusal to destroy and the joy of service both spring from the same impulse of Christian love.

A common conviction of churches, C.P.S. men, and church leaders is then finding expression in the thorough, long-range relief program now taking definite form. Throughout the camp educational program considerable stress has been laid upon gaining a "greater appreciation of the Church and its splendid heritage of faith and life which has come down through more than four centuries from martyr saints in distant lands." From this greater appreciation it is hoped that more C.P.S. men will capture the vision of the Mennonite Church that is to be and commit their lives to extending its message round the world by word and deed.

But a conviction and zeal for service must be disciplined and directed. C.P.S. is not without some of the disciplining experiences which can prepare a young man for such service as relief and reconstruction work entails. In the camps and hospitals the men undergo intense community relationships and thereby become more socially apt as well as more physically capable for giving efficient service. There is hardly a boy in C.P.S. who could not testify to the value gained by his intimate association with fellow campers. College men have declared that in C.P.S. they gained fine insights that four years of dormitory life on a college campus never brought.

Work on the project has developed physique and skills.

A specialized form of preparation will also be possible as the formal plans for relief training get under way. A group of C.P.S. men with scholastic training will be stationed at a center of research in a leading eastern city. These men will do research work on the problems of relief alministration and make their findings available to the Mennonite camps and colleges where men will give themselves to study and preparation for a relief and reconstruction program.

Thus Civilian Public Service accumulates meaning and purpose. In only two years' time it has grown to more than three times the size originally anticipated and the end is not yet; it has become highly diversified and specialized in its forms of service; it has begun processes of discipline in body and spirit that have made possible enriched Christian experience; it is now definitely committed to implementing Christian convictions for sacrificial service to be given in the name of Christ.

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Benjamin Ewert was born November 26, 1870, at Thorn, Prussia. He married Emilie A. Ruth, Halstead, Kansas. He has served as itinerant minister for the General Conference of Mennonites, Canada. He is now in charge of the Bethel Mennonite Mission in Winnipeg.

Dr. D. V. Wiebe is a member of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California. In submitting Dr. Wiebe's article Brother J. H. Langenwalter wrote: "He went into the work, which occupies him now, as a matter of conviction that something really helpful should be done wherever there might be a need. Circumstances led him to China. He has been there since last fall and is now the second physician at the hospital in Chungking. He not only does much of the actual work, but he also trains younger men for the work. His letters come through slowly. They give one a picture of the great difficulties to be surmounted, but they also show a spirit of conviction which is challenging to all who read them. The fact that Dr. Wiebe left a good practice in order to lend a helping hand where desperate need is found has been a challenge to others to do something more than feel sorry for the 'poor Chinese.' There are those who have already applied for work to be done in China. Others have given money for this cause as never before because they have been inspired by one who said little but who is doing much were every kind act counts for so much now, and may count more in years to come. Dr. Wiebe wrote the enclosed report for the readers of The Mennonite."

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Albert Ewert, Wolf Point, Montana

MAY 16—"I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." John 10:11

The believer is set forth in Scripture as a sheep. Every sheep that the good shepherd, who is Jesus Christ, has is His because He purchased them. "giveth His life for the sheep." The value of a certain thing is determined by the cost, so we find here the value of a soul which He bought by giving His life on Calvary's Cross. Yea, "For what shall it it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul?" There is nothing so valuable as our soul for the very fact that it never dies. The good shepherd has redeemed us with His precious blood.

MAY 17— "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." Ps. 23:1

David gives a personal testimony in that he says "The Lord is my shepherd." God had made a covenant with Israel as a nation, but have the individuals taken the Lord as their shepherd? The Lord is only our personal shepherd as we enter into a personal relationship with Him through faith in Jesus Christ. What a great shepherd a Christian has. He is the all sufficient one. "I shall not want." "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things." A Christian who truly has taken Jesus Christ as his own personal shepherd will also find that he is the all sufficient one.

MAY 18—"He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: he leadeth me besides the still waters." Ps. 23:2

A sheep that is satisfied lies down; notice where the shepherd feeds his flock—"in green pastures," satisfying and nourishing food. Many a sheep is roaming in the hills seeking satisfaction in the things of the world rather then following the shepherd in green pastures, the word of God. To follow Him is a life of peace. "He leadeth me besides the still waters" So it is not with the unbeliever "But the wicked are like the troubled sea, when it cannot rest, whose waters cast up mire and dirt." Upon what are we feeding our soul? Are we walking the path of peace?

MAY 19—"He restoreth my soul: he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake." Ps. 23:3

When our fellowship with God is broken we can be restored. "We have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: and he is the propitiation for our sins:" It is not necessary that we live in a broken fellowship with God, for the way has been provided to be restored. If we are restored he leads us in the paths of righteousness; his paths are righteous paths. We sometimes wonder why God does lead us through the valley of trials and hardships. Here we have an answer; it is "for his name's sake." Yes, we should not be concerned about ourselves, but rather we should rest in the assurance that he leads us in the paths of righteousness for his name's sake.

MAY 20—"Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil: for thou art with me; thy rod and thy staff they comfort me." Ps. 23:4

There is a "valley of shadow of death" which all of us must pass through, if the Lord tarries. But even going through that valley we have the assurance of having the shepherd with us. " 'I' will fear no evil." A certain mother was nearing the valley of death; her daughter lit a candle and placed it in her hand. When asked the reason why, she said, that it might light her way into heaven. But all the while the mother repeated "It is so dark." As shepherd of the sheep he goes with us with his rod and his staff so we need not fear evil, for we are trusting in Him and His promises.

MAY 21—"Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil: my cup runneth over." Ps. 23:5

The Lord himself prepares the table. So what he has for us is what our souls need. He does not prepare a meager table but "my cup runneth over" Jesus said to the Samaritan women. "but the water that I shall give him shall be in him a well of water springing up into everlasting life." Yes, even in the midst of our enemies we can enjoy the prepared table and an overflowing cup. "He will fill your heart today to overflowing. As the Lord commandeth you, "Bring your vessels not a few."

MAY 22—"Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life; and I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Ps. 23:6

God's blessings are not only for time but for eternity. In the first verse the Psalmist said "I shall not want." His faith has been strengthened by experience, and now he can look forward with full assurance that "surely goodness and mercy" will continue to follow him until he enters the gates of heaven. And then notice his assurance, "I will dwell in the house of the Lord forever." Jesus said, "In my father's house are many mansions;" What blessed assurance is our's to know that we are saved. "And I give unto them eternal life: and they shall never perish."

WHAT CAN I EXPECT OF A GOOD HUSBAND?

Christ is supreme in the life of a good husband. Material things would not be his aim in life. His business, his life stock, his crops, his machinery, his cars, his office, or his clients would not come before his duty to Christ and his family. Whenever the Church needs some one to help he would be ready and willing to serve. He would enjoy and desire to attend religious services. His mind would be broad and open, but his Christianity would have a good foundation. He wouldn't find fault with things others do and condemn them as not being sincere Christians, for after all we know not the motives.

In my mind Christianity will make a man respect womanhood in his actions, in his thoughts, and in his conversation no matter who the woman may be. He'll speak very respectfully of his wife and not call her "his old woman" or "his Mrs." He'll realize that women are weaker and therefore do all he can to make her lfie easier; he'll even help her some times with her heavier household tasks, such as helping get the wash water ready.

Christianity calls for thoughtfulness for everyone, young or old, rich or poor. Manners and little kindnesses will not wear off with time. He'll even remember those little kindnesses he showed his wife before their wedding such as opening doors, carrying her things, walking on the correct side of her, and taking her out occasionally. He'll be careful and tactful with people so as to make everyone at ease. He'll be a good conversationalist, having a storehouse of knowledge to talk about, but not doing too much talking. When he does talk, there will be no nagging, no growling about meals or about hurrying. No loud, harsh scolding, no slang or swearing! He'll even use good grammer. He'll love his family and take time to be with them and not work every minute. He'll be a good host to all who visit the home and make their visit interesting and comfortable. He'll have at least an average knowledge of good table etiquette, never eating with his knife or drinking coffee from the saucer.

Besides being a true Christian gentleman he will have an interest and a knowledge of the beautiful things in the world. He'll love great music, art and good literature and will take every opportunity to enjoy spending time to appreciate nature with its beautiful sunsets, wild life, the wonders of the hea-

Our Goal: A Member—A Story

Every member of every society writes a story—that is the goal of the Western District Convention in its, "True Story Contest" which closes June 1, 1943. A ten dollar award will be given to the first society which achieves that goal. In this project every member of any W. D. C. E. can, should, and is urged to, write a story.

This is really to be a "it occurred to me" story. It is to be a description of an experience which you have had or the experience of some friend. That is why it is called a "True Story Contest." This story or experience may have been exciting—like a basketball game with the score tied and a minute and a half left to play; or entertaining like a magician; or the games that so completely enwrap us on the playground; or captivating and refreshing like a "permanent working vacation" on the farm; or inspirational like the "retreat;" or a worship service; or the sudden flash of insight that comes while doing the chores; or stimulating like school or friends. The story should contain some spiritual or moral value. It may be half a page or half a hundred pages in length—you can choose the number of pages.

Entries should answer the following questions: Are you a high school or college student? Of which society are you a member and who are the officers of the society?

Mail your "True Story" to Harley J. Stucky, Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Illinois, on or before June 1, 1943. A committee will award prizes to the best entries in a junior and senior division.

For more information consult the March Tidings, see your C. E. president or mail your inquiry to the above address.

Members of the Western District in numerous societies, Alexanderwohl, Hoffnungsau, Eden, Menno, First Mennonite Newton, etc., have indicated their desire to take part in this project. Will you join that group of active C. E. members? Have you written your story? If not, we trust that you will write it immediately after reading this article. Make this your project, and be a member with a story.

vens and all the rest of God's handiwork and take his family out to enjoy it. He'll read good literature and provide it for the family. He'll not be so concerned about filling his pocket-book and his children's purses as filling their minds with the good things of life. He'll do his best to provide a fine Christian education for them.

The man himself will have self-respect and confidence, but not to the extent of being egotistical. His appearance will be neat and clean with the well groomed touch. He'll wear his clothes well and with good taste. He'll also be interested in the appearance of his family and his home. He'll conduct himself well at all times so that no one needs to be ashamed of him. He'll be a "regular fellow" (no sissy) who has friends wherever he goes among both men and women. He'll be intelligent and rather sharp-witted with a good sense of humor. Whenever help is needed he'll be willing to help, no matter who it is. He'll love people, including children and old people.

He will be capable and be able to provide a comfortable living for his family. His finances will be well managed. He'll not undertake the responsibility of a family just because his heart says so; he'll wait until he is financially able to get married.

There are other qualities just as important as those already mentioned. I'd want a man for my husband whose life has always been of the purest and highest standards. I would require freedom from disease; mental health with a cheerful outlook on life and the ability to leave all cares and worries with the Lord; well balanced emotional habits, not fits of temper or sulking; a constructive imagination; a love of children; standards of living and education; similar to my own religious back ground; understanding.

And above all I want love in its truest sense of the word. No truly happy home can exist without true love for each other. I'd want to enjoy real comradeship with him.

Maybe all this seems too high, but I don't want a too perfect man, I want him to have faults, for I, too, have faults. These are just ideas that would make a wonderful husband I believe.

JOIN THE MINORITY

A gentleman said to John B. Gough, as if it were a discouragement, "You are in a minority."

Praying men are in a minority. Bible-loving men are in a minority. Men who honor God's house and God's day are in a minority. "Follow not a multitude to do evil." Join the minority. Stand up and stand out for Jesus Christ. Don't muddle to destruction with the majority. The Master says, "Broad is the way that leadeth to destructioin, and many there be which go in thereat."

The majority has had its way, and has brought mess, muddle and war. The majority has failed us. Join the minority. Come to the house of God; take down your Bible and read it again; keep the Lord's Day holy. Commence to pray, or to pray again. Give your heart and life to Jesus Christ. Take your part in turning the nation from being a people of God forgetters, to a reverent and godly nation. Begin now; tomorrow will be too late.

THE FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Mountain Lake, Minnesota

We rejoice on the completion of extensive repairs in our basement dining hall. The kitchen was moved to the rear and arranged more conveniently with sinks, tables, and drawers. The furnace is entirely enclosed and the ceiling finished attractively, hiding ugly pipes and rafters. The walls are freshly painted. This will be an added pleasure to our church activities, such as children's day and mission festivals.

On Good Friday eve Miss Susan Hooge, a missionary to Africa, now home on furlough, showed pictures of her work to both the Oakleaf and First Mennonite Mission societies. We received a very vivid impression of existing conditions in her field, a leper colony.

Easter Sunday was a beautiful day, and a large attendance was present at the morning service.

The choir has chosen Miss Ann Regier to direct, to take the place of Mr. D. S. Schroeder for many years a faithful leader. Miss Regier is an instructor at our local Bible school. Several of the older men have returned to the choir, to replace the younger men that have left us.

Sunday morning, May 2, Rev. Corn. Wall brought the message at the regular church service. In the evening the C. E. rendered a Mother's Day program. Many obigations and duties of a true Christian mother were mentioned. We thank the Lord for praying mothers!

RANSOM MENNONITE CHURCH

Ransom, Kansas

Rev. C. H. Dirks, pastor of the First Mennonite church of Hutchinson, Kansas, conducted a short series of evangelistic services in our church from April 18 to April 20.

According to a previously arranged schedule by the Foreign Mission Board, Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf, returned missionary from China, was also with us on Monday evening. On Tuesday afternoon she spoke at the Ladies' Missionary meeting about her work among the Chinese women. All messages by these servants of God were greatly appreciated.

Easter Sunday was another day of great blessings to all of us. The community joined for a sunrise service in our church. Rev. D. N. McAllister, pastor of the local Methodist church, delivered the message.

Sunday school and regular morning worship services were well attended. At the close of the regular Sunday school period the children and the young people gave a short program, consisting of music, declamations, and a reading. A mixed quartet furnished special music for the various services.

In the evening the Easter cantata, "Life Eternal," was rendered in the high school by the community chorus under the direction of Miss Vera Friesen, music teacher in our high school, with Melba Dubbs at the piano.

EDEN MENNONITE CHURCH

Moundridge, Kansas

Union meetings with other churches of this community were again held during Passion Week. Good Friday we had morning worship services. An Easter sunrise service was conducted by our C. E. Society. The eighth annual rendition of the "Messiah" by a chorus of 120 and string ensemble, took place on the evening of Easter Day. Pastor Malof, who represents the Russian Gospel Movement, was with us Monday, April 26. These numerous Easter activities gave us much opportunity for rich blessings and renewed faiths and courage in our Risen Lord.

Since our minister, Rev. Walter Gering, will not be with us Mothers' Day, the children's consecration services were held May 2. Names of twenty-five children, born since last Mothers' Day, were read.

Rev. C. C. Wedel is expected to be with us May 9 and Rev. Reynold Weinbrenner, editor of The Mennonite, on May 16.

The record attendance for the present year for the morning worship hour was Easter Sunday when 804 were present. —Harold H. Goering, Corr.

SARON MENNONITE CHURCH

Orienta, Oklahoma

After much planning, prayer and efforts in the form of labor and finance, the Lord wonderfully blessed our congregation Sunday, May 2, in a day of worship and fellowship. The correspondent feels it can be rightly said that every heart was filled with rejoicing and thanksgiving that our group now has the privilege of a full time pastor. We are happy to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Fast and family into our community.

In the forenoon an installation service was conducted by Rev. August Schmidt. A message was delivered by Rev. Fast based on the text found in I Peter 1:18,19. In his message he portrayed Christ as the central figure in Christian living. Several appropriate selections were sung by the male quartet.

At noon a meal was served cafeteria style by the ladies of the church.

In the afternoon the parsonage was dedicated, after which a service was held in the church. In the reports given by the committee chairmen an account of the construction of the parsonage was made. The house was donated by Mr. and Mrs. Adam Ratzlaff, the land purchased and donated by Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Frantz, while the rest of the expense fund was contributed by the other church members. The labor involved was supplied by volunteer workers.

Brother Fast gave a few nice thoughts on the subject, "What I Would Like the Parsonage To Be."

Mr. P. B. Buller gave a brief talk thanking Brother Schmidt, who is affiliated with O. B. A. as an instructor, for the kind and faithful service rendered to our church for many years. We will miss the regularity of the family in our midst; nevertheless, we hope to see them occasionally. May the Lord reward them bountifully for their faithful service in our church.

Mrs. O. R., Corr.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Allentown, Pa.

Our church membership has reached 210, fifteen young people having been confirmed on Palm Sunday.

The ladies of the church worked several days mending, cleaning, and packing two hundred pounds of clothing for relief projects, same being sent to headquarters at Akron, Pa.

Our pastor, Rev. Howard G. Nyce, is recuperating from a siege of several weeks of illness. Drs. Harvey and Ella Bauman and Walter Temple occupied the pulpit in his presence.

Our Easter communion service was well attended. For the evening service we had as our guests, members of our sister church at Old Zionsville. Our choir rendered several musical selections.

The teachers and officers of the Sunday school have been holding monthly dinner meetings, at which problems are discussed and suggestions offered.

A Busy Society

The Eden Ladies Aid and Mission Society of the Eden Church, Moundridge, Kansas, has again been permitted to meet during the past year at regular intervals every month to contribute their bit for the Mission work.

Four orders of cut garments for relief sewing, amounting to $207.68, were purchased by the society. These garments were then sewed and sent to the M. C. C. along with new donated garments and also used clothing.

At each one of the meetings the members are always kept busy quilting. This past year seven quilts were sewed, one of these donated to the society was sold. Then also five comforts, three baby quilts, and two light weight quilts were made and sent for relief.

A field of service that is rather new to mission society work and yet is fulfilling a great need is the work among the C. P. S. camps. We have aided a number of the camps by furnishing some of their supplies such as curtains, tea towels, hand towels, rags, aprons, food stuffs, and cash. Also every boy entering a C. P. S. camp from this church is given a camp pack. This year a total of sixteen packs were given. At Christmas time a gift was sent to each Eden boy in the service.

"Sick we have always with us." Days of suffering through sickness or bereavement are lightened by the sending of cards to the stricken persons. Our missionaries also were remembered at Christmas time with a greeting.

Beautification of the church grounds has been undertaken by the women. Much work and effort has been put forth here.

We have had two guest speakers at our meetings, namely Miss Wilhelmina Kuyf and Mrs. P. A. Penner. One Sunday evening a musical mission program was given to which the general public was invited. A program was also rendered at a neighboring church.

Opportunities for service are indeed great in these days. We pray that the Lord may guide our efforts of service in His way.

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. ELMIRA A. LEWIS (nee Weiss), daughter of Henry and Fanny (nee Allabach) Weiss, was born in Milford Township, Bucks County, Pa., on September 10, 1862, and died February 3, 1943. At first a member of the Reformed Church, she later became a member of the East Swamp Mennonite Church, Quakertown, Pa. First she was married to Joseph B. Shelly who died in 1903 and later to Franklin S. Lewis who also preceded her in death. She is mourned by five children: Mrs. Eugene Bellem, Brooklyne, Pa.; Mrs. Dallas Gangewer, Allentown, Pa.; Mrs. Paul R. Sine, Perkasie, Pa.; H. Eugene and George Shelly of Quakertown, Pa.

SAMUEL S. KING, sixty-six and member of the Grace Mennonite Church, Pandora, Ohio, died on February 5, 1943. He is survived by his wife, the former Elizabeth Badertscher and seven children who are: Mrs. Monroe Lora, Warsaw, Indiana; Lester King, Dearborn, Michigan; Eldon King, Leipsic, Ohio; Oliver King, Cambridge, Ohio; Ellis King, Mrs. Martha Havenstein, and Mrs. Melvina Thrapp of Pandora. Three sisters who survive are: Mrs. Elizabeth Amstutz of Bluffton; Mrs. Sarah Lehman of Bluffton; and Mrs. Anna Spallinger of Columbus Grove.

GERTRUDE CLAASSEN, nee Toews, daughter of Jacob and Sarah Toews, nee Reimer, was born on February 1, 1850, at Altmuensterberg, near Marienberg, West Prussia. She died February 5, 1943. She was baptized in 1867 by Elder Gerhard Penner and joined the Heuboden Mennonite Church. In 1869 she was married to Johann Claassen. When the estate they farmed was sold they migrated to Beatrice, Nebraska, where she settled with her husband on a farm on which she remained the rest of her life.

MARTHA GOERING, daughter of Joseph C. and Anna Wedel Goering, was born at Moundridge, Kansas, on February 4, 1897. She died on February 16, 1943, at the Wesleyan Hospital, Wichita. She was a member of the First Mennonite Church of Christian, Moundridge, Kansas.

ABRAHAM J. REGIER was born April 26, 1869, in South Russia, and died on February 21, 1943. He came to Mountain Lake, Minnesota, in 1875 and there grew to manhood. He went to Kansas for employment and there married Lena Rose in 1897. They lived in Oklahoma for fifteen years and then made their home in Wasco and later in Shafter, California. His wife survives him.

GUSTAV EPP, son of Abraham and Helene Epp, nee Penner, was born in Warnau, West Prussia, on January 12, 1880, and died March 6, 1943. His mother having died when he was eleven months old, he migrated with the rest of the family to Beatrice, Nebraska. He attended several terms of the parochial school and was baptized by the Elder Gerhard Penner. After his father's death he took over the home place. In 1918 he was married to Gertrude Penner, whose faithful companion he was for almost twenty-five years.

DAVID A. GOERTZ was born February 10, 1861, in South Russia and died March 25, 1943. In 1874 he with his parents migrated to the Goessel, Kansas, community. He was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller in 1881. In 1883 he was married to Helena Goossen of Hillsboro by his former school teacher, Rev. Heinrich Richert. In 1903 he and his family moved to Mountain View, Oklahoma. When the Ebenezer Church was organized he was chosen and ordained as deacon. He is mourned by his wife and five daughters: Mrs. A. H. Reimer, Newton, Kansas; Mrs. J. H. Brandt, Globe, Arizona; Mrs. F. J. Goossen, Newton; Mrs. G. F. Harms, Whitewater, Kansas.

ANNA BARTEL DYCK, daughter of Leonhard and Aganetha Funk Bartel, was born at Hillsboro, Kansas, on August 29, 1884. On May 27, 1901, she was baptized by Rev. Wilhelm Ewert and received as a member of the Brudertal Mennonite Church. When thirteen she was bereft of her mother. In the same year the Lord gave her another. On June 17, 1909, she was married to John Dyck of Whitewater, Kansas. After her marriage she transferred her membership to the Emmaus Mennonite Church, Whitewater. She died April 8, 1943.

HENRY G. SCHLEIFFER was born November 21, 1869, and died February 13, 1943. He always lived on a farm near Pleasant Valley, Pa., and was a member of the Springfield Mennonite Church. His wife survives him. His pastor, Brother Ward W. Shelly, conducted the funeral services.

BEULAH FRANCES (nee Allem) LANDIS was born in Springfield Township, Pa., on September 7, 1896, and died on March 29, 1943. For many years she served as chorister and assistant pianist for the Springfield congregation of which she was a member. She also sang in the chorus conducted by Professor Lantz in the Eastern District from time to time.

STANLEY CHARLES, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Charles of the Perkasie, Pa., congregation was born February 15, 1943, and died on April 4.

—Eden Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas: The C. E. Society has taken up two projects suggested by the Western District Christian Endeavor Convention. Twenty-five dollars a month supports a missionary in Canada who does itinerant work among the scattered Mennonites. The society has pledged itself to pay his salary for one month. Then the society has also agreed to raise one hundred dollars for the support of a village school in India.— "Just the other day in browsing through some magazines in the library our attention was fixed upon this statement; 'If we are not different after Easter it will mean that we did not experience Easter. We will only have lived through the day.'"—Eden Chronicles.

—The Annual Song Festival of the Western District was held in Memorial Hall on May 2. The day was cool and dry, and the audience nearly filled the spacious hall in the afternoon. Usually the festival was held somewhat later ,but this date seems to have suited well.

BIBLE SCHOOL

The First Mennonite Church, Newton, Kansas, will conduct a vacation Bible school from June 6 to June 25. Interesting facts about it are: (1) A new eleven year course, providing for the pre-kindergarten child, the kindergarten child, and all grades, including the ninth grade. (2) The ninth grade course will cover Mennonite history and principles of faith and our conference and its activities. (3) Six teachers will be employed. (4) Every boy and girl of the First Church and the Bethel College Church and anyone else that wishes to come, is invited. (5) A fee of one dollar per child will be asked, but this is not compulsory. (6) The school will be run from 9 to 12 a. m.—forty-five hours, or fifteen days with three hours per day of spiritual nourishment. (7) The general aim of this school is: "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." —The Christ. (8) Joanna S. Andres has charge of this school.

MENNONITE PUBLICATION OFFICE,
Newton, Kansas

L. L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, will give the commencement address at Bethel College on May 19.

—From the Church Messenger of the Zion Mennonite Church Donnellson, Iowa, Realizing the vital place of the church college in relation to the future of the church, the Middle District Conference has launched an effort to guarantee adequate financial support for Bluffton College and is urging contributions of not less than one dollar per member per year during these critical times. E. W. Baumgartner, Berne, Indiana, has been appointed to stimulate interest in this cause and writes, "Small colleges are now generally finding the situation very difficult. . . . Our college is also affected, perhaps to a greater degree because of the fact that we cannot conscientiously ask for government assignments for the education of personnel for the armed forces. The enrollment cut has been serious, and that reacts on the income since nearly fifty per cent of the money used to operate the college normally comes from student fees. The budget has been carefully gone over and cuts made wherever possible, but it is impossible to cut expenditures as severely as the income has been reduced. Faculty members have received no increase in pay in spite of low original salaries, increased cost of living and now a withholding or Victory Tax."

Our churches have been alive to the situation and during the past few years, through increased support, have kept our college in sound financial condition. It is extremely important that adequate support be continued at this time. Our church council has designated May 16 as the date for the first of our semi-annual offerings for our college.

It's pleasure to give others pleasure;
It's wealth to give money away;
It's honor to give others honor
It blessed you all through the day.

A Holy Sabbath

In this bread and butter (and if possible, jelly) world it is not easy to keep the Sabbath in a hallowed way. Six days full of work. Saturday night and release. The groceries must be bought or enjoyment sought. The two hands of the clock sneak towards a vertical position. And many enter into the rest of the Sabbath day rather belatedly. The result: sleep on the Sabbath day—not because of the divine injunction to rest, but rather because of exhaustion. A writer of one of the historic peace churches states that in one area of the brotherhood at least 43 per cent of the boys sleep on Sunday afternoon.

Sleep may be necessary on Sunday because of exhaustion from work or from pleasure or both. Nevertheless, the fact remains that under such conditions the Sabbath day cannot yield its maximum blessings. Undoubtedly, people can rearrange their schedule of activities in a great many cases. One of our Mennonite communities has shifted the movies—sponsored by the town—from Saturday to Thursday night. If the Sabbath is important it should be accorded its rightful place.

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy." We are to think of the Sabbath day in order that we may make the right use of it. The Jewish practice of beginning the Sabbath at sundown may hold possibilities for us. When one storms into the Sabbath day, one must use it to quiet down. When one enters it quietly and reverently it becomes an expanding holy of holies. It is not easy to enter the Sabbath day in the latter way, but when so entered, God puts into our hands the key to a great blessing. —rw

Reading Matter for Our Young Poeple

Perhaps, the paraphrase "As a man readeth, so is he" is not quite as true as the statement "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." Yet, reading and listening furnishes very much of the stuff for thinking. Therefore, it is of great importance what young people with developing minds read.

Open before me lies a youth paper picked up in one of our Mennonite churches. It is put out by a company whose material is used by a fairly large number of our churches. This youth paper is not strongly militaristic, but here and there in it are vivid touches of it.

Unfortunately, our conference does not have sufficient reading material for our young people. The Junior Messenger seems to be meeting the need of the juniors very well. For the young people we have the youth section in this paper. Perhaps, more pastors should bring it to the attention of their young people and encourage their young people to contribute to it. There are consecrated Christian young people with ability to write in many of our communities. Their contributions are needed. Yet the possibilities of this section are hampered by lack of space in the paper as a whole. A larger paper with an expanded youth section is needed.

In the mean time pastors can secure supplementary reading material for their young people that is definitely Mennonite. Furthermore, by using such distinctly Mennonite material we promote a spirit of unity among branches of Mennonites. Why not study the reading material that your young people mainly use?—rw.

Graduation Time

Graduation means much or little depending upon how faithfully the student has applied himself and what subject matter was used. That the public educational institutions of this land do not produce the citizens that we might hope for is evident. Rightfully, do we look with anticipation to the graduates of our church schools? Do they present evidence of disciplined Christian study? Have they acquired that which will make them a blessing wherever they go? Will they come back to their home communities to make them better communities? Just what have these graduates accomplished and what should they accomplish in the future? This question merits much thought.

Perhaps, our schools and their constituencies should redefine the purposes of education. In fact, some of our schools are doing this very thing. It is exceedingly important that those who go to school and their parents be clear as to what the desired education should do. For Christians the primary goal cannot be that of making money. First must come the Kingdom of God. In fact, it must determine everything else—and do this actually, really, in all essence. Graduation is only important when it is significant for the furtherance of God's kingdom.

Perhaps, we need more sons and daughters from our communities who will go to school for short terms, with no thought of graduating. There are many whose life plan will not permit years in school. For them short, practical courses, some for spiritual enrichment and some for making a livelihood in the home community, could be a great blessing.—rw.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

FAMILY LIFE IN THE CITY

The job of rearing a large family and maintaining ideal Christian family relations in the modern urban community is exceedingly difficult. The modern attitudes toward the institution of the family have undergone radical changes. The changes have been so gradual and subtle that we have hardly been conscious of them in process. We can only fully realize it now that it has happened. The atmosphere and social environment of the modern city is decidedly unfriendly to the development of wholesome Christian family life.

The Changing Family

Most urban families have no roots. They move frequently, rapidly, and without a great sense of loss to themselves or those they leave behind. One doesn't form very profound attachments to a suite of rooms in an apartment house on the third floor back. Families are of necessity small. Rentals range in direct proportion to the number of rooms used and a poor man cannot afford many rooms, therefore, not many children. Even if he could afford them, the neighbors wouldn't welcome him. It is a commonly accepted fact that many landlords will not rent apartments to families with children. Dogs are accepted but no children. Women frequently work outside the home and, thus, if there are children, they are put in nursery school, left alone or entrusted to a nursemaid for a large share of the day. The highly stimulating advertising and displays daily flaunted before the eyes of the urban public subject them to ideas which are often demoralizing and destructive. The so-called "broad-minded" attitudes toward sex conduct and education are bound to affect the fabric of the family structure. These and other factors have contributed toward an increase in illegitimacy as well as divorce.

Family Disorganization

It is not all together a mystery why urban family disorganization rates are higher than rural rates. One major reason is the differing economic interests in the home. Whereas the rural life still allows the family to share in the job of farming as a unit, urban life generally separates the family during most of the day. The father earns his daily bread at an office or a factory far removed from the walls of home. The wife as often as not has little understanding of her husband's job. The husband similarly may have little appreciation of the nervous exhaustion his wife may experience day after day. If there are children they go in still different directions to schools or work and at different hours of the day. They make friends and develop interests each in his own area of life and experience. Often these interests are pursued after working hours. This pulls the family as a unit in many different directions. It minimizes the opportunity for united family worship, visiting, and carrying on activities as a unit. The outward frame of the family still stands but the heart and spirit of an enriching family life is gone.

Christians who really know Christ are not self-conscious about spreading the message. They are compelled to spread it.—The American Friend

To the Pastors and Members of our Churches

Greetings:

The Executive Committee of the General Conference learns with satisfaction, that pastors, as well as church and Christian Endeavor organizations, are by letter and in other suitable ways keeping in touch with the young men of their churches who, under the Selective Service Act, etc., have been drafted and in consequence are away from home.

This is practical evidence of your deep interest, concern, and desire to keep them in living and loving touch with the spiritual home fires. And it seems to us to be a most natural and effective way of keeping the vital bond of Christian fellowship alive.

We wish therefore, to recommend and encourage this method of keeping in direct and more personal touch and contact with all of our General Conference young people who are thus severed from the customary church and home ties and associations.

May our Heavenly Father bless you one and all in your every effort to witness for Him and may it please our Lord and Savior. the Prince of Peace, to give a sinsick world an early and lasting peace!

This is the prayer of

The Executive Committee of The General Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America
C. E. Krehbiel, Chairman.

(Resolution adopted May 5, 1943, Newton, Kansas.)

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

ANOTHER MILESTONE IN INDIA

Another sign of the times was enacted during the big Sunday of the annual conference of our churches in India when three more Indian brethren were ordained to the office of elder in the ministry of the church.

These three are the brethren: I. K. Nundy, for the Home Mission Field of the Church in India; J. K. Asna, for the Bethesda Leper Church; and Kripadan, for the district work of the Champa Field.

Our mission has two meetinghouses in Champa, one for the non-lepers and one for the lepers. The above is a picture of the first meetinghouse for lepers, built before 1906. When this became too small a much larger one was built. When the second one became too small the present one was built. No cut is available of the present meetinghouse. The people in the above picture from left to right are: P. A. Penner, John, the caretaker, and Jacob Burkhart.

Previous to this there were four men thus ordained. Thus the Church in India has now a total of seven ordained to the office of elder, and every Central Station Church is thus provided with this ministry except Mauhadi.

This does not mean that there will no longer be room for the foreign missionary. One whole section of the great Tambaram Conference concerned itself with the unoccupied fields of the world. There is a tremendous unoccupied area within our own field, which for many years to come will call for expenditure of foreign resources of men and money. This infant church itself will need foreign resources—not to pauperize it, but to stand by it. It is a very poor parent who produces a child then orphans it. The splendid messages in The Mennonite some time back by Brother Andrew Shelly on "The Regions Beyond" are very apropos to the situation.

We rejoice that seven Indian elders are now ordained to serve the church. They will take a big load of responsibility from the shoulders of the missionary. They will release missionaries for the tasks in "the regions beyond" and for the unevangelized sections. It was pointed out in Twenty-Five Years with God in India that with splendid prospects and growth, nevertheless 99·8 per cent of our population was without Christ, and only 1.2 per cent had accepted Him. It is up to the missionaries in India to enter the regions beyond and urge these churches and pastors to carry their own loads in Christ to the limit of their powers and His. —S. T. Moyer

A Severe Burn

It was Sunday noon. I had just been preparing to teach the catechism class when a runner came to call me to see a man badly burned. The cycle ride gave me a good daily dozen except that it was thirteen miles and not a dozen.

The patient was indeed in a bad way. His lower extremities were badly burned and swollen. It seems that in observing a religious festival or rite he and another man had been jumping over the fire in the middle of the street. It so happened that both men contemplated jumping over the fire at the same time. Coming from two different directions they met directly over the fire, like two bucks fighting. This man fell unconscious in the fire. After two months in the hospital he is now almost ready to go home. —H. E. Dester

Do Not Be Surprised

The fourteen candidates for baptism had all been given instructions about their part in the rite of baptism. They entered the church after the pastor and took their seats on the platform, to the side of the pulpit. After the sermon they were all baptised, and then received into church. This was done by giving the right hand of fellowship, and stating their names as the pastor did so. Suddenly, as he came to the end of the line there was confusion in his thinking. There were fourteen to be baptised. He knew the names of all of them, but who who this extra woman? Where did she come from? What is to be done? But the pastor goes right on and admits her into church. Of course he could not call her by name as he did not know her.

After the service the mystery was cleared up. This woman had previously been accepted for baptism in one of the villages. Due to the sickness of her child she was not baptised. This was her chance, she thought. So unknown to the pastor she got up from the audience and took her place with the other candidates. Since the girls and women had their heads covered with their saris, their faces were not seen when baptised. "All's well that ends well," but it would have saved the pastor some embarrassment to have things go according to schedule.

RELIEF

Clothing to North Africa

On April 26 another shipment of clothing was made to a foreign country from the Clothing Depot of the Mennonite Central Committee. This shipment of slightly more than 8,000 lbs. was made to North Africa.

Women's, men's, and children's garments comprised the shipment of bales and boxes. The value of the clothing was placed at $8,427.78. It is to be distributed to refugees by the Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Service.

Janzen and Geigly Reach Paraguay

On April 14 Brethern Janzen and Geigly reached Asuncion, Paraguay. Brother Janzen's letter of the next day reports that no difficulties were encountered in the journey across the Andes Mountains and through Argentina to Buenos Aires.

Necessary connections and arrangements are being made in the Paraguayan capital before proceeding into the Chaco.

Word from Lois Gunden in Germany

A cheerful letter, dated March 5, from Sister Lois Gunden has recently reached this country from Baden Baden, Germany, via the State Department. The letter, written to her family in Goshen, Indiana, tells of living in a large hotel in Germany's Black Forest region.

The time of the diplomatic group, with which Sister Gunden and Henry Buller are attached, is spent in language study, reading, and music practice. Quoting form the letter: "We are served good meals with plenty of food well prepared."

Nothing is known at this time as to the date of return to America.

Special Notice to Women Interested in Relief Work

The M.C.C. Summer Relief Worker's Training School to be conducted at Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana, from June 12 to August 27 (eleven weeks) will have facilities for fifteen women in addition to sixty-five assignments from Civilian Public Service. The total cost of the course including board, room, tuition, etc., will range between $75 and $80. Applications and further inquiries can be sent to "Director of Relief Training School, Goshen College, Goshen, Indiana," or to "M.C.C. Secretary, Akron, Pennsylvania." Applications should outline previous training and experience, also state church connection and church work experience and reasons for interest in relief service.

Applications should be in before June 5. O. O. M.

CPS Camps

Terry Men Rebuild Railroad and Fight Fire

Men from the Terry camp in Montana worked in two shifts twenty-four hours a day to help rebuild the Milwaukee and Northern Pacific Railroads which were washed out by the overflowing of the Yellowstone River. Railroad officials expressed their gratitude for the emergency work of the men. Terry men also helped to extinguish a prairie fire that seriously threatened to burn both Terry and the camp during the early part of April.

Research Unit Authorized

A unit known as the Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Project has been recently authorized by the Selective Service System. The unit, known as C.P.S. Camp No. 101 will be located in West Philadelphia, with sub-units at educational institutions approved by Selective Service System.

The work of this unit will consist of "pursuing a course of study in preparation for duty on foreign relief and rehabilitation, preparation of data for the use of Civilian Public Service training units, for the preparation of curricula, the preparation of mimegraphed material and such other manuscripts, pamphlets, booklets, etc., as may be used in training in specific fields for service in foreign countries either under public or private agencies and such other work as may be assigned them by the Office of Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Operations."

Supervision of Men on Detached Farm Service

The detaching of C.P.S. men to farm service has created needs for leaders to serve as pastors and counsellors to the men. Brother Jesse Short of Archbold, Ohio, has been appointed to represent the interest of the Church to the men in the Wisconsin counties. Brother and Sister Short will have their office and home at 109 Washington Street, Beaver Dam, Wisconsin, and will be assisted by Lawrence Hilty, assignee, who will serve as clerk. Brother Short will arrange group gatherings for fellowship and spiritual uplift as well as visit the boys personally. The house will serve as a center where the boys can visit during their spare time.

In Ohio and Michigan Brother Raymond Hartzler will serve in the same capacity upon the placing of men in counties of these states. Brother Harry Martens, Director, of Colorado Springs is in charge of the twenty-two men now on farms in El Paso County, Colorado. The ninteen men in San Joaquin County, California, are served by Brother Erwin Goering, Director of the Camino California Camp.

The Mennonite Deaconess Home and Hospital, Beatrice, Nebr.

Reception Room at the Sisters' Home

Deaconesses Sitting on the Porch of Their Home

WINDOWS ON 11th ST.

It was nine years after the founding of the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital in Beatrice, Nebraska, that the most acute hardship suffered by the sisters was remedied. From the first, they had lived on the first floor of the hospital, in the north wing, twelve to fourteen of them in five rooms. In addition, the common practice of the time was for the sisters to sleep on cots in the rooms of any patients who were seriously ill. After twelve hours of work, on the floors, in laundry and kitchen and garden, with one Sunday off every other week, they were on duty even through the night. And when the hospital beds were full, the doctors might ask for—and would get—the use of the sisters' beds for their patients! It is no wonder that when the first load of bricks was brought to the site of the new building, the whole staff of the hospital gathered to watch it being dumped. It was March 23, 1920, and Sister Alice's birthday.

Eight months later, the Home was dedicated, with Elder Gerhardt Penner preaching for the last time. Since it was November, and cold, the guests learned by experience of the Home's only major defect: the pipless furnace, now discarded, which kept inmates cold and hot in sections.

The achievement of the Home, however, came after the long struggle of the first world war. That was before the era of rationing; in its place was the system of substitutes. Difficult as the problem was for the housewives, it presented grave obstacles to hospitals, where food was and is as important as medicine in healing. The burdens of planning and of buying fell upon Sister Sarah Remple, who worked night after night until eleven or twleve to figure ways of using what was available in ways that patients could use. With every pound of wheat flour that she bought, she was required to buy an equivalent quantity of barley meal. Corn meal was an inseparable companion of oatmeal. Rye flour could be had only in combination with rice. Eggs were available only as powder—and made very uninspired cakes. Beans were everywhere, a nightmare for Sister Sarah, who all too soon came to the end of the variations possible on beans. But the worst of all was the crackers, not only too tough to be bitten, neither would they soak up the coffee.

On top of that came the great influenza epidemic of 1918. Hospital space was at a premium; the flu patients needed hospital care, but their presence endangered the medical and surgical patients. The solution came in the form of an agreement between the two hospitals of Beatrice; the Lutheran hospital cared for the non-infections cases of the area, while the Mennonite took in those who had the flu. A routine procedure was worked out by the doctors and given to all who entered the overcrowded hospital. At one time, one ward held five members of the Reed family, father, mother, and three children, one only a few days old.

In 1921, while Sister Magdalene Wiebe was superintendent of the hospital, the sisters bought themselves a Ford. True, it was no great beauty, being second-hand and a Model T, but to them it was a pride and joy. For the first time, they could drive to church without having to depend on the generosity of their neighbor, Peter Jansen. For the first time, they could go to town for an afternoon's shopping without involving the expense of a taxi, or the two-mile walk to the stores and the long two-miles back. There is record of only one accident with that memorable first Ford four of the sisters and a student nurse were hurrying home from Lincoln to a class, but reached a ditch first. The driver of a Young's Bread Wagon found them there and brought them home to the hospital, scratched, bruised, shaken—and late for the class.

Another story, still told with chuckles, is that of the Christmas program, held in the public reception room of the hospital. All the ambulatory patients had been brought down to share in the festivities. While the party was still going on, a new patient was brought in for treatment, ninety-year-old Mr. Howe, with a broken hip. It seemed to Sister Elise such an unfortunate time to enter a hospital—Christmas Eve—that she instructed all the student nurses to wish him a special Merry Christmas. And inevitably, they called him affectionately Grandpa Howe. In the afternoon, finally, he complained. He was not a grandfather to anybody; he was a bachelor.

Sister Elizabeth is probably the only person who saw this, but one day, many years ago, she was standing at the kitchen window when she saw Dr. L. E. Penner dash out of the hospital. He is a very small man, scarcely five feet tall, and he still wore the long operating gown, a standard size that flapped about his heels like a wedding dress. From the upstairs window he had seen his horse break loose from the hitching rack: there was no one else to catch the animal, so he did it himself.

The training classes are no longer held in the public reception room of the hospital; a special room in the Home has been set apart for them. The teaching equipment has been enlarged, teaching methods improved. The same sisters watch over patients and the girls in training. Sister Sarah is no longer worried about substitutes, but she stays up late to figure out points, working again the miracle of feeding the sick in wartime. The three-year course leading to graduation as registered nurse has been replaced by a two-year, bedside nursing course that trains young women for service in homes or hospitals, wherever skilled, gentle care is necessary. They work among women ordained to Christian service, and nurtured in Mennonite traditions. Even during training, they are paid a salary, and receive their board, room, and laundry.

Enrollment for the next class begins June 15, 1943. For further information address: Mrs. Ursula Frantz, Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska.

CORRESPONDENCE

ALEXANDERWOHL MENNONITE CHURCH

near Goessel, Kansas

We experienced many rich blessings during the Easter season. On April 18 seventeen small children were presented for consecration by their parents. Rev. P. H. Unruh used the story of Hannah and Samuel as found in Samuel chapters 1 and 2.

A year ago a Hammond Organ was installed in our church. On Good Friday, April 23, we had the organ dedication service. Rev. P. H. Unruh delivered the dedicatory sermon. The dedicatory number on the organ was "The Lost Chord" played by Evelyn Voth. On Monday evening, April 26, Mrs. Amy Law, who is at present staff organist at radio station KFBI, Wichita, presented the dedication concert. Her selections included such numbers as: "O God Our Help of Ages Past," "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," "Dear Lord and Father of Mankind," and "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me."

Some years ago the choir of our church elected a committee to start the organ project. With the approval of the church they went to work. This committee worked faithfully and through collections and special gifts the money was raised to buy an organ. The members of the committee have made many trips to different cities before deciding what kind of organ to get. We are thankful that the organ is paid and now is our own.

The organ music adds greatly to our worship service. It is also of great help in congregational singing and to the choir. On the evening of April 25 the choir gave an Easter cantata, "The Thorn Crowned King" by Holton.

Our church opened a three week vacation Bible school on May 3. The enrollment is not as large as in previous years, probably due to gas rationing and to the fact that some districts have a vacation Bible school in their own district school. Six teachers are at work in the school in church. For the opening and worship service all the children and teachers meet in the basement of the church. After the worship service they have about fifteen or twenty minutes of singing. Songs and choruses are sung by all. After this the children go to the various rooms or places where their classes are conducted.

Pastor Basil A. Malof, formerly minister in St. Petersburg and Moscow, sentenced to Siberia and exiled from Russia, spoke in our church on the evening of May 4. It is his great desire to be able to return to Russia as soon as possible to preach the gospel to the people over there. He came to our church early and visited the cemetery before the service. He was greatly impressed by what he read on the tombstones, namely, that so many had come from Russia. May all the many privileges we enjoy in this country fill us with gratitude towards our Heavenly Father and help us to grow spiritually. —Katie Wedel.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH OF CHRISTIAN

Moundridge, Kansas

Greetings in our Redeemer's name! The story of man's redemption was again brought to us very effectively through the various services that were held during the Easter season. Six churches of this community united again for a series of union services during Holy Week. The theme of those meetings was "The Cross As Interpreted by Various Writers of the Scriptures." Each speaker presented the meaning of the Cross according to the particular book or writer that had previously been assigned to him. At our Good Friday services our pastor spoke on "The Redeeming Christ." His sermon centered around the two great questions. "What Was the Cost of Our Redemption?" and "From What and to What Are We Redeemed?" An impressive Sunrise Service was held in our city park on Easter morning. This service was sponsored jointly by the C. E. Society of the West Zion Mennonite Church and our C. E. Society.

As the Easter season was coming to a close, a shadow of sadness was cast over our congregation by the death of Brother Bernard D. Stucky. Brother Stucky reached the age of sixty-six years. The deceased had been in ill health for a long time. Although he suffered much, he bore it in faith in his Redeemer, and looked forward to the time when the Lord would call him home. During the last five years he was a member of the Board of Trustees of this church and served faithfully in this capacity as long as his health permitted him. Other church members, who have preceded Brother Stucky in death this year, were Sister Martha Goering and Brother Fred Roupp.

Silas Wedel, a son of our pastor, has been released from service at the Fort Collins C.P.C. camp, due to ill health. For several weeeks he was a patient at the Bethel Hospital in Newton, Kansas, and is now convalescing at the home of his parents, Rev. and Mrs. P.P. Wedel.

Timothy Lomavitu, a Christian Hopi Indian of Oraibi, Arizona, worshiped with us on Sunday morning, April 18. His brief visit here was made as he was traveling home on furlough from Camp Rucker, Alabama, where he is in the service ofour country. Timothy comes from our Mennonite Mission field in Arizona. His parents are also Christians. His father is an interpreter and helped in translating some parts of the Bible into the Hopi language.

CAMP BRIEFS

A carload of men from Marietta, Grottoes, Sideling Hill, and Luray Camps were transferred during the first week of May to the North Fork Camp in California.

The Galax Virginia Camp is scheduled to move to the Sequoia National Forest in California leaving Galax on May 17.

Major Robert A Biers of Selective Service System is visiting camps to give physical examinations to men recommended for release due to physical disabilities.

The twenty-five day ban on furloughs was removed April 21.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Albert Ewert, Wolf Point, Montana

MAY 23—Behold, I stand at the door, and knock: if any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in to him, and sup with him; and he with me." Rev. 3:20.

We find Christ at the door and seeking entrance. It is impressive to note that he stands. He does not rush by but patiently stands and knocks as He is not willing that any should perish. Furthermore we notice the purpose of His knocking; He seeks entrance not by force but waits until the door has been opened. He seeks fellowship, "and will sup with him, and he with me." From many a heart's door he must turn, His knocking unheeded because they care not for His fellowship.

MAY 24—"But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing might have life through his name." John 20:31.

John very definitely states the purpose of his writing. Notice what we are to believe "that Jesus is the Christ." He points out very clearly that Jesus was not only human but also divine. Many know Him only as "Jesus" and not as Christ. Furthermore we see the result of believing that he is "the Christ, the Son of God" and that is eternal life. God has placed salvation on such basis that everyone may have it and that is through faith in Jesus christ.

MAY 25—"Beloved now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be: but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be like him; for we shall see him as he is." I John 3:2.

We need not wait until we appear before the Judgement seat to see if we are born again for John says "now are we the sons of God." What a privilege is ours, by nature we were children of wrath but by faith we became children of God. How often is the resemblance lacking! The day is coming when we shall be like him.

MAY 26—"My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father's hand." John 10:29.

Here we have the security of the believer. God is all powerful; there is none mightier than he, and notice where the believer stands. How often we hear the expression, we must hold on to God, but John puts it the very opposite, and, that is, he holds us. The Christian has a double security as we are in Christ and Christ in God. So before Satan can touch us he must first come through the Father and Son. Have you been trying to hold on to God and failed? Why not let God hold on to you?

MAY 27—"And every man that has this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." I John 3:3.

Here we have the purifying hope, and that is the hope of the coming of Jesus Christ for his own. If we expect him any day, or hour or minute we will guard ourselves against anything that would defile us. If our hope does not purify us then we are not waiting for him. One that lives in sin does not expect that the Lord's coming is nigh. When we expect a visitor any minute we will have everything ready so when he comes he will not take us by surprise. Would you have done the things, said the things, or gone to places, had you expected the Lord to come today?

MAY 28—"I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service." Rom. 12:1.

Here we have what Paul calls "reasonable service." God is not forcing us to yield ourselves unto him, but rather He beseeches us "by the mercies of God." Can we refuse to consecrate our life to him when we realize that by his mercy and grace we are saved? Our bodies should be a living sacrifice. In the Old Testament many sacrifices were brought, but they were all dead. We should live for him, and then it should be "holy" separated from the world as well as acceptable. God is not satisfied with any kind of a sacrifice, for it must measure up to his standard.

MAY 29—"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." John 15:8.

A Christian life is a fruitful life. The fact that we bear fruit is a sign of life. But there are three degrees in fruit bearing, and they are "fruit," "more fruit" and "much fruit." It is only as we bear "much fruit" that the Father is glorified. This fruit is found in Gal. 5:22,23, "the fruit of the spirit." Can we say we bear much fruit? I love those that love me, but how about the enemies? Have I the joy of salvation and the peace that passeth all understanding? Merely experiencing the new birth and then bearing fruit is not sufficient. We must bear much fruit if the Father is to be glorified.

MAY 30—"Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me." John 14;1.

Here we have the remedy for troubled hearts. We are living in a world where we are surrounded with trouble on every hand. But we as Christians should lift our thoughts higher than this world as Jesus says to his disciples "Let not your heart be troubled." He gives us the remedy for a troubled heart. That is faith. We do not put our faith in earthly things no matter how safe they may appear to be. Sooner or later we will be disappointed, but if we put our trust in God the Father and Jesus Christ we will be safe.

Winning the Battle against a Flood

"We have information from reliable authority which indicates that the Missouri River may cause a serious flood disaster here. The crest of the flood is expected to reach here sometime after Sunday. We are trying to prepare for the worst river flood since 1881: CAN YOU HELP US?"

The speaker was Jack Boyne, City Engineer of Council Bluffs, Iowa. Council Bluffs, a city of some 42,000 inhabitants, is Omaha's neighbor across the "Big Muddy." The answer to Jack Boyne's plea came from Camp Superintendent Cecil Saddoris and Acting Camp Director Wilbur Nachtigall· Said they: "We shall do all we can to help avert a disaster in Council Bluffs."

On Wednesday morning, April 7, seven trucks loaded with men and equipment answered Boyne's "S. O. S." On April 16, ten days later, 94 exhausted and grimy C. P. S. men dragged wearily back into camp,—weary, yes, but very happy because they had a part in the battle against the tough Missouri; and what is more,—that battle had been won! ! !

It was a heroic battle against an angry river in which the men from Camp Denison had the privilege of participating. Fighting shoulder to shoulder with men from all walks of life, they tasted the satisfaction of victory in a hard night. Farmers from the surrounding territory came in and gave their services. Boys from the two large Council Bluffs high schools were on hand. Employees of dozens of city firms were on the job. Employees of the park board and other city departments drove trucks, shoveled dirt, and filled sacks with sand. One day found the "Conchies" filling sand bags side by side, shoulder to shoulder, with a detachment of U. S. Army Troops. Some 50 city and priviately owned trucks were busy most of the crucial night, hauling load after load of sand to strengthen the filmsy row of sand bags on the dike· Equipment of the State Highway Commission was at disposal of the flood fighters, along with scores of highway commission employees.

The highest tribute came from Mayor S. W. McCall of the city of Council Bluffs, who said in a parting word to the director of the Denison Camp: "Tell your men that we never could have stopped the river without their help. They did a superb job; they were splendid all around. We shall always be indebted to them." Jack Boyne's enthusiasm was equally as great when he shouted: "Yes sir, that gang did a great job. We're going to do something for them! At least, we never could have held her without their help. You tell them that."

Boyne did find it rather difficult to reward the "conchies" for their work. According to an article which appeared in the metropolitan Omaha World Herald on April 9, he ran into no end of difficulty. Said the Herald reported:

"City Engineer Jack Boyne of Council Bluffs Thursday night thought the conscientious objectors from Denison who have been working on the river dike ought to have some treat in recognition of their work. The 60-odd men, mostly Mennonites, have outworked all other crews assigned to the work. Boyne walked into the Dodge Light Guard Armory, where the men are quartered. 'You've done a swell piece of work, boys' he said, 'How'd you like to go to a show?' 'We never go to shows,' they said. 'Well,' Boyne countered, 'Can I send you over some cigarettes?' 'We don't smoke,' the conchies replied. Boyne made a third attempt. 'How about some beer then?' 'No,' they chorused, horrified. 'Isn't there anything I can do for you?' Boyne asked. 'Yes,' they said, 'You can send us two new aprons for the cook, and four dishtowels.' These were promptly provided."

The battle against the Missouri River held a variety of experiences for those 64 men who left Denison on April 7, and for the 30 more who joined them on April 11. Sixteen more men were there for April 11 only, the time when the river reached its crest.

When the 64 arrived on Wednesday morning, they were immediately put to work sand-bagging the river boulevard from the large Ak-Sar-Ben bridge south to the Union Pacific railroad bridge. Everyone went to work!!!—There were project men working shoulder to shoulder with the office men, (can you imagine that?—and the office men did work) there was the kitchen force, proving very decisively that they are just as adept at handling shovels as they are juggling kitchen utensils; there was Mr. Harvey Bindberg, acting camp superintendent in charge of work crews. Filling sandbags with Camp Director Wilbur Nachtigall.

By evening of the first day Dallas Hamsner, who was in charge of first aid treatment, had several blisters to dress. Soft hands became toughened in a hurry!! The good hot food that the kitchen boys had prepared tasted unusually good that first evening, although the men had to share cooperatively the knives and forks. The men were quartered at first in the Dodge Light Armory; but when the State Guard was mobilized for patrol duty along the river, they were moved to the City Auditorium, with cooking facilities in the abandoned restaurant of the Goodrich Hotel.

The next day it rained! the April showers which fell incessantly all day drenched everyone to the skin. Then, as a crowning disappointment of the day, came the failure to stop the gush of water that flooded from a bubbling sewer manhole in the Dodge Park, bordering the river. Sandbags upon sandbags were filled and placed firmly about that gushing manhole·

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

No. 2 of Series on Devotional Training

DUTIES AND OBLIGATIONS OF CHURCH MEMBERS, Eph, 4:20-32; 5:1,2

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs "Guide me, O Thou great Jehovah," No. 160; "When We Walk With the Lord," No. 486. 2. Reading of above Scripture passage, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Dramatization, "Which Way Shall I Take?" and "Faith Through the Years." Five cents each. These may be obtained from Mrs. A. J. Neuenschwander, Quakertown, Pa. 4. Offering for C.E. project.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Of the first group of believers it is said that "they continued steadfastly in the apostles' doctrine and in fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." These four things are not outmoded yet for those who constitute the Christian church. We may call them their duties and obligations. To continue steadfastly, not to waver, to be dependable, to be "on the job" doing these four things will make the church a real fellowship.

This will mean regular attendance at church services, your attitude of good will toward the various members, a unity of spirit, and a wholehearted support of the work of the church in its various phases, such as evangelism, mission work, relief of suffering. No one can expect to be a member of an organization, and have that organization mean something for him without putting something into it. The same thing holds true of the church.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Worthy of the Name of Christ. Eph. 4:1-7
2. Serving in the Church, Eph. 4:11-16
3. "Put on the New Man," Col. 3:12-17
4. The Use of Spiritual Gifts, I Cor. 12:1-11
5. Members Complimenting Each Other, I Cor. 12:12-31

IV. For Discussion:

1. How can the church today maintain a warm, unselfish fellowship like that of the early church? 2. What is the best cure for church quarrels? 3. What can the individual church members do to make the church be what is should be?

V. Illustration:

"A GREAT DAY"

Two neighbors had not been speaking for some years. Both attended church regularly, but one would never join his neighbor at the Lord's Supper. Then, one Communion Sunday these two men walked side by side to the altar and partook of the Holy Communion together. After church as the minister greeted the one who had for years refused the Communion, the man's face glowed with happiness. "Pastor," he said, "this is a great day for me. Last week I went over and made up with my neighbor, and after that I had no reason for staying away from the Lord's Supper."

VI. Facts for Study:

The early church emphasized "prayer," united prayer, intercessory prayer. Prayer meetings and prayer groups have done much for the church at all times. Confidence in its power and efficiency should lead the church today.

The early church emphasized "teaching." Acts tells us, "They continued stedfastly in the apostle's teaching." Our own denomination has always emphasized the value of "teaching" through catechism classes, parochial schools, vacation Bible schools, Bible study evenings, prolonged meetings, short courses at the colleges for ministers and laymen, S.S. teachers' training classes, and through Bible courses in grade and high school where that is possible.

VII. Food for Thought:

It would be well to observe the old-fashioned Christian disciplines: private prayer, family worship, regular church attendance, generous giving.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

DOING CHRISTIANS I Tim. 4:9-16

Every Christian should be a doing Christian. It is important to hear the truth, but if we don't do the truth, it is more important. Living it in our daily lives is far better than just telling about it.

Seven Promises of Blessing on Those Who Do His Will

1. Whosoever shall do the will of my father, the same is my brother, and sister and mother.

2. If ye know these things, happy are ye if ye do them.

3. For not the hearers of the law are just before God, but the doers shall be justified.

4. And the world passeth away, and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God, abideth forever.

5. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the city.

6. And whatsoever ye ask, we receive of him, because we keep his commandments and do those things that are pleasing in his sight.

7. Ye are my Friends, if ye do whatsoever I command you.

Doing Good

In a southern prison, during the Civil War, there was held for some time a Northern prisoner. Three times he was offered as exchange; he was to be set free in return for a Southern prisoner held in the North. Each time he refused in favor of a fellow prisoner, needier than he. Finally the fourth offer came. He had been trying to win a comrade for Christ, but he had said, “No I don't believe in religion, I have never seen any evidence of it.” Now the prisoner saw an opportunity to win his comrade. He refused to take the freedom offered and gave it to this comrade, insisting that he take it. This action completely melted the sinner comrade, and he couldn't refuse his freedom from prison both in heart and person.

Doing All to the Glory of God

When David Hogg was dying, he said to the lad David Livingstone, “Now, lad, make religion the everyday business of your life, and not a thing of fits and starts; for if you do, temptation and other things will get the better of you. “David Livingstone followed the advice of the dying man; he made his religion his everyday business of his life. Each day he lived for God. He was the great missionary who gave his all for dark Africa. He gave his all to the glory of God, and we are sure God had greater things for him in heaven

The Question Bee

1. Quote the verse in James 1:22. 2. What is our reward for well-doing? 3. How can children do the will of God?

The Prayer List

Teach us, Lord, to be gracious, loving in spirit and forgiving to our fellowmen. Help me to meet some one today, and do for him what I would have others do for me. Above all, consecrate me with the spirit from heaven, to love my fellow men more.

EASTERN DISTRICT CONFERENCE NOTES

In my last article I stated that this would be the last article I would send in under the heading of “Eastern District Secretary's Notes,” but if I would continue writing the articles they would be under the heading “Eastern District Conference Notes.” The reason given was the fact that I had asked to be relieved of the Secretaryship of the Conference. The Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel was elected to this office. The Executive Committee appointed me as Conference Correspondent, inasmuch as I had started these articles during the year and with the suggestion that they be continued.

Rev. Allen M. Fretz laid to rest—Instead of the Conference ministers and delegates going to Souderton on Thursday afternoon, April 29, for the opening session of the 145th session of Conference as scheduled, they attended the funeral service for the Dean of Ministers of the Eastern Conference in the Deep Run Mennonite Church. Rev. Russell L. Mast, pastor of the Deep Run Church was in charge of the service and read the funeral lesson. The messages were delivered by the brethern, Howard T. Landes, pastor of the Germantown Mennonite Church, and Freeman H. Swartz, pastor of the Eden Mennonite Church of Schwenksville, sons of the congregation. The opening prayer was offered by Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander and the closing prayer by Rev. Howard G. Nyce. A ministers' quartet, consisting of Harold D. Burkholder, Russell L. Mast, A. J. Neuenschwander, and Olin A. Krehbiel sang "The Lord Depends on You" as a message to the ministers and laymen of the Conference to continue the work in which Rev. Fretz was so faithful for sixty years, and "Asleep in Jesus" as our tribute to him for having faithfully served so many years. At the grave the President of the Conference, Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, read the committal, Rev. Raymond V. Stubbs, pastor of the Pine Grove Mennonite Church, offered the prayer, and the benediction was given by Rev. Ernest J. Bohn, pastor of Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton.

Highlights of the Conference—The 145th session of the Eastern District Conference of the Mennonite Church of North America was held in Zion Mennonite Church, Souderton, Rev. E. J. Bohn, pastor, beginning at 5:15 P.M. Thursday, April 29. It started at this hour instead of 2:00 P.M. on account of the funeral of Rev. Allen M. Fretz. The Program Committee decided that parochial reports would be dispensed with in order to save time. By so doing the Conference was on scheduled time by Friday morning. In the evening, Rev. Russell L. Mast, Vice President, was in charge of the meeting. Rev. Arthur S. Rosenberger of Dalton, Ohio, the Conference Speaker, delivered the message that had been scheduled for the afternoon. This was followed by the President's conference sermon. The business session started on Friday morning with by the reports of the Conference officers. The the report of the Credentials Committee followed Statistical Sheet prepared by the Secretary revealed that the Conference had raised $89,292.03. One church had not reported. The officers for the year are President, Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, re-elected; Vice President, Rev. Russell L. Mast, re-elected; Rev. Olin A. Krehbiel was elected Secretary; and the Treasurer, Mr. Alvin H. Alderfer, was re-elected. The Peace Committee reported that about $8,000.00 had been sent in for C.P.S. Camps and Relief. The Home for the Aged Board of Managers reported that the Home was free of debt. On Friday evening messages were delivered by Dr. William L. Mudge, Executive Secretary of the Pennsylvania Council of Churches, and Rev. Paul Wenger, returned missionary from India.

The Women's Organization of the Conference held their business meeting in the Sunday School room on Saturday morning and the inspirational program in the church auditorium on Saturday afternoon. The outstanding feature of this service was the panel discussion by missionaries. Those participating in the panel were Dr. Ella Bauman of India, Chairman; Dr. Harvey Bauman; Rev. and Mrs. Paul Wenger; and Miss Augusta Schmidt of India; Miss Aganetha Fast, missionary to China; and Rev. Howard G. Nyce, member of the Foreign Mission Board.

On Saturday evening the Brotherhood of the Conference held its program. in charge of Mr. Ely Fretz, President of the Brotherhood. A quartet of of C.P.S. boys sang a number of selections, and Lawrence Burkhalter rendered several violin selections. The message of the evening was delivered by Rev. William H. Stauffer, pastor of the Sugar Creek, Ohio, Mennonite Church, who is employed by the Home Mission Board for a year to visit different churches, conferences and C.P.S. camps, as well as boys in detached service.

The Conference Communion Service was held on Sunday morning, in charge of the host pastor, the Rev. E. J. Bohn. The Scripture Lesson and prayer were in charge of Rev. Paul Wenger. The Communion sermon was delivered by Dr. Harvey Bauman. The Communion Lesson was read by the Conference President, Rev. Sylvan S. Lehman, and Dr. Lloyd L. Ramseyer, President of Bluffton College, offered the prayer of blessing for the bread and cup. The different ministers assisted in distributing the communion.

The last meeting was the joint program of the Sunday school and young people's meeting on Sunday afternoon in charge of Mr. Stanley Fretz, president of the Y.P. Conference and Mr. Jacob Fretz, president of the S.S. Union. Mr. Lawrence Burkhalter rendered several violin selections and the message of the afternoon was given by Mrs. Paul Wenger, returned missionary from India. The Scripture lesson for this meeting was read by Rev. Andrew Shelly, pastor of the Sterling Avenue Mennonite Church, Kitchner, Ontario, and the prayer by his brother Rev. Paul Shelly, a student at Union Theological Seminary, New York.

O.B.A. to Commemorate Twenty-fifth Anniversary May 21, 1943

—Brother Sam J. Goering and Brother J. D. Graber will go to China this summer for the M.C.C. in interest of relief work.

—From a news-letter of the First Mennonite Church, Aberdeen, Idaho, dated May 5: "Spring has arrived. The gardens are being planted. The farmers are busy getting their crops planted. Irrigation water has been turned in, and consequently the irrigator is kept busy." Margie Wiebe and Doris Voth are the valedictorian and the salutatorian of the high school graduating class. The letter was sent out to absentee members for Mother's Day.

—Rev. B. H. Janzen of Lehigh, Kan., recently visited seventeen Oklahoma churches under the auspices of the Home Mission and Peace committees of the Western District and Bethel College. He based his messages on the words, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." Reports from the churches indicate that the services were much appreciated.

—H. D. Raid, who has been teaching in the Argyle Consolidated School, Argyle, Iowa, writes that he has accepted a call to serve as pastor in the Bethel Mennonite Church, Fortuna, Missouri, for the four summer months. In September he and Mrs. Raid plan to go to Hartford, Connecticut, to attend the seminary there.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, Califor- retreat is being planned for adults this year, but they recommend that any group interested in having a retreat plan its own. There is a possibility that Reedley, Shafter, and Winton might go together for such a retreat."

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Shafter, California: "The church fellowship supper, which was held on April 30, was a happy occasion. Gratitude for the goodness of God in permitting us to complete our church auditorium was shown in a number of ways. Around the tables we enjoyed a bountiful meal, arranged by the ladies of the church. Following the meal a period of singing and devotion was enjoyed. But gratitude is also shown in other ways. The offering, which was taken to pay the deficit on our work of remodelling, was more than enough to pay for this work. The total amount received to date is $319.45."

—"If you have access to the April Cosmopolitan, turn to page ninety-one. There you will find a most interesting article about the work of the boys in C.P.S. camps. . ."—George Stoneback in church bulletin.

—Rev. Forrest Musser, pastor of the Grace Mennonite Church of Pandora, Ohio, and an alumnus of Bluffton College with the class of 1930, has agreed to accept the responsibilities of Field Secretary, with his chief responsibility being that of student solicitation. He will work in a part-time capacity during the summer months, continuing his relationship with the church. His work for the college will likely terminate with the opening of school in September.

—Bluffton College: Harold Thiessen from Basna, Central Province, India, will appear in a violin concert Friday evening, May 21. Herbert Oyer, senior from Bluffton and ministerial student, brought a message on hypocrisy to members of the College Church association on May 2. He has filled the pulpit at the Russells Point Church on Indiana Lake for the past several years. Della Krebill has been elected to the position of treasurer and business manager of the college. Miss Krebill was formerly assistant to the treasurer, the late J. H. Loganbill. The commencement week program is as follows:

—Weeping Water, Nebraska, C.P.S. Boys Praised: Erwin C. Goering, director of this camp received the following letter from D. R. Thornton, Area Engineer of the United States Engineer Office:

"I want you to know, and your men to know, that we appreciate the help you gave us in the flood emergency just past.

"All reports show that your men were among the best workers on the job.

"You helped save a lot of land and crops."
To Howard B. Ellis of the Soil Conservation Service of the Weeping Water camp came the following letter form Charles L. Hipp, Captain, Corps of Engineers:

"I wish to extend to you and all the men who worked under you in building and maintaining the protective levee around the town of Hamburg my sincere thanks for the very good work you did. Everyone on our staff had a good word for your outfit especially as to the devotion to duty and the performance under strained conditions without complaint.

"We of course feel that we could not have done without any part of the effort which was offered by the various agencies and individuals, but in particular, we feel that the levee could not have been successfully built or maintained without the services of your fine group of men."

—"Rev. D. J. Unruh has resigned from the Pratum, Oregon, Mennonite Church to accept a position as field man for the Northern Bible Society of Duluth, Minnesota. Mrs. Unruh and family will make their home at Pandora, Ohio, while Mr. Unruh travels over Michigan, Ohio, and Pennsylvania in the interest of the Bible Society." —Bulletin, East Swamp Mennonite Church

—Curt Siemens recently gave the commencement address at the Walton, Kansas, high school.

—Buhler (Kansas) Mennonite Church: The sewing societies enjoyed a visit from Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Penner. They served a meal at noon. In the afternoon Rev. and Mrs. P. A. Penner spoke about India. The Penners are living at Newton at present, but their thoughts are ever with the Indian people.
—Mrs. Arnold Esau

—On May 3 it was reported that Mrs. Alfred Habeggar's condition was considerably improved.

—The Kansas Sunday School Convention will convene for its fifty-ninth session in the meetinghouse of the First Mennonite Church of Newton, Kansas, on May 30. The afternoon program is to begin at 2:30 and the evening program at 8 o'clock.

—Gerald Stucky, student at Biblical Seminary, New York City, and mission candidate, will be ordained in his home church at Berne, Indiana, on May 30. Rev. Howard G. Nyce, a member of the Foreign Mission Board, is expected to be present.

'Twas Said in 1861

"The press of the Mennonite Printing Union, already in active operation in our church, is recognized as an absolute necessity, and is heartily commended to all for general and liberal support."

—Mennonite, July 2, 1935, pp. 1 and 2.

The above statement was formulated in a meeting held in Wadsworth, Ohio, in 1861, in which the principles of the General Conference were stated.

MAY 31—"Blessed is the man that walketh no in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the wa of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornfu Ps. 1:1.

Here we have a blessed man. Blessed means happy. Who is not seeking happiness? Many are seeking it where the Psalmist says it cannot b found. It cannot be found in the ways of the u godly or the way of sinners nor among the scornfu but by walking in the way of the Lord.

THANK YOU

On April 2 a letter was sent out to all the ministers of our General Conference. In it they were asked to send to the editor their suggestions for a new junior Sunday School quarterly. The letters of those who have replied are very helpful. Excerpts from some of them are as follows:

A pastor on the Pacific coast, speaking of his Junior Department workers, says, "Features which appeal to them especially are pictures, maps, and work material."

"I think it would be well. . .to include somewhere in the series of lessons something of the main teachings of the Mennonite Church and also something of the mission fields and its missionaries. Some other denominations are doing that and I think it is a fine thing."—Pastor in the Middle District.

A pastor in the Eastern District writes, "The lessons should have both a spiritual and a Mennonite tone. The junior age is an age for decisions. Juniors should be shown their need of Christ, and they should get a vision of the place of the Church and their relationship to it."

"Let all the supplementary material be Christ-centered. Questions to be answered in writing are helpful;" so writes a pastor in the Western District. Another one in this district writes, "Make sure that it is not material too difficult for your age group. It would be better to have the nine-year-old in mind rather than the twelve-year-old."

"Stories. . .should not be abstract but practical and to the point. Incidents in Mennonite history could also be used if interestingly presented. There should also be suggestions for activities which can easily follow from the lesson. For example in one Mennonite church that I know of the Juniors made gifts to send to Japanese children in the relocation centers. The thrill they got from that was tremendous."—A pastor in the Eastern District.

A pastor who has been in the ministry for thirty-five years writes, "One of the greatest of all Christian works is the teaching of children. We are convinced that much time is spent in teaching them secondary matters while important things—first things—are neglected. Of what value is it for a child to know how many miles it is from Jerusalem to Nazareth if he does not know the distance that separates a human heart from God? What is the use of learning the geography of Paul's missionary journeys or the wandering of the Children of Israel, until, he has been taught to bring his own wandering heart to the Saviour? Too often the great and all-important objective is not reached in teaching youth of this age. That is to lead them to Christ and to love the Church and all of its activities."

A minister in one of our city missions says, "All our literature, and that includes the junior quarterly, should be measured by the one absolute standard (as I see it), that is, by the teachings of Jesus. Even when the uniform lessons call for portions from the Old Testament, the editors should compare and supplement with Christ's teachings."

Two ministers suggested that the new quarterly be like that put out by some other companies.

It is our hope that the new junior quarterly will meet all the needs mentioned in these excerpts. If you have any suggestions to make, and have not made them, then please send them in immediately. The new quarterly is to be ready for the fourth quarter of this year.—rw.

Conchies Toil Unashamed

The above is the heading of an interesting article in the Los Angeles Times of May 1, 1943. It describes the C. P. S. camp at Glendora, California. This camp is run by the Friends. The following are excerpts from the article:

"Their ranks include attorneys, economists, doctors of philosophy, a coterie of Phi Beta Kappas, electrical, aernonautical, and civil engineers—brilliant young men with strong knowledge and strong convictions."

"Under direction of O. D. Brehman, project superintendent of the 17,000-acre experimental forest, the youths are carrying on intricate research concerning water runoff, soil conservation and forest growth. The fifty-year project, begun a decade ago, will result in pointed scientific data which will make more water available for Southern California—and, in the words of Brehman, 'we couldn't carry on without these boys.'

"The pacifist, non-violence attitude is expressed in quiet words from unashamed lips. The stigma of 'conchie' is lost on these men because—and you cannot visit the camp without realizing this—they are unalterably convinced beyond all doubt that their ideals are right. Conversation among C. O.'s is utterly devoid of oaths and imprecations. hey are immersed in their work, obsessed with the idea of justifying their stand against taking up arms by accomplishing as much as possible with peaceful methods."

"The C. O.'s day starts at 6 a.m., ends at 5 p.m. with time off for lunch. They are not a melancholy group and it's not unusual to hear them whistling."

(Luke Horsch, who was so kind as to send in the article, quoted above writes "The Los Angeles Times is the greatest metropolitan daily here in the southwest. Its editorials have at times been severely critical of C.P.S. and especially of the conscientious objector! It was a surprise to me, therefore, to read an article of this nature in today's issue. I believe, as a whole, and I am confident Dr. Fast will support me in this statement, I believe that on the whole the Press has displayed a tolerant and even sympathetic attitude to the men in 'work of national importance under C. P. S.' ")

A Christian is a mind through which Christ thinks—

A Christian is a heart through which Christ lives—

A Christian is a voice through which Christ speaks—

A CHURCH PAPER IN EVERY HOME

When Paul admonished Timothy to "attend to reading," he had, no doubt, the Scriptures in mind. But next to the Scriptures today, should come the church papers, not the newspapers. The daily newspapers have their place, and we need them, but they are not next to the Bible. The best home mission work that a church can do is to provide each home with one of our church papers and to urge young and old to read it in order that they may get a taste for such solid Christian food.

Unless we succeed in this, our conference work will suffer, especially home and foreign missions. We have tried the plan for one year, and we like it. Should our church fail in this for 1943, it would be a great disappointment to me as pastor, because I would have to take much time in my sermons to tell of the conference work, and still the church would not get it all, because many cannot attend church regularly. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." If the secular dailies absorb too much of our thinking, we become secular in our heart and starve spiritually. Too much secular reading even spoils the taste for Bible reading. Not so church paper reading. It increases the taste for Bible reading, and oh how we need this!

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

CHURCHES AS EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS

Time changes many customs. In different periods of history and in different lands religion was much more closely identified with the program of education than it is at the present time in America. The synagogue, among the ancient Hebrews, was always a center of education as well as worship. The Jewish young people were taught to read and write, and they were instructed in the religious traditions of their people. The scene of Jesus in the Temple at the age of twelve is a reflection of this fact. One supposes that there were other Jewish young men present at that time. The story of Hannah and her son, likewise, reflects this fact in an earlier period. Even today the system of Jewish education is very closely identified with the synagogue.

Education Among Mennonites

The recent articles of Clarence Fretz in the Mennonite Quarterly Review on the subject of Bible schools in the Mennonite Church reveals that there is still a good deal of education carried on by the Mennonite Church, most of it by the Old Mennonites in the form of short term winter courses. In the General Conference there were at one time many more local Bible schools and academies than there are at present. One is compelled to ask today if it has not been a mistake to allow so many schools to become extinct. Is it good stewardship of a religious heritage for a church to turn over the responsibility of propagating it to the state? This is about what the closing of our church maintained schools has amounted to. At the present time we have no systematic way of preserving our heritage through education. Whatever emphasis is given to this matter at the present time is largely dependent upon the inclination of the minister and members of individual churches.

The Present Program

At the present time there is a particular revival of emphasis on Mennonite heritage. But there is no certainty that such an emphasis is anything more than a momentary spurt caused by the international crisis. After the war is over without an established program of church sponsored education we are likely to drift back to the trend that has been noticeable among Mennonites for the past century. It is a question worthy of our prayerful attention. Should the Mennonite Church today and tomorrow become more and more responsible for Christian education?

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

Gerald Stucky to be Ordained

The Lord willing, our mission candidate Gerald B. Stucky will be ordained as our missionary in his home church, Berne, Indiana, on May 30.

Rev. H. G. Nyce, a member of the Board, has been asked to officiate in cooperation with the local pastor, Brother C. H. Suckau.

The prayers of mission friends are herewith solicited for this service.

Brother Stucky has been asked by the Board to accompany Missionary S. F. Pannabecker on a trip of investigation through Latin America (Mexico and South America) to look for a suitable place for a new mission field. They expect to be ready to go about next September. May the Lord bless the undertaking.

In behalf of the Board,
P. H. Richert

MRS. TUAN TURNS ABOUT

By Marie J. Regier

Mrs. Tuan and her sons had heard of the Jesus way of life, but it did not make much of an impression until just lately. Mrs. Tuan had been a very zealous worshiper of the gods, so much that she finally became possessed with the demon of the gods as it were. Her possessed self conversed with her natural self all night long and she had no rest. Her sons, who are able to read, do not put much stock in the gods. All along they had been rather disgusted with their mother's zeal; now they felt it was a positive disgrace that she should be possessed. They took her to some pagan charmer to cast out the demon. It was of no avail. "We must take her to the Jesus people," they said.

About two miles away there was a small group of unlettered Christian women. Some had learned to read the Bible, no more. But they believed in the power of God. To them the sons took their mother. They prayed for her and she became better. Immediately Mrs. Tuan went home and took down all the gods.

The first time we saw her she was still very new in the faith. She told how she had wondered whether the God who was invisible would hear her if she prayed. But she tried it and was sure He did hear her prayer. She prayed often, but sometimes she was still a bit afraid. This fear which had not quite left her became crystallized when she came ater to attend instruction classes and special meetngs. It seemed as though the powers of darkness were taking a last desperate stand. She was again seized by the same spells she had had before the women prayed for her. She didn't lose faith, however. She would say when she felt the spell coming on. "I am afraid, but I am going to stay here. I am going to stick it out no matter what happens." She did, and before she left for home the spells had ceased.

Now, a few months later we again visited in her home. To our joy and amazement she had not been idle during this time. Having a son who could read, she had learned with his assistance to read a little booklet containing the Lord's prayer, the apostles creed, the ten commandments, the twenty-third psalm and another booklet with thirty Bible verses in it.

She really read the characters. But she was a bit disgusted with herself that when she met the same characters in type of a different size she did not recognize them right off, but had to compare a while first.

But to us there is much cause for praise. To think that a woman of sixty who had been a zealous worshiper of idols should at this late date be converted through the efforts of a few poor ignorant country women. Having been converted, she spared no effort to grow. She came to instruction classes and stayed a whole week after all the other inquirers had gone home in order that she might receive additional instruction from the Bible women and other leaders and from the fellowship of the saints. Not until she felt that she was strong enough to go on by herself did she leave. And now, back home, she throws herself heart and soul into learning to read. Her little grandchild who watches her tireless efforts refers to her book as "Grandmother's Jesus."

Camp Briefs

Latest placements on dairy farms have been as follows during the period of May 4-11: twenty men to each Lenawee and Genesee Counties in Michigan; fifteen men to Cuyhoga, twenty-five men to Wayne, and twenty to Summit Counties in Ohio . .

Eight men are now in training for dairy herd testing in Michigan and eight additional men are in training for the same work in Pennsylvania . .

Fifteen men are attending the third C. P. S. Administrative School at Akron.

PEACE SECTION

Notice to Purchasers of Civilian Bonds

During the recent national war bond drive there was a large purchase of government bonds made by our people through the Civilian Bond Program. In fact, the subscriptions for Civilian Bonds were of such volume that subscribers will have to wait a few weeks longer for their bonds than would normally be the case. The postal card receipts, however, should reach the subscriber about as usual.

The Committee regrets the delay but feels confident of the understanding of our people in the matter. —Civilian Bond Committee

IN MEMORIAM

MRS. D. D. UNRUH, nee Susanna Gaeddert, was born August 27, 1866, in Franzthal, South Russia, and died May 8, 1943. She was the daughter of Dietrich Gaeddert and Maria Martens. She grew up on a farm two miles east of Buhler, Kansas, securing her education in the elementary and parochial schools of that time. She was baptized by her father on December 14, 1884, and joined the Hoffnungsau Mennonite Church. After her husband accepted the office of minister in 1904, she served faithfully in building the church. They made their home in McPherson County and later in Buhler. She is mourned by her husband; two daughters, Mrs. Marie Wall, Buhler, and Mrs. Martha Regier, Moundridge; three sons, John and David of Inman, and Otto of North Newton; her mother Mrs. Dietrich Gaeddert of Wichita, and four right sisters, five half sisters, and six half brothers.

ADOLPH GUSTAV BAER, son of Daniel and Catherine (Bergdolt) Baer, was born on a farm near Summerfield, Illinois, on September 30, 1875, and died on May 2. 1943. In 1890 he was baptized by Rev. Jacob E. Krehbiel. He was a life-long member of the First Mennonite Church of Summerfield. In 1909 he was married to Ida L. Appel. Two daughters were born. Hope is a teacher in Belleville Township High School and Faith (Mrs. Elton French) lives in St. Louis. For thirty-five years Mr. Baer was associated with his brother Benjamin D. Baer in the lumber, furniture, and undertaking business.

SARA LEHRMAN, nee Schmidt, daughter of Heinrich A. and Anna Unruh Schmidt, was born in South Russia, July 30, 1863, and died at the family home, Hillsboro, Kansas, on April 18, 1943. In 1874 she came to America with her parents who established their home in the village of Gnadenfeld, near the present site of Goessel. In 1883 she was baptized by Elder Jacob Buller and received into the membership of Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. When the Goessel Mennonite Church was organized in 1920, she transferred her membership to it. She was married to David Lehrman in 1885. She is mourned by the children: H. S. and Justina Lehrman and D. S. and Anna Lehrman of Newton; J. J. and Anna Schmidt of Hillsboro; H. and Helena Quiring, Newton; J. S. and Agnes Lehrman and Wilhelmina of the home; and Peter S. Lehrman of Newport, Washington.

MRS. JOH. A. BARTEL was born at Dombrowka, Poland, on November 30, 1867. When seven she came to the state of Illinois with her mother and four sisters. Later they moved to Moundridge, Kansas, where she was baptized and received into the membership of the First Church of Christian Mennonite in 1882. In 1890 she was married to the widower, Joh. A. Bartel. In 1906 they emigrated to Drake, Saskatchewan, where she has lived since. There she became a member of the North Star Mennonite Church. She died April 17, 1943.—Hans Dyck, Corr.

BARBARA (SUTER) GARBER, wife of Israel Garber, was born April 6, 1863, the daughter of Abraham and Elizabeth (Luginbill) Suter, and died April 6, 1943. She lived in the Pandora, Ohio, community with the exception of thirty-five years when she lived in Fortuna, Missouri. Surviving children are: Oswin of Toledo; Mrs. Ida Lehman, Berne, Indiana; Mrs. E. G. Suter and Mrs. Sam Steffen of Pandora; Miss Nellie Garber of Toledo; Mrs. William Klickman of Pandora; and Charles of Versailles, Missouri. After having received catechetical instruction, he became a member of the Evangelical Church of Germany through confirmation. During his youth he was employed in the mining industry. In 1893 he emigrated to Hillsboro, Kansas. In 1896 he married Lena Weyand. They made their home near Lehigh. There they at-

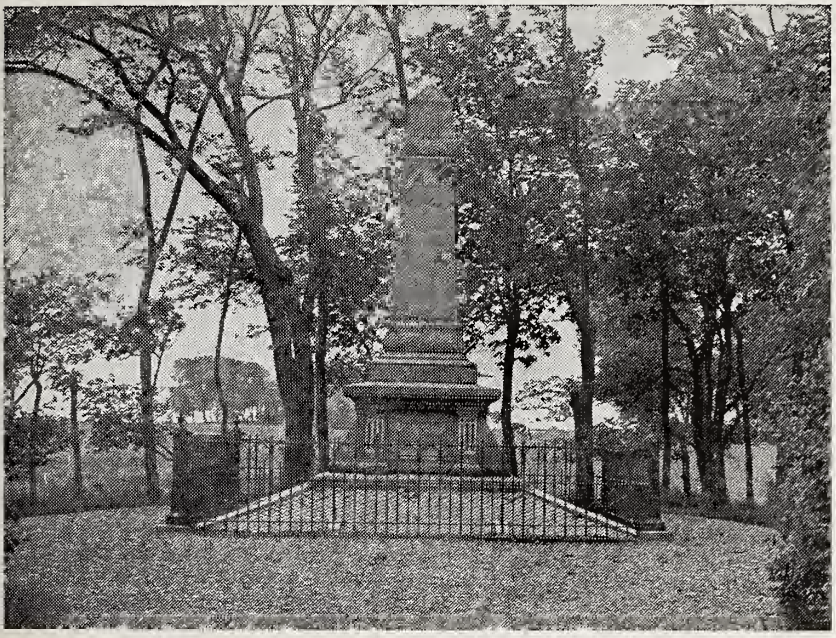
REMEMBERING MENNO SIMONS

Memorial day each year brings to us thoughts of friends who have gone on to their reward. It also brings thoughts of others whom we did not know but whose contributions to mankind deserve our deep appreciation. Some of these men lived in our own century; others lived hundreds of years ago. Some were inventors and scientists who have helped make our physical lives pleasant; others were the men who pioneered in the realm of the spirit and passed on to their descendants a priceless spiritual heritage.



Memorial to Menno Simons At Witmarsum, Holland

Such a man was Menno Simons. A modest memorial shaft (shown in the picture), erected in 1879, marks the place in northwestern Holland where he was born in 1496. But a more important memorial than this shaft is the organization that carries his name. There very likely would be a denomination like our own even if Menno Simons had not joined the Anabaptist Brethren. But as John Horsch wrote in his Mennonites in Europe, "Nevertheless, the fact remains that Menno Simons was the most influential leader in the Netherlands, northern Germany, and Denmark, and the ablest writer in defense of the church and its doctrines."

The story of his life should be an inspiration to all of us. Trained for the priesthood, he served in that position until finally the words of the Bible, which he had not read earlier, the influence of Luther's writings, and the lives of the Anabaptists brought him to repentance and conversion.

Soon after his conversion, he was ordained an elder in the Dutch Anabaptist church. His problems, however, were not all solved when he became converted and agreed to assume the office of elder. His life was a difficult one. In 1542 the Emperor issued an edict against him. Later he fled to Holstein, but in spite of persecution his life was spared for twenty-five years of service. He died a natural death in 1561. Although he was poor in material possessions, suffered from a physical injury, and had to flee for his life, the cause for his deepest concern was dissension in the church. Yet the Lord blessed his work and we today, over four hundred years later, are still reaping the good harvest which has grown from seeds planted by Menno Simons.

Soldier and Prayer

(The following might be of interest for Mennonite readers. It is taken from a little paper sent to Presbyterian ministers, called Monday Morning. The issue is the March 29, 1943, one—John T. Neufeld)

When a January camp pastor, the Reverend Thornton B. Pemfield Jr., of Yonkers, New York, conducted a discussion on "What is Prayer?" at one of the service chapels at Cochran Flying Field, Macon, Ga., he learned some of the difficulties encountered by soldiers:

Lack of time.

The "Business of killing" makes prayer seem unnatural.

Since most decisions are made for them they do not see the need for praying.

The general atmosphere of the barracks is not conductive to prayer.

The mystery of unanswered prayer.

Because a serviceman wants so many things in Army life which "prayer cannot produce."

tended the Lutheran Church at first, but in 1917 they became members of the Mennonite Church, in which he served as a member of the church board and as Sunday school teacher for many years. In 1928 they retired from the farm and made their home in Lehigh. He is survived by his wife; one son, Rudolph, Lehigh; and two daughters, Mrs. Ed Warkentin, Lehigh, and Mrs. Otto Warkentin, Newton.

RELIEF

To and From the Clothing Depot

Sister Lydia Lehman reports that during the year of April 1, 1942 to March 31, 1943 a total of 55,875 pounds of clothing was received at the Clothing Depot of the Mennonite Central Committee. The clothing was sent from nearly every Mennonite community in the country, and in all at least fourteen different Mennonite groups were among the donors.

During the past twelve months five foreign shipments were made as follows:

		Weight of Shipment	Value of Shipment
England	June, 1942	3,182 lbs.	$3,669.65
England	October, 1942	3,801 lbs.	4,633.82
England	April, 1943	2,913 lbs.	3,809.54
Paraguay	March, 1943	2,206 lbs.	2,966.45
North Africa	April, 1943	8,138 lbs.	8,427.78
	Total	20,240 lbs.	$23,507.24

With prospects for relief work in the coming year more bright than in the past, it is the hope of the Committee to send more and larger shipments of clothing to areas of need.

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

On Use of Campers in Agriculture

Below is a summary of the arrangement under which men from C.P.S. camps are now doing work on dairy farms:

(1) The Department of Agriculture lists certain counties throughout the country as important in milk production and short in labor.

(2) Selective Service System designates labor in these counties as work of national importance.

(3) The religious agencies ascertain the men in the camps who are interested and qualified for such labour and notify Selective Service System of the same.

(4) Men from camps are transferred, upon Selective Service approval, to respective farms in the approved counties.

(5) Farmers pay prevailing wages as set by the County War Board. The religious agencies collect the wages.

(6) Religious agencies, with Selective Service approval, make deduction from wages collected for the following: Transportation costs of assignee's transfer from camp to farm, compensation, medical care and hospitalization when such is necessary and when illness or accident is result of assignee's employment, overhead administrative costs to religious agencies, and allowance of $0.50 per day to cover clothing and other personal expenses of the assignee. The remainder of the wages are transmitted by the religious agencies to Selective Service System for coverage into the Treasury of the United States where the money is "frozen" for the duration of the war.

(7) Religious agencies provide a field representative who is responsible to Selective Service System for reports and to the religious agencies for the welfare of the boys.

"Go Ye . . . Into the Highways"

I have been traveling in Manitoba during the winter months, visiting the many scattered families and groups, preaching the gospel. There are still many families who live all by themselves and have no chance to attend a church service, and then there are small groups who have no preacher. Such families are willing to go ten or fifteen miles on a sleigh to attend a service.

I started last fall with the groups living in the northern part of the province at Fork River, Winnipegosis, and Mac Creary. After that I visited the scattered families around Portage la Prairie and Brandon. Everywhere the people are glad to have a visiting preacher. They never fail to invite you to come again. Besides I have been engaged in different work in organized communities at Steinbach, Morris, Rivers, Whitewater, Lena and at other places. Here I had either to conduct services on certain Bible themes or to lead Bible conferences.

We have had a very hard winter, with lots of snow blocking the roads and making traffic sometimes almost impossible.

I intended to go to Morris tonight for three days, but as we are having a very bad snow storm today, (March 16) which even blocked our Jefferson highway, I had to change my plan and likely will go there at a later date.

I thank the Home Mission Board who has made it possible to do this work and pray the Lord to bless it.

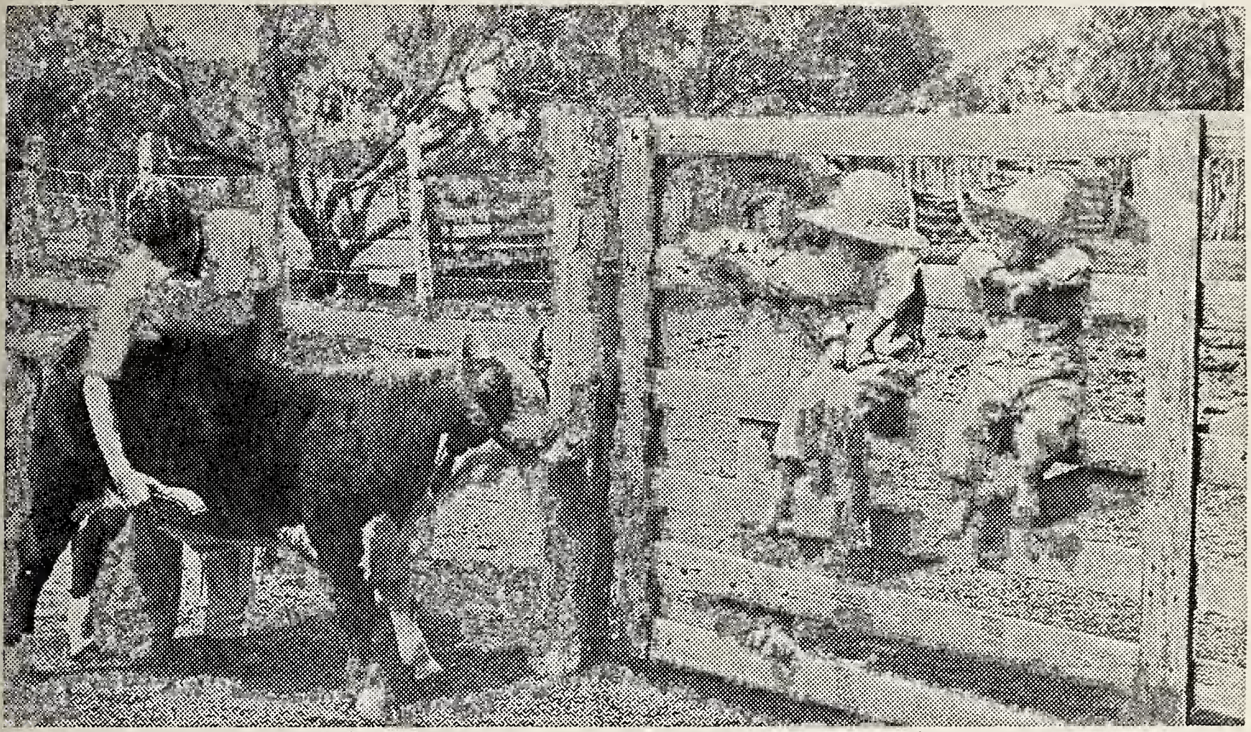
Brushing the Calf While the Younger Brothers and Sister Watch



HOW ARE YOU RAISING YOUR SON?

You are raising alfalfa and corn you say,
As fine as the earth will grow.
You are raising cattle and hogs and sheep,
That when alive they'll take the show.

You are raising wheat that is hard to beat
And I know you are coining the "mon,"
But tell me this, oh man of the soil:
How are you raising your son?
Do you take the time to talk to him
Of the things that he ought to know?
Do you show him the good and the bad of life
And teach him the way to go?

Does he trust you as a son should do?
Do you teach him the good and bad of life,
And show him the way to go?

Does he trust in you as a son should do?
Do you make him your friend or slave?
Will he stand some day with his fellow man,
Honest, and strong, and brave?
Oh, alfalfa and corn and wheat and oats,
Are things it is good to grow;
And cattle and hogs and a bank account
Are good for a man, I know.
But the ribbons you take and the money you make
Will bring but a mite of joy,
If you get to the top of the hill and find
You've failed in raising your boy.

NOT BY THEIR FLOWERS, BUT BY THEIR FRUITS

(Related by Rev. Oscar Edward Maurer, minister of the First Church of Christ (Center Church) of New Haven, Connecticut.)

"A devout churchwoman relates the following experience: She had spent hours decorating the altar of her church for Easter. Her faith in the Resurrection was the breath of life to her and she used the best of her artistic skill to arrange a fitting tribute to her Risen Saviour. When she entered the church on Easter morning she found that the front pews were solidly filled with poorly dressed working girls, on strike, who had come to church in a body. Her first feeling was one of resentment and dismay. 'They are coming between me and my Lord!' Then her better feelings prevailed. What good was her faith if it could not stand the test of life. Here was a field for expressing her faith. 'Insomuch as ye have done it unto the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.' "

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Jacob D. Goering

JUNE 1—"If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Luke 9:23.

Much is made these days of dying for a cause. But Christ here asks us to be concerned not so much with dying as with living. To live for a cause is often worth more than to die for it, and always more difficult. Dying should be necessary only as an alternative to compromise. To "follow" Christ by "taking up the cross daily" presupposes living so adventurously for this cause that death is always an imminent possibility.

JUNE 2—". . .Master it is good for us to be here; and let us make three tabernacles. . . ." Luke 9:33.

Many Christian people experience real joy during regular devotional periods. Often the temptation comes to desire to live continually in these mountain top experiences. We are prone to argee with Peter that "it is good to be here," and we too want to "build three tabernacles." Yet Christ commands us by word and deed to use such experiences. We must needs go up the mountains where we receive inspiration through first-hand contact with God, but after that comes also the need to go down into the valley to minister to others. To be of value this joy must be shared.

JUNE 3—". . .and they feared to ask Him of that saying." Luke 9:45.

How often we prefer to give the impression that we know all about a subject rather than admit our ignorance by further inquiry! The disciples here feared to ask the Master the meaning of "that saying" lest further understanding of the truth make them uncomfortable. Likewise, we find ourselves stopping our ears to words of truth and become resentful toward those who prophetically point the way. We prefer to have our conscience salved rather than corrected. The true Christian Spirit seeks truth even though it be painful.

JUNE 4—". . .He steadfastly set His face against Jerusalem." Luke 9:51.

Christ knew, as we find earlier in this chapter, at this time what his fate would be should he go to Jerusalem. But he would not consider taking a short-cut. For us too there is no shortcut to the abundant life. True, salvation is free, but still conditional. Our heart must become of that quality which can do no other than to "steadfastly set (our) face against Jerusalem" even if it means the cross.

JUNE 5—". . .Lord, I will follow thee, but. . . ." Luke 9:61.

Is a man truly a Christian if he accepts Christ with a reservation? Any reservation? Jesus' answer follows: "No man having put his hand to the plow and looking back is fit for the Kingdom of God." Our churches are filled with people who are eager to "join up" with a crusade if it doesn't cost too much. Are we sure that we are not giving our first loyalties to mammon? Is some physical convenience such as a salary, social prestige, standard of living, etc., receiving our first loyalty at the expense of unquestioned fidelity to Christ? Shall we follow Christ only if it doesn't cost too much?

JUNE 6—". . .and who is my neighbor?" Luke 10:29.

There is little doubt but that Christ answers that question by signifying in the good Samaritan story that anyone who is in need is to be considered as our neighbor. It is surely to be considered that the need includes spiritual need as well as physical even though the story is based on physical circumstances. Then who is not in need, and who is not our neighbor? And how much do we owe our neighbor? The good Samaritan in this story told the innkeeper to "take care of him," and promised to pay all expenses. The only limiting factor in giving Christian aid physically as well as spiritually is the neighbor's need.

JUNE 7—"But Martha was cumbered about much serving." Luke 10:40.

Everyone these days is busy—very busy. Busy about what? Like Martha too many of us are preoccupied with "much serving," with material desires. Like Martha we are so much concerned about satisfying appetites and gratifying our wants in the material realm that we have no time to invite Christ for spiritual fellowship. We even rebuke those who do have a better sense of values. We are busybodies—busy about the lesser things when all the while Jesus, the very Christ Himself, is in the same house with us. Let us learn from Mary. She was fellowshiping with Christ. She knew real values.

Foreign Relief and Rehabilitation Project

The headquarters research section of this project recently authorized by Selective Service System Order No. 101 is to be located at Overbrook, Pennsylvania, (a suburb of West Philadelphia). This project will be administered by a committee representing the three present C. P. S. administrative agencies and its research activities supervised by a Planning Committee also representative of these three agencies. Brother M. C. Lehman has been assigned to the project to assist in gathering and preparing educational material required by the June 12 Goshen College Relief Workers' Training School. Two assignees, John Bender and Justus Holsinger, have been transferred to this unit to assist him. Assignees to the several relief workers' training schools under the three agencies will be detached to this unit.

A double wall—the inside wall over 12 feet tall and the outside wall some six feet high—was built about the manhole. It was hoped that the flow of the backwater from the river would be stopped to prevent flooding of the park. After an afternoon of backbreaking labor in a downpour of rain, it seemed as if the flow had been stopped. Then at 7 o'clock, when the job was ready to be pronounced successful, little tell-tale trickles of water began to seep from the wall of sandbags. Fifteen minutes later water was oozing in black, dirty streams from all sides. Failure!!! That was even a little more disheartening than the day before when the men carried 1500 sand-bags which they had filled and tied neatly, into the backwater of the river, in an effort to stop a sewer gate. That too, was a failure.

On Monday night and early Tuesday morning the chips were down in the battle against "Old Man River." There were 12,000 feet of shaky sandbagged dikes to hold against the angry surge of the Missouri. Approximately on the anniversary of the flood of 1881, the Missouri River was again on the rampage, threatening to repeat it's act of 62 years ago which inundated the western portion of the city of Council Bluffs.

At 2 a. m. the crest of the flood poured in upon that little group of workers who dared to pit themselves against the fury of the elements. The boys from Denison, who had worked all day, toiled also through the night, and then tumbled into their trucks for a little rest in their sleeping quarters. Some boys worked 28 hours before they returned to the quarters for rest. Everyone was on duty for 22 hours.

WATER PUMPING STATION SAVED FROM FLOOD

The water pumping station in Dodge Fork lies forty feet from the river channel. The electrical pumping equipment in it supplies a city of over 42,000 people. Angry flood waters lapped at the walls. Sand-bag after sand-bag was hurled in the path of the surging waters. The Denison C.P.S. boys worked hard. With them worked the soldiers in the foreground.

That night the river stood at 22.45 feet,—19 feet is flood stage. It was cold, very cold for April. The temperature hovered at 28 degrees with a cold, icy wind sweeping over the water. And the river was at its highest!!! What an eerie feeling grips you as you see that angry torrent racing along waist high to you, just beyond the flimsy bank of sandbags. What if the dike should collapse!!

And so they walked along the dikes,—"conchie" and State Guardsmen side by side—watching for "sandboils." They paraded in the slush and water of the road's muddy edge, testing with their feet the sogginess which warned of an impending breakthrough.

It was at the Dodge Park Pumping Station that the greatest battle was in progress. The pressure of the flood waters upon the walls of this water pumping station, not more than 40 feet from the river channel itself, threatened to engulf the building in which the city's electric pumping equipment is located. But the men and machine beat the river. The pumping station and its valuable equipment, which supplies a city of over 42,000 people, was kept intact. And this was done while the mad river lapped at the walls of the pumping station, while men rushed frantically about, hurling sandbag after sandbag in the path of the onrushing water.

And win they did! City Engineer Jack Boyne estimated that 176,000 sand-bags strengthened by 5500 cubic feet of dirt, bulwarked the precious levee that meant so much to the safety of Council Bluffs. The dirt was hauled in trucks and was carried over an average distance of 1700 feet, he said. No one will ever know how many men toiling away faithfully, while the thousands of Council Bluffs' residents slept so comfortably in their homes, not at all alarmed. Those who slept in security owe much to those men and boys who struggled through the night against enormous odds to save the city from disaster. Sometimes it seemed as if their efforts would fail, but they gritted their teeth and kept on fighting. If they had not done so, a large section of the city would have been flooded in the morning, and hundreds of families would have been driven out of their homes.

Stationed along that levee, which was taking a tremendous pounding, were the Denison boys. They with many others, stood by all night. The men were fed during the night by the Red Cross with an emergency canteen unit. That night took James Rutchmann and his faithful crews of Denison kitchen fellows toward the levee, their truck loaded with food for our boys. Our kitchen force also was on duty 24 hours a day, serving meals any and all times the clock around.

Red Cross disaster units stood by, their boats in readiness in case the flimsy wall of sandbags should give way. But that wall did not give way! It did not yield! "For this time, at least, the gallant men of Council Bluffs, with the 'conchies' and the Guard, were heroic and wonderful in sweet victory. Or maybe Al Strom was right. The prayers might have helped." (Council Bluffs Nonpareil)

In Omaha, on the other side of the big river, it was a different story. Omaha's beautiful $4,000,000 airport lay in ruins; suburban Carter Lake area was abandoned to the Missouri; dike after dike had given away. Approximately 1000 families evacuated in addition to the scores of families which left their homes earlier. Omaha had lost its battle against the "Big Muddy." The "conchies" were more convinced than ever that the prayers really did help!

Do you ask a reward for all this? Yes, there was ample reward. The memories in themselves will repay; but, better than all is the real satisfaction of knowing that a genuine good was accomplished for someone, someone in dire distress.

Did Council Bluffs appreciate it? Yes, it did! Conscientious objectors were never accorded more courtesies and more genuine kindness than by the people, the city officials, the press, and the radio of that city. Even Governor Rickenlooper of the state of Iowa had kinds words and compliments for the "conchies," when he addressed the people of Iowa in a radio address after he visited the scene of the flood.

And for this the men from Camp Denison were happy. Tired? Yes, very tired, but happier than words would express. They do agree with Al Storm—"the prayers might have helped."

Wilbur Nachtigall.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

No. 3 of Series on Devotional Training
THE MISSION OF THE CHURCH, Isa. 42:5-9; 52:7-10.

I. Worship Service:

1. "Hail to the brightness of Zion's glad morning," No. 332, "Jesus shall reign," No. 341. 2. Reading of above scripture passage, prayer and leader's introduction. 3. Talk by the pastor, or a missionary. 4. Offering for foreign missions.

II. Leader's Introduction:

The world asks of the church today: "Canst thou teach us and lead us in such a time as this? There are so many things the world has not learned which are contained in the Word of Life. There is so much hope contained in it which the world so sorely needs. It has the needful light for the gloom and darkness of this day. There is healing in its waters for the ills of our time. It offers the remedy for mistrust, jealousy, ill will, hatred, and enmity between individuals and nations. Its overflowing, life-giving waters will grow an abundance of the finest things in the hearts of man: faith, hope, charity, peace, good will, faithfulness. It is the word of God to man today, and will be His message to man tomorrow, and in the days to come. It is the mission of the church to bring the Word of God to the peoples of the world.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Effectiveness of God's Word, Isa. 55:6-11
2. Expediency of God's Word, II Tim. 3:14-17
3. Endurance of God's Word, I Pet. 1:24,25
4. Messengers of Good Tidings, Luke 10:1-9

IV. For Discussion:

1. How can the church bring the message of Christ to the world? 2. Is every Christian to be a missionary in some way? 3. What is it that the world needs most today?

V. Facts for Study:

The activities of the Christian missionaries have been one of the greatest influences for good will among men. The love of God, exemplified in the lives of men and women in the midst of a world torn by strife and hate and war, makes them ambassadors of good will for Christ. In China and in Japan they have taught Christians to live above the hates which war fosters. In India the work of missions has influenced even the hearts and minds of some of the political leaders. In every country, in every place where men accept the gospel of Jesus Christ, it will bring not only peace in the hearts of men, but also peace between men.

VI. Illustration:

WE CAN—THROUGH CHRIST

Lorenzo Dow was a unique character in early American church work. His preaching methods were unusual, and sometimes dramatic, as the following story shows. He once began to preach by saying: "My text is Philippians 4:13: 'I can do all things.' " Then he extracted a bill from his wallet and said: "Paul, that is simply preposterous. I'll wager this that you can't do anything of that sort." Once more he opened his Bible, and read: "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." When he read this, he returned his bill to the wallet and remarked, "So? Then I withdraw my offer. Of course you can. Anyone can do anything by the help of God."

VII. Food for Thought:

What is the message that the church is to bring to the world today?

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

SHOWING THE SPIRIT OF CHRIST, Phil. 2:5-8

Memory Verse—"This is my commandment, that ye love one another, as I have loved you."

Does your daily life show forth Christ to the world? One day Mr. Moody said to a friend, That man going down the street must have been in the army, or in a military school." "Yes," said the friend, "he was in the army, but how do you know?" "By the way he walks," said Mr. Moody. You can also tell that some people have been with the Lord Jesus by their walk; their daily life shows up to the rest of the world. If we live in Christ, we will show forth His spirit in humility, love, forgiveness, service, and sacrifice.

The Spirit of Humility

F. B. Meyer once said, "I used to think that God's gifts were on shelves, one above the other, and that the taller we grow in Christian character, the more easily we could reach them. I find now that God's gifts are on shelves, one beneath the other, and that it is not a question of growing taller to reach them, but of stooping lower, and that we have to go down in humility, to get His best gifts."

The Spirit of Love

Because He loved others He left heaven's glory and came to earth. Because He loved, He healed the sick, raised the dead, gave sight to the blind, fed the hungry, forgave those who slew Him, and died upon the Cross for all the lost.

The Spirit of Forgiveness

There was once a soldier who had been punished many times for many different offences, all to no avail. The commanding officer despaired of the man's improvement. One day the soldier was again under arrest, and the officer hopelessly asked, "What shall we do with him?" "A fellow officer suggested, "Try forgiving him." The soldier was brought in, and the commanding officer said to him, "We have decided to forgive you for what you have done." Immediately the worthless, hardened soldier burst into tears, saluted and went out to become the best and bravest soldier in his company. Forgiveness did in his life what nothing else could do.

The Spirit of Sacrifice

If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me (Matt. 16:24).

This life of sacrifice is a beautiful life, when the sacrifice is made because of the love of Christ constrains us to do it.

John and Betty Stam laid down their lives in China for Christ. They were put to death by Communists. What was the result of their sacrifice? At a later meeting in one of the churches of America at a memorial service held for them, seven hundred students stood up to consecrate their lives to missionary work wherever God might lead them. Even the Stams' parents could rejoice in the memory of such a sacrifice, consecrated to the Lord.

The Question Bee

(1) How do we deny ourselves? (2) What do we really mean when we say "I'll go, and I'll do, what you want me to do"? (3) Is sacrifice a pleasure or a burden?

The Prayer List

Pray for the hearts of men and women of America to become humble, then ready to serve where the Lord wants them to go.

CORRESPONDENCE

NEBRASKA ALL-MENNONITE SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION

The Nebraska All-Mennonite Sunday School Convention met in the Bethesda Church at Henderson, Nebraska, on Sunday afternoon and evening of May 9, 1943. Four topics were presented during the day, which were based on the convention theme "Training for Worship and Reverence," according to Lev. 20:7,8, and I Peter 1:13-16.

In relating the theme to the home, Mrs. Albert Classen of the Second Mennonite Sunday School of Beatrice, Nebraska, brought out that in our homes we should talk more about God, have Bible stories, prayers, and songs. Pictures portraying the Bible should be in the home.

"Training for Worship and Reverence in the Sunday School (a) the Teacher, (b) the Superintendent," Prov. 9:10, and Titus 2.1-10, was given by Elsie Epp of the Bethesda Sunday School, Henderson, Nebraska. She defined worship as an inward feeling and an outward expression. The need of worship is evident, for two-thirds of the Protestant children from four to fourteen years of age are not in Sunday School. The other one-third spend 12,000 hours in public school and only 170 hours in Sunday School. The child should have an opportunity to express his own ideas.

"Training for Worship and Reverence in the Church (a) the Pastor (b) the Layman," Isa. 6:1-8, and Titus 1:7-9, 15-16, was brought by A. L. Reimer of the First Mennonite Sunday School of Beatrice, Nebraska. The following Bible passages were drawn upon to develop the theme: Ex. 3:5, I Peter 5:8, Luke 22:31, and Rev. 12:12. The speaker stated that we should be examples to our neighbors, that we should arrange our work on Saturday so that one will not be tired on Sunday, and that instead of reading newspapers we should read the Bible and pray.

The last topic, "The Resultant Blessings from Sunday School Work," Eccles. 11:1, and Matt. 10:40-42, was discussed by Rev. H. B. Kliewer of the M. B. Sunday School of Henderson, Nebraska. He mentioned four results from the work: spiritual life, service, fellowship, and reward. The challenge was thrown out that we so live that the resultant blessings will be found in our lives.

Rev. P. K. Regier delivered the two special messages of the convention. In the afternoon his subject was "What is America's Most Fundamental Need Today?" The need is not economic, social, or intellectual, but spiritual—fear of God and reverence in His name. The nation should realize the significance of Ex. 3:5. People have forgotten God.

In the evening Rev. Regier spoke on "Power," based on Zech. 4:6. He pointed out five things that help to give this characteristic to an individual. The five points were as follows: power comes from personality; there is power in an objective; there is power in worship; there is power in a high vision; and there is power in the resurrection. This message was made more impressive by the use of a visual aid that pictured the word "Power."

G. G. Kornelsen of the M. B. Sunday School of Henderson, Nebraska, and Elmer Friesen of the Bethesda Sunday School of Henderson, Nebraska, served as song leaders. Two Sunday Schools from the M. B. Church, three from the General Conference Church, two from the E. M. B. Church, and one from the Illinois Central Conference Church were represented at the convention.

Rev. A. H. Schultz of the E. M. B. Sunday School of Henderson, and H. H. Theiszen of the M. B. Church of Henderson, were elected as new members in the executive committee for the coming year. P. G. Rempel of the E. M. B. Sunday School, Janzen, Ernest Wiebe of the First Mennonite Sunday School of Beatrice, and Ted Schmidt of the Bethesda Sunday School at Henderson, Nebraska, are the other members.

SWISS MENNONITE CHURCH

Alsen, North Dakota

Our Sunday school convention was held in the Rockhill M. B. Church on May 23. We received a blessing from C. H. Suckau's and J. B. Epp's articles in a recent Mennonite, especially, from Brother Epp's article on eternal security. I do not believe that we should argue regarding interpretation of the scriptures. Yet when false teachings creep into our churches should we not take a stand against them? That is what the early Christian leaders did, and that is commended in Rev. 2 and 3. Anyone who is in doubt regarding this teaching should search the scriptures. Here are a few references: James 5:19,20; II Peter 2:15-22: Hebrews 3:12-14, Hebrews 6:4-6; Jude 5:6; Luke 8:6,13; Col. 1:23; II Thess. 2:3; I Tim. 4:1,2,16; Rev. 2 and 3. Our church is looking for a pastor, and our prayer is, "Lord, not my will but Thy will be done." We would appreciate the intercessory prayers of others.

We still have very cold weather for this time (written before May 12) of the year. Growth is very slow. Rain has delayed the spring work.—Corr.

—Mrs. Ferdinand Regier, Sec.-Treas.

« « JOTTINGS » »

—Some of the outstanding speakers at the Kansas Institute of International Relations to be held at Friends University, Wichita, Kansas, will be: Dr. D. W. Kurtz, former President of McPherson College, Dr. No Yong Park, noted Chinese lecturer, Susanne Engelmann, former German educator, Louis Dolivet, Frenchman and Secretary of the Free World Association, Haridas Muzumdar of India, John Price of the British Consulate, Nicholas Vakar, Russian journalist, Carlos Davila, former Ambassador from Chile, and Dr. George Gibson, pastor of the Hyde Park Community Church, Chicago.

—Henry Franzen had been serving the Buhler Mennonite Church and studying for the ministry at Bethel College when he had to go back to Canada. Now he has came back with the possibility of staying if he so desires.

—Brother P. A. Penner has gone to Canada for several months. He plans to attend the conference at Langham, Saskatchewan.

—The Souderton, Pa. Intermediate C. E. Society showed pictures of the life of Jesus on the evening of May 16. Dr. Ella Bauman was the speaker at a recent mother-daughter banquet. "No person that is a conscientious objector will be compelled to change from a peace-time industry to defense work. Quite naturally he will not want to, for he knows that would be inconsistent."—Bulletin

—Rev. Jacob F. Sawatzky has resigned his pastorate of the Mennonite Church at Madrid, Nebraska. He will continue to serve until fall, unless a successor to him is found sooner than that. Brother Sawatzky is the father of Rev. Victor Sawatzky, Butterfield, Minnesota, and of John Sawatzky, who recently graduated from Bethel College and now is studying medicine at Kansas University.

—Roland Bartel, a member of the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church, Goessel, Kansas, was home for a short furlough recently. He is Educational Director of the Crestview, Florida, C.P.S. camp. This camp is jointly operated by the Brethren and the Mennonites. Its main project is sanitation work.

—Brother Erwin Goering, Director of the Weeping Water C.P.S. camp until it was closed recently, now goes to the Camino, California, camp to serve as its director. His wife accompanies him. Both were present at the Bethel College Commencement exercises.

—While Brother Erland Waltner spoke to the Bergfelder Church on a recent Sunday evening, C. B. Friesen brought a German message to the Bethel Church. Brother Waltner also recently conducted special meetings in South Dakota in the interest of the Northern District Peace Committee. "From a scientific investigation of the influence of movies the following facts are noteworthy: 'When a large number of teachers were asked to rate the children of their classes, the summary of the May-Shuttleworth Investigation revealed that movie children had lower deportment records, did poorer work in school, were rated lower in reputation by teachers, were less co-operative and less self-controlled, and were slightly more deceptive and somewhat less stable emotionally than those who do not attend the theater.' " —Bulletin

—First Mennonite Church, Pretty Prairie, Kansas: Memorial services were held on May 18 for Alvin Graber who was killed in a plane crash in Africa. Delegates to the Kansas State Sunday School Convention are: Jonas Albright, Walter J. Graber, Herbert Krehbiel, Mrs. Albert Graber, A. J. Flickinger, Gilbert Stucky, Phil J. Graber Ed Schwartz, Lawrence Schrag, and Sam Schrag. —Willard Wedel, Corr.

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska: "A letter from Bethel College: 'Distance or lack of money should not be determining factors in deciding whether or not to attend Bethel. Both of these are handicaps which can be overcome with extra blessing to the student.' " "The Fellowship (composed of members from the two Mennonite churches and members of the Brethren Church) adopted a C.P.S. gardening project at its last meeting." In this bulletin there are repeated quotations from boys in C.P.S. camps who express their appreciation for the close contact that the church is keeping with them. The church's Bible academy, which will open again next fall, will offer two years of high school work, and in addition Bible and music courses.

—Jacob D. Goering, Assistant and Educational Director of the C. P. S. camp at Lapine, Oregon, writes, "Thank you for reminding me of Dr. Warkentin's call for pictures. I feel fortunate in having two rolls of 35mm films which are good for 36 exposures each . . . out of this deal I should be able to collect some good shots. We have dark rooms, and so I can do my own developing and enlarging. Perhaps, some one individual in several camps could be found willing to take up this project as their private contribution toward the recording and preserving of C. P. S. history. I'll try to do my part."

—Brother J. E. Hartzler writes from Hartford, Connecticut: "We have had a very fine group of seven Mennonite students this year. Good prospects for next year. A new movement is on for Hartford. The Foreign Mission Conference of North America has chosen the Kennedy School of Missions as the training center for all of its future candidates for the India field. The movement will include other fields soon without doubt. This movement is making it very difficult for us to find housing for everyone coming this fall. This will make a great student center for missionaries in preparation. Our Mennonite mission boards would do well to look into this movement."

—In the new Freeman Junior College catalog there is a section under purpose which reads: "Believing that there ought to be a difference in the standards of conduct between the Christian and the non-Christian, the College takes a positive stand against the following: 1. Contracting debts without the knowledge of parents or guardian. 2. Using tobacco or liquor. 3. Visiting commercialized places of questionable amusements, such as, poolrooms, bowling alleys, dance floors, moving picture shows, and roller skating rinks. 4. Profanity, card-playing, gambling. 5. Boisterous conduct in the college halls, on the college campus, and on the streets."

—Bulletin, First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California: "At its regular meeting last Monday the church council voted to call a special meeting of the congregation for the consideration of engaging a director of religious education for the coming year, beginning September 1, 1943." This church has 328 books in its library. The most popular book is said to be How Jesus Dealt With Men by Calkins. A suggested book for children is Joseph Haydn the Merry Little Peasant by Opal Wheelier and Sybil Deucher. It is said to be "a simple, inspiring children's biography of the great musician Haydn."

—Brother Ralph Kauffman of Bethel College gave the Baccalaureate sermon for the graduating class of the Moundridge high school and Brother J. Winfield Fretz gave the Commencement address at Inman.

—Hebron Mennonite Church, Buhler, Kansas: The Candle Lighters recently gave the playlet "Serving Two Masters." Communion was observed on Good Friday morning.

—Upon his request, Brother J. Winfield Fretz has been granted a leave of absence from his teaching duties at Bethel College to do some work that is very close to his heart. He has agreed to carry out for the Mennonite Central Committee a special project for the rehabilitation of Mennonite young people after the war.

—Another number has been added to the Bethel College Choir Series. This number is entitled "Adoration." The words have been translated from the German by C. E. Krehbiel. The music is by N. G. Fankhauser.

—Bulletin, Deep Run, Pa., Mennonite Church: "A Relief Project For Farmers: A suggestion appeared in The Mennonite several months ago which merits our consideration. The suggestion is that the M. C. C. sponsor the raising of milk cows which can be set aside for shipment to Europe as soon as it is safe to do so. The number of cows lost in Europe is tremendous. If, at the end of the war we could send some fine cows to centers of great need, we could perform a great service for humanity. The city churches could raise the money to buy young calves while the farmers of the rural churches could raise them by giving them the proper feed and pasture. If there are people in this congregation who would be willing to cooperate is such a plan, the pastor would be glad to know."

—Winifred Ethel Regier, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. J. Regier, North Newton, Kansas, and Lester Glenn Ewy were married on May 23. The couple will make their home on a farm.

—The National Association of Evangelicals for United Action recently organized itself as a competitor of the Federal Council of Churches.

—It is reported that Brother Franz Albrecht, who was pastor of the First Mennonite Church, Beatrice, Nebraska, for many years is confined to his house most of the time and has to spend much time in bed because of his heart condition. In the last two years he has been at one worship service. Rev. Albrecht is a brother to Abraham Albrecht, pastor of the Mennonite Church at Ransom. He is also the uncle of Mrs. Herbert Miller, Deer Creek, Oklahoma, and Mrs. Marvin Dirks, interned in the Philippines. His daughter, Dora, works in the Mennonite Publication Office.

—Harry Martens, Director of the Colorado C. P. S. camp, was present at the Commencement exercises at Bethel College. Before becoming Camp Director he had charge of the work program at the college. Mrs. Martens, matron of the camp, is reported to have assumed the additional duty of dietician since the former one left.

—Brother L. L. Ramseyer, who gave the Commencement address at Bethel College, reported much rain at Bluffton with part of the campus flooded.

—Rev. William Stauffer, who is traveling for the Home Mission Board, stopped in Newton, took in the Commencement exercises, and then went on to the camp at Colorado Springs.

—Last Saturday morning we saw the aged (will be ninety-two next December 4) Brother C. H. Van der Smissen stepping briskly down the street, evidently out for a health walk. Such vigor of body and mind is unusual.

—Dr. Waldo Wedel, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Wedel, recently returned from an archaeological expedition into the state of Tabasco in Old Mexico. They were successful in unearthing some ancient ceremonial sites, in which they found some interesting jade ornaments. On May 21 Dr. Wedel left for Washington, D. C. where he is Associate Curator of Archaeology of the United States Museum, a branch of the Smithsonian Institute. Dr. Wedel graduated from the Bethel Academy in 1926.

—New members elected to the Executive Committee of the Bethel College Alumni Association are Doris Kellenbarger, Newton, and Alvin Reimer, Inman.

—Rev. H. T. Reimer of Holmesville, Nebraska, writes, "Looking back at the last six months I must say I have much reason to say that I have experienced the loving kindness of the Lord. For although not in the best of health I have much cause to say 'Praise the Lord, O my soul and forget not all His benefits'. Hardly a day passes on which I have any pain, and I can be up about one-half of the time and do some light tasks as book work." Those who know of this brother's cross are inspired by the courage with which he bears it. Surely, it is a witness of the power of Christ. Brother Reimer writes further, "It seems to me that God uses this war as a mighty call for the Christian Church to awake and repent and really serve the Lord." Referring to the emphasis upon goodwill by many ministers even in this time of war he adds. "May the dear Lord keep such spirit as the Church has shown nearly everywhere in this war, and will be of great blessing to all mankind."

—It is reported that Dr. John R. Schmidt may return to the Mennonite colonists in Paraguay this fall. Our people there are in great need of both a doctor and dentist. Recently Dr. Schmidt filled Dr. A. K. Ratzlaff's place at the Bethesda Hospital, while the latter was on vacation.

—The marriage of Garman Wedel and Kathrien Wiens has been announced. Brother Wedel has recently been asked to serve the Emmanuel Church between Moundridge and Canton. Until recently he was enrolled at Bethel as a ministerial student.

—Brother Sam J. Goering and Brother J. D. Graber, who have been appointed as the M. C. C. commissioners to China, will leave for that country sometime in the next months. "Brother Graber will also represent the Mission Board of the Elkart Conference and Brother Goering the General Conference Mission Board. The brethren are commissioned to survey the field for future relief activity and will maintain a contact of spiritual fellowship with Mennonite men in the China Unit."

—Robert Kreider is one of the seven men who have been very carefully picked from all the C. P. S. camps in the country and who are to join the Friends Ambulance Unit in China. Having undergone intensive training these men are now ready to sail at any time, and may have sailed by the time this appears in print. Brother Kreider is the only Mennonite in this group and represents the M. C. C. This will be the first of several groups of men drawn from Civilian Public Service camps, who will join the Friends Ambulance Unit.

—Arthur Balzer, former camper at Weeping Water, and Mrs. Arthur Balzer, high school teacher at Goessel Kansas, will serve as director and dietician of the Lincoln, Nebraska, farm unit. The men in the unit live in a big house about two blocks from the University campus. They have their own cooks with the unit. The work consist of five in agronomy, three in animal husbandry, three in dairy, two in horticulture, four in poultry. Six men are serving at the North Platte experimental farm which is about one hundred miles from Lincoln. A report from the officials at Lincoln state the work of the men is very satisfactory. —M. C. C. C. P. S. News Letter.

—Dr. H. A. Fast, general director of camps, will attend regional C. P. S. conferences to be held on the West Coast and in the Middle West. He recently spent a short while in his home in Newton.

—Delvin Kirchhofer and Dr. Richard Yoder, relief commissioners to Palestine, were to begin the first leg of their long journey via South America during the week of May 16. "When the two commissioners reach the Near East, they will survey the field to discover the needs. Their survey will take them from Ethiopia to Iran, and they will survey all points between in the area. The work of contacting official groups and other relief agencies will aid greatly in making possible a more immediately active relief program when the way is open."

—M. C. C. C. P. S. News Letter

—Jacob Friesen brought the morning sermon to the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota, on May 23. Brother Friesen will spend the summer at Reedley, California, serving as ministerial interne for the First Mennonite Church there.

NATIONALLY KNOWN SINGERS TO APPEAR JUNE 16

As an expression of appreciation to friends who have made gifts of ten dollars or more to Bethel College during this school year, we extend an invitation to attend a concert by the Wings Over Jordan Choral Ensemble. The gift of an extra dollar will admit one extra friend. This "Booster Concert" will be held in Memorial Hall on the College campus at eight-thirty o'clock Wednesday evening, June 16, 1943.

REV. SETTLE

Rev. Glenn T. Settle, originator of "Wings Over Jordan" was born in a log cabin at Reidsville, North Carolina, and received his early education in the state of Pennsylvania. His family settled in Uniontown, Pennsylvania, where he received his high school training, and later married Mary Elizabeth Carter. With his young wife, he came to Cleveland in 1917 and worked as a common laborer until called to the ministry.

He prepared for his vocation by working as a moulder in Cleveland foundries during the day and attending the Moody Bible Institute at night. When his course was completed, he became assistant pastor to Rev. Charles H. Crable, of Mount Haven Baptist Church in Cleveland.

He supplemented his assistant pastorate with employment at the Bissett Steel Company where he was a shipping clerk. In order to gain this position, Rev Settle applied himself to the study of metallurgy and was promoted to superintendent, which post he held until he became pastor of St. John Baptist Church in Painesville, Ohio.

Some time later, Rev. Settle was transferred to the Second Baptist Church in Elyria, Ohio, and it was from that point that he went to Cleveland as pastor of Gethsemane Baptist Church at East 30th and Scovill Avenues in Cleveland in November, 1936.

Upon beginning his duties in Cleveland, Rev. Settle found that Gethsemane Church had a fine choir, and, with this knowledge, he began working for a "Negro Hour" on one of the local radio stations. In his efforts to obtain an audition, Rev. Settle talked to Mr. Worth Kramer, at that time Program Director of WGAR in Cleveland, who granted the Gethsemane Choir an audition. Kramer was laudatory in his praise of the group, and immediately scheduled them on his station. This was in July of 1937.

By January of the following year, Kramer had arranged to have this group present a series of Sunday morning concerts on the Columbia Broadcasting System. This program was launched on January 9, 1938, and has proven the greatest maildrawing attraction of all Columbia sustaining features.

During the period "Wings Over Jordan" has been heard on CBS, Reverend Settle has brought many distinguished speakers. Included among these speakers have been some of the nation's foremost pastors, educators, and professional men and women.

Since "Wings Over Jordan" became a feature of the Columbia network, the choral ensemble has given over 1,000 concerts in principal cities throughout the eastern, central, and southern portions of the country. Most of these concerts are in response to requests of various church groups through the nation, and have been arranged by Alton A. Davis Director of the Concerts Division of "Wings Over Jordan." Reverend Settle has brought the group to a position of national prominence, and, during that time, members of other churches in Cleveland have replaced some of the original Gethsemane parishioners in the choir.

The choir travels from city to city in a modern bus, and housing accommodations are arranged by the group which sponsors their appearance in each of the cities they visit.

Reverend Settle devotes the major portion of his time to business arrangements for "Wings Over Jordan" and to research into the songs which they sing, and the writing of the narrations which he reads during each of their stage programs.

—Joe Lehman of Versailles, Missouri, and Eleannor Loganbill of Hillsboro, Kansas, were married in the Bethel chapel on May 2. Brother Lehman has a fellowship at Washington State College for continuing his work in chemistry.

ELBING CHURCH HAS ANNIVERSARY

The Zion Mennonite Church, Elbing, Kansas, invites friends and former members to a commemoration of the sixtieth anniversary of the organization of the church. The date is June 6. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel will bring the anniversary sermon at 11: a.m. The afternoon program, beginning at 2:30 p.m. will consist of reports on the history and activities of the church and an address by Dr. Melvin Gingerich on "The Future of Mennonitism."

VOLUME LVIII NORTH NEWTON, KANSAS, JUNE 1, 1943 NUMBER 22

Entered at the post office at North Newton, Kansas, as second-class matter. Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in Section 1103. Act of October 3, 1917. Authorized January 22, 1919.

"HI, NEIGHBOR"

We had traveled many miles into Nevada. The towns lay far apart—five times as far as in my home community. Instead of a farmstead on each section one saw none for miles. Seldom did one pass over a creek or river. One felt a little forlorn. Even the towns had that out-in-the-desert atmosphere. They had no garages with expert mechanics or super groceries. Instead of a super-service station, a gas pump stood lazily by some weather beaten building.

In need of drinking water we stopped at one such place. Water was not too plentiful here. I walked toward the building wondering what reception I would be given with my request for water—and water alone, no gas or other service. But when my formal "How do you do" was returned by a cheerful "Hi Neighbor" I felt reassured that all was well. In that "Hi Neighbor" there was friendliness and a willingness to help. It seemed to say, "Yes, we know some of the hardships of life, and we can feel with the other fellow." There and then the desolate country seemed less so, and my heart was refreshed. He had said, "Neighbor."

Neighbor suggests neighborliness with its mutual helpfulness and concern. In the story of the Good Samaritan Jesus linked together indissolubly human need and neighborliness. Neighbor is a warm term of close, strong relationships. However, there is a word that comes even closer to the human heart. This word suggests a loving care and interest that is much greater even. It is the word "brother."

It suggests to one happy and beautiful relationships. It assures one of belonging together. It breathes security and peacefulness. Unlike the cold, formal "Mister" it is a family term. More than that, it assumes a deep religious significance because God is a father to us. When Christians conscious of their common fatherhood and their brotherhood, call each other "brother" they are using a term which can ever serve as a reminder that they are to live with one another as brothers.

A story is told of an immigrant who was learning English and readily sought to apply what he learned. Wishing to comment upon the beautiful attire of his girl friend, he referred to her dress as "night-gown" instead of "evening gown." He did not use the best fitting term.

Which term best expresses that which we as Christians wish to emphasize, "Brother" or "Mister"?

—rw.

THE BETTER WAY

"Ho hum! I guess I had better glance at the Sunday school lesson." The city youth drops the Sunday paper which has taken his best time on Sunday morning and starts off to find the Sunday school quarterly.

"Say, I didn't get to study my lesson," says one country youth to another as the class assembles.

Such and similar instances are all too numerous. Different from such was the studying of two girls observed recently. The teacher had assigned them two questions (shows effort on teacher's part too) to answer. Coming to a minister they asked him for light on the questions and for books that might be referred to. He suggested that they see Rev. Lester Hostetler, the author of the questions. This they did. They were willing to take an hour or more, walk blocks, interview people, and consult books to get the answers to two questions to be answered in Sunday school.

Their answers must have been rich with content for the other pupils and a source of inspiration to the teacher. There is a poor way and an effective way of studying a Sunday school lesson. These two girls chose the better way.—rw.

CREATIVE LOVE

The God who makes a seed to hold
Potential life within its heart,
Inspires the potter's hand to mold
Creatively, ceramic art,
Or suits the chilling air of spring
To tender lamb's inherent need,
Whose master-artistry can fling
Bright color on a wayside weed,
Bestows no less of thoughtful care
Upon his own created race;
He waits for mankind everywhere
To turn from self, and seek his face.

HOME MISSIONS

A. J. Neuenschwander, Secretary

Rev. William H. Stauffer Does Field Work

Today the term home mission work covers a wide range of fields and activities. Some years ago it usually meant a small, white, simple, windswept, frame church building on some plain. It still means that but vastly more. The Home Mission Board felt the leading of the Lord to enter other avenues of service.

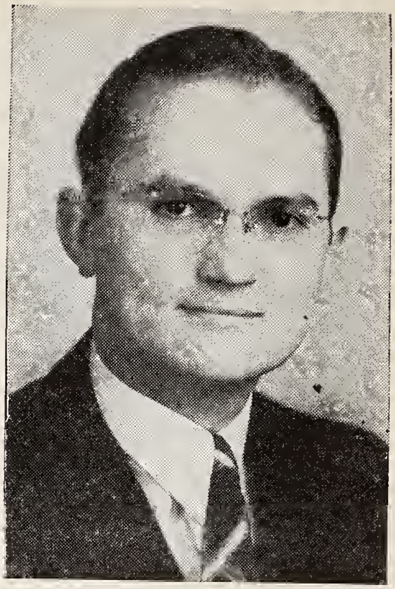
Visitation Work

The large number of General Conference and other Mennonite Conference young men in C.P.S. camps and in detached service were in need of regular visitation and spiritual care. District conferences were encouraged to make arrangements so that those within their geographic areas would be visited. Our country is great, and many are still untouched. For this and many other reasons it was decided imperative to engage a field worker, one of whose duties would be to look up these young men and bring to them spiritual ministry. Rev. Stauffer has been doing this work about six weeks, and he reports that his visitation work is greatly appreciated and should have been arranged for long ago.

Colonization Work

For want of a better term the word colonization is used. The concern of the board is that we conserve our people for Christ, the Church, and the soil. To do this in the best way, rural people need to learn to regard the farm as one of the best places to establish a home and raise a family. Many people fail on the soil because they seek to get every penny possible off the land. This impoverishes the soil, and soon the family, unable to make a decent living, moves to the city, discouraged and defeated. Another one of Rev. Stauffer's tasks is to encourage our people to live well on the land and not off the land. Proper spiritual shepherding of our rural congregations is to encourage them to appreciate and evaluate the freedom, liberty, and advantages of living out in nature—in God's out-of-doors.

There is also a keen concern that someone look into the matter of finding available land where homes can be established and congregations formed, where land is not so expensive. The United States Department of Agriculture has long noticed that in many communities Mennonites succeeded because of their industry, thrift, and faith. The officers of the department are glad to cooperate in locating less expensive land, in helping worthy people to establish homes on such tracts, and to make such suggestions as to the particular type of farming that is most likely to succeed.



WILLIAM H. STAUFFER

One need not talk long with Brother Stauffer until one becomes aware of his fondness for the quiet, simple, solid life of the farm. Animated in conversation he brings a message of hope to the young men in C.P.S. camps whom he visits. His experience includes contributing to a farm paper, speaking on rural themes, ten weeks travel in Europe in 1939 as delegate to the World Youth Conference, years in the pastorate of the Sugarcreek, Ohio, Mennonite Church, and before that graduation from Bluffton College and Oberlin Seminary. The Mennonite Church in Upper Milford, Pa., is his home church.

Cooperating with the Mennonite Central Committee plans for larger colonization efforts after the war is still another duty of Rev. Stauffer. We live in a time of Mennonite cooperation; may this period be long and fruitful.

Young Men and the Future

Many of the young men now in C.P.S. camps, or in detached service, and some in the army are dreaming of a day when they with their life-companion might start out for themselves. Plans are being made to take care of such who desire to settle on the soil and make their contribution there. Others may feel the call to do reconstruction and relief work, while still others may desire to do evangelization work. Rev. Stauffer is to take time and counsel with each man and help him find his God-given task in the Master's vineyard.

Conference and Congregation Visitation

As Rev. Stauffer travels about he works out his itinerary, so that he can attend district conferences, visit individual congregations, and contact the C.P.S. camps and detached units. He has already visited the Eastern District Conference and he plans to attend the Northern District Conference June 5-9, and some weeks later he is to be at the Pacific District Conference. It is hoped that doors will be opened for him to lay this concern from the Lord on the hearts of the people.

Conservation work for the Lord is most definitely home mission work, as well as the former type of establishing a church in a small, pioneering community. Jesus reproved the Pharisees for being so set in some things and neglectful in others. Therefore He said in Luke 11:42 "these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone."

Why Read The Mennonite?

A good reason why The Mennonite should be read in every home is that it aids in bringing our thoughts into line with the thinking of Christ. The Apostle Paul speaks of "bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ (ICor. 10:5.) The Bible is of course, the body of literature preeminently qualified to help us think God's thoughts after Him, and for that reason should be read every day. A careful examination of our church paper will reveal how thoroughly it is colored by the "obedience to Christ." It will also be found to be of great aid in "bringing every thought. . to the obedience of Christ." I feel that it is lacking among some. I see it in the picture home of the congregation is thereby doing a great deal to Christianize life among us and about us.

RELIEF

Two Workers Depart for Near East

On May 16 Brother Delvin Kirchhofer of Bluffton, Ohio, and Dr. C. Richard Yoder of West Liberty, Ohio, left the Akron, Pa., office bound for Jerusalem, Palestine. They comprise the nucleus of a unit which in the future the Committee will expand as opportunities permit. In the Near East these two workers will study needs and make necessary connections with the proper agencies and governments to permit service to refugees and any war sufferers.

The journey to Palestine will be made via New Orleans, Valpariso, Buenos Aires, and South Africa.

Two Workers Appointed for China

During the May 7, 1943, meeting of the executive members of the Mennonite Central Committee Brethren J. D. Graber, missionary on furlough from India, and Samuel J. Goering, missionary on furlough from China, were given their charge as commissioners of the M.C.C. to China. They are scheduled to leave as soon as final preparations are completed. Their going to this country in the Orient is in the two-fold interest of relief and mission work which is, the Lord willing, to be promoted there by the Mennonite Church.

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

REHABILITATION

In these abnormal times we hear a great deal about the matter of rehabilitation in the post-war world. To rehabilitate means to reinstate or to restore to a former condition. We know very well that millions of people are at the present time losing precious religious values such as the sacredness of home and family life, the virtue of honesty, the power of purity and confidence in the redemptive power of Christ's love to overcome hatred, destruction, and violence. In the material realm millions are today enjoying war-time prosperity. There are, however, several thousand who are retaining many of the religious values but losing heavily in material matters. This is the price they choose to pay to keep their consciences clear.

Mennonite Boys

At the present time there are about 2,500 boys from the various branches of Mennonites in the Civilian Public Service program. It is estimated that there are an additional 2,500 of our boys in non-combatant service and a third, 2,500, in regular military service. Those in the latter groups are receiving regular military compensation while those in the former must pay their own expenses or have the church bear the cost for them. In any case it is time for us to consider ways of rehabilitating these men after they are released from national service. How can they be reinstated in their homes, churches, and jobs without too great permanent loss? Is it any of the church's responsibility to look after this matter?

Galatians 6:2

In Paul's letter to the Galatians he answers this question in the affirmative and gives his reason for it. Often only the first part of Paul's instructions are quoted: "Bear ye one another's burdens." But there is another equally important part to the quotation which concludes: "and so fulfill the law of Christ." A true characteristic of Christians is not that they are without burdens but that they share them.

Mennonites today ought to be thinking about this responsibility. Both in the local congregations and in the Mennonite Church as a whole. Will we be able and willing to help our young men find jobs, secure farms, establish homes, and become active in the church? To rehabilitate our young people after the war is a practical home mission problem of the first magnitude. Every member of the Mennonite brotherhood should make this a matter of prayerful concern and group discussion.

HANDMAIDENS

(This is the third of a series of articles written by Mary Shideler about the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital where she is a volunteer worker. Her regular vocation is being a pastor's wife)

The young woman who enters the nursing profession has open before her two widely different kinds of training. The first, leading to graduation as a Registered Nurse, is widely known in this country: the candidate has prepared for the course by at least four years of high school, if not two or more years of college. She takes three years of the most rigorous training, at the end of which she is prepared to work in the operating room, the physical therapy department, and the laboratory, as well as the sickroom. She has a thorough command of anatomy, materia medica, and a dozen other branches of knowledge that relate to the care and healing of the sick.

The Deaconesses in our hospitals give themselves to those in need as Christ gave himself in loving service. Like the grain of wheat that falls into the ground and dies, they die unto self and bring forth much fruit. Shown above is Sister Sarah Rempel, who has been head Deaconess at the Mennonite Hospital, Beatrice, Nebraska, for many years. She is here shown holding the little daughter of one of the former students who chose marriage instead of nursing as her career. A total of 158 babies were born in this hospital last year. Sister Sarah has made glad the hearts of many parents by giving efficient and loving care to hundreds of babies.

This type of nursing has developed within the last hundred years. The modern, highly scientific medicine has demanded nurses whose training is of the same intensive kind. But from the beginning of the human race another type of nursing has existed, practiced then and now by women whose children or men-folks are ill, by the Sisters of the religious orders that are dedicated to that task. Wherever a daughter has cared for her feeble mother, or a child tended a baby for an hour, there has been nursing. And through these centuries, mankind has learned that the laying on of gentle hands, the presence of a woman devoted to God and concerned with all her heart for the welfare of another, can often achieve more than all the technical skill and medicines known to science.

Nursing, at best, is hard work, physically and emotionally. It requires fortitude to live serenely among the sights and sounds and smells of illness. It takes a strong back to move a heavy man who cannot turn himself in the bed. It takes strong hands, as well as gentle ones, to rub aching backs or knead the tight muscles of a leg into relaxation. Furthermore, these things need to be done by one who is trained to do them. So routine a task as bathing a patient may be exceedingly dangerous if the person is ill with a heart disease, or has just had a major operation. A nurse must be able to glimpse the first signs of restlessness or fear in a patient, and be able to combat them; it is part of her responsibility as a nurse.

A trained—registered—nurse can fulfill these demands, but it is important to realize that others can do as well, and that in a very few places in this country, such training is given. The "Community Nurses" do not replace Registered Nurses; there is no conflict between them because they are differently trained for different jobs.

The need for two kinds of nurses is not new; it existed for years before the present war highlighted it, and introduced, toward its solution, the Nurses' Aide. The small hospitals—for the most part in small towns and serving rural communities for many miles around—have always been handicapped by their inability to secure the services of graduate nurses of a desirable type. The pay has necessarily been low; the social opportunities have been poor in comparison to those of the cities. The Nurses' Aides, of the highest importance in large and urban hospitals, are not trained to meet the needs of the small hospitals of the country. That system was tried out at the Mennonite Deaconess Hospital in Beatrice from 1933 to 1937. But at the end of four years, with the needs of the community and hospital in mind, a new training course was instituted. The first class of six students was enrolled on April 1, 1940.

During the two years that the candidate is in training, she has a full schedule of practical, bedside nursing in a thirty-bed hospital, under the supervision of graduate, registered nurses who are, as well, Deaconesses. In addition she is required to attend day or evening classes.

This is not a glorified form of Nurses' Aide; this is nurses' training: the graduate able to report symptoms clearly, to give hypodermic injections as ordered, to assist in the nursery, to administer diet therapy, to perform the standard nursing procedures. The community nurse is prepared for work in small hospitals, doctor's offices, homes, any institution where trained workers in first aid are needed.

There are no rigid requirements for entrance into this school it has never been found that the high school graduate is necessarily a better nurse than a woman without that background. There must be a return to the emphasis on the maternal quality that makes nursing such a splendid vocation for women. The hand-maidens of the Lord are those who work with their hands, and it is those whom we seek to enroll. Innately the modern glamour girl is the Mennonite maid of yesterday. She finds satisfaction and meaning in life from the hard, honest toil, and service to those whose need is very great. She is in the Valley of Jehosophat—the valley of decision—here is a work for her to do, and a banner for her to follow.

For further information, write Mrs. Ursula Frantz, Mennonite Deaconess Hopital, Beatrice, Nebraska.

Food for our Boys in Camp

"What shall I plan for dinner today?" This question is a familiar one to every housewife, faced with the daily problem of providing appetizing, wholesome, well balanced meals for her family. Multiply the average sized family by thirty, add in the problem of satisfying a much larger variety of tastes and appetites, and the fact that there is no pantry stocked with a season's supply of home canned fruits and vegetables and home cured meats, supplemented in season with an abundance of fresh garden produce, etc., and you get an idea of the problem facing the dietitian in a typical C.P.S. camp. In common with home meal planners she must plan her menus to provide adequate meals with due regard to economy. Wartime food shortages and rationing restrictions further complicate her problem of providing an abundance of wholesome, appetizing, nourishing food for our boys in camp.

A number of home communities have shown their interest in helping with the food problem in past months by giving home canned and dried fruit and vegetables to the camps. Suggestions have come to the Mennonite Central Committee that a great deal more would be gladly done along this line if there were an organized plan outlined to bring to our people the need for such contributions and to give direction to their efforts.

In line with these suggestions a plan has been worked out to encourage and stimulate the gathering and processing of available food supplies in our various communities. This plan was approved at the meeting of the Mennonite Central Committee held April 2, 1943.

What The Camps Can Use

A survey has been made of the camps now in operation, and on the basis of past experience it is estimated that during the period of a year two thousand men in camp will consume the equivalent in canned goods of:

135,000 quarts of canned peaches, prunes, plums, apricots, pears, cherries, berries, tomatoes, apple sauce, and other fruits and juices;
95,000 quarts of canned peas, beans, corn, carrots, beets, and other vegetables;
20,000 pounds of dried prunes, raisins, apples, pears, apricots, figs, and other dried fruits;
30,000 pounds of dry and dried beans, peas, corn, rice, and other vegetables.

Consumption of canned goods will, of course, decrease proportionately as dried foods consumption increases.

O.P.A. regulations provide that home processed fruit and vegetables may be given away by the consumers who process them, provided that "no consumer may give away a total of more than fifty quarts of processed foods in any one year, under this section." (Ration Order 13, Article II, Section 2.8) This covers home canned fruit and vegetables given to C.P.S. camps or other charitable institutions.

Suggested Ways of Operating

It is suggested that this project might be carried out through the following channels: sewing circles, and ladies' aid organizations, junior sewing circles, women's missionary societies, young people's organizations, any other suitables organization or group plan, individual efforts. When any individuals or groups decide that they would like to help along in this project by canning and drying fruit and vegetables, they will find several different plans which can be followed. Two which have been successfully used are mentioned here:

1. Canning Bees. Groups of interested persons would come to central places provided with facilities for preparation and processing food to put up fruit and vegetables which have been collected in quantities. After appointing some capable individual as group supervisor or leader they would work together to prepare and process the food. It would be the leader's responsibility to see that the food is properly prepared, adequately sterilized by heating at proper temperature for sufficient length of time, and properly sealed. It might be wise in some cases to have the person appointed as leader to serve for the entire season; she could then make it a point to get the government bulletins which are available giving helpful suggestions on the processing of canned and dried foods. The canning bee is probably the most satisfactory plan in cases where quantities of foodstuffs are to be processed at one time and adequate facilities done along with regular home work with little extra for group efforts are available.

2. Home Canning. This makes possible the utilization of small amounts of produce and can often be effort. It is surprising how much can be accumulated during a canning season by putting up an extra quart here and another there, and this would involve very little extra cost.

M.C.C. Will Furnish Jars

The Mennonite Central Committee will arrange to furnish the required fruit jars for canning of foods to be contributed. This will be done through camps or wholesale grocers located near the various communities, or through the purchase of a large quantity of jars which will then be distributed from central points to the various communities. If your own jars are used they should be new jars, and they will be returned or replaced when empty, whichever is most practical. Groups or individuals wishing jars should write to the Akron office stating number of jars desired. All canning should be done in half gallon jars or larger except such starchy vegetables as corn, peas, etc., for which quart jars are recommended.

Sugar for this canning can usually be obtained by applying to local ration boards and explaining the purpose for which it is to be used. The Mennonite Central Committee will be glad to help in working out problems whlch may arise in this connection.

Collection Centers and Distribution to Camps

The constituencies supporting the camp program will be divided geographically into areas, and collection centers will be designated to receive the food contributed and prepare it for shipment to the camps. These centers will be in charge of individuals who will keep record of and report to the M.C.C. office at Akron the quantities and kinds of foods received. From this information decision will be made as to the camps which can use the food contributed to best advantage in view of their needs and circumstances.

Distribution will be by the most economical means available. Trucks will be utilized for the nearer camps where possible, and where shipment is to remote camps it would be expected to ship by rail in carload lots. With this in mind all cartons in which fruit jars are purchased should be carefully saved for packing of canned goods. Added insulation around jars would be advisable. Packing should be under supervision of individuals who are experienced in preparing for rail shipments where possible.

Things To Remember

1. Only Good Quality of Food is worth the effort to procure and process and the expense of distribution. We want to be good stewards of what is entrusted to us and this requires that contributions be made with a view to the fullest use in camp.

2. Appetizing Food makes for happy and contented boys in camp. The most appetizing food is that which is properly prepared. A high standard should be maintained in processing the foods being canned and dried for the camps.

3. Government Canning Bulletins emphasize that the pressure cooker is the safest for canning non-acid vegetables. Botulism poisoning can result from insufficient sterilization of non-acid foods. Where the hot water bath is used for canning non-acid foods be sure to follow reliable time charts for processing to insure thorough sterilization of the food.

4. Losses from Spoilage are frequently due to lack of complete sterilization of jars and inadequate sealing. Do not be afraid of getting the lids on too tightly; the boys in camp will find ways to get the food out if it is well preserved. Use only perfect jars, lids, and rubbers.

5. Foods that can be dried can be much more economically shipped than canned goods. These include apples, prunes, cherries, raisin grapes, peaches, apricots, pears, corn, green beans, green peas, etc.

6. Free Government Bulletins giving detailed instructions and suggestions are available for the asking. These cover both canning and drying. A suggestive list of recommended bulletins will appear in church papers.

7. As Much Variety As Possible in foodstuffs is greatly appreciated by the camps. Mass feeding at best presents unusual problems in the way of providing appetizing meals, and a considerable variety goes a long way to solve these problems.

8. Large Jars in which certain foodstuffs have been purchased can used if they use standard sized screw top lids and can be well sealed. Extra large jars may require longer to properly sterilize the contents of the jars.

9. "Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work." II Cor. 9:7,8.

Certificates for Food Donations

The Mennonite Central Committee will arrange to issue certificates to individuals or groups who desire it. For this purpose the following policy of evaluating food contributions will be followed:

Since wholesale food prices vary in different sections and it is contemplated to distribute the foods contributed to camps which may be considerably removed from the locality where it was produced, it is though best to establish a basic uniform scale for evaluating food donations. This will be based on average prices being paid by camps on April 1, 1943, and will be published in church papers. Adjustments to this scale will be published as conditions may require.

It will be appreciated if interested groups will write to this office, giving an estimate of the number of quarts of fruit and vegetables they expect to contribute. Further information will be given upon request, and suggestions will be gladly received. Address all communications to HOME CANNING AND DRYING PROJECT, care of Mennonite Central Committee, Akron, Pennsylvania.

Death Because of Stupidity

At sunrise on January 12 there was great lamentation and loud weeping in one section of our Christian village near Jagdeespore mission station. What had happened? Mala, wife of Poinka and mother of four small children is dead. Again, what had happened? She was perfectly well last night.

Then the story was told. Brother Poinga is very poor. There is no bedstead in the home. All sleep on the ground. At about 3 a.m. the young mother stretches out her arm. Something stings her in one finger. She awakens her husband. Poinka gets up lights a little piece of wood and looks around. Nothing can be seen. Her pain seemingly subsides. All go to sleep again. Soon the young mother feels a stiffness all over her body.

She awakens her husband again. They now suspect snakebite. He goes and calls his neighbor, one of our leading Christian brothers. The brother gets up and takes his lantern and goes to Poinka's home. He also suspects snakebite. So he tells them to take his lantern (Brother Poinka owns no lantern nor lamp) and to go to the hospital to Dr. Roy (Dr. Dester is not at home). Poinka promises, and the good neighbor goes to his own home again.

But Poinka does not do according to his promise. He thinks all will become better by itself. The poor young mother's body gets stiffer. Her pain increases. At sunrise her spirit departs, leaving the bewildered husband with four small children behind. The sorrow is great.

But was there no help available? Yes, the hospital with a good doctor and efficient staff is only a few hundred yards away; yet sheer stupidity kept our brother from making use of this opportunity. And further, when we went to investigate the house we found several holes in the ground (floor) which Poinka and his wife had neglected to plaster shut. Holes in floor and wall are very dangerous signs in an Indian hut because of snakes and scorpions. The hole near the place where the young mother had slept was dug up, and a poisonous snake (Krait) was found—certainly the murderer. Yet it could all have been prevented, if those holes had not been tolerated. Even after the bite there was plenty of time to go to the doctor because a Krait bite does not work as rapidly as a Cobra bite. Yet the intellectual alertness was not there to prevent the tragedy. Yes, the poor in India are poor in more ways than economically.

DAILY DEVOTIONAL MESSAGES

By Jacob D. Goering

JUNE 8: ". . . . Lord teach us to pray." Luke 11:1.

Jesus' disciples began to sense their deep need for a closer and more meaningful communion with the Father. As they mirrored their life in the life of Jesus their inadequancy was dreadfully apparent. They turned to Jesus as one who could teach them to pray. His very life was evidence that he had contact with that Power which makes it possible to live above outer circumstances. They saw Jesus find strength and joy in God's Will. Our generation has all but lost the art of effective prayer. We need to ask Him again and again to teach us to pray. But always the request presupposes a desire to pray sincere enough to assure a following through on the part of him who prays.

JUNE 9: ". . . . . Ask and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you." Luke 11:9.

This passage and the following verses reveal at least two profound truths concerning the salvation of man. Firstly, before the kingdom can be experienced there must be that sincere desire on the part of man. He must ask, seek, and knock: Secondly, the assurance that God stands by, ready to respond at the first opportunity. If we but desire—really desire—to live according to the Will of God, we will not be disappointed. Again, the desire must be all-consuming.

JUNE 10: ". . . . a house divided against a house falleth." Luke 11:17.

These words were spoken in answer to the charge that Jesus was casting out devils through Beelzebub. No, we cannot successfully row both up stream and down at the same time. Many are in turmoil because they pay lip service to one cause, but their lives and actions serve another thereby denying their claims. Such folks are truly a "house divided" and will surely fall. They suffer frustration and are actually "lost" in utter confusion. The only adequate remedy is to give life direction by a complete surrender of self, and unflinching commitment to Christ.

JUNE 11: ". . . Yea rather, blessed are they that hear the word of God and keep it." Luke 11:28:

A certain woman upon being impressed with Jesus' teaching and preaching, proceeded to eulogize His heritage. But Jesus immediately corrects her and teaches what a blessed and virtuous life consists of. One's background of itself is neither a blessing nor a curse, but is important only as it is used to influence the present and shape the future. It can be used or may need to be overcome. For most of us our heritage should help us greatly to "hear the word of God and keep it." But it is the quality of life which comes from hearing and doing the Word which determines the extent of our blessedness.

JUNE 12: "This is an evil generation; they seek a sign and there shall no sign be given it, but the sign of Jonas the prophet." Luke 11:29.

Throughout the ages men have been prone to base their belief on the spectacular, on a sign. Yet the history of God's people shows clearly that those who lived most abundantly are those who have experienced God in the everyday affairs of life. Jesus was not pleased with those who looked for a sign. Only a stable faith based on the ongoing goodness and love of the Father is adequate to meet the issues of our day. The only sign for this generation is "the Son of man." Do we accept him and act on his standards?

JUNE 13 "No man when he hath lighted a candle putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel, but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light." Luke 11:33.

The principle of sharing is here again powerfully proclaimed. Light must not be hoarded or used selfishly, but should shine for all. Light may be given through various channels such as teaching, preaching, or perhaps indirectly through economic support. In this sensate and materialistic age, our people have not remained unaffected by its influence, but we too tend to use economic goods selfishly. Economic support may be one of the best ways to let our light shine. Have we been faithful in standing by our churches, schools, colleges, hospitals, and other institutions? Let us not be guilty of hiding our light under a bushel. Rather directly or indirectly let it shine forth so that they which come in may see the light.

JUNE 14: ". . . . Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter, but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness." Luke 11:31.

Putting up a false front is a sin many of us are guilty of. How easy it is to say one thing for good effect, but inwardly mean the opposite. We say complimentary things to our neighbors' face, but curse him to his back. Hypocrites! We "pass over the judgment and love of God." Christ's word to such deceitful living was "Woe unto you." A beautiful life seen from the outside comes only from beautiful thoughts and a beautiful inward life.

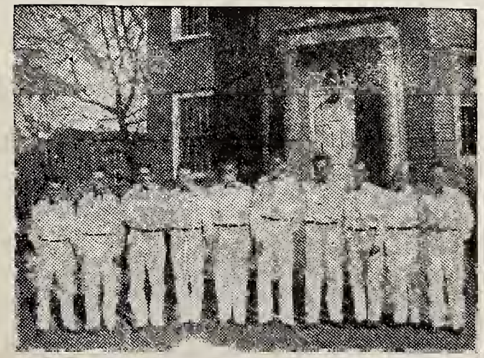
Our Work At Denver Hospital

By George H. Fadenrecht

Colorado Psychopathic Hospital has about eighty beds, although the census often runs around one hundred patients. It has three stories above the ground. On the first floor are the various offices, resident doctors' apartments, occupational therapy, and a class room. On the second floor are the men's wards and on the third floor the women's wards. Second and third floors are arranged almost identically, each floor being divided into two wards, the convalescent and the disturbed. Between these wards there is a vast difference. The convalescent ward has regular light fixtures; the furniture is quite homelike. It is arranged for individual privacy if desired by having several individual rooms and the sleeping wards divided by partitions. As already mentioned, the disturbed ward is quite different. The lights are built into the walls and ceiling, covered by a heavy wire reinforced glass. The furniture for the most part is quite crude as it meets with much abuse. The individual rooms are one sick room and four seclusion rooms. The seclusion rooms are for patients who are dangerous and combative, or who are otherwise unfit to be on the ward.

This hospital is noted for not using restraints such as straight jackets, handcuffs, and the like. The only time restraints are used is when a patient will not stay in a pack. Then ten inch cotton bands are tied from one side of the bed to the other side over the pack blankets. We do not consider the seclusion rooms as restraints as the patients are perfectly free within their confines. Unless they are destructive they have their beds in these rooms.

Our work is chiefly with the men patients although we must go to the women's wards on emergency calls. Our usual work consist of taking temperatures, giving baths, running continuous tubs, shaving packs checking clothing, assisting with physical examinations, taking patients to occupational therapy or to clinic. For recreation we take patients for walks or to the gym or out to play ball.



The Men in Hospital Uniforms

The work is extremely interesting and all of us like it and feel it is worthwhile.

At Work With the Criminally Insane

By Melvin Yoder

The Lima State Hospital is unique and different from that of other types of state hospitals that C. O.'s are working in all over the United States. I am not sure, but I believe that this is one if the few—if not the only one of its kind—that has C. O.'s working in it. Most of the state hospitals are for the mentally sick. This hospital that we are working in is a hospital for the criminally insane. All of the patients that are admitted to his institution have committed some criminal act. They include about every type of criminal act that one can think of such as murder, robbery, intent to kill and etc. However, one thing to keep in mind is that the courts have ruled that each one of these persons were insane at the time that they committed the act.

The hospital attempts to cure as many of its patients as possible and then return them into society as useful and healthy citizens. There are resident doctors located here whose sole purpose or duty is to try and bring about cures in the patients of this hospital. One could cite many cases where a person was committed to this hospital completely insane, but over a period of time, which varies, they have been set free as cured and have performed valuable service to their community.

Along this line one wonders at the type of treatment the patients receive. There are those in this hospital that are so mentally weak that they are helpless and need help all the time. Then there are those who seem just as normal mentally as anyone a person would meet on the outside. Those that seem to be able to take care of themselves are given work and are allowed more freedom than the others. However, a great percentage of the patients are kept locked up all the time and have to be handled like children. The rest are given various duties to perform to occupy their time.

I will attempt to give a brief idea of what types of work some of the patients are doing and the relationship of this work to the ten men connected with this C. P. S. unit. This hospital has a very large farm connected with it. A great percentage of the farm work is done by patients with paid employees to act as supervisors. One of the ten C. O. boys working at this hospital has one of the boys as supervisor in the dairy barn. He helps with the work and also supervises the work that the patients do. A lot of the field work is actually done by patients as tractor drivers, teamsters, etc. There is also plenty of work to be done in beautifying the grounds, taking care of the gardens, greenhouse, etc. Here also are two boys of this C. P. S. unit who work along with the patients and help them to learn to do useful things to the best of their ability.

Not only do a lot of the patients work outside but just as great a number work inside of the hospital doing the many jobs that are necessary to keep such a place running smoothly. One of the biggest jobs on the inside that needs to be taken care of every day is the preparing of meals for the 1,150 patients (1000 men and 150 women), plus the employees that number close to 125. Almost all of the work in the kitchen is done by patients with employees acting as supervisors. One of the C. O. boys works in the employee's cafeteria where he supervises the work that the patients are doing.

All of the cleaning work—washing windows, sweeping floors, washing walls and etc.—is done by the patients with the different ward attendants supervising this work and seeing that it is done properly. Four of the C. O. boys are engaged in this type of work on the wards. The four boys that are doing this type of work are called attendants. Not only do they supervise the cleaning of the wards, but they also are always in the ward watching the patients and keeping order among them. As stated before there are some patients that are not only mentally but physically sick. It is therefore up to the attendants to see that their personal needs are always taken care of. The job of attendant is by far the largest and the most necessary job in the hospital. The patients definitely need some one to watch over them and help them at all times.

Also in connection with the hospital are the shops. Here they take the men of better mental capacity and try to teach them certain crafts and arts. Splendid work is being done here as one can see when he examines the finished products that are on sale at the gift shop. More then one patient has learned a useful trade here in the shop that has helped him obtain work after he was pronounced cured and put back in society again. Here also is felt the influence of us C. O. boys as one of our group is acting as instructor and advisor of these men.

So far I have mentioned only nine men of our group and what they are doing. The tenth person of our group works in the office.

One can easily see that this hospital is more then just a place to lock up people that have committed some crime. It is also a place that tries to help them to do useful things while they are here and if possible to cure as many as they can. That then in brief is the story of our hospital and some of the work that we ten boys are doing here. All ten of us boys feel that we are doing something worthwhile to relieve some of the suffering and pain that are present in our world today.

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

No. 1 of Series on Mennonite Principles Based on Booklet "Our Mennonite Heritage" by E. Yoder

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "My faith looks up to Thee," No. 150, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," No. 202. 2. Reading of I Peter 3:8-22. 3. Roll-call answered by Bible verses on "love." 4. Offering for Home Missions.

II. Leader's Introduction:

Our Christianity if it is to grow needs expression in word and deed. The opportunity to speak of their convictions and of their aspirations is offered to young people in C.E. meetings. We get help through discussions in clarifying our thoughts and grow in knowledge of the Bible and the Christian way of living. We gain enthusiasm and inspiration through fellowship. The study of our Mennonite heritage wil help us to appreciate the consecration of our fathers and mothers to following the teachings of Christ in their daily life. It will help us to think and to make these convictions more deeply our own. It may well serve as a tie that binds us together in a common way of living for a testimony that we as a church may give in these days when the life and the light that Jesus came to bring is so badly needed in the world.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. What Mennonites Hold in Common with Other Denominations
2. Contributions of Mennonites
3. The Simple Life and Its Meaning
4. Non-conformity to the World, and Its Meaning
5. Brotherly Love and Mutual Aid, and Their Meaning
6. Emphasis on the Christian Home, and Family Life

IV. For Discussion:

1. How can we practice "the simple life" today? 2. How should we express non-conformity to the world today? 3. Are our Mutual Aid societies an adequate expression of brotherly love? Should we have an organization to aid in funeral arrangements? 4. How can we find time for our family life today?

V. Facts for Study:

"Their (the Mennonites) emphasis has been on the idea that to be a Christian means to follow

Christ in His way of life, and that His way of life covers the whole of life. It is necessary therefore to bring the whole of life and all its relationships under the control of Christ as Lord. Every activity of life must be integrated with religious experience; it must be "in the Lord!"

The Mennonites have always been a very practical people. They have insisted that Christianity must be lived, not just talked about. They have taken Christ to mean what he said. They have felt that to be His followers men must walk where He walked in ways of love and service, live as He lived, do as He did.

VI. Illustration:

WHAT CAN THE LOVE OF A BROTHER ACCOMPLISH?

Sixty years ago the natives of the Garo hills of Assam were wild, dangerous head-hunters. The British government at one time considered seriously sending an army into those hills to destroy that tribe. Missionaries asked if they might have the opportunity to go into those hills and try love. Now, it is said, it is safer to walk the Garo hills than New York City streets. The missionaries did not go into those hills to change the environment or their neighbors. They went into the hills to change the hearts of the Garo tribesmen, and when that had been accomplished with Christ's help, the environment and the neighbors were also changed.

VII. Food for Thought:

As man by his inventions has made the whole world into one neighborhood, the Christian way of living would make it into a brotherhood.

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

OUR NEWSPAPERS

Main Topic: How to Read our Newspapers Eph. 4:25-27,29-32.

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "Where cross the crowded ways of life," No. 222; "Master, speak! thy servant heareth," No. 219.
2. Reading of main topic, and prayer.
3. Talk on "Propaganda in Our Newspapers" by a qualified, outside speaker.
4. Offering for Publication Board

II. Leader's Introduction:

Perhaps one class of papers should be called attention to as also belonging to the newspapers, namely, our church papers. They bring us the news about our own denominational work—about the progress and plans and difficulties on the mission field, editorials of vital interest on questions and problems of the day as seen in the light of religion, correspondences that throw light on the life of our churches, programs and reports of conferences and conventions which are the hub of our church work, food for the growth of our spiritual man through the articles and meditations of church leaders. They are a bond of fellowship between our widely scattered church groups which no member should try to do without. Our younger members need to read them to become "integrated" into the life and work of our denomination.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Fulfilling God's Word.	Exod. 24:3-8
2. Reading the resolution.	2 Kings 23:1-3
3. News from the Lord.	Hab. 2:2-4
4. Ineffective reading.	John 5:37-40
5. Explanation required.	Acts 8:26-35
6. God's precepts our criterion.	Ps. 119:97-104

IV. For Discussion:

1. How can we get our church papers into every home of our church?
2. What newspapers should we read? What parts of them? How much time should we allow for them? How are we to read them?
3. What magazines are to be recommended? Which ones are not commendable?

V. Facts for Study:

Readers of newspapers are at the mercy of the publisher's use of the news. Sometimes important and significant items are poorly presented or are relegated to the inside pages. Sometimes news stories are so written as to emphasize the publisher's political prejudice or social bias.

Often the interests of advertisers control the policy of a newspaper, with regard to its treatment of social problems. For example, papers which receive a large amount of money from liquor advertising cannot afford to attack the liquor evil.

In these days the news of the war and of political events are often so distorted, discolored, or untruthfully presented that it is very difficult, if not altogether impossible to know what is true. Propaganda methods are used that people may be influenced after their emotions are appealed to by slogans, or by arousing their prejudices. We need to note that even where the truth is brought, frequently not all the facts are available.

It is fortunate that a Christian need not know all the news in order to live a life of love and service, that he can lend a helping hand like the good Samaritan without knowing the names of the robbers.

A Newspaperman's Work

When Jacob Riis became a newspaper reporter in New York City, he had experienced the dreadfulness of life in the tenements. Because he was so familiar with the cruelty and suffering he wanted to make things better and so decided to enter the ministry. A friend with whom he discussed the matter said: "God needs Christian reporters as much as ministers." This remark so impressed Jacob Riis that he decided to dedicate himself as a reporter to the Lord's work. Through his zeal tenements were torn down and rebuilt in sanitary fashion. Year after year he kept up the fight until at his death he had accomplished more than anyone else to make living sanitary and comfortable for the poor of the city.—Mrs. Gerhard Friesen

NEVER HOLD A GRUDGE, Matt. 18:21-35

Bible Readings

Forgive Wrongs	Matt. 6:12
A Grudge and Its Consequences	Gen. 37-23-36
Leave Wrongs to God	Rom. 12:17-21
A Non-Golden Rule	Prov. 24:29
The Spirit of Jesus	I Pet. 3:8-12
Big-hearted Moses	Num. 12:1-16
Never Hold a Grudge	Matt. 18:21-35

"I suppose your experience teaches you" said a patient to a trained nurse, "that careful nursing can cure almost any ailment?" "Yes, almost any ailment, excepting a grudge" was the instant reply from the nurse.

Isn't it true that many people go through life nursing old grudges they never will attempt to forget, far less forgive. God did not mean for man to be like that. When people become that way, it thwarts the purposes and plans of God for His children. Grudge and grace cannot abide in the same heart at the same time.

How Some Forgive

Have you ever heard anyone say, "I can forgive, but I can't forget." Such say to God when they pray the prayer that Jesus taught His disciples to pray, "God, forgive the indictment against me, but don't forget it. Every time you think of me, think of my sins."

Others say, "I am ready to forgive when he or she seeks forgiveness." Suppose God had dealt with us thus? Thank God, He did not. Jesus forgave even when He Himself did no harm or ill to any man.

God forgives freely, abundantly, and completely. This is the way we should do. The forgiveness He shows, we are to show, the mercy He shows, we are to show.

The Question Bee

(1) How did the father show forgiveness to the Prodigal Son? (2) Who needs God's forgiveness? (3) What does God mean when He says "He has blotted them out?" (4) Why do people hold grudges? (5) Why can't a truly great person hold a grudge?

The Prayer List

Create in me, O Lord, a new heart,, and renew a right spirit within me. Forgive us as we forgive others. May we be noble and great enough to look over the wrongs against us.

Place thy finger upon any evil in our lives and give us victory over sin. Amen.

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

The Relief Training School

At the May 7, 1943, meeting of the Executive Committee of the Mennonite Céntral Committee final approval was given for the setting up of a Relief Training School at Goshen College, extending from June 12 to August 27.

Forty-one men from C.P.S. camps were approved to enter the school, and twenty-four drafted men now in college will bring the total to sixty-five, which is the quota for the Mennonites. The curriculum will consist of courses of study in "Christian Personality and Leadership," "Mennonite Heritage," (with special emphasis on the history and philosophy of Mennonite relief work), "Community Hygiene and Nutrition," "Relief Administration," and "Contemporary World Needs of Central Europe, China, and South America."

The Relief Training School is a sub-unit to C.P.S. Camp No. 101 and will be under the directorship of Brother Ernest E. Miller, President of Goshen College.

Second Anniversary of Mennonite C.P.S.

On May 22, 1943 the second anniversary of Mennonite C.P.S. camps was observed. It was on this date in 1941 that a contingent of nine men arrived at the Grottoes Va., camp. Counting the regular camps, the fourteen hospital units, the dairy farm groups, and the relief project there are thirty-three administrative units involving around 2,800 men.

Due to the outbreak of the war C.P.S. has become over three times as large as anticipated. During the two years of its existence it has cooperated nite C.P.S. camps was observed. It is on this so in the main to their satisfaction. During all these months the Church's officials report with appreciation the patient understanding of government representatives as evidenced by their willingness to extend for three times the original privilege which permits the Churches to administer the camps.

In a recent statement evaluating the C.P.S. program, Brother Henry A. Fast, General Director, stated: "God has opened doors of opportunity to men in C.P.S. and to their constituencies from which they come.... The C.P.S. program has turned out to be a tremendous venture of Christian faith and concern."

"I'LL GO WHERE YOU WANT ME TO GO"

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
Real service is what I desire;
I'll sing a solo at any time, dear Lord,
But don't ask me to sit in the choir.

I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I like to see things come to pass.
But don't ask me to teach boys and girls
dear Lord,
I'd rather just sit in my class.

I'll do what you want me to do, dear Lord,
I yearn for Thy kingdom to thrive.
I'll give you my nickels and dimes, dear Lord,
But please don't ask me to tithe.

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
I'll say what you want me to say;
I'm busy just now for myself, dear Lord,
I'll help you some other day.

FIRST MENNONITE CHURCH

Wadsworth, Ohio

Our pre-Easter services have greatly helped us prepare our hearts for the day of Resurrection. The evenings of April 13, 14, and 15 Rev. Jesse N. Smucker of the First Mennonite church brought to us in his simple, direct and soul searching manner of expository preaching three messages entitled: "Descent of a Soul" using Herod as the character to be studied, "Great Words from a Weak Man" depicting the life and sayings of Pilate, and characterizing Peter in the topic "The Rock That Slipped." Rev. James Farmer, a colored Methodist minister, had charge of the devotionals and prayer two evenings, and the choir ably gave special numbers at all Lenten Services.

Easter sunrise services at 6:30, a custom very dear to the congregation was again observed, followed by Sunday school and climaxed by the Easter message "And To Die Is Gain" Phil. 1:21. Open communion concluded services for another glorious Easter and we could more fully understand the great truth of Phil. 3:10, "That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection and the fellowship of his suffering."

Dr. M. C. Lehman gave his long anticipated address at the church Sunday evening, April 18. He shared with us his experiences while administering relief to the people of Germany and threw out the challenge to cling to our Mennonite principles and heritage and make Mennonitism endure.

Pres. Ramseyer of Bluffton College spoke to us April 4, and on April 11, J. Herbert Fretz, a senior at Bluffton College and brother to J. Millard Fretz of our congregation, filled the pulpit in the absence of our pastor.

Sunday evening, February 28, the young people of our church were hosts to youth groups from other Wadsworth churches in a very special program including a candlelight worship service, numbers by the high school choir, group singing, and an address by a nationally known speaker, Dr. R. H. Mueller of Cleveland, a dynamic youth speaker.

Our pastor discussed the topic "The Mennonites, Quakers, and Brethren: The Historic Peace Churches" at a joint youth meeting of our church and the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

The tragic death of Ensign Preston Sprunger, twenty-six, who was killed in an airplane crash at Catawa Beach, Washington, is the first war casualty of this church and community.

Funeral services for aged Mary B. Kressly, were held Good Friday afternoon, April 23.

Intermediates Sell Church Paper

(The Intermediates of the First Mennonite Church, Upland, California, have undertaken the very worthwhile project described below. The account is taken from The Herald, edited by Brother Earl Salzman.)

The Intermediate C. E. Society is assuming the task of canvassing the members of our church for subscriptions to The Mennonite.. We are glad to have a good number to be readers of both our church papers—The Mennonite and the Bundesbote.

Each home should be a subscriber of either or both of these papers. To be a good church member means among other things to be reader of our church literature. Our thinking and understanding is never greater than our information. These church papers are published to inform us concerning our whole church program.

Most homes have one or more newspapers with the "funnies." Many of our folks think nothing of paying ten cents for a Sunday paper. Most of our church papers cost less than four cents a week. We are an individual church, but we are also a part of a fellowship of churches. To subscribe for second-rate magazines rather than our church papers means we are not putting the Kingdom of God first. To subscribe and read our church paper will draw us closer to God and the brethren. Hence if you are not a subscriber, you should support the young folks with a subscription.

IN MEMORIAM

—ALVIN GRABER, son of Mr. and Mrs. John D. Graber, was born near Pretty Prairie, Kansas. In 1938 the family moved to Cleveland, Kansas. At first in the medical corps at Camp Grant, Illinois, he later went to Fort Dix, New Jersey, and then to East Africa where he was killed in an airplane accident on February 23, 1943. He was thirty-one. He is mourned by his father; three brothers, Herbert at home, Jake of Norwich, and John in service at Camp Van Dorn, Mississippi; five sisters, Mrs. Pete J. Schwartz of Pretty Prairie, Mrs. John J. Graber of Hutchinson, Mrs. Jake Doerksen of Inman, Mrs. Menno Stucky of Cleveland, and Delphia of Port Clinton, Ohio. A memorial service was held for him on the church cemetery. He was a member of the Pretty Prairie Church.

—FRANZ M. GOOSSEN, son of Mr. and Mrs. Franz H. Goossen, was born December 17, 1876, in Landskrone, South Russia. At the age of six months he emigrated with his parents to Marion County, Kansas. He was baptized by Rev. Jacob Buller on May 24, 1896, and received into the Alexanderwohl Mennonite Church. In 1900 he was married to Susanna Duerksen. They were blessed with ten sons and two adopted daughters. One son perceded his father in death.

—ELIZABETH RATZLAFF, daughter of Andrew and Marie Richert Buller, was born in Waldheim, South Russia, on March 26, 1863. With her parents she migrated to Buhler, Kansas, in 1874. In 1880 she was baptized by Elder Dietrich Gaeddert and became a member of the Hoffnungsau Church. She married Henry M. Ratzlaff on March 11, 1883. In 1894 they settled on a farm northeast of Corn, Oklaoma. Later they joined the Bergthal Church there. She died on March 29, 1943, and is mourned by the children: P. R. and Jake of Corn, Henry of Colony, Mrs. Henry Quiring of Weatherford, and Mrs. H. D. Boese of Weatherford; one sister, Lena Neuman of Buhler, Kansas, and one brother, Jacob Buller of Buhler.

—MARY REGINA KREHBIEL STUCKY, daughter of Mary and Jacob Krehbiel, was born near Moundridge, Kansas, on March 5, 1884. When ten years old her parents moved to Pretty Prairie. There she was baptized and received into the church. Later she joined the Zion Mennonite Church of Kingman. In 1902 she married Peter H. Stucky. In 1905 they moved to a farm near Murdock, Kingman County. Besides her husband she is mourned by her children: Mrs. Frieda Allen, Cunningham, Irvin and Paul of Belmont, Eldon, U.S. Army, New York City, Ruth of the home, Walton, U.S. Army, Fort Sill, Oklahoma.

—ARNOLD SCHOWALTER was born in Johnson County, Nebraska, on June 15, 1890. In 1896 his parents moved to Wisner, Nebraska. On June 3, 1906, he was baptized by Rev. D. J. Brand and received into the Wisner Mennonite Church. He lived successively on a farm, at Lincoln, Nebraska, St. Louis, Missouri, and Kansas City. Doing mechanical work in the South Western Greyhound Garage he was fatally burned, and died April 23, 1943. He is mourned by his aged father Jacob Schowalter and seven sisters: Johanna and Lydia of the home; Mrs. F. W. Risser, Wisner; Mrs. D. M. Boese, Saginaw, Michigan; Mrs. John Wiens, Blue Springs, and Mrs. Claass Epp, Jr. and Mrs. Walter Epp of Beatrice, and by his fiancee, Rosalie Bracht of Kansas City.

week Miss Kuyf gave us an interesting report of her work and interneship in China.—W. C. A., Corr.

—In the bulletin of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas, it is reported that the daily vacation Bible school has a large attendance and that the teachers are doing excellent work. The church plans to have its annual Sunday School picnic on June 3 in Continental Park. The church recently took an offering for the support of the religious education program that was carried on in the grade and high schools this past year.

—Walter J. Dick, a worker in the Rockwell Street Mennonite Mission, Chicago, Illinois, recently brought the message to the Second Mennonite Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

—The Herald, First Mennonite Church, Upland, California: "Pentecost meant for the disciples a new power in their lives and a blessed fellowship with one another. However, the custom in the early church was to consider Pentecost as a season and not as a day. All the weeks from Easter until the anniversary of the out-pouring of the Holy Spirit belong in that season."

—Bluffton College graduated thirty-one seniors this year. President Ramseyer gave the baccalaureate sermon. He spoke on "Perpetual Light." Dr. Ernest E. Miller, President of Goshen College gave the commencement address. His subject was, "A Return to Discipline."

—"In view of the fact that the great diversity of Sunday School materials used by our Sunday Schools reveals a lack of Conference program, and at the same time makes an intelligent report almost impossible, we recommend that our schools give serious consideration to our Mennonite Sunday schools helps, with the intention of adopting them in their schools." —The foregoing recommendation was adopted by the Middle District Conference at its last session.

——Remember the picture of the Amish on the front page? After this appeared a reader sent in a "column" from a newspaper from which the following is quoted: "We cut the cuffs off our pants, narrow the width of lapels, abbreviate the length of our coats—all to conserve cloth—but any attempt to make the necessity for conservation achieve comfort in dress draws only stiff-backed opposition from men addicted to the silly habit of strangling high collars and neckties.... Everybody knows and admits these facts, but is reluctant to change and begs off with the excuse that it's impossible. We had much rather confine our energies to simpler tasks, such as making Joe Stalin join the church, rewriting Chinese philosophy and organizing labor unions in India.... There is scarcely the one of us who doesn't have a pretty definite idea of what he wants to do and would prefer to do, but he won't because in most instances he is waiting for the other fellow who in turn is waiting for him. That's the big reason why we are is such an unhappy mess. Our minds are twisted with emotional conflict in which what we think is subdued and cowed by a fear of what someone else may think if we dare free ourselves from stifling convention and false worship." So says Bob McCracken.

—Writing in his church bulletin, Rev. Donovan E. Smucker enumerates the editors of our Senior Sunday School Quarterly and then referring to Carl M. Lehman adds, "Some of his 'Practical' Notes' have added extremely important insights from Mennonite history. It may be trite but it's still true: You must study your Sunday School quarterlies each week."

—The Mennonite retreat for the young people of the Middle District is to be held at Camp Mack, Indiana, August 2-8.

—Eunice Regier of Newton proofread The Mennonite until the close of the spring quarter. Now Ellen Waltner of McPherson has taken over.

BETHEL COLLEGE TO GRANT TH.M. DEGREE

Ministerial students will be interested to know that the Bethel College Board of Directors and Faculty have recently taken action to extend the fifth year work a bit and authorized the granting of the Master of Theology degree (Th.M.) to students properly qualified. The Requirements for Admission are: 1. A recognized A.B. or Th.B. degree or equivalent.. 2. Proper letters of recommendation. 3. A personal conference with the faculty committee on ministerial studies consisting of the head of the Bible department, the dean of the College, and the director of practical work. The Requirements for Graduation are: 1. Satisfactory work for two years during which time the student gives one half of his time to Bible and ministerial course-studies and the other half to practical Christian work, both of which must be approved in advance and be carried on under the supervision of the faculty committee on ministerial studies. 2. An acceptable thesis or research project and procedure under proper supervision. 3. A comprehensive examination, both written and oral. The Emphasis of the entire course will be Biblical on the one hand and practical on the other. As formerly, faculty members offering courses will be Prof. A. E. Kreider, chairman of the Committee on Ministerial Training; Dean P. S. Goertz; Dr. A. Warkentin; and President Ed. G. Kaufman. However, in order to do this work, extra help on the faculty will be needed. Dr. C. E. Krehbiel, the President of the General Conference, will offer a course on Mennonite History, Church Organization and Polity, and Dr. P. A. Penner, for forty years missionary to India, will offer a course on Evangelism and Missions. Some scholarships are available for properly qualified students. Those interested should apply to the President of the College.

WEED CONTROL

It is May. The garden is clean. The rains come. The wise gardener seeks to work his garden as soon as possible. He does so for a number of reasons. One of them is to destroy the shoots of thousands of little weed seeds that have sprouted but perhaps have not yet appeared above the ground. Someone ignorant of gardening might argue that surely these thousands of little shoots below the surface could not possibly endanger a garden.

The garden of a child's heart presents much the same conditions. Some gardeners permit such a garden to go entirely to weeds. They make no effort to plant any useful crop in it. The harvest is put into our penitentiaries, reform schools, etc. Some other gardeners see that this won't do. They plant straight, nice rows of productive crops by taking the child to Sunday school and church, by giving him a Bible, and by teaching him to pray. Yet they are somewhat unmindful of the weeds that may be sprouting. As yet they cannot see them. The garden of childhood appears clean and innocent. In that garden are areas called school, play, and reading material. Those are all good sections to have in a child's garden. However, Satan and his helpers here on earth are ever very busy strewing weed seed into these sections. There are parent gardeners who are unmindful of the seeds of worldly standards that are germinating in the school area, of the seeds of commercialized, corruptive recreation in the play area, and the seeds of secularism in a great deal of the child's reading matter area.

Around the adolescent period they may notice that there are weeds in the garden that are growing vigorously. Some of the tallest have stood so close to the good, rightful plants that they have escaped notice. So many others are growing by this time, that although some are hoed off with vigor, the rest keep on in their rapid growth.

The result—the hoe may strike at all of them in time. But many, many have gotten a root system. They are hoed off, and the roots cause them to shoot out again. Thus throughout the life of the garden the weeds may always be kept in subjection of the rightful plants, but nevertheless the weeds in their attempts to grow take much plant-food and moisture away.

How much better it is to destroy all sprouting weeds as soon as the garden is workable.

It is still better to keep out of the garden all the weed seeds possible. No, we can't keep all of them out, especially in the school and play areas. In the reading area we have much more control. Every parent with a concern for the future should ask, "What is my child reading?" "What kind of thought seed is being implanted in his mind?" "Are his mind and heart being filled with weed thoughts, which though never in supreme control of him, will nevertheless take away much time and energy from the right thoughts?"

The garden may seem clean and innocent, but seeds are sprouting. What kind are they?

The Junior Messenger, which can be ordered from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, is full of Christian thought seed. Does the Junior boy or girl in your home receive it?—rw.

Musicians and Sunday School Teachers

By Erland Waltner

Can musicians and S. S. teachers have anything in common? Well, let us see.

Some years ago we heard a concert by Jasha Heifetz, world-famous violinist. For well over an hour he held an audience of about five thousand people spell-bound. No one seemed bored. Everyone had been inspired.

What was the secret of this man's greatness? We read a commentary on his life and learned that: "He has spent about two-fifths of his waking life playing or practicing—a total of over 68,000 hours." Now we began to understand why he could hold our attention for one hour. Though he is now considered the world's greatest violinist, he continues to practice regularly for every performance. No wonder that instrument in his hands thrilled people's souls. Before Heifetz performed, he had prepared.

Has this anything to do with us who are S. S. teachers? Well, are we not having some trouble getting and keeping the attention of our pupils? We have excused ourselves with the thought that one can not expect too much at their age, but could it be possible that we have been guilty of inadequate preparation?

If a musician spares himself no efforts in preparation for a presentation of the inspiring music of some composer, should not a S. S. teacher be even more zealous in preparation to present the inspired Word of God? If a musician takes time to memorize his scores so that he can play them flawlessly, ought not a S. S. teacher be thoroughly acquainted with the lesson he is teaching? If a musician studies and tries to develop the best playing techniques, ought not a conscientious S. S. teacher ever seek for the best techniques of presenting the most important message in the world to his pupils? Why then is there so much slip-shod, uninteresting, and ineffective S. S. teaching in our churches?

You say that you a "drafted" teacher. You do not have the time to do the task well, but because no one else is willing, you have taken the class and are doing the best you can. Well, God bless you for your willingness to do the best you can, but are you honestly doing your best?

Are you a faithful student of the Bible as well as of your S. S. quarterly?

Are you faithful in prayer? Do you pray for every member of your class at least once each week?

Are you really trying to improve your teaching technique by studying and trying out different approaches?

Have you taken advantage of teacher training courses offered in your church or in your community?

Do you really prepare yourself mentally and spiritually for every S. S. class? If you have spent only ten minutes in preparation, why should your pupils spend thirty minutes listening to you?

"Do your utmost to let God see that you at least are a sound workman, with no need to be ashamed of the way you handle the word of Truth." II Tim. 2:15 (Moffatt)

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SECULARIZATION

This is a word which is becoming more and more familiar to us. It is used to describe a social process or a gradual development away from that which is sacred. When we say an act or an organization is secular we mean that it is exactly opposite an act or organization which is sacred. A ball game is a secular act; a church worship service is a sacred one. Of course, not everything that is secular is bad, nor is all that is sacred necessarily good.

An Illustration

An illustration of the secularization process with which all of us are familiar is the changing attitude which Christians have taken toward the Sabbath. For instance, among the early New England Puritans every member of the community was absolutely to do no work on Sunday except that which was positively necessary. Failure to attend religious services was punishable by a fine or some other form of censure. This attitude prevailed because the Sabbath was considered a sacred day. To work on this day or not to attend worship services was felt to be blasphemy. But within the course of two hundred years this attitude has completely changed. There is perhaps no other area in the country today where church attendance is lower and working on the Sabbath greater than in industrial New England. Thus, by a gradual process, step by step, over many years the Sabbath has been secularized.

Among Mennonites

As Mennonites take jobs in industry, business, and various forms of public service that require employees to work on Sunday we too are witnessing the secularization of the Sabbath among Mennonites. At first we protest vigorously, then we tolerate but don't approve, and finally we accept the situation as inevitable and seek to rationalize and justify it.

Military Service

There are many other illustrations of the secularization process among Mennonites. Beliefs which were once considered sacred and God-given are no longer practiced or considered divine. Take the case of military service for Christians. For the first three centuries of the Christian era Christians considered it a sacred obligation not to be associated with the military process. Mennonites have traditionally held a similar view. But through the years the secularization process has been at work. The European Mennonites compromised by gradual stages until practically none of them consider this a sacred Christian belief. Rather than compromise our forefathers came to this country to escape military service. Today many of their descendants are defaulting on that which they held dear and paid a great price for. About 70 per cent of our drafted young men in the United States have accepted some form of military service, thus reflecting an attitude of secularization on this question.

Other Evidences

The question of swearing an oath, the principle of Christian simplicity, the practice of separation from the world, the belief that the true church is a suffering church, and other religious principles which were all held to be sacred doctrines of the Mennonite Church, are undergoing the process of secularization.

PROBLEMS AND PROGRESS

Jagdeeshpur, via Raipur, C. P. India
Jan. 11, 1943

Rev. P. H. Richert
Newton, Kansas. U. S. A..
Dear Dr. Richert:

The past three months have been just another quarter of work, planning, and anticipating the future. We order drugs from Bombay and find that they are not available. Or we order an ordinary drug, formerly obtained for a dollar, and find that now they cost five to ten dollars. Fortunately, not all drugs are thus, and fortunately our store rooms are fairly well provided with the most essential supplies. Dr. Bauman had a very good supply of drugs on hand in Champa. The question is, what will we do when our present supply of quinine is all? The Lord knows this. We commit the problem to Him and also ask for your prayers. Prayer does make a difference.

I have spent about five months away from Basna the past year. Most of this time I was in Champa. The work there is going on quite well. Mrs. Ratzlaff has the work well in hand. Miss Pauls gives most of her time to the Leper Home. At Jagdeeshpur (Basna) Dr. Roy is winning the confidence of the people and taking full responsibility in my absence and a large share of it when I am present. There has been a great deal of malaria the past year. Janjgir had an unusually severe spell of it. Mrs. Moyer did noble work in treating the many sick and difficult cases at that time.

Following are the statistics of the medical work of our mission, 1942:

Inpatients	1556
Average daily inpatients	39
Out patients	14650
Visits or return calls	21547
Operations, Major	189
Operations, Minor	665
Operations Cataract (included under major)	90
Laboratory tests	5336
Obstetric cases, Normal	46
Obstetric cases, Abnormal	21
Income	Ps. 13956

(about four thousand dollars)

This gives some idea of what the preparations for the meal mentioned in Brother Dester's article must have looked like. This picture shows a Christmas meal prepared for the lepers at the Champa Leper Home. The large pile in the center is cooked rice. In the forefront are baskets filled with bread. Further back stand pots filled with curry, the meat dish. The meat is not corn-fed beef but goat meat. To serve beef would soon put an end to our mission work there. Some Indians get meat only once a month and some only several times a year

The Leper Home had an average of 557 lepers in the home every day of the past year. Aside from this the Leper Home statistics are included above.

The work of the church shows some progress. There are 262 members in the compound church at Jagdeeshpur, and about that many children. Thirty babies were born in 1942. This was the first Christmas we could celebrate in the new church where there was room for all. On Monday after Christmas we had a common meal of curry and rice at which about 550 people took part. How would you like the job of feeding that many people with twenty dollars, so as to give each a good meal? This was made possible by the Christmas money sent by the societies. The poor district Christians gave half of their Christmas money for clothing for the poor widows. The Christmas festivities included a thanksgiving sale, several Christmas programs, the yearly meeting, and the blessing of children. On December 27 two girls were baptized before returning to the Janjgir boarding. On January 3 fifteen boys, girls, and women were baptized. Many of our people are working at an airport some ninety miles from here. Quite a few young men are in the army.

Very sincerely yours,
H. E. Dester

IN MEMORIAM

HENRY ALBRECHT, son of Henry and Helena, nee Penner, Albrecht, was born December 10, 1873, at Lindenau, Russia, and died May 14, 1943, at Beatrice, Nebraska. With his parents he came to Beatrice, Nebraska, in 1884. He attended the parochial school taught by Rev. J. K. Penner. He was baptized by the Elder Gerhard Penner and became a member of the First Mennonite Church. In 1906 he married Marie Wiens. In 1918 the Lord called her home. From 1906 to 1930 he lived on the farm. Then he moved to Beatrice. Two daughters and their families, two brothers, and one sister mourn him.

ARNOLD E. NACHTIGAL, son of William J. and Susie Nachtigal, was born near Buhler, Kansas, June 7, 1906, and died May 8, 1943. After attending grade school he studied at Bethel College and at Kansas State College, Fort Hays. In 1923 he was baptized by Rev. P. R. Voth and received into the membership of the Buhler Mennonite Church. Before his death Mr. and Mrs. Nachtigal taught the Gordon Grade School near Goessel, Kansas. He is mourned by his wife (the former Blanche F. Cochroft); his parents; two brothers, Eldo of Buhler and Harlow in the armed forces in Africa; and four sisters, Mrs. Waldo Harms of Whitewater, Mrs. Arthur Kaiser of Newton, Mrs. John Penner, and Mrs. E. R. Terry, both of San Antonio, Texas.

THOUGHTS OF DEVOTION

By Ruth Eymann

For the devotional talk this afternoon I wish to share a few thoughts with you from New Days for Old by Margaret Brown, and Streams in the Desert by Mrs. Chas. E. Cowman.

Let us take a representative week from your life or mine.

SUNDAY—I wonder how many of us truly say with the Psalmist: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord" Ps. 122:1? In olden times it was the custom of each Christian to carry a little lamp to church. In every pew small sockets were prepared for the holding of the light. So it was that there was always a dark place in the church when any member was absent. All too often we look to the pulpit alone for light. We forget that each individual also preaches a sermon by his life.

MONDAY—Is it a blue Monday? Are you fearful of the future? Let us not be Christians as to the few great things of our lives and then act like atheists as to the many small things which fill up the greater space of them. Trust Him.

Do not look forward to the changes and chances of life in fear, rather look to them in full hope that, as they arise, God, whose you are, will take care of you.

Always remember: either He will shield you from suffering or give you unfailing strength to bear it.

TUESDAY—In Eph. 3:19 we read "Filled with all the fullness of God." It is only the overflow from the fullness within our own lives that brings refreshing to anyone else. But someone says, "I don't have the capacity that others have." Standing on the deck of a ship in mid ocean you see the sun reflected from its depths. From a little boat on a mountain lake you see the same sun reflected from its clear waters. Looking into a mountain spring not six inches deep you see the same great sun. Look into the dew drop of the morning and there it is again. The sun has a way of adapting itself to its reflection. The ocean is not too large to hold it, nor the dew drop too small. So God can fill any man whether his capacity be like the ocean, the mountain lake, like the spring, or the tiny dew drop. Whatever therefore your capacity, the text opens to you the possibility of being filled with all the fullness of God.

WEDNESDAY—This is a particularly busy day and we feel rushed for time. We are always complaining that our days are few and then acting as though there would be no end of them.

So busy? If Jesus, the Son of God, felt it necessary to rise before the breaking of the day to pour out His heart to God in prayer, how much more ought you and I to pray unto Him. What

Jesus gathered into His life from His prayers we can never know, but this we do know, that the prayerless life is a powerless life. A prayerless life may be a noisy life and fuss around a great deal, but such a life is far removed from Him who, by day and night, prayed to God.

Strength is not in bluster and noise. Strength is in quietness. The lake must be calm if the heavens are to be reflected on its surface. Our Lord loved people, but how often we read of His going away from them for a brief season. He tried every little while to withdraw from the crowd. He was always stealing away at evening to the hills—to pray. The one thing needed above all others today is that we shall go apart with our Lord.

We should be better Chrisians if we were more alone, if we spent more time in retirement and quiet waiting upon God.

Nor will it suffice to have spiritual nourishment occasionally. You need it daily just as you need physical nourishment daily.

The reality of Jesus comes as a result of secret prayer and a personal study of the Bible that is devotional and sympathetic. Christ becomes more real to the one who persists in the cultivation of His presence.

May we remember that nothing lies beyond the reach of prayer except that which lies outside the will of God.

THURSDAY—This is a quiet day when you seem to have more time. When you are all alone, what do you think about, where do your thoughts dwell? It is impossible to think weakly and live strongly, to ponder low things and live on the heights, to think falsely and live a life of truth and purity. As you think so are you. No good deed but was first a good thought. I wonder if you have been thinking on Him, on His Word, and doing His will? In Korea when a person decides to become a Christian he tells his friends that he is now "going to do the doctrine." The Chinese Christian has another way of expressing the same thought. He says "I am reading my Bible and behaving it." May this same spirit be in our hearts as we read our Scripture portion each day.

FRIDAY—We have been asked to go some place; should we say "yes" or "no"? One of the shortest words in all languages, yet apparently one of the hardest to say is the little word "no." "Yes," always seems easier to say. But those who "try everything once" are sure to be damaged in the process. The wise person is willing to learn from the experience of others when to say "no." Have I forgotten that: "One cannot honor Christ in one's walk, and at the same time walk with those who dishonor Him; that attachment to Christ is the only secret of detachment from the world?"

Vice is made so very attractive by a mask of charm that can only be pierced by wisdom or bitter experience. I must never forget that sin is only charming in the present or in the immediate future. It has no charm in the past. How fascinating is sin a moment before it is committed! How absolutely necessary it seems to our happiness. But when it slips into the past, what unhappiness and sorrow it brings not only to us but to our loved ones.

Your sin may not look very large to you, but if it is anything that keeps you from communion with God it is tremendous, no matter how insignificant it may appear in your blinded eyes. This recalls the verse in Hebrews 3:13, "Lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." But someone asks, "What is sin for me? How am I to tell?" John Wesley's mother once wrote to him when he was in college, "Would you judge of the lawfulness or the unlawfulness of a pleasure, take rule: Whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, or takes off the relish of spiritual things; whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind, that thing to you is sin." I'd like to read her five rules again. One, whatever weakens your reason; two, whatever impairs the tenderness of your conscience: whatever obscures your sense of God, and this fourth one I wish you to notice particularly; whatever takes off the relish of spiritual things; fifth, whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind, that thing, to you is sin.

SATURDAY—the last day of the week. As I look back over the week, has my life been so winsome that others are finding it easier to say "yes" to the highest, and "no" to that which is low"?

G. Campbell Morgan says that in the home of a gentleman who was entertaining him, in one room he always detected the fragrance of roses. He said to his host one day, "I wish you would tell me how it is that I never come into this room without seeming to detect the fragrance of roses." The gentleman smiled and said: "Ten years ago I was in the Holy Land, and while there I bought a small phial of attar of roses. It was wrapped in cotton-wool, and as I was standing here unpacking it, suddenly I broke the bottle. I took the whole thing up, cotton-wool and all, and put it into this vase." That fragrance had permeated the clay of the vase, and it was impossible to enter the room without becoming conscious of it. Christ is called "The Rose of Sharon," and if Christ be in you and in me the fragrance of the "Rose of Sharon" will pervade and permeate our whole life and make us a comfort and a blessing to all whose lives touch our own.

FOUNDATIONS FOR TOMORROW

By Lloyd L. Ramseyer

Two houses were built, one on sand and the other on rock. The storm came and one was destroyed. The man who built upon the sand was a foolish man, but the limit of foolishness would have been reached had he rebuilt, still upon the sand.

Our house of civilization has been falling about our heads. It is now evident that it was built upon the sand. Even as the storm continues, we must begin to look about us to see what can be salvaged from the wreck to use in rebuilding. We must be able to recognize the rock and discard the building materials which have proved faulty, so that the house which we now build may be able to withstand the storms which may break upon it. Let us not be guilty of the stupidity of rebuilding on sand.

It would be trite to say that this class is being graduated in difficult times. Times are often difficult, though the difficulties are of varying types. I well remember five years ago hearing a class in a large university as it practiced for commencement exercises sing, "We're on our way to the WPA." Lack of work is not the problem today. Our concern is for a world which is apparently hopelessly jumbled and in terrible disorder, a world in which we scarcely know whether to plan for a tomorrow.

It is necessary that we first take stock to see what some of the potential storms may be that our house must withstand, and also to see the efforts which are being made again to use sand in the construction of the foundation. Then, with this picture before us, let us choose the materials which must be used. First, let us see the nature of the difficulties which we must face.

We will face a world in which many of our precious natural resources will have been depleted for destructive purposes, irreplacable materials such as coal, iron ore, and oil. In addition, large areas of the world's great cities lie in ruins and must be rebuilt. In large areas in Europe the population is at the point of starvation. Children cannot be starved without serious effects on their health and out-look on life even if they survive physically. National boundaries have been violated, the peoples dispersed, and their governments have fallen. New political alignments will be necessary, a very difficult task in view of racial differences and hereditary prejudices.

Our own international attitude is none too promising. Instead of seeing that a treaty of revenge after the last war led to a desire for retaliation, there is a growing feeling that this severe treaty was in reality too lenient, and that the solution to our dilemma must come through making it physically impossible for these countries ever to become strong again.

Kingsbury Smith tells us that the American plan is to occupy Germany for an extended period after the war, with American Gauleiters to govern the country. Relief would be given, not in a spirit of brotherhood, but "in our own interests. . . we must prevent famine, disease, and complete economic chaos." It would be the plan to "limit relief measures to the minimum required to prevent revolution and chaos."

Major Elliot wrote recently that our aim in Japan must be "the complete and ruthless destruction of Japanese industry, so that not one brick of any Japanese factory shall be left upon another, so that there shall not be in Japan one electric motor or one steam or gasoline engine, nor a chemical laboratory, not so much as a book which tells how these things are made." George Weller wrote that we must fight Japan "until not alone the body but the soul. . . is annihilated, until the land. . .is plowed with salt, its men dead and its women and children divided and lost among other people." And we live in a nation of supposed followers of the One who said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." It is physically impossible to hold down permanently a great nation. If we sow in hate, what shall we reap? When we persist in acting contrary to the laws of God, what good result can we expect?

It is no secret that even our friends among nations are not too well agreed. Even during the war one nation has broken off relations with an ally. It is apparently true that friendly nations are jockeying for position, so that each might be in the most favorable position in relation to the other when peace comes. There is no mutual faith and respect, even among allies.

There is evidence that when this war ends there are many who instead of going ahead to a day of shared responsibilities will want to go back to giving major attention to our own selfish interests. We should come out of this war with a greater realization of our mutual dependence upon each other and the determination that no nation shall be in want while we have plenty. But there are powerful voices raised in favor of a renewal of our former selfishness. In his presidential address, the president of the National Association of Manufacturers said, "I am not making guns or tanks to win a 'people's revolution.' I am not fighting for a quart of milk for every Hottentot, or for a TVA on the Danube, or for governmental handouts of free utopias." We may not want more TVA's even in our own country, nor governmental handouts of free utopias, nor do we know definitely the dietary needs of the Hottentots; however, before the spirit of this declaration we revolt, for it indicates that we must again return to a period of self-interest. If we are to live in plenty while other nations go hungry, the period between this war and the next will not be an extended one.

In our own country we will have grave problems. Those who emphasize unlimited concentration on total war imply that our problems are all international. Such is not the case. When the war ends, we will then have our own problems brought to the fore in a magnified form. American Japanese must be permanently settled in self-sustaining circumstances. Labor organizations unable or unwilling to agree with government and striking during a war will not hesitate to show their strength after the war. We must find some way to bring justice peaceably to both labor and capital. Millions of men will return from the army and they must have jobs. Many of these men will be returning from actual battle, hardened by inhuman experiences, schooled in destruction, perhaps bitter and disillusioned. Even our civilian population will have become hardened by reports of mass killing, and perhaps with deep prejudices against those nations which have been the direct cause of their losses and suffering.

We may very likely have a great military system, the curse of Europe for generations, fastened upon us. Even now bills are before Congress which would set up a permanent system of military conscription. There are many who feel that we must keep a mighty military machine, that we must remain so powerful that no other nation would dare to insult us. How much better it would be if we would live so that no other nation would care to attack us. Morison says, "Any realistic envisagement of the post-war order is bound to see it as a highly militarized order. Those of us who are working for another kind of order must know that the odds are heavily against us."

There is a probability, too, that following this war there may be an orgy of intemperance and immorality. When the pressure of war is over, who can tell to what depths men may be driven in the reaction which follows. The twenties were known for their cynicism, what may the fifties be?

There is a brighter side, too, and we should not disregard it. While we have those who cry for vengeance, we have noble souls like Madam Chiang Kai-Shek who in spite of the deep suffering of her people is willing and anxious to forgive. She realizes that only through forgiveness is there hope for the future. She said recently, "There must be no bitterness in the reconstructed world. No matter what we have undergone and suffered, we must try to forgive those who injured us and remember only the lessons gained thereby."

There are millions who have developed an even greater loathing of war than they had in the past. The period following the first world war saw a great growth in opposition to war. The writer of Preacher's Present Arms found less than one-hundred ministers in the U. S. outside the historic peace churches during the last war who were definitely committed to opposition to all war. Now there are 3,500 who are either committed to or very sympathetic to this religious viewpoint. In England, too, this doctrine has grown. The influence of this vast group of men and women will be felt in the years to follow. There are millions of others, who feel that wars will lead us nowhere. They are the people who do not believe in war, but once in, see no way out but through it. These, too, will be working for a world of peace and brotherhood.

We will have a smaller world than we have ever had in the past. We have begun to realize more than ever before that the nations of the world are interdependent, that we cannot live in isolation while the rest of the world suffers. If we can get the right interpretation and application of that belief, we are headed toward real progress.

With all of the trouble in the world, shall we be downhearted? There were always those who felt that the golden ages were all behind them. Three centuries before the birth of Christ, Diogenes the Cynic said, "Bury me on my face; the World will soon be upside down." In 1801 Wilberforce said, "I dare not marry—the future is so unsettled." In 1806 William Pitt said, "There is scarcely anything round us but ruin and despair." In 1848 Lord Shaftesbury said, "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck." In 1849 Disraeli said "In industry, commerce, and agriculture there is no hope." And when Wellington was dying in 1852, he said, "I thank God I shall be spared from seeing the consumation of ruin that is gathering about us."

All through history we have had the good and the evil struggling for mastery. Sometimes one gains, sometimes the other. Even during times of destruction such as this, there are evidences of continued ethical standards of high order. Even while man engages in slaughter he sets up conventions as to how that slaughter should be carried on. He sets up rules as to how prisoners of war should be treated even as he invents new instruments for human destruction. Even while we kill thousands, we are appalled, as we should be, at the killing of a few prisoners in cold blood. It is encouraging that these evidences of culture still live. Were they likewise to perish we would indeed be in a serious condition.

What should the Christian college graduate do in a day like this? Should he like Hamlet say, "The times are out of joint, Oh cursed spite, that ever I was born to set them right?" Or should he take the

The Mid-Week Prayer Service

By Rev. Ward W. Shelly

The development of a successful prayer service is the hardest work the pastor has to do. It is not a preaching service; it is not a social gathering or friendly get-to-gether. The real purpose of the meeting is to pray. The prayer service is the power house of the Church, and too much importance cannot be attached to it. You will recall that the Church was born in a prayer service on the Day of Pentecost. If you read the history of many churches you will find that their existence is the result of a group of people who gathered to pray either in a home, on the threshing floor of a barn or in the open air. If the Church was born in prayer, certainly, it requires nothing less to sustain it.

I have here a few suggestions for the conducting of a prayer service. First the place of prayer must be made ready. The room should be clean, tidy, and warm. Our spiritual attitude is greatly affected by physical condition. If the prayer service is held in the church it should not be in a room where the people will be disturbed by another meeting in an adjoining room. Make it as easy as possible to concentrate on prayer. It is difficult enough if there are no disturbances.

Then, the people must be prepared. It is really a people's meeting. All should come in the spirit of prayer, of worship, and of fellowship. They should all be of one accord. They should come with one aim—to pray. The service should be such that the people will come with expectation.

As for the pastor, he too must be prepared. He will prepare with secret prayer and devotional reading. The pastor as anyone else must first learn to pray in secret before he can pray in public.

In the prayer service the religious life of the church finds public expression by the people themselves. The people need the prayer service as an aid to growth and for the cultivation of the devotional spirit. If the devotional spirit can be developed in a congregation there will be little danger of worldliness and less danger of quarrels. At the prayer service all the interests of the Church should be laid before God in prayer. In the prayer service the mutual needs of the people are discovered. The prayer service develops power in the congregation. We need spiritual power in the pews as well as behind the pulpit. The prayer service develops gifts that are in the church. It brings to light the hidden talents of the people. The prayer meeting also affords us the opportunity to fulfill such injunctions in the Scripture as "bear one another's burdens" and "forsaking not the assembling of ourselves together."

In this service the spirit of praise should be developed. This will drive out the spirit of grumbling and criticism. I remember hearing people in prayer service tell how the devil almost kept them at home—how the devil was after them all week—and a lot of other things about him. Instead of praising God they were in reality praising Satan.

The prayers should not be too long. Long prayers often "kill" a prayer service. One ounce of real believing prayer is worth more than a ten of talk to God. The prayers should be congregational prayers. The people should be definitely acquainted with the things that are being prayed for. There should be variety in the prayers and also in the conduct of the prayer season.

Things to avoid in a prayer service: 1. Self-confidence and self-display; 2. A complaining despondent spirit; 3. Monotony. 4. It is not necessary for the pastor to name the doctrines of the church or "theologize" in his prayers.

What can be studied in the service? A particular book or group of books of the Bible can be studied. Special topics such as "The Holy Spirit," "Prayer," etc., can be used. One should also be particular in choosing the hymns for the prayer service. They should be such as will add to the spirit of the topic and the service.

At certain times after the prayer service it might be well to gather around the piano and have a short hymn sing. Should there be a social period after the service? It might be helpful on very rare occasions, but do not announce the evening on which the social hour will fall. Don't attempt to build up the prayer service with socials. However, such an hour on very rare occasions might be beneficial, especially, to the middle-aged and older folks.

Now—how to get the people to come. I suppose none of us would refuse help in that line. May I tell you of the experience of the minister of the Moravian Church in Lancaster. When this pastor arrived at his charge the prayer service had died a natural death. So he announced to the church board that he was going to start the prayer service again. They all advised him to the contrary. They told him that at some of their prayer services in the past nobody would come but the pastor and the pianist. However, the new pastor insisted. The next Sunday morning he announced to the congregation the beginning of the mid-week service. Instead of begging them to come he said, "Don't come if you can possibly stay away. We don't want anyone there who will be an obstacle to our praying." That week forty came to the service and all through his ministry the attendance averaged thirty-five to forty. Sometimes new things like that will assist, but in addition to that it takes much hard work and prayer to build up the prayer service.

FROM ONE IN C.P.S.

Akron, Pa.
May 14, 1943

Dear Fellow Workers:

It is a pleasure to write you a letter. I still have evidence of your generosity in the form of the camp kit which you gave each of us as we entered the C.P.S. career. The unbleached muslin bed sheets have long since bleached out after going through camp laundries and our laundry here time and again. But they remain sturdy and unpatched even though they are in continual use. The sewing kit is also quite intact! Fortunately (or unfortunately, I don't know which) a girls' Sunday school class here has sort of taken us under their wing. Every so often the group has a sewing bee, and we furnish the sewing in the form of buttonless shirts, torn clothes, etc.

Once when Bob Kreider threw in a pair of pajamas to be used for patching there was a misunderstanding, and the old rags got patched instead. He looked like he was wearing Joseph's coat! Well, this inspired the Sunday school group to action, I guess. At any rate, several of the girls who work in a rayon mill arranged to provide each of us with rayon wear. Are we ritzy?!!

When Mother asked for this letter, she suggested I was to write about my personal view of the program and how I feel about it, the discouraging and encouraging sides of C.P.S. and our work, etc. One can not cover much ground in one letter, so I have chosen to try to reflect our visions and hopes and our frustrations and achievments in expressing them in C.P.S.

Just the other day someone said he wouldn't trade the C.P.S. experience for anything. I have been interested in hearing the number of fellows in C.P.S. who have uttered similar thoughts. One would think such an experience would be distasteful or something to be endured, rather than a fond memory and a rich experience.

When we look back and think of those first days in camp and all that has happened since, the fact that it has been a rich experience stands out all the more clearly.

Many of us entered camp with high motives and genuine determination to make this thing a real witness to our deepest faith. We were completely convinced and committed to trying to live out a life that would bear witness to our personal faith in God. The only way we knew to do that was to live that faith in God in our relationships with fellowmen regardless of who they may be or of what the consequences may be. The best vision we had of what the nature of God is was in the life of Christ, His Son. Christ said the first commandment was to love the Lord our God with all our might, strength, and heart, and the second commandment, like the unto first, is to love our neighbors as ourselves. We are to love those who hate us; we are to do good regardless of what happens to us. It is a divine imperative that our lives are to radiate God-given love, so we must do that regardless of the consequences.

1943 ALL-MENNONITE RETREAT

The first warm days of spring are here. We are beginning to get the urge to take to the lakes and woods. Summer camp and retreat plans are in the process of completion. Camp Mack, the Brethren summer camp near Milford, Indiana, will again be the location for our retreat. This site has met with much praise and favor with our people. Those who have been there know of its splendid facilities. The dates for the retreat are August 2-8. The total cost for this period will be $9.30. Of this amount $7.30 is for room and board and $2.00 for registration.

We are able to announce part of the personnel who will serve as leaders. Rev. Forrest Musser of Pandora, Ohio, Rev. Harry Yoder of Carlock, Illinois, and Rev. Donovan Smucker of Wadsworth, Ohio, will lead the study and discussion courses. Rev. Yoder's course is "The Teachings of Jesus." "Swords and Plowshares" is the title of Rev. Smucker's course, and Rev. Musser will lead a course in young people's problems, entitled "Understanding Ourselves." Rev. Jesse Smucker of Bluffton, Ohio, will be the camp pastor and conduct the Morning Watch and Sunset Services.

The government encourages the continuance of summer camps. It is permissable to use A, B, or C, gas ration books by a layman or minister to provide transportation to "churches, camps, and conferences," except in restricted areas. Bulletin ODT 10A of the Office of Defense Transportation has a statement in regard to chartering buses for the purpose of permitting those under eighteen years of age to attend camps or meetings held in camp situations.

I have never seen anyone who has given total expression to Christian love. Often we humans let our human side get the better of us and we lash out in blind moments of fury, or we unconsciously do something that indirectly does someone serious moral harm—we do not maintain our sensitivity for the love and welfare of others in all areas of our human activity. That does not remove the divine imperative that our personal lives are to radiate, at all times, as best we can, God's love. I have clearly learned that I alone am incapable of this. Only with the inspiration of the Divine is it possible to love and give expression to its power in all situations. How else is it possible actually to love and smile at a person who is sneering at you except through God-given strength and assurance?

With such high vision we entered camp. For a number of us the first camp was Denison, Iowa. We stepped into the camp determined to make of it a beloved community and to express through our work and relations with the folk in the community the spirit God's love had given us.

With that high vision we began our work. Day after day digging post holes, more days building concrete flumes trying to stop Iowa's soil from washing away, other days building dams and staring at the sharp, deep gullies that are a sad witness to poor farming practices in that part of Iowa. The daily toil was wearing. It blunted our vision and our hopes, almost overcoming us with its dull, monotonous routine. We were saddened when we saw some of our fellow campers who had no vision, consecration, or purpose. That sometimes made camp life hard and difficult.

Some of us would retreat from camp to some lonely Iowa Hill on Sunday afternoons to search for direction and strength. We would remember the old proverb about the two men who were in prison. One looked out of his cell window and saw the mud. The other looked out and saw the stars. We knew full well we, too, could either see the mud or the stars. If we let our personal selfish desires and frustrations overcome us, we could be just drafted men and we would see nothing but mud. If we released ourselves in a spirit of service and translated our daily toil into a service of love, with God's strength we could see the stars. In the silence of the autumn days out on those hillsides, a surge of new determination and purpose would make us face the coming week with assurance. Those retreats are a fond personal memory of C.P.S.

Weeks went by and the war came to our country. War! We knew what it was. We'd heard and read of the last one. We read of the present one, too. But, when the country was actually involved, the whole experience was different. Again many of us searched the very depths of our souls. While fellow beings were slaughtering and being slaughtered, we were sitting in comparative comfort, living in a peaceful beloved fellowship. In a world of hate and fear, hunger and suffering, the message of love that could heal those wounds was set aside. And we identified ourselves with that message of love! We felt keenly we had something to offer to our world, and we spent our time building fences, planting trees, digging ditches, moving sod. Many of us for a time saw the mud, but with time and deeper insight we raised our eyes to see the stars.

During those weeks some of us found real solace in Brother Lawrence's booklet, The Practice of the Presence of God. Brother Lawrence was a simple, medieval monk, a lay member of the barefooted Carmelites, who spent most of his life in the monastery kitchen. He discovered in his daily tasks with the pots and pans that he could find a deep joy and fullness if he realized that each little task he did was an expression of his love for God. So, Brother Lawrence went about his simple kitchen tasks of stirring fires, scrubbing pots and pans, and all the other little jobs, and with each one he would remember God and what God would that he should do. He became so keenly aware of God's presence that he felt could almost talk with him as a person at any time. Brother Lawrence walked daily with God and transformed each little task by his keen awareness that each one was God's task. Brother Lawrence became a benediction to all those he met because of his serenity and radiance.

C.P.S. has been a struggle. We haven't been living in a vacuum. The tensions of the day, the sorrow of witnessing the world we love and many of our loved ones throw their resources behind the false-god Mars only to be dashed down, scarred, or disillusioned has been a deeply sobering experience. At our best, we have tried to bear testimony to a better way of solving our human problems. Even though we are being ignored, snubbed, or just tolerated, we can do no other. Jeremiah used to sit on a hill above his beloved Jerusalem and weep because of the downward path his people were taking. He tried but couldn't stop them, nor could he go with them. Some have looked to Jeremiah for solace and a sense of kinship.

Today C.P.S. continues to be a struggle, a good struggle to be sure, but nevertheless a struggle. It has not furnished a plush-lined, soft utopian existence. We don't want that. As we look to the days ahead, a number of us look hopefully to the time when the way will open that we may express our spirit of good will in relief work. We look to that service not only to feed, clothe, and shelter hungry, emaciated bodies. Rather we look upon it as a mission where we can heal moral and spiritual wounds as well as restore deformed bodies. Just think of the deep hate our enemies will feel toward what now seems the inevitably victorious Allies. Those people whose brothers, sons, husbands, and fathers we are now killing, how can they feel kindly toward us when we have so meddled with sacred lives? But, if they discovered that there were people who refused to be a part of such deeds and who instead actually tried to live the faith they professed —what a witness to Christ that would be! I recall the story Brother Jesse Hoover tells of his work in Spain. He said a group of Spanish folk came to him one day and asked what these people he represented believed. Jesse explained as best he could what the Mennonite faith is. Then these people said, "We believe that, too. We want to be Mennonites." Such witnessing to a God whose love lives in the hearts of men, must go out to this world and heal and revitalize where it can! Our message must not be hid under a bushel.

As the program continues, we will continue to feel a keen kinship with you folk at home, who, like Brother Lawrence do your tasks as an humble service to God. It is the support each one of you have given that has made possible the present program. We feel a sense of fellowship with you through all the different expressions of concern and support that come in letters, financial support of the program, and the surety of the knowledge that you are there at home and that your spirit has not changed. May our service give expression to the best and highest of Godly truth, love, and beauty that you would have it give.

In fellowship,
Esko Loewen

OUR NON-RESISTANT HERITAGE, ITS BASIS, MEANING AND IMPLICATION

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "O Holy Spirit, enter in," No. 546; "I can hear my Savior calling," No. 500. 2. Reading of Matt. 5:38-48, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Special music. 4. Offering for relief.

II. Leader's Introduction:

The world today sorely needs the lesson of Christian brotherhood. The very needs of the world cry out for the love and uplifting that only a brotherly heart can and will give. There is the need for food, clothing, and shelter, for care and sympathy in the lives of many. These needs will not be met by those who wield weapons of destruction but only by those who have the heart and mind of a brother toward these unfortunate ones.

There is the need for love and understanding and sympathy which is just as urgent between individuals often as it is between the warring nations. How will the seemingly insurmountable problems of enmity and hatred and jealousy ever be solved? Jesus knew the way out: "Love your enemies, pray for them that persecute you, that ye may be sons of your Father which is in heaven."

It will take sincere consecration to follow this path in the world as it is today. But it is the only way which offers hope; it is the way of the cross, but also the way of victory and glory.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Bible Teaching on Love, Peace, and Non-resistance
2. Teaching in Relation to War and Military Service
3. History of Non-resistance in Europe
4. History of Non-resistance in America
5. Non-resistance as a Way of Life in Other Areas

IV. For Discussion:

1. What relation is there between non-resistance and being peace-makers? 2. What difference is there between biblical non-resistance and intellectual pacifism? 3. How does our church express its policy of non-resistance through the C.P.S. program? (See foreward in booklet on cover pages.)

V. Facts for Study:

Our fathers held that the church was a voluntary organization, composed of those of a regenerated heart. Political force could not dictate in matters of religious faith. The Church was not to be governed by the state. The Bible was the sole source of faith and practice.

The New Testament taught them to love even their enemies and so it was wrong to take life, not only as an individual, but also by military force and by judicial process. For the sake of maintaining freedom from military service many of our fathers were willing to suffer loss of porperty and to migrate from their homeland into another country. Renewed emphasis is placed on this priniciple in these days when destructive warfare puts the challenge to our church. Through the work in the Civilian Public Serivce camps our church tries to testify of the Christian way of living. The opportunity to give constructive, Christlike service is offered to some of our men in the mental hospitals, and there will be open doors for relief and recontruction work.

VI. Illustration:

Love Conquered

The story is told of a young Chrsitian woman who, during the Armenian atrocities, was pursued with her brother by a Turkish soldier. The brother was killed before his sister's eyes. She escaped. Later on, being a nurse, she was forced to work in a military hospital. Into the ward one day was brought this Turkish soldier who had killed her brother. She recognized him. He was very ill, and slight neglect on her part would have been all that was necessary to insure his death. The young woman describes the struggle that ensued. The old Adam called, "Revenge!" The New Christ cried, "Love!" Love conquered. She nursed the Turkish soldier as carefully as she did any patient. One day he recognized her. Unable to restrain his curiosity, he asked her why she had not let him die. She replied, "I am a follower of Him who said, 'Love your enemies and do them good.' " The soldier was silent for a time. At last he spoke, "If that is your religion, I want it, too."

VII. Food for Thought:

What does it mean to be "peace-makers" in our day?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

MAKING OUR VACATION DAYS COUNT FOR CHRIST

Prelude: "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me."

Songs: "Work for the Night is Coming," "In Our Work and in Our Play."

Scripture: Rom. 12:1-18, Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; Rom. 7:6.

Prayer.

Aim of Meeting: To help boys and girls value all of their time for Christ and to realize without Christ we cannot do anything useful and noble.

Topics for Short Talks: "In What Ways Can We Spend our Vacation Days Profitably At Home?" "What Does It Mean To Follow Christ In Our Work And In Our Play?" "Creating A Spirit Of Helpfulness In Our Spare Time."

Leader's Introduction:

In studying the life of Jesus we find that Jesus daily lived to please His heavenly Father and that He was so busy that He didn't even have a place to sleep. Services which Jesus rendered and which we too can render are: Comforting the weary and brokenhearted, feeding the hungry, helping the sick, and spreading the gospel. The manner in which a person spends his leisure time has a great effect upon his personality and character. We should use the opportunities we have for enriching our personalities and carrying out God's plans for our lives just as Jesus did in prayer and in service to humanity.

We can live for Christ and make our vacation days count whether we are at home or in a summer camp. God always needs people who are living according to his laws in their various occupations, such as producing and distributing food, clothing, and shelter, and serving others to advance His Kingdom in their every-day tasks.

Some of the ways that we may be of service are: Making surprise gifts for the boys from our church who are in the army, Civilian Public Service camps; helping with the work for migrants; China relief; work for Christian refugees, and cooperating with the program of Mennonite war relief.

Offertory—Instrumental Solo

Chorus: "Let The Beauty of Jesus Be Seen In Me"

Prayer points: 1. Ask God to help you use your play and work time in such a way this summer that you will become stronger and more effective Christians. 2. Pray God to help you use your time to become better citizens.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

GROWING IN SERVICE

Ephesians 6:5-8

We know from experience that Juniors do not require much persuasion to enter into service activities, such activities are the natural outcome of their own joyous Christian lives. Sometimes, however, they need to be shown that their service should not be seasonable or spasmodic, but should continue throughout the year, whenever and wherever the need exists.

WHAT ONE JUNIOR SOCIETY DID

A Junior society in Illinois decided to go at the matter of service very definitely, not satisfied with doing one or two things as they might arise at certain times in the year, such as Thanksgiving and Christmas.

They decided to do Monthly Service, that is, for every month they put down a list of things, two or three that could be done that month. They started with January and went right down through the year. They had almost thirty different items listed, and they accomplished them all.

Among the things they did for the church were these: (a) planted and cared for flower beds at the church, (b) bought a new velvet communion cloth, (c) bought several religious pictures for S.S. classrooms. For Mission: (a) a fund for every missionary project the church was carrying on, (b) sent toys to boys and girls to a church in Mexico, (c) took a special offering on C.E. Day for foreign work, and next they promoted a Bible reading contest.

Now which of these things could your society not do?

WHAT I CAN DO

In wartime not so many people are out of work, but there are still people who are sick and lonely. There are sick and shut-in boys and girls who would enjoy letters, scrapbooks, toys (some Juniors make scrapbooks out of old Christmas cards). There are people who would like to be visited or to have a Junior hymn serenade. As war goes on more children overseas lose their homes and parents have to live in refugee centers. Sometimes these centers are cold camps, old and unheated buildings. There children are often hungry and miserable. Juniors could easily raise money to be sent to buy food; Juniors could collect clothing.

Whatever Juniors find to do to help others they will find joy in service, growing happier as their service grows.

THE QUESTION BEE

1. How can we be building a home for eternity, while we are yet here on earth? 2. Why are we happy when we serve? 3. Why are the smallest deeds of kindness often the most appreciated? 4. For whom should we pray?

The Prayer List

Dear God and Father of Mankind, help me to grow daily in faithful service to Thee and my fellow men. May I be great enough that I may become humble, so that I may serve my fellow men. Remove all hate from my heart, because I know that would slow up my growth. I pray that I may remain unselfish and give freely when I have in abundance that which thou hast given me. Amen.

MEDITATIONS OF A YOUNG BRIDE

By Arletta Christman Harvey

Come now, my dear, and we shall dream anew,
For you and Love, and I we three
Have plans to make;
Those other dreams belong to yesterday!
Today all things are new!
Our married love, our little house,
These lovely things to start our home,
Are but the answers to the dreams gone-by!

Ah, Love—the joy of this would be bewildering
If it were not for God and thee.
So, in our home's tomorrow
We shall not plan alone;
Thou, Love, must be its very heart,
And God shall be for e'er enthroned!
Within its doors, a refuge at the close of day,
Where we are understood and feel no fear,

Where we shall know companionship,
And all the joy of common, little homey things:
A table simply spread,
Our well-earned daily bread,
A bowl of flowers and a book to read,
The restfulness of order, and always there
The freedom to be just ourselves.

Then, what we are, my dear,
To that let us be true;
We shall not always think the same,
Need not agree—except in fairness and in truth;
But ne'er shall darkness fall upon
Our hearts' misunderstanding,
For in our love let each one find his best!

Deep happiness we find in saying this—
"Our home . . . our love,"
And, if we worthy be, O God,
Please let us say, "Our children," too some day.
'Twould make our home complete
In love and never ending gratitude to thee!

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Brother W. F. Unruh, former missionary to India is now pastor of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. This church has adopted the 100 per cent subscription plan. The article "A Good Reason" has been printed a second time because of mistakes that crept into the first printing. It truly gives a very good reason for reading our church papers.

Ruth Eymann gave some devotional messages for the worship period of a meeting of the Worth While Circle of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California. Later she was asked to give them at a mother-daughter banquet. Then she was asked to submit a copy for possible publication in The Mennonite. Read them at the beginning of each day and be inspired.

Esko Loewen is the writer of the letter head "From One In C.P.S." This letter was written for the Women's Mission Society of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas, and read at one of its meetings. Brother Loewen has been on the staff of the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa., for nearly a year. He serves as editor of the M.C.C. News Letter. He also helps with the gardening and washing for the staff. Sometimes he helps pack clothes for relief in the clothing depot. He is a graduate of Bethel College.

Erland Waltner is pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. This past year he served as President of the Northern District Conference. He belongs to the Sunday School committee of the Board of Education of which he is a member. Brother Waltner is a graduate of Biblical Seminary, New York, and has traveled in Europe and Palestine.

Lloyd L. Ramseyer gave the address "Foundations For Tomorrow" as the commencement address at Bethel College this spring. He is the President of Bluffton College and an ordained minister.

"LOVE SUFFERETH LONG, AND IS KIND"

LOVE must give; yea, LOVE must give itself. LOVE is not a go-getter; LOVE is a go-giver. There is no cajoling, no coercing, no coaxing here—it is the forthright nature of LOVE that it is boundlessly active in self-giving. . . Whatever else Calvary may or may not signify, it is the one dreadful and terrible symbol that bleeds forth that suffering love in the universe which must give itself to the uttermost—even unto death. W. Robertson Nicoll used to quote the words of the German thinker, "If I were God, the sorrows of the world would break my heart." The Christian editor and preacher replied, "He knew not what he said. The sorrows of the world did break the Heart of hearts."

Thoughts of Devotions

Lord, help me live my life that all may see
The fruitfulness of living close to Thee.

To make my faith so real, so glad a thing
That others to Thy knowledge it may bring;
A faith so vital, loyal and benign
That in my face its loveliness may shine.

Help me to show the wonder and delight,
That come from walking in Thy holy sight
That earth's most precious joys can never be
Compared with just one hour of knowing Thee.

Grant me affection that shall so enfold
My fellow creatures in its gentle hold,
That prejudice of color, race or creed,
Shall never blind my eyes to human need.

Lord, help me live my faith that all may see
The pricelessness of being one with Thee.

A GOOD REASON

A good reason why The Mennonite should be read in every home is because it aids in bringing our thoughts into line with the thinking of Christ. The Apostle Paul speaks of "bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" (II Cor. 10:5). The Bible is, of course, the body of literature pre-eminently qualified to help us think God's thoughts after Him, and for that reason should be read every day. A careful examination of our church paper will reveal how thoroughly it is colored by the "obedience to Christ." It will also be found to be of great aid in "bringing every thought. . . to the obedience of Christ." I feel that the church which brings The Mennonite into every home of the congregation is thereby doing a great deal to Christianize life among us and about us.

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

C.P.S. Candidates for Service in China

Government authorization for a foreign service unit in China has been secured. A unit of seventy men under the over all administration of the American Friends Service Committee will train and leave for China in four separate groups within a six or eight months period.

The Mennonite representative of the first group of the China unit will be Robert S. Kreider, former C.P.S. Educational Secretary. Other candidates from M.C.C. camps for a later group of the China unit are Irvin B. Horst of Grottoes, Va., Melvin Rensberger of Beltsville, Md., and James Rineer, Methodist, at North Fork, California.

Camp Briefs

Brother Henry A. Fast, General Director, is on a prolonged tour of far-western camps....

Eight men have been detached to the State College, East Lansing, Michigan, for training in dairy herd testing....

General Lewis B. Hershey addressed the third C.P.S. Administrator's School....

A government-operated C.P.S. camp at Mancos, Colorado, will open on July 1. The camp will serve chiefly the men who are not members of historic peace churches, though volunteers from any camp can be transferred to Mancos....

Brother Elmer Ediger, former Educational Director at Weeping Water, Nebraska, is now Educational Secretary of the Mennonite C.P.S. program and is stationed at the Akron, Pa., office....

Foundations for Tomorrow

evil of the day as an opportunity to do good? After all, the darker the night the more brightly a light shines. One person has said, "When the world is at its worst, Christians ought to be at their best," while another says, "The days are evil, but this gives you your chance."

Rather than despairing let us face the future and see what our assets are, what we have at hand that we might use to build a foundation for a better world, and in what areas we must find better materials than those that went into the foundations of past decades. Science is ready to make its contribution. There have been rapid advances in science which can at will be turned to the benefit of man. Chemists have given us a wide variety of coal tar derivatives, one of the most important being the sulphanilamides which have gone far to take the danger out of various diseases. Vitamin concentrates have made it possible to provide enough vitamins for everyone without depending upon natural resources. Synthetics have freed us from limited supplies of natural resources, and will free us from additional ones. Plastics may bring in a new era of construction after the war. So numerous have been the discoveries of chemists from seemingly unimportant things that the age before us may be the age of coal tar, soy beans, and peanuts for the large number of useful products which can be derived from them.

In the field of medicine, treatment of tuberculosis, new advances in surgery, increased use of vaccines, have further reduced the physical dangers and increased the potential happiness of life.

Engineering has made great strides in producing new machines to do our work. These have provided us with greatly increased power, new slaves to work for us and to make it possible for all to have plenty. "It would take eight million galley slaves to propel the Queen Mary. A modern locomotive pulls as much as could 25,000 straining men. The aircraft carrier Lexington produced power equivalent to the hand labor of all the ablebodied citizens of the United States in Thomas Jefferson's day. A century ago it took three hours of a farmer's time to raise a bushel of wheat; now it takes less than ten minutes." (A. H. Compton) For the first time in the history of the race, freedom from want is possible. But in the midst of potential plenty, we have millions starving while the genius of science is turned to destruction. Science has produced the possibility of freedom from many kinds of fear. There are many diseases which man need no longer fear; he no longer fears many of the elements because he has learned to understand them. Yet in the midst of ways to reduce fear, millions live in the greatest fear yet known to mankind; they cower in caves and dig holes in the ground to get away from man's greatest enemy, man himself, who, instead of using the discoveries of science to the benefit of man, has turned them against his brother, and he himself must hide from the light for fear of what brother will do to him.

Science can provide means to achieve ends; it cannot provide the ends. Science itself has no conscience. The great lack of our time has been a lack of social organization. It has been a lack of ability to get along with our fellowmen. A fitting epitaph for this generation might be, "They conquered the forces of nature, but were destroyed by the forces of human nature."

(To Be Concluded)

It is the heart and not the brain that to the highest doth attain.

We are saved by His atonement, not by our attainment.

We have now resigned to take charge of the Mennonite Church at Middlebury, Indiana, which is in both my wife's and my own home community. We will live on my father's farm, operating it while I serve the Middlebury congregation. We have done this for the sake of our children whom we have long desired to have live in a rural environment and have the advantages of farm life. The opportunity has come to us this spring so we are taking it. We will leave Souderton about August 15. I might add that we have four daughters and three sons. This church will be in the Central Conference of Illinois Mennonites, but at present we plan to keep our membership with the General Conference.... We will of course greatly regret leaving the happy relationship we have enjoyed at Souderton and our many friends here, but we feel that for the sake of the family we should make the move."

WEED CONTROL

It is May. The garden is clean. The rains come. The wise gardener seeks to work his garden as soon as possible. He does so for a number of reasons. One of them is to destroy the shoots of thousands of little weed seeds that have sprouted but perhaps have not yet appeared above the ground. Someone ignorant of gardening might argue that surely these thousands of little shoots below the surface could not possibly endanger a garden.

The garden of a child's heart presents much the same conditions. Some gardeners permit such a garden to go entirely to weeds. They make no effort to plant any useful crop in it. The harvest is put into our penitentiaries, reform schools, etc. Some other gardeners see that this won't do. They plant straight, nice rows of productive crops by taking the child to Sunday school and church, by giving him a Bible, and by teaching him to pray. Yet they are somewhat unmindful of the weeds that may be sprouting. As yet they cannot see them. The garden of childhood appears clean and innocent. In that garden are areas called school, play, and reading material. Those are all good sections to have in a child's garden. However, Satan and his helpers here on earth are ever very busy strewing weed seed into these sections. There are parent gardeners who are unmindful of the seeds of worldly standards that are germinating in the school area, of the seeds of commercialized, corruptive recreation in the play area, and the seeds of secularism in a great deal of the child's reading matter area.

Around the adolescent period they may notice that there are weeds in the garden that are growing vigorously. Some of the tallest have stood so close to the good, rightful plants that they have escaped notice. So many others are growing by this time, that although some are hoed off with vigor, the rest keep on in their rapid growth.

The result—the hoe may strike at all of them in time. But many, many have gotten a root system. They are hoed off, and the roots cause them to shoot out again. Thus throughout the life of the garden the weeds may always be kept in subjection of the rightful plants, but nevertheless the weeds in their attempts to grow take much plant-food and moisture away.

How much better it is to destroy all sprouting weeds as soon as the garden is workable.

It is still better to keep out of the garden all the weed seeds possible. No, we can't keep all of them out, especially in the school and play areas. In the reading area we have much more control. Every parent with a concern for the future should ask, "What is my child reading?" "What kind of thought seed is being implanted in his mind?" "Are his mind and heart being filled with weed thoughts, which though never in supreme control of him, will nevertheless take away much time and energy from the right thoughts?"

The garden may seem clean and innocent, but seeds are sprouting. What kind are they?

The Junior Messenger, which can be ordered from the Mennonite Publication Office, Newton, Kansas, is full of Christian thought seed. Does the Junior boy or girl in your home receive it?—rw.

Musicians and Sunday School Teachers

By Erland Waltner

Can musicians and S. S. teachers have anything in common? Well, let us see.

Some years ago we heard a concert by Jasha Heifetz, world-famous violinist. For well over an hour he held an audience of about five thousand people spell-bound. No one seemed bored. Everyone had been inspired.

What was the secret of this man's greatness? We read a commentary on his life and learned that: "He has spent about two-fifths of his waking life playing or practicing—a total of over 68,000 hours." Now we began to understand why he could hold our attention for one hour. Though he is now considered the world's greatest violinist, he continues to practice regularly for every performance. No wonder that instrument in his hands thrilled people's souls. Before Heifetz performed, he had prepared.

Has this anything to do with us who are S. S. teachers? Well, are we not having some trouble getting and keeping the attention of our pupils? We have excused ourselves with the thought that one can not expect too much at their age, but could it be possible that we have been guilty of inadequate preparation?

If a musician spares himself no efforts in preparation for a presentation of the inspiring music of some composer, should not a S. S. teacher be even more zealous in preparation to present the inspired Word of God? If a musician takes time to memorize his scores so that he can play them flawlessly, ought not a S. S. teacher be thoroughly acquainted with the lesson he is teaching? If a musician studies and tries to develop the best playing techniques, ought not a conscientious S. S. teacher ever seek for the best techniques of presenting the most important message in the world to his pupils? Why then is there so much slip-shod, uninteresting, and ineffective S. S. teaching in our churches?

You say that you a "drafted" teacher. You do not have the time to do the task well, but because no one else is willing, you have taken the class and are doing the best you can. Well, God bless you for your willingness to do the best you can, but are you honestly doing your best?

Are you a faithful student of the Bible as well as of your S. S. quarterly?

Are you faithful in prayer? Do you pray for every member of your class at least once each week?

Are you really trying to improve your teaching technique by studying and trying out different approaches?

Have you taken advantage of teacher training courses offered in your church or in your community?

Do you really prepare yourself mentally and spiritually for every S. S. class? If you have spent only ten minutes in preparation, why should your pupils spend thirty minutes listening to you?

"Do your utmost to let God see that you at least are a sound workman, with no need to be ashamed of the way you handle the word of Truth." II Tim. 2:15 (Moffatt)

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

SECULARIZATION

This is a word which is becoming more and more familiar to us. It is used to describe a social process or a gradual development away from that which is sacred. When we say an act or an organization is secular we mean that it is exactly opposite an act or organization which is sacred. A ball game is a secular act; a church worship service is a sacred one. Of course, not everything that is secular is bad, nor is all that is sacred necessarily good.

An Illustration

An illustration of the secularization process with which all of us are familiar is the changing attitude which Christians have taken toward the Sabbath. For instance, among the early New England Puritans every member of the community was absolutely to do no work on Sunday except that which was positively necessary. Failure to attend religious services was punishable by a fine or some other form of censure. This attitude prevailed because the Sabbath was considered a sacred day. To work on this day or not to attend worship services was felt to be blasphemy. But within the course of two hundred years this attitude has completely changed. There is perhaps no other area in the country today where church attendance is lower and working on the Sabbath greater than in industrial New England. Thus, by a gradual process, step by step, over many years the Sabbath has been secularized.

Among Mennonites

As Mennonites take jobs in industry, business, and various forms of public service that require employees to work on Sunday we too are witnessing the secularization of the Sabbath among Mennonites. At first we protest vigorously, then we tolerate but don't approve, and finally we accept the situation as inevitable and seek to rationalize and justify it.

Military Service

There are many other illustrations of the secularization process among Mennonites. Beliefs which were once considered sacred and God-given are no longer practiced or considered divine. Take the case of military service for Christians. For the first three centuries of the Christian era Christians considered it a sacred obligation not to be associated with the military process. Mennonites have traditionally held a similar view. But through the years the secularization process has been at work. The European Mennonites compromised by gradual stages until practically none of them consider this a sacred Christian belief. Rather than compromise our forefathers came to this country to escape military service. Today many of their descendants are defaulting on that which they held dear and paid a great price for. About 70 per cent of our drafted young men in the United States have accepted some form of military service, thus reflecting an attitude of secularization on this question.

Other Evidences

The question of swearing an oath, the principle of Christian simplicity, the practice of separation from the world, the belief that the true church is a suffering church, and other religious principles which were all held to be sacred doctrines of the Mennonite Church, are undergoing the process of secularization.

PROBLEMS AND PROGRESS

Jagdeeshpur, via Raipur, C. P. India
Jan. 11, 1943

Rev. P. H. Richert
Newton, Kansas. U. S. A.
Dear Dr. Richert:

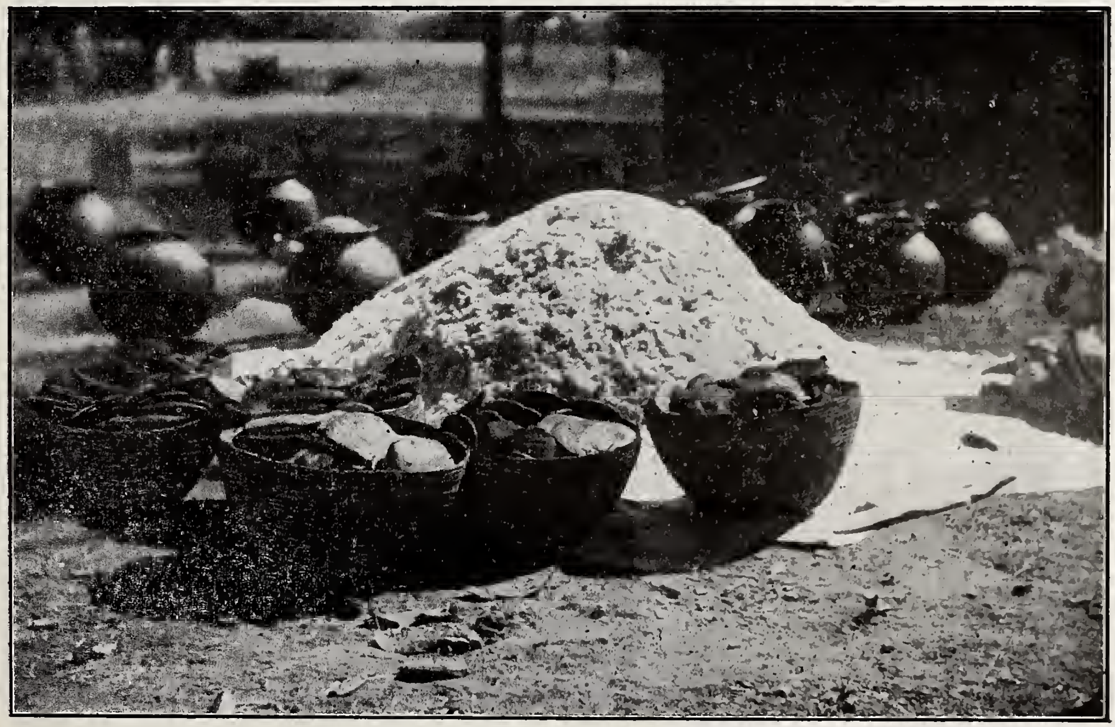
The past three months have been just another quarter of work, planning, and anticipating the future. We order drugs from Bombay and find that they are not available. Or we order an ordinary drug, formerly obtained for a dollar, and find that now they cost five to ten dollars. Fortunately, not all drugs are thus, and fortunately our store rooms are fairly well provided with the most essential supplies. Dr. Bauman had a very good supply of drugs on hand in Champa. The question is, what will we do when our present supply of quinine is all? The Lord knows this. We commit the problem to Him and also ask for your prayers. Prayer does make a difference.

I have spent about five months away from Basna the past year. Most of this time I was in Champa. The work there is going on quite well. Mrs. Ratzlaff has the work well in hand. Miss Pauls gives most of her time to the Leper Home. At Jagdeeshpur (Basna) Dr. Roy is winning the confidence of the people and taking full responsibility in my absence and a large share of it when I am present. There has been a great deal of malaria the past year. Janjgir had an unusually severe spell of it. Mrs. Moyer did noble work in treating the many sick and difficult cases at that time.

Following are the statistics of the medical work of our mission, 1942:

Inpatients	1556
Average daily inpatients	39
Out patients	14650
Visits or return calls	21547
Operations, Major	189
Operations, Minor	665
Operations Cataract (included under major)	90
Laboratory tests	5336
Obstetric cases, Normal	46
Obstetric cases, Abnormal	21
Income	Ps. 13956

(about four thousand dollars)



This gives some idea of what the preparations for the meal mentioned in Brother Dester's article must have looked like. This picture shows a Christmas meal prepared for the lepers at the Champa Leper Home. The large pile in the center is cooked rice. In the forefront are baskets filled with bread. Further back stand pots filled with curry, the meat dish. The meat is not corn-fed beef but goat meat. To serve beef would soon put an end to our mission work there. Some Indians get meat only once a month and some only several times a year

The Leper Home had an average of 557 lepers in the home every day of the past year. Aside from this the Leper Home statistics are included above.

The work of the church shows some progress. There are 262 members in the compound church at Jagdeeshpur, and about that many children. Thirty babies were born in 1942. This was the first Christmas we could celebrate in the new church where there was room for all. On Monday after Christmas we had a common meal of curry and rice at which about 550 people took part. How would you like the job of feeding that many people with twenty dollars, so as to give each a good meal? This was made possible by the Christmas money sent by the societies. The poor district Christians gave half of their Christmas money for clothing for the poor widows. The Christmas festivities included a thanksgiving sale, several Christmas programs, the yearly meeting, and the blessing of children. On December 27 two girls were baptized before returning to the Janjgir boarding. On January 3 fifteen boys, girls, and women were baptized. Many of our people are working at an airport some ninety miles from here. Quite a few young men are in the army.

Very sincerely yours,
H. E. Dester

IN MEMORIAM

HENRY ALBRECHT, son of Henry and Helena, nee Penner, Albrecht, was born December 10, 1873, at Lindenau, Russia, and died May 14, 1943, at Beatrice, Nebraska. With his parents he came to Beatrice, Nebraska, in 1884. He attended the parochial school taught by Rev. J. K. Penner. He was baptized by the Elder Gerhard Penner and became a member of the First Mennonite Church. In 1906 he married Marie Wiens. In 1918 the Lord called her home. From 1906 to 1930 he lived on the farm. Then he moved to Beatrice. Two daughters and their families, two brothers, and one sister mourn him.

ARNOLD E. NACHTIGAL, son of William J. and Susie Nachtigal, was born near Buhler, Kansas, June 7, 1906, and died May 8, 1943. After attending grade school he studied at Bethel College and at Kansas State College, Fort Hays. In 1923 he was baptized by Rev. P. R. Voth and received into the membership of the Buhler Mennonite Church. Before his death Mr. and Mrs. Nachtigal taught the Gordon Grade School near Goessel, Kansas. He is mourned by his wife (the former Blanche F. Cochroft); his parents; two brothers, Eldo of Buhler and Harlow in the armed forces in Africa; and four sisters, Mrs. Waldo Harms of Whitewater, Mrs. Arthur Kaiser of Newton, Mrs. John Penner, and Mrs. E. R. Terry, both of San Antonio, Texas.

THOUGHTS OF DEVOTION

By Ruth Eymann

For the devotional talk this afternoon I wish to share a few thoughts with you from New Days for Old by Margaret Brown, and Streams in the Desert by Mrs. Chas. E. Cowman.

Let us take a representative week from your life or mine.

SUNDAY—I wonder how many of us truly say with the Psalmist: "I was glad when they said unto me, let us go into the house of the Lord" Ps. 122:1? In olden times it was the custom of each Christian to carry a little lamp to church. In every pew small sockets were prepared for the holding of the light. So it was that there was always a dark place in the church when any member was absent. All too often we look to the pulpit alone for light. We forget that each individual also preaches a sermon by his life.

MONDAY—Is it a blue Monday? Are you fearful of the future? Let us not be Christians as to the few great things of our lives and then act like atheists as to the many small things which fill up the greater space of them. Trust Him.

Do not look forward to the changes and chances of life in fear, rather look to them in full hope that, as they arise, God, whose you are, will take care of you.

Always remember: either He will shield you from suffering or give you unfailing strength to bear it.

TUESDAY—In Eph. 3:19 we read "Filled with all the fullness of God." It is only the overflow from the fullness within our own lives that brings refreshing to anyone else. But someone says, "I don't have the capacity that others have." Standing on the deck of a ship in mid ocean you see the sun reflected from its depths. From a little boat on a mountain lake you see the same sun reflected from its clear waters. Looking into a mountain spring not six inches deep you see the same great sun. Look into the dew drop of the morning and there it is again. The sun has a way of adapting itself to its reflection. The ocean is not too large to hold it, nor the dew drop too small. So God can fill any man whether his capacity be like the ocean, the mountain lake, like the spring, or the tiny dew drop. Whatever therefore your capacity, the text opens to you the possibility of being filled with all the fullness of God.

WEDNESDAY—This is a particularly busy day and we feel rushed for time. We are always complaining that our days are few and then acting as though there would be no end of them.

So busy? If Jesus, the Son of God, felt it necessary to rise before the breaking of the day to pour out His heart to God in prayer, how much more ought you and I to pray unto Him. What Jesus gathered into His life from His prayers we can never know, but this we do know, that the prayerless life is a powerless life. A prayerless life may be a noisy life and fuss around a great deal, but such a life is far removed from Him who, by day and night, prayed to God.

Strength is not in bluster and noise. Strength is in quietness. The lake must be calm if the heavens are to be reflected on its surface. Our Lord loved people, but how often we read of His going away from them for a brief season. He tried every little while to withdraw from the crowd. He was always stealing away at evening to the hills—to pray. The one thing needed above all others today is that we shall go apart with our Lord.

We should be better Chrisians if we were more alone, if we spent more time in retirement and quiet waiting upon God.

Nor will it suffice to have spiritual nourishment occasionally. You need it daily just as you need physical nourishment daily.

The reality of Jesus comes as a result of secret prayer and a personal study of the Bible that is devotional and sympathetic. Christ becomes more real to the one who persists in the cultivation of His presence.

May we remember that nothing lies beyond the reach of prayer except that which lies outside the will of God.

THURSDAY—This is a quiet day when you seem to have more time. When you are all alone, what do you think about, where do your thoughts dwell? It is impossible to think weakly and live strongly, to ponder low things and live on the heights, to think falsely and live a life of truth and purity. As you think so are you. No good deed but was first a good thought. I wonder if you have been thinking on Him, on His Word, and doing His will? In Korea when a person decides to become a Christian he tells his friends that he is now "going to do the doctrine." The Chinese Christian has another way of expressing the same thought. He says "I am reading my Bible and behaving it." May this same spirit be in our hearts as we read our Scripture portion each day.

FRIDAY—We have been asked to go some place; should we say "yes" or "no"? One of the shortest words in all languages, yet apparently one of the hardest to say is the little word "no." "Yes," always seems easier to say. But those who "try everything once" are sure to be damaged in the process. The wise person is willing to learn from the experience of others when to say "no." Have I forgotten that: "One cannot honor Christ in one's walk, and at the same time walk with those who dishonor Him; that attachment to Christ is the only secret of detachment from the world?"

Vice is made so very attractive by a mask of charm that can only be pierced by wisdom or bitter experience. I must never forget that sin is only charming in the present or in the immediate future. It has no charm in the past. How fascinating is sin a moment before it is committed! How absolutely necessary it seems to our happiness. But when it slips into the past, what unhappiness and sorrow it brings not only to us but to our loved ones.

Your sin may not look very large to you, but if it is anything that keeps you from communion with God it is tremendous, no matter how insignificant it may appear in your blinded eyes. This recalls the verse in Hebrews 3:13, "Lest any of you be hardened through the deceitfulness of sin." But someone asks, "What is sin for me? How am I to tell?" John Wesley's mother once wrote to him when he was in college, "Would you judge of the lawfulness or the unlawfulness of a pleasure, take rule: Whatever weakens your reason, impairs the tenderness of your conscience, obscures your sense of God, or takes off the relish of spiritual things; whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind, that thing to you is sin." I'd like to read her five rules again. One, whatever weakens your reason; two, whatever impairs the tenderness of your conscience: whatever obscures your sense of God, and this fourth one I wish you to notice particularly; whatever takes off the relish of spiritual things; fifth, whatever increases the authority of your body over your mind, that thing, to you is sin.

SATURDAY—the last day of the week. As I look back over the week, has my life been so winsome that others are finding it easier to say "yes" to the highest, and "no" to that which is low"?

G. Campbell Morgan says that in the home of a gentleman who was entertaining him, in one room he always detected the fragrance of roses. He said to his host one day, "I wish you would tell me how it is that I never come into this room without seeming to detect the fragrance of roses." The gentleman smiled and said: "Ten years ago I was in the Holy Land, and while there I bought a small phial of attar of roses. It was wrapped in cotton-wool, and as I was standing here unpacking it, suddenly I broke the bottle. I took the whole thing up, cotton-wool and all, and put it into this vase." That fragrance had permeated the clay of the vase, and it was impossible to enter the room without becoming conscious of it. Christ is called "The Rose of Sharon," and if Christ be in you and in me the fragrance of the "Rose of Sharon" will pervade and permeate our whole life and make us a comfort and a blessing to all whose lives touch our own.

FOUNDATIONS FOR TOMORROW

By Lloyd L. Ramseyer

Two houses were built, one on sand and the other on rock. The storm came and one was destroyed. The man who built upon the sand was a foolish man, but the limit of foolishness would have been reached had he rebuilt, still upon the sand.

Our house of civilization has been falling about our heads. It is now evident that it was built upon the sand. Even as the storm continues, we must begin to look about us to see what can be salvaged from the wreck to use in rebuilding. We must be able to recognize the rock and discard the building materials which have proved faulty, so that the house which we now build may be able to withstand the storms which may break upon it. Let us not be guilty of the stupidity of rebuilding on sand.

It would be trite to say that this class is being graduated in difficult times. Times are often difficult, though the difficulties are of varying types. I well remember five years ago hearing a class in a large university as it practiced for commencement exercises sing, "We're on our way to the WPA." Lack of work is not the problem today. Our concern is for a world which is apparently hopelessly jumbled and in terrible disorder, a world in which we scarcely know whether to plan for a tomorrow.

It is necessary that we first take stock to see what some of the potential storms may be that our house must withstand, and also to see the efforts which are being made again to use sand in the construction of the foundation. Then, with this picture before us, let us choose the materials which must be used. First, let us see the nature of the difficulties which we must face.

We will face a world in which many of our precious natural resources will have been depleted for destructive purposes, irreplacable materials such as coal, iron ore, and oil. In addition, large areas of the world's great cities lie in ruins and must be rebuilt. In large areas in Europe the population is at the point of starvation. Children cannot be starved without serious effects on their health and out-look on life even if they survive physically. National boundaries have been violated, the peoples dispersed, and their governments have fallen. New political alignments will be necessary, a very difficult task in view of racial differences and hereditary prejudices.

Our own international attitude is none too promising. Instead of seeing that a treaty of revenge after the last war led to a desire for retaliation, there is a growing feeling that this severe treaty was in reality too lenient, and that the solution to our dilemma must come through making it physically impossible for these countries ever to become strong again.

Kingsbury Smith tells us that the American plan is to occupy Germany for an extended period after the war, with American Gauleiters to govern the country. Relief would be given, not in a spirit of brotherhood, but "in our own interests. . . we must prevent famine, disease, and complete economic chaos." It would be the plan to "limit relief measures to the minimum required to prevent revolution and chaos."

Major Elliot wrote recently that our aim in Japan must be "the complete and ruthless destruction of Japanese industry, so that not one brick of any Japanese factory shall be left upon another, so that there shall not be in Japan one electric motor or one steam or gasoline engine, nor a chemical laboratory, not so much as a book which tells how these things are made." George Weller wrote that we must fight Japan "until not alone the body but the soul. . . is annihilated, until the land. . .is plowed with salt, its men dead and its women and children divided and lost among other people." And we live in a nation of supposed followers of the One who said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." It is physically impossible to hold down permanently a great nation. If we sow in hate, what shall we reap? When we persist in acting contrary to the laws of God, what good result can we expect?

It is no secret that even our friends among nations are not too well agreed. Even during the war one nation has broken off relations with an ally. It is apparently true that friendly nations are jockeying for position, so that each might be in the most favorable position in relation to the other when peace comes. There is no mutual faith and respect, even among allies.

There is evidence that when this war ends there are many who instead of going ahead to a day of shared responsibilities will want to go back to giving major attention to our own selfish interests. We should come out of this war with a greater realization of our mutual dependence upon each other and the determination that no nation shall be in want while we have plenty. But there are powerful voices raised in favor of a renewal of our former selfishness. In his presidential address, the president of the National Association of Manufacturers said, "I am not making guns or tanks to win a 'people's revolution.' I am not fighting for a quart of milk for every Hottentot, or for a TVA on the Danube, or for governmental handouts of free utopias." We may not want more TVA's even in our own country, nor governmental handouts of free utopias, nor do we know definitely the dietary needs of the Hottentots; however, before the spirit of this declaration we revolt, for it indicates that we must again return to a period of self-interest. If we are to live in plenty while other nations go hungry, the period between this war and the next will not be an extended one.

In our own country we will have grave problems. Those who emphasize unlimited concentration on total war imply that our problems are all international. Such is not the case. When the war ends, we will then have our own problems brought to the fore in a magnified form. American Japanese must be permanently settled in self-sustaining circumstances. Labor organizations unable or unwilling to agree with government and striking during a war will not hesitate to show their strength after the war. We must find some way to bring justice peaceably to both labor and capital. Millions of men will return from the army and they must have jobs. Many of these men will be returning from actual battle, hardened by inhuman experiences, schooled in destruction, perhaps bitter and disillusioned. Even our civilian population will have become hardened by reports of mass killing, and perhaps with deep prejudices against those nations which have been the direct cause of their losses and suffering.

We may very likely have a great military system, the curse of Europe for generations, fastened upon us. Even now bills are before Congress which would set up a permanent system of military conscription. There are many who feel that we must keep a mighty military machine, that we must remain so powerful that no other nation would dare to insult us. How much better it would be if we would live so that no other nation would care to attack us. Morison says, "Any realistic envisagement of the post-war order is bound to see it as a highly militarized order. Those of us who are working for another kind of order must know that the odds are heavily against us."

There is a probability, too, that following this war there may be an orgy of intemperance and immorality. When the pressure of war is over, who can tell to what depths men may be driven in the reaction which follows. The twenties were known for their cynicism, what may the fifties be?

There is a brighter side, too, and we should not disregard it. While we have those who cry for vengeance, we have noble souls like Madam Chiang Kai-Shek who in spite of the deep suffering of her people is willing and anxious to forgive. She realizes that only through forgiveness is there hope for the future. She said recently, "There must be no bitterness in the reconstructed world. No matter what we have undergone and suffered, we must try to forgive those who injured us and remember only the lessons gained thereby."

There are millions who have developed an even greater loathing of war than they had in the past. The period following the first world war saw a great growth in opposition to war. The writer of Preacher's Present Arms found less than one-hundred ministers in the U. S. outside the historic peace churches during the last war who were definitely committed to opposition to all war. Now there are 3,500 who are either committed to or very sympathetic to this religious viewpoint. In England, too, this doctrine has grown. The influence of this vast group of men and women will be felt in the years to follow. There are millions of others, who feel that wars will lead us nowhere. They are the people who do not believe in war, but once in, see no way out but through it. These, too, will be working for a world of peace and brotherhood.

We will have a smaller world than we have ever had in the past. We have begun to realize more than ever before that the nations of the world are interdependent, that we cannot live in isolation while the rest of the world suffers. If we can get the right interpretation and application of that belief, we are headed toward real progress.

With all of the trouble in the world, shall we be downhearted? There were always those who felt that the golden ages were all behind them. Three centuries before the birth of Christ, Diogenes the Cynic said, "Bury me on my face; the World will soon be upside down." In 1801 Wilberforce said, "I dare not marry—the future is so unsettled." In 1806 William Pitt said, "There is scarcely anything round us but ruin and despair." In 1848 Lord Shaftesbury said, "Nothing can save the British Empire from shipwreck." In 1849 Disraeli said "In industry, commerce, and agriculture there is no hope." And when Wellington was dying in 1852, he said, "I thank God I shall be spared from seeing the consumation of ruin that is gathering about us."

All through history we have had the good and the evil struggling for mastery. Sometimes one gains, sometimes the other. Even during times of destruction such as this, there are evidences of continued ethical standards of high order. Even while man engages in slaughter he sets up conventions as to how that slaughter should be carried on. He sets up rules as to how prisoners of war should be treated even as he invents new instruments for human destruction. Even while we kill thousands, we are appalled, as we should be, at the killing of a few prisoners in cold blood. It is encouraging that these evidences of culture still live. Were they likewise to perish we would indeed be in a serious condition.

What should the Christian college graduate do in a day like this? Should he like Hamlet say, "The times are out of joint, Oh cursed spite, that ever I was born to set them right?" Or should he take the

The Mid-Week Prayer Service

By Rev. Ward W. Shelly

The development of a successful prayer service is the hardest work the pastor has to do. It is not a preaching service; it is not a social gathering or friendly get-to-gether. The real purpose of the meeting is to pray. The prayer service is the power house of the Church, and too much importance cannot be attached to it. You will recall that the Church was born in a prayer service on the Day of Pentecost. If you read the history of many churches you will find that their existence is the result of a group of people who gathered to pray either in a home, on the threshing floor of a barn or in the open air. If the Church was born in prayer, certainly, it requires nothing less to sustain it.

I have here a few suggestions for the conducting of a prayer service. First the place of prayer must be made ready. The room should be clean, tidy, and warm. Our spiritual attitude is greatly affected by physical condition. If the prayer service is held in the church it should not be in a room where the people will be disturbed by another meeting in an adjoining room. Make it as easy as possible to concentrate on prayer. It is difficult enough if there are no disturbances.

Then, the people must be prepared. It is really a people's meeting. All should come in the spirit of prayer, of worship, and of fellowship. They should all be of one accord. They should come with one aim—to pray. The service should be such that the people will come with expectation.

As for the pastor, he too must be prepared. He will prepare with secret prayer and devotional reading. The pastor as anyone else must first learn to pray in secret before he can pray in public.

In the prayer service the religious life of the church finds public expression by the people themselves. The people need the prayer service as an aid to growth and for the cultivation of the devotional spirit. If the devotional spirit can be developed in a congregation there will be little danger of worldliness and less danger of quarrels. At the prayer service all the interests of the Church should be laid before God in prayer. In the prayer service the mutual needs of the people are discovered. The prayer service develops power in the congregation. We need spiritual power in the pews as well as behind the pulpit. The prayer service develops gifts that are in the church. It brings to light the hidden talents of the people. The prayer meeting also affords us the opportunity to fulfill such injunctions in the Scripture as "bear one another's burdens" and "forsaking not the assembling of ourselves together."

In this service the spirit of praise should be developed. This will drive out the spirit of grumbling and criticism. I remember hearing people in prayer service tell how the devil almost kept them at home—how the devil was after them all week—and a lot of other things about him. Instead of praising God they were in reality praising Satan.

The prayers should not be too long. Long prayers often "kill" a prayer service. One ounce of real believing prayer is worth more than a ten of talk to God. The prayers should be congregational prayers. The people should be definitely acquainted with the things that are being prayed for. There should be variety in the prayers and also in the conduct of the prayer season.

Things to avoid in a prayer service: 1. Self-confidence and self-display; 2. A complaining despondent spirit; 3. Monotony. 4. It is not necessary for the pastor to name the doctrines of the church or "theologize" in his prayers.

What can be studied in the service? A particular book or group of books of the Bible can be studied. Special topics such as "The Holy Spirit," "Prayer," etc., can be used. One should also be particular in choosing the hymns for the prayer service. They should be such as will add to the spirit of the topic and the service.

At certain times after the prayer service it might be well to gather around the piano and have a short hymn sing. Should there be a social period after the service? It might be helpful on very rare occasions, but do not announce the evening on which the social hour will fall. Don't attempt to build up the prayer service with socials. However, such an hour on very rare occasions might be beneficial, especially, to the middle-aged and older folks.

Now—how to get the people to come. I suppose none of us would refuse help in that line. May I tell you of the experience of the minister of the Moravian Church in Lancaster. When this pastor arrived at his charge the prayer service had died a natural death. So he announced to the church board that he was going to start the prayer service again. They all advised him to the contrary. They told him that at some of their prayer services in the past nobody would come but the pastor and the pianist. However, the new pastor insisted. The next Sunday morning he announced to the congregation the beginning of the mid-week service. Instead of begging them to come he said, "Don't come if you can possibly stay away. We don't want anyone there who will be an obstacle to our praying." That week forty came to the service and all through his ministry the attendance averaged thirty-five to forty. Sometimes new things like that will assist, but in addition to that it takes much hard work and prayer to build up the prayer service.

FROM ONE IN C.P.S.

Akron, Pa.
May 14, 1943

Dear Fellow Workers:

It is a pleasure to write you a letter. I still have evidence of your generosity in the form of the camp kit which you gave each of us as we entered the C.P.S. career. The unbleached muslin bed sheets have long since bleached out after going through camp laundries and our laundry here time and again. But they remain sturdy and unpatched even though they are in continual use. The sewing kit is also quite intact! Fortunately (or unfortunately, I don't know which) a girls' Sunday school class here has sort of taken us under their wing. Every so often the group has a sewing bee, and we furnish the sewing in the form of buttonless shirts, torn clothes, etc.

Once when Bob Kreider threw in a pair of pajamas to be used for patching there was a misunderstanding, and the old rags got patched instead. He looked like he was wearing Joseph's coat! Well, this inspired the Sunday school group to action, I guess. At any rate, several of the girls who work in a rayon mill arranged to provide each of us with rayon wear. Are we ritzy?!!

When Mother asked for this letter, she suggested I was to write about my personal view of the program and how I feel about it, the discouraging and encouraging sides of C.P.S. and our work, etc. One can not cover much ground in one letter, so I have chosen to try to reflect our visions and hopes and our frustrations and achievments in expressing them in C.P.S.

Just the other day someone said he wouldn't trade the C.P.S. experience for anything. I have been interested in hearing the number of fellows in C.P.S. who have uttered similar thoughts. One would think such an experience would be distasteful or something to be endured, rather than a fond memory and a rich experience.

When we look back and think of those first days in camp and all that has happened since, the fact that it has been a rich experience stands out all the more clearly.

Many of us entered camp with high motives and genuine determination to make this thing a real witness to our deepest faith. We were completely convinced and committed to trying to live out a life that would bear witness to our personal faith in God. The only way we knew to do that was to live that faith in God in our relationships with fellowmen regardless of who they may be or of what the consequences may be. The best vision we had of what the nature of God is was in the life of Christ, His Son. Christ said the first commandment was to love the Lord our God with all our might, strength, and heart, and the second commandment, like the unto first, is to love our neighbors as ourselves. We are to love those who hate us; we are to do good regardless of what happens to us. It is a divine imperative that our lives are to radiate God-given love, so we must do that regardless of the consequences.

1943 ALL-MENNONITE RETREAT

The first warm days of spring are here. We are beginning to get the urge to take to the lakes and woods. Summer camp and retreat plans are in the process of completion. Camp Mack, the Brethren summer camp near Milford, Indiana, will again be the location for our retreat. This site has met with much praise and favor with our people. Those who have been there know of its splendid facilities. The dates for the retreat are August 2-8. The total cost for this period will be $9.30. Of this amount $7.30 is for room and board and $2.00 for registration.

We are able to announce part of the personnel who will serve as leaders. Rev. Forrest Musser of Pandora, Ohio, Rev. Harry Yoder of Carlock, Illinois, and Rev. Donovan Smucker of Wadsworth, Ohio, will lead the study and discussion courses. Rev. Yoder's course is "The Teachings of Jesus." "Swords and Plowshares" is the title of Rev. Smucker's course, and Rev. Musser will lead a course in young people's problems, entitled "Understanding Ourselves." Rev. Jesse Smucker of Bluffton, Ohio, will be the camp pastor and conduct the Morning Watch and Sunset Services.

The government encourages the continuance of summer camps. It is permissable to use A, B, or C, gas ration books by a layman or minister to provide transportation to "churches, camps, and conferences," except in restricted areas. Bulletin ODT 10A of the Office of Defense Transportation has a statement in regard to chartering buses for the purpose of permitting those under eighteen years of age to attend camps or meetings held in camp situations.

I have never seen anyone who has given total expression to Christian love. Often we humans let our human side get the better of us and we lash out in blind moments of fury, or we unconsciously do something that indirectly does someone serious moral harm—we do not maintain our sensitivity for the love and welfare of others in all areas of our human activity. That does not remove the divine imperative that our personal lives are to radiate, at all times, as best we can, God's love. I have clearly learned that I alone am incapable of this. Only with the inspiration of the Divine is it possible to love and give expression to its power in all situations. How else is it possible actually to love and smile at a person who is sneering at you except through God-given strength and assurance?

With such high vision we entered camp. For a number of us the first camp was Denison, Iowa. We stepped into the camp determined to make of it a beloved community and to express through our work and relations with the folk in the community the spirit God's love had given us.

With that high vision we began our work. Day after day digging post holes, more days building concrete flumes trying to stop Iowa's soil from washing away, other days building dams and staring at the sharp, deep gullies that are a sad witness to poor farming practices in that part of Iowa. The daily toil was wearing. It blunted our vision and our hopes, almost overcoming us with its dull, monotonous routine. We were saddened when we saw some of our fellow campers who had no vision, consecration, or purpose. That sometimes made camp life hard and difficult.

Some of us would retreat from camp to some lonely Iowa Hill on Sunday afternoons to search for direction and strength. We would remember the old proverb about the two men who were in prison. One looked out of his cell window and saw the mud. The other looked out and saw the stars. We knew full well we, too, could either see the mud or the stars. If we let our personal selfish desires and frustrations overcome us, we could be just drafted men and we would see nothing but mud. If we released ourselves in a spirit of service and translated our daily toil into a service of love, with God's strength we could see the stars. In the silence of the autumn days out on those hillsides, a surge of new determination and purpose would make us face the coming week with assurance. Those retreats are a fond personal memory of C.P.S.

Weeks went by and the war came to our country. War! We knew what it was. We'd heard and read of the last one. We read of the present one, too. But, when the country was actually involved, the whole experience was different. Again many of us searched the very depths of our souls. While fellow beings were slaughtering and being slaughtered, we were sitting in comparative comfort, living in a peaceful beloved fellowship. In a world of hate and fear, hunger and suffering, the message of love that could heal those wounds was set aside. And we identified ourselves with that message of love! We felt keenly we had something to offer to our world, and we spent our time building fences, planting trees, digging ditches, moving sod. Many of us for a time saw the mud, but with time and deeper insight we raised our eyes to see the stars.

During those weeks some of us found real solace in Brother Lawrence's booklet, The Practice of the Presence of God. Brother Lawrence was a simple, medieval monk, a lay member of the barefooted Carmelites, who spent most of his life in the monastery kitchen. He discovered in his daily tasks with the pots and pans that he could find a deep joy and fullness if he realized that each little task he did was an expression of his love for God. So, Brother Lawrence went about his simple kitchen tasks of stirring fires, scrubbing pots and pans, and all the other little jobs, and with each one he would remember God and what God would that he should do. He became so keenly aware of God's presence that he felt could almost talk with him as a person at any time. Brother Lawrence walked daily with God and transformed each little task by his keen awareness that each one was God's task. Brother Lawrence became a benediction to all those he met because of his serenity and radiance.

C.P.S. has been a struggle. We haven't been living in a vacuum. The tensions of the day, the sorrow of witnessing the world we love and many of our loved ones throw their resources behind the false-god Mars only to be dashed down, scarred, or disillusioned has been a deeply sobering experience. At our best, we have tried to bear testimony to a better way of solving our human problems. Even though we are being ignored, snubbed, or just tolerated, we can do no other. Jeremiah used to sit on a hill above his beloved Jerusalem and weep because of the downward path his people were taking. He tried but couldn't stop them, nor could he go with them. Some have looked to Jeremiah for solace and a sense of kinship.

Today C.P.S. continues to be a struggle, a good struggle to be sure, but nevertheless a struggle. It has not furnished a plush-lined, soft utopian existence. We don't want that. As we look to the days ahead, a number of us look hopefully to the time when the way will open that we may express our spirit of good will in relief work. We look to that service not only to feed, clothe, and shelter hungry, emaciated bodies. Rather we look upon it as a mission where we can heal moral and spiritual wounds as well as restore deformed bodies. Just think of the deep hate our enemies will feel toward what now seems the inevitably victorious Allies. Those people whose brothers, sons, husbands, and fathers we are now killing, how can they feel kindly toward us when we have so meddled with sacred lives? But, if they discovered that there were people who refused to be a part of such deeds and who instead actually tried to live the faith they professed —what a witness to Christ that would be! I recall the story Brother Jesse Hoover tells of his work in Spain. He said a group of Spanish folk came to him one day and asked what these people he represented believed. Jesse explained as best he could what the Mennonite faith is. Then these people said, "We believe that, too. We want to be Mennonites." Such witnessing to a God whose love lives in the hearts of men, must go out to this world and heal and revitalize where it can! Our message must not be hid under a bushel.

As the program continues, we will continue to feel a keen kinship with you folk at home, who, like Brother Lawrence do your tasks as an humble service to God. It is the support each one of you have given that has made possible the present program. We feel a sense of fellowship with you through all the different expressions of concern and support that come in letters, financial support of the program, and the surety of the knowledge that you are there at home and that your spirit has not changed. May our service give expression to the best and highest of Godly truth, love, and beauty that you would have it give.

In fellowship,
Esko Loewen

SENIOR DEPARTMENT

No. 2 of Series on Mennonite Principles Based on Booklet "Our Mennonite Heritage" by E. Yoder

OUR NON-RESISTANT HERITAGE, ITS BASIS, MEANING AND IMPLICATION

I. Worship Service:

1. Songs: "O Holy Spirit, enter in," No. 546; "I can hear my Savior calling," No. 500. 2. Reading of Matt. 5:38-48, prayer, and leader's remarks. 3. Special music. 4. Offering for relief.

II. Leader's Introduction:

The world today sorely needs the lesson of Christian brotherhood. The very needs of the world cry out for the love and uplifting that only a brotherly heart can and will give. There is the need for food, clothing, and shelter, for care and sympathy in the lives of many. These needs will not be met by those who wield weapons of destruction but only by those who have the heart and mind of a brother toward these unfortunate ones.

There is the need for love and understanding and sympathy which is just as urgent between individuals often as it is between the warring nations. How will the seemingly insurmountable problems of enmity and hatred and jealousy ever be solved? Jesus knew the way out: "Love your enemies, pray for them that persecute you, that ye may be sons of your Father which is in heaven."

It will take sincere consecration to follow this path in the world as it is today. But it is the only way which offers hope; it is the way of the cross, but also the way of victory and glory.

III. Suggested Topics for Short Talks:

1. Bible Teaching on Love, Peace, and Non-resistance
2. Teaching in Relation to War and Military Service
3. History of Non-resistance in Europe
4. History of Non-resistance in America
5. Non-resistance as a Way of Life in Other Areas

IV. For Discussion:

1. What relation is there between non-resistance and being peace-makers? 2. What difference is there between biblical non-resistance and intellectual pacifism? 3. How does our church express its policy of non-resistance through the C.P.S. program? (See foreward in booklet on cover pages.)

V. Facts for Study:

Our fathers held that the church was a voluntary organization, composed of those of a regenerated heart. Political force could not dictate in matters of religious faith. The Church was not to be governed by the state. The Bible was the sole source of faith and practice.

The New Testament taught them to love even their enemies and so it was wrong to take life, not only as an individual, but also by military force and by judicial process. For the sake of maintaining freedom from military service many of our fathers were willing to suffer loss of porperty and to migrate from their homeland into another country. Renewed emphasis is placed on this priniciple in these days when destructive warfare puts the challenge to our church. Through the work in the Civilian Public Serivce camps our church tries to testify of the Christian way of living. The opportunity to give constructive, Christlike service is offered to some of our men in the mental hospitals, and there will be open doors for relief and recontruction work.

VI. Illustration:

Love Conquered

The story is told of a young Chrsitian woman who, during the Armenian atrocities, was pursued with her brother by a Turkish soldier. The brother was killed before his sister's eyes. She escaped. Later on, being a nurse, she was forced to work in a military hospital. Into the ward one day was brought this Turkish soldier who had killed her brother. She recognized him. He was very ill, and slight neglect on her part would have been all that was necessary to insure his death. The young woman describes the struggle that ensued. The old Adam called, "Revenge!" The New Christ cried, "Love!" Love conquered. She nursed the Turkish soldier as carefully as she did any patient. One day he recognized her. Unable to restrain his curiosity, he asked her why she had not let him die. She replied, "I am a follower of Him who said, 'Love your enemies and do them good.' " The soldier was silent for a time. At last he spoke, "If that is your religion, I want it, too."

VII. Food for Thought:

What does it mean to be "peace-makers" in our day?

INTERMEDIATE DEPARTMENT

MAKING OUR VACATION DAYS COUNT FOR CHRIST

Prelude: "Jesus Saviour Pilot Me."

Songs: "Work for the Night is Coming," "In Our Work and in Our Play."

Scripture: Rom. 12:1-18, Matt. 6:24; Luke 16:13; Rom. 7:6.

Prayer.

Aim of Meeting: To help boys and girls value all of their time for Christ and to realize without Christ we cannot do anything useful and noble.

Topics for Short Talks: "In What Ways Can We Spend our Vacation Days Profitably At Home?" "What Does It Mean To Follow Christ In Our Work And In Our Play?" "Creating A Spirit Of Helpfulness In Our Spare Time."

Leader's Introduction:

In studying the life of Jesus we find that Jesus daily lived to please His heavenly Father and that He was so busy that He didn't even have a place to sleep. Services which Jesus rendered and which we too can render are: Comforting the weary and brokenhearted, feeding the hungry, helping the sick, and spreading the gospel. The manner in which a person spends his leisure time has a great effect upon his personality and character. We should use the opportunities we have for enriching our personalities and carrying out God's plans for our lives just as Jesus did in prayer and in service to humanity.

We can live for Christ and make our vacation days count whether we are at home or in a summer camp. God always needs people who are living according to his laws in their various occupations, such as producing and distributing food, clothing, and shelter, and serving others to advance His Kingdom in their every-day tasks.

Some of the ways that we may be of service are: Making surprise gifts for the boys from our church who are in the army, Civilian Public Service camps; helping with the work for migrants; China relief; work for Christian refugees, and cooperating with the program of Mennonite war relief.

Offertory—Instrumental Solo

Chorus: "Let The Beauty of Jesus Be Seen In Me"

Prayer points: 1. Ask God to help you use your play and work time in such a way this summer that you will become stronger and more effective Christians. 2. Pray God to help you use your time to become better citizens.

—The above program outline was prepared by Ruth E. Harms of Wichita, Kansas.

JUNIOR DEPARTMENT

GROWING IN SERVICE

Ephesians 6:5-8

We know from experience that Juniors do not require much persuasion to enter into service activities, such activities are the natural outcome of their own joyous Christian lives. Sometimes, however, they need to be shown that their service should not be seasonable or spasmodic, but should continue throughout the year, whenever and wherever the need exists.

WHAT ONE JUNIOR SOCIETY DID

A Junior society in Illinois decided to go at the matter of service very definitely, not satisfied with doing one or two things as they might arise at certain times in the year, such as Thanksgiving and Christmas.

They decided to do Monthly Service, that is, for every month they put down a list of things, two or three that could be done that month. They started with January and went right down through the year. They had almost thirty different items listed, and they accomplished them all.

Among the things they did for the church were these: (a) planted and cared for flower beds at the church, (b) bought a new velvet communion cloth, (c) bought several religious pictures for S.S. classrooms. For Mission: (a) a fund for every missionary project the church was carrying on, (b) sent toys to boys and girls to a church in Mexico, (c) took a special offering on C.E. Day for foreign work, and next they promoted a Bible reading contest.

Now which of these things could your society not do?

WHAT I CAN DO

In wartime not so many people are out of work, but there are still people who are sick and lonely. There are sick and shut-in boys and girls who would enjoy letters, scrapbooks, toys (some Juniors make scrapbooks out of old Christmas cards). There are people who would like to be visited or to have a Junior hymn serenade. As war goes on more children overseas lose their homes and parents have to live in refugee centers. Sometimes these centers are cold camps, old and unheated buildings. There children are often hungry and miserable. Juniors could easily raise money to be sent to buy food; Juniors could collect clothing.

Whatever Juniors find to do to help others they will find joy in service, growing happier as their service grows.

THE QUESTION BEE

1. How can we be building a home for eternity, while we are yet here on earth? 2. Why are we happy when we serve? 3. Why are the smallest deeds of kindness often the most appreciated? 4. For whom should we pray?

The Prayer List

Dear God and Father of Mankind, help me to grow daily in faithful service to Thee and my fellow men. May I be great enough that I may become humble, so that I may serve my fellow men. Remove all hate from my heart, because I know that would slow up my growth. I pray that I may remain unselfish and give freely when I have in abundance that which thou hast given me. Amen.

MEDITATIONS OF A YOUNG BRIDE

By Arletta Christman Harvey

Come now, my dear, and we shall dream anew,
For you and Love, and I we three
Have plans to make;
Those other dreams belong to yesterday!
Today all things are new!
Our married love, our little house,
These lovely things to start our home,
Are but the answers to the dreams goneby!

Ah, Love—the joy of this would be bewildering
If it were not for God and thee.
So, in our home's tomorrow
We shall not plan alone;
Thou, Love, must be its very heart,
And God shall be for e'er enthroned!
Within its doors, a refuge at the close of day,
Where we are understood and feel no fear,

Where we shall know companionship,
And all the joy of common, little homey things:
A table simply spread,
Our well-earned daily bread,
A bowl of flowers and a book to read,
The restfulness of order, and always there
The freedom to be just ourselves.

Then, what we are, my dear,
To that let us be true;
We shall not always think the same,
Need not agree—except in fairness and in truth;
But ne'er shall darkness fall upon
Our hearts' misunderstanding,
For in our love let each one find his best!

Deep happiness we find in saying this—
"Our home . . . our love,"
And, if we worthy be, O God,
Please let us say, "Our children," too some, day.
'Twould make our home complete
In love and never ending gratitude to thee!

OUR CONTRIBUTORS

Brother W. F. Unruh, former missionary to India is now pastor of the West Zion Mennonite Church, Moundridge, Kansas. This church has adopted the 100 per cent subscription plan. The article "A Good Reason" has been printed a second time because of mistakes that crept into the first printing. It truly gives a very good reason for reading our church papers.

Ruth Eymann gave some devotional messages for the worship period of a meeting of the Worth While Circle of the First Mennonite Church, Reedley, California. Later she was asked to give them at a mother-daughter banquet. Then she was asked to submit a copy for possible publication in The Mennonite. Read them at the beginning of each day and be inspired.

Esko Loewen is the writer of the letter head "From One In C.P.S." This letter was written for the Women's Mission Society of the Bethel College Mennonite Church, North Newton, Kansas, and read at one of its meetings. Brother Loewen has been on the staff of the M.C.C. office at Akron, Pa., for nearly a year. He serves as editor of the M.C.C. News Letter. He also helps with the gardening and washing for the staff. Sometimes he helps pack clothes for relief in the clothing depot. He is a graduate of Bethel College.

Erland Waltner is pastor of the Bethel Mennonite Church, Mountain Lake, Minnesota. This past year he served as President of the Northern District Conference. He belongs to the Sunday School committee of the Board of Education of which he is a member. Brother Waltner is a graduate of Biblical Seminary, New York, and has traveled in Europe and Palestine.

Lloyd L. Ramseyer gave the address "Foundations For Tomorrow" as the commencement address at Bethel College this spring. He is the President of Bluffton College and an ordained minister.

Jacob Goering is Educational Director of the Lapine, Oregon, C.P.S. Camp. He is a brother to Erwin Goering, Director of the Camino, California, camp. Brother Goering is a graduate of Bethel College

"LOVE SUFFERETH LONG, AND IS KIND"

LOVE must give; yea, LOVE must give itself. LOVE is not a go-getter; LOVE is a go-giver. There is no cajoling, no coercing, no coaxing here—it is the forthright nature of LOVE that it is boundlessly active in self-giving. . . Whatever else Calvary may or may not signify, it is the one dreadful and terrible symbol that bleeds forth that suffering love in the universe which must give itself to the uttermost—even unto death. W. Robertson Nicoll used to quote the words of the German thinker, "If I were God, the sorrows of the world would break my heart." The Christian editor and preacher replied, "He knew not what he said. The sorrows of the world did break the Heart of hearts."

Thoughts of Devotions

Lord, help me live my life that all may see
The fruitfulness of living close to Thee.

To make my faith so real, so glad a thing
That others to Thy knowledge it may bring;
A faith so vital, loyal and benign
That in my face its loveliness may shine.

Help me to show the wonder and delight,
That come from walking in Thy holy sight
That earth's most precious joys can never be
Compared with just one hour of knowing Thee.

Grant me affection that shall so enfold
My fellow creatures in its gentle hold,
That prejudice of color, race or creed,
Shall never blind my eyes to human need.

Lord, help me live my faith that all may see
The pricelessness of being one with Thee.

By Nettie Ramsey.

A GOOD REASON

A good reason why The Mennonite should be read in every home is because it aids in bringing our thoughts into line with the thinking of Christ. The Apostle Paul speaks of "bringing every thought into captivity to the obedience of Christ" (II Cor. 10:5). The Bible is, of course, the body of literature pre-eminently qualified to help us think God's thoughts after Him, and for that reason should be read every day. A careful examination of our church paper will reveal how thoroughly it is colored by the "obedience to Christ." It will also be found to be of great aid in "bringing every thought. . . to the obedience of Christ." I feel that the church which brings The Mennonite into every home of the congregation is thereby doing a great deal to Christianize life among us and about us.

CIVILIAN PUBLIC SERVICE

C.P.S. Candidates for Service in China

Government authorization for a foreign service unit in China has been secured. A unit of seventy men under the over all administration of the American Friends Service Committee will train and leave for China in four separate groups within a six or eight months period.

The Mennonite representative of the first group of the China unit will be Robert S. Kreider, former C.P.S. Educational Secretary. Other candidates from M.C.C. camps for a later group of the China unit are Irvin B. Horst of Grottoes, Va., Melvin Rensberger of Beltsville, Md., and James Rineer, Methodist, at North Fork, California.

Camp Briefs

Brother Henry A. Fast, General Director, is on a prolonged tour of far-western camps....

Eight men have been detached to the State College, East Lansing, Michigan, for training in dairy herd testing....

General Lewis B. Hershey addressed the third C.P.S. Administrator's School....

A government-operated C.P.S. camp at Mancos, Colorado, will open on July 1. The camp will serve chiefly the men who are not members of historic peace churches, though volunteers from any camp can be transferred to Mancos....

Brother Elmer Ediger, former Educational Director at Weeping Water, Nebraska, is now Educational Secretary of the Mennonite C.P.S. program and is stationed at the Akron, Pa., office....

Foundations for Tomorrow

evil of the day as an opportunity to do good? After all, the darker the night the more brightly a light shines. One person has said, "When the world is at its worst, Christians ought to be at their best," while another says, "The days are evil, but this gives you your chance."

Rather than despairing let us face the future and see what our assets are, what we have at hand that we might use to build a foundation for a better world, and in what areas we must find better materials than those that went into the foundations of past decades. Science is ready to make its contribution. There have been rapid advances in science which can at will be turned to the benefit of man. Chemists have given us a wide variety of coal tar derivatives, one of the most important being the sulphanilamides which have gone far to take the danger out of various diseases. Vitamin concentrates have made it possible to provide enough vitamins for everyone without depending upon natural resources. Synthetics have freed us from limited supplies of natural resources, and will free us from additional ones. Plastics may bring in a new era of construction after the war. So numerous have been the discoveries of chemists from seemingly unimportant things that the age before us may be the age of coal tar, soy beans, and peanuts for the large number of useful products which can be derived from them.

In the field of medicine, treatment of tuberculosis, new advances in surgery, increased use of vaccines, have further reduced the physical dangers and increased the potential happiness of life.

Engineering has made great strides in producing new machines to do our work. These have provided us with greatly increased power, new slaves to work for us and to make it possible for all to have plenty. "It would take eight million galley slaves to propel the Queen Mary. A modern locomotive pulls as much as could 25,000 straining men. The aircraft carrier Lexington produced power equivalent to the hand labor of all the ablebodied citizens of the United States in Thomas Jefferson's day. A century ago it took three hours of a farmer's time to raise a bushel of wheat; now it takes less than ten minutes." (A. H. Compton) For the first time in the history of the race, freedom from want is possible. But in the midst of potential plenty, we have millions starving while the genius of science is turned to destruction. Science has produced the possibility of freedom from many kinds of fear. There are many diseases which man need no longer fear; he no longer fears many of the elements because he has learned to understand them. Yet in the midst of ways to reduce fear, millions live in the greatest fear yet known to mankind; they cower in caves and dig holes in the ground to get away from man's greatest enemy, man himself, who, instead of using the discoveries of science to the benefit of man, has turned them against his brother, and he himself must hide from the light for fear of what brother will do to him.

Science can provide means to achieve ends; it cannot provide the ends. Science itself has no conscience. The great lack of our time has been a lack of social organization. It has been a lack of ability to get along with our fellowmen. A fitting epitaph for this generation might be, "They conquered the forces of nature, but were destroyed by the forces of human nature."

(To Be Concluded)

It is the heart and not the brain that to the highest doth attain.

We are saved by His atonement, not by our attainment.

—Woodland Mennonite Church, Warroad, Minnesota: Revival meetings were held from May 16-21, with Rev. John Bartel of the Immanuel Mennonite Church, Delft, Minnesota, as the speaker. Rev. and Mrs. Arthur Ortoman attended the district conference at Mountain Lake.

—Worry: "Prayer is an acknowledgment of faith. Worry is the denial of faith. Prayer is putting my hand in God's, trusting to His loving guidance. Worry is withdrawing my hand, and denying His power to lead me. Prayer leads through the door of faith into the presence of God. Worry leads through the door of anxiety into the darkness and loneliness and discouragement. If prayer rules life, victory results." The above quotation is one taken from a Bible belonging to Mrs. U. S. Stauffer, a daughter of the late Rev. A. B. Shelly.

—Rev. A. J. Neuenschwander in speaking of C.P.S. camp support says in his bulletin: "Every congregation in the General Conference is asked to contribute to this cause whether they have many, few, or no members in these camps. The spirit of brotherhood would vanish if only those churches should contribute that have men in these camps. In the spirit of a true Christian fellowship let us contribute to this worthy cause."

—Ernest J. Bohn writes, "We have been at Souderton for twelve years. We have now resigned to take charge of the Mennonite Church at Middlebury, Indiana, which is in both my wife's and my own home community. We will live on my father's farm, operating it while I serve the Middlebury congregation. We have done this for the sake of our children whom we have long desired to have live in a rural environment and have the advantages of farm life. The opportunity has come to us this spring so we are taking it. We will leave Souderton about August 15. I might add that we have four daughters and three sons. This church will be in the Central Conference of Illinois Mennonites, but at present we plan to keep our membership with the General Conference.... We will of course greatly regret leaving the happy relationship we have enjoyed at Souderton and our many friends here, but we feel that for the sake of the family we should make the move."

TRANSFORMATION

Our Mennonite history books tell us how the Mennonites transformed useless swamp land in Prussia into fruitful acres. We have heard how Japanese have been want to settle in desert areas, into which others cared not to move, and have made them blossom. The other day a girl who works in the Salt Lake valley in Utah exclaimed about the wonders that the Mormons have worked in that once desolate valley.

Such transformations are inspiring. We like to see the bad converted into the good. Knowing that such things are possible fills us with hope.

Such transformation is also possible with criticism. Too often criticism hurts. It should always help. When it is presented to us it frequently appears hard and unproductive of good. Left unused by the recipient it remains just as received. Plowed up with the thought that "all things work together for good to those who love God" it can yield hundredfold. Paul voiced a thoroughly Christian truth in the words quoted. The Christian, who is a transformed being himself, has within Him the God-given power to transform bad into good through the grace of God. Hence criticism can be to him another bumper crop of insights.

John the Baptist said, "Repent." Jesus told men to repent. How often are we mindful of the necessity of repentance. Too often we err on blindly in unrighteousness. We make little or no effort to see what is wrong with us. Yet we know that in the light of God we are great sinners.

Here is where criticism can help us. "Where there is smoke there is fire." This may not always be true, but it is generally. Criticism can make us conscious of our failures and lead us into the road of repentance. We are helped to repentance when we remember that the critic does not even know the worst in us. As we dig into ourselves we see that there is plenty to be changed. We learn a much-needed lesson, get closer to God, and into better harmony with our fellow-men.

Don't ignore criticism. Use it. Let God help you to make all things work together for good.—rw.

Mennonite Junior Quarterly

The Mennonite Junior Quarterly is a new General Conference publication. The first complete copies will be issued for the October Quarter of this year.

However, sample copies, containing two complete lessons, have been prepared and are being mailed to all General Conference Sunday Schools, with the request that they be carefully examined by the S. S. officers and teachers, and used by the teachers of the Junior classes in the preparation of these particular lessons. In this way both officers and teachers will have opportunity to become acquainted with the Mennonite Junior Quarterly and know what it is like.

FEATURES AND OBJECTIVES OF THIS QUARTERLY

1. It will be Christ-Centered. Its supreme objective will be: (a) To increase the student's knowledge and appreciation of Jesus' personality and mission, (b) To lead them to Him and to induce them to accept Him as their personal Savior.

2. It will be Mennonite in tone. The aim will be to weave into the lessons the main teachings of the Mennonite church and to present in picture and story form our mission fields and missionaries, our work of relief, etc.

3. Bible pictures and other pictures will be used to impress important points and lesson truths.

4. Attractive memory work and practical projects will be featured.

5. Excellent readability will be assured through the use of large type and by running the lines across the page as is done in school and story books.

6. The uniform lesson text will be used. This will help to foster unity in the Sunday School and enable parents and children to study the lesson together in the home.

The Board of Education and the Board of Publication are planning to produce a complete series of our own lesson helps covering all age groups from the Primary to the Adult section. In order to carry these plans through successfully, the Sunday Schools of our conference must give their united support to these effects. If all of our Sunday Schools

PUBLIC SERVICE IN RUSSIA

Service During World War I (Part II)

A. Forestry Service

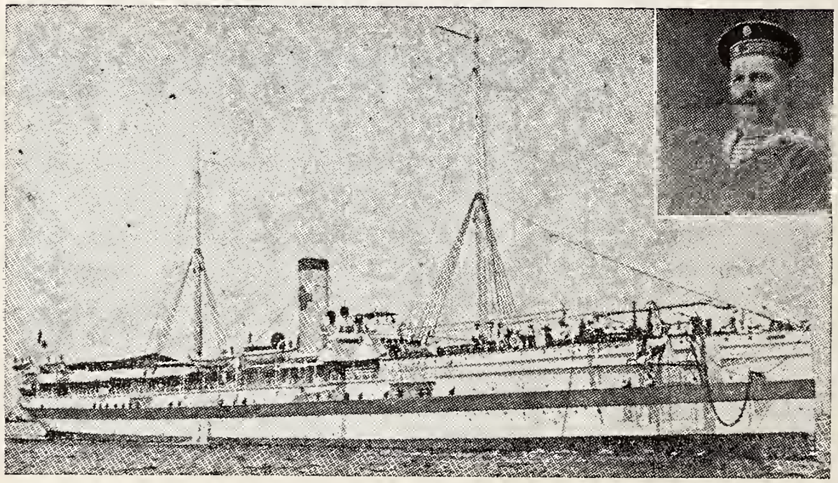
During the World War forestry service was continued as previously described. However, the work was greatly enlarged and extended. The Mennonite draftees served not only in the original camps of southern Russia but were scattered throughout all of Russia, especially, in the northern national forests. In these remote forests and in other sparsely populated areas the work was especially difficult. These draftees were lone rangers in the truest sense of the word. It was especially hard for those men had to leave a wife and several children. Whenever they lived together in groups life was more pleasant for them because they could have more contact with their homes, and ministers could come to visit them.

Roadbuilding in the Crimea in 1915



Instead of going into the forestry service, many of the Russian Mennonites went into the Sanitation Service. The ship above, the "Aequator," was used on the Black Sea by the Russian Red Cross. A sister ship, the "Portugal," was torpoedoed by an enemy submarine in March, 1916. Mennonites served on both ships. After the latter ship was sunk, the "Aequator" was painted gray, and the Mennonites were compelled to change from Red Cross to sailor uniforms. The man shown in sailor uniform served on the ship shown above.

In addition to the activities described in the preceding article forestry service at this time consisted in substituting for rangers who had been drafted, guarding against thievery, felling trees, and operating saw mills. Some units of draftees were engaged in road construction.

Whenever we meet any of these men who have served in these capacities we find that they can relate of great sacrifices and hardships they have experienced. There are reports that a few of the men serving in remote places actually starved to death because food could not be gotten to them. But not only dark reminiscences lurk in the memories of those who thus served in the forestry service. It is always interesting to listen to a group of ex-service men exchange experiences. It seems the gloomy phases of this work are forgotten, and only the bright angles remain. Favorite topics seem to be peculiar incidents of camp life as well as characteristics of campees. On the whole the men seem to have enjoyed good meals with "Mennonite flavors" appearing frequently on the menu, such as "Zwieback," "Ploomemose," and "Borshtsh."

B. Hospital or Sanitary Service

The large number of men in forestry service during the World War which far exceeded any previous number was less than half of the Mennonite men in civilian public service. A new branch of service had developed and expanded rapidly.

We have seen that, during the Crimean and Russo-Turkish Wars, the Mennonites spontaneously hospitalized thousands of wounded soldiers. During the Russo-Japanese War (1904) the Mennonites brought greater sacrifices than ever before. Hundreds of thousands of rubles and trainloads of products, clothing, linens, and bandages were contributed to relieve suffering. It was along this line that a new field of service developed. Mennonites volunteered to go to the front line of fighting as hospital workers to care for the wounded. Of this comparatively small number a doctor and several others lost their lives.

These Russian Mennonites served in the Sanitation Service (similar to the Red Cross service) provided for them by Russia in the first World War. They were in charge of a military train which carried wounded Russian soldiers from the front to the interior. The train was captured by the Germans.

When the World War broke out this line of work was taken up again and so extended that at the end of the war it surpassed the forestry service. Besides the Red Cross, Russia had a number of large civilian organizations to take care of the war sufferers and wounded soldiers. It was in collaboration with these organizations that the Mennonites organized and developed extensive projects in which they continued the above described work on a much larger scale. The centers of Mennonite hospital work were in Moscow and Charkov. Here they had their headquarters and hospitals with thousands of young men taking care of the wounded. The latter were brought here by Mennonite-manned hospital trains which brought the wounded direct from the battle fields. In the Caucasus at the Turkish front they were running a mechanized hospital unit. In the Black Sea they manned a hospital ship which was sunk. Many of these young men frequently risked their lives to save others, and a number lost their lives in this way. The Christian heroism of some of these men is wonderfully described in a poem by P. J. Klassen, "Sanitan, Mennonite Bes Imenji." (The Unknown Mennonite Hospital Worker). In this poem the hospital worker courageously gives his life to save the lives of many wounded soldiers. (An English translation of this poem was recently published in the Mennonite Weekly Review.)

Sacrifices were made by all men in service, by those who were in the front lines rescuing their wounded fellow citizens, by those who were taking care of them in hospital trains and hospitals, as well as by those who were doing hard labor at their lonesome posts on road construction projects and in remote forests. We have seen how the latter were exposed to suffering and hardships. It should also be mentioned that many a hospital worker was in almost constant contact with one or more of the contagious diseases which swept the country as plagues during war time. According to records 125 men lost their lives as direct results of their service in connection with the war. Nevertheless, the C. P. S. men were willing and courageous workers serving as true and faithful Samaritans.

In the beginning of 1917 when the Russian Revolution broke out the number of draftees and the contributions of the home churches to support this work had grown to enormous figures. By this time one-tenth of the entire Mennonite population was drafted for Public Service, while the rest had to support this work financially. Here is a table which presents this growth.

Year	Forestry	Hospital Service	Total No.	Contributions for Support[1]
1880	500		500	70,000 Rubles
1910	1,000		1,000	334,800 Rubles
1915	2,396	3,093	5,489	872,452 Rubles
1915	5,400	5,421	10,821
End of March 1916	4,988	6,548	11,536	1,352,190 Rubles
1917			12,000[2]	2,593,696 Rubles

FOREIGN MISSIONS

P. H. RICHERT, Secretary

The Depressed Mind

The readers will all have heard and read about the depressed castes or classes in India. It is also well known that the majority of Christians come from these depressed classes. However, the question arises as to just what it means to be a member of the depressed classes. To be one of the depressed in India is much more far-reaching than merely to suffer economic injustice or social degradation. It means this, to be sure. But the worst mischief that "depression" in Indian society has done is that it has habituated the mind to act only under severe pressure. Anything reasonable, or necessary, or advisable, does not register on a depressed person's mind. But when hunger drives or a great loss is confronted, then action results. Or when somebody in authority wields the big stick, then too there is action.

Now, these depressed people become Christians. Can the mind then get away from the "depressed mentality" at once? No, it cannot. Here are some experiences that we have. A poor brother comes for a loan. He is really in want. His family does not have enough to eat. He makes high promises to pay it back then and then. But I cannot pay any attention to his promises, because experience has taught me that it is useless. So I try to think up a plan as how I will be able to put pressure on in order to get the loan back. Maybe I can give the brother some work and then subtract it from his salary, or withhold some privilege until he pays. Or if there is no hope for pressure of some kind and the brother is in desperate need, then I simply give him a part of what he asks for—and just give it to him, never expecting it back. In our boarding school we have this rule that the poorest parents pay eight cents a month fees for their child. Frequently the poor child has to walk home, ten, twenty, or even more miles to get the eight cents. That seems ridiculous that a missionary should be so cruel for eight cents. But without pressure the parents won't pay. Each child is to bring one blanket from home when the cold season comes. But children frequently have to freeze a long time before the parents act. Yet this mind, depressed and depraved, turns to Christ. Please, read my next short article on "The Marvel of Conversion."

MENNONITES and RURAL LIFE

By J. Winfield Fretz

THE BIBLE AS A RURAL BOOK

The Standard Publishing Company of Cincinnati, Ohio, has published a fascinating and instructive little book written by Ross J. Griffeth entitled The Bible and Rural Life. The 117-page booklet sells for seventy-five cents but is worth many times that price.

Bible lovers will find this a fine source of information on rural aspects of the Holy Land. Farmers especially will enjoy this study of rural life of Biblical times. They will discover that some of the serious modern problems such as farm tenancy and soil erosion are not new to their generation but were wrestled with by the farmers in Palestine centuries ago.

Geography

Ex-Governor Clifford M. Townsend of Indiana sagely comments in the introduction that "This book serves to remind us that Christian ideals and principles are a mighty bulwark against tyranny and degradation." The first chapter entitled "The Greatest Country in the World" is largely a geographic description of Palestine. With a good map at hand the ancient cities, mountains, and plains take on a new and richer meaning as one reads this delightful little book. A clearer picture of the geography and the economic conditions of the Holy Land would help many of us think more clearly and contribute more significantly to Sunday School class discussions and Bible study groups.

Other Subjects

Mention of several other of the twelve short chapter headings will indicate the timeliness of this book. "Farmers' Problems in Bible Days," "Farmers in the East and West," "The Villagers of Palestine," "Thanksgiving in Bible Days," and "Seeing Eyes and Singing Hearts." When the modern farmer discovers the problems which ancient and modern Palestinian farmers faced he will gladly confess that his own hardships are insignificant in comparison. There are some interesting little side-lights discussed such as the rural significance of Jewish religious holidays.

One may rightfully be enthusiastic about this well-written and easily-read little work. It is highly recommended for rural church libraries, and many ministers will find good sermonic material in it.

"If you're farming to make money—don't be a farmer . . . if you want to raise a family . . . if yau want to be independent, then be a farmer. If you want good solid development of virtue, be a farmer, but if you want the frills and fancies, go to the city."

Foundations For Tomorrow

By Lloyd L. Ramseyer

Our great failing has been in the field of applying what we know toward socially desirable ends. It has been in failure to develop a conscience which will prevent our doing injury to our brother. Man can have freedom from want, freedom from fear, freedom of worship, and freedom of speech, if he will so organize his social relations as to get along with his brother. That we have fear and want is not the fault of science, neither is it the fault of God. God has given us plenty with the intelligence to find the laws of the universe and by acting in accordance with them to invent machines which could bring us happiness. But instead we cower in caves because we have disregarded His laws. We must turn to the social and spiritual laws of God to find the remedy for this evil. Education alone, or science alone, cannot develop the conscience, which we need to set goals which bring human well being. That is the function of religion, and here we find the stone which must be more securely placed in the foundation of tomorrow than it was in the foundation of yesterday. This stone which the builders of yesterday rejected must become the head of the corner in our world of tomorrow if it is to be a better world.

A nation does not accept Christianity by passing resolutions or by executive degree. A nation can accept Christ only as its citizens become Christians who have faith and act upon it. If the nation of tomorrow is to be built upon the solid rock of Christianity, it must be through acceptance of that way of life by the individual members of our society. Our national life is but an outgrowth of our individual lives, an international conduct of a national conduct.

The first requisite for making a change in the living either of a nation or an individual is to recognize that wrong has been done. The first step in building an enduring foundation is the step of repentance. There is no chance that we will live better tomorrow than we did yesterday until we recognize that the way we have come has been the wrong way. So long as we lay the blame for our present state on the Germans, on the Japanese, or someone else, there is little likelihood of change. The first step for us as individuals and as a nation is to get down on our knees and confess that we have done wrong and ask God to forgive both our conscious and unconscious sins.

There is a great need today for faith. If there is any one thing lacking in our life today, it is faith. We have seen so many things crumble which we thought to be enduring that we have begun to wonder whether anything will endure. We have lost confidence in everyone and everything. We no longer trust even our friends.

If we are to build solidly we must have a certain amount of faith in ourselves. I do not mean that we should feel that we can do things of and by ourselves. I rather mean that we should have faith that we are instruments through which God can do great things. We may go too far in claiming subjugation of self. God expected us to have respect for ourselves. When he wanted to set a standard for loving others, he said we should love others as ourselves, showing that He expected that we have faith in ourselves. If we are to have faith in ourselves we must live in such a way that we, who know ourselves better than others can know us, can respect ourselves. We must also have faith in the importance of the task which we are trying to perform.

We must have faith in others. The world cannot operate successfully without one having faith in his fellowmen. One must have faith in the possibilities in man, in his ultimate worth, and the potentialities which he possesses. He must have faith in the possibilities of a future generation, otherwise he lacks incentive to work that they might have an opportunity to live and to develop.

Above all, man must have his faith in God renewed. Through faith in God, man secures faith in His creation, no matter how often he is disappointed. Through faith in God, one relies upon Him for that protection and comfort which man cannot provide. Through God one achieves freedom from fear, there is no other way in which that freedom can be fully achieved.

If man really has faith in God and in His son Jesus Christ, he will also have faith in what God teaches. One hears church leaders these days say that certain sayings of Jesus are not practical, that they are fine ideals, but they just can't be lived in a world such as ours. Sometimes men rationalize their lack of faith by saying that these sayings were not meant for our day, but for some perfect day in the future. When Jesus came down from the Mount the people marveled at what he had taught them. People still marvel, but they do not have the faith to follow. They want to see all the way through; they want complete assurance that the way of love which Jesus taught will work. If we have real faith we will try that way without complete assurance of its success, for we will have faith that Jesus would not have taught that way had it not been best.

To too many faith means only that they should rely on God to protect them from harm and danger, to answer their prayers, and to keep them from evil. Faith should also mean the faith to dare, to launch out, to conquer. It should be faith such as Abraham had who, "when he was called. . .went out, not knowing whither he went." We will never get very far in putting Jesus' way of life into actual practice in the world until we have complete faith in the way that he taught, and then are willing to go out, not always knowing just where it is going to take us.

Following the way of life which Jesus taught means that we accept some absolute standards of conduct. I feel that much of the trouble which has come upon us has been due to the discard of absolute standards and the acceptance instead of a pragmatic or experimental set of standards. I am confident that the laws of God will stand experiment, that they will work, that they are the laws of the universe. Judged by proper criteria and subjected to long time experiment they will work. However, for any individual to discard the laws as they are and to launch out on his own set of experiments is dangerous. By the time he discovers that the laws themselves should have been followed, his experimentation has already brought grief to himself and those about him. Furthermore, as soon as one discards absolute standards of conduct and accepts the experimentalist's procedure, he can rationalize any type of conduct which his desires or his passions may dictate. We need a return to the discipline which comes from the acceptance of the absolute standards which God gave us. We need to hear again the voice of God from Mt. Sinai say "thou shalt" and "thou shalt not," and that voice speaking to the multitude on the Mount, gentle but firm, "Ye have heard that it hath been said. . .but I say unto you." The return to these standards would alone do much to remedy the ills of the past and to place a firm foundation under the world of tomorrow.

We have not the time nor the ability to enumerate all of the laws of God as they apply to our everyday lives. There are three, however, each of which has many implications, which should be built into that foundation for tomorrow and which would change remarkably the individual, national, and world situation of our new day. One of these is the "law of the vine." It is the law which states that man is not sufficient unto himself but must keep his contact with God in order to have strength and ability. It is the necessity for followers of Christ to have His spirit, if they would have power. Although we have called ourselves a Christian nation, we have largely discarded that law; we have made our plans with little consultation as to whether these plans correspond with the plan of God. We have given little attention to regeneration, either of ourselves or of our nation.

Another far reaching law is the law of love. Someone says that this materialistic world paid little attention when told that hate is bad for one's soul, but began to give heed when told that hate causes stomach ulcers. Love is at the foundation of Christianity. It is far-reaching in its possible applications. When one begins to discover how far-reaching it is, he begins to understand what Jesus meant when he said that all the law and the prophets hinged upon love for God and love for our fellowmen. It has implications for wages, rents, working conditions, charity, immigration, race relations, tariffs, and even control of soil erosion. It is hard to think of any relationship of life to which this law would not apply. If men followed this law, we would we would have freedom from fear of other people's acts for no one would harm his brother, freedom of speech and of worship for we would respect the ideas and loyalties of others, and we would have freedom from want in so far as want is due to the selfishness of our fellowmen.

Another law of God which would change our national and personal living is the law of the supremacy of the spiritual over the physical. One sees oft repeated evidences of the fact that physical desire has been given first place in the lives of many people. The law of God would put spiritual values first. I have little doubt that much of our trouble comes from the priority which so many have given to satisfaction of the appetite. Were this law placed in our foundation, drunkeness, with all its attendant evils, would vanish. Broken homes would in large measure be reunited. Many diseases would no longer claim their annual harvest of victims. Men would have clear heads and pure hearts to attack the problems of tomorrow.

We need all of the excellence of political organization which human intelligence can devise. We need the best things which science can invent and manufacture. We have need for the genius of the engineers. Sociologists and economists still must study the current trends and the problems of a complicated society. Education must still teach the accumulated experiences of past generations to the children of the future. Yet without the rock of Christ in the foundation of society, all these lack direction and motive, and there is no assurance that they will be used to the good of man. With faith in God and His teaching, by disciplining ourselves by His absolute standards of conduct, with the spirit of Christ in us, and his love motivating all that we do, science and education will be used for the benefit of man. Then strife between men will end. Then we will be ready for a greater war, a war in which intelligent and consecrated men of all races and nations, German and English, American and Italian, Japanese and Chinese, Russian and Spanish can unite against the forces of evil, against disease and death, unite in conquering space and time, and in making the best possible use of the resources which God has given us.

A Christian college, such as this, is one of the best equipped organizations to assist in building the foundation for tomorrow's world. It will take learning, intelligence, appreciation of the arts, science, mathematics, sociology, engineering, all of the arts and sciences, built into this foundation. Any college has these. But the Christian college alone combines these with faith in God, with discipline by the absolute laws of God. A college like this combines these arts, sciences, and skills with the love of God which includes love for our fellowmen, which gives aim and direction and conscience to anything which the educated individual will do. Without that sense of aim and direction, without that Christian conscience, we will again be building upon the sand. God grant that institutions like Bethel College may be strengthened so that they may play an important part in building the foundation for tomorrow.

You, graduates of this college, have an important part to play in this task. The college can only function as it functions through individuals, especially through the lives of its graduates. It is your privilege to have this equipment for life, an education in the arts and sciences, a mind which has been developed and taught in the technique of solving problems, a conscience guided by the laws of God, and a will motivated by the objectives gained through faith in his teaching. It is for you to make use of your unique opportunity in what you do as an individual and through your influence on others. Some of you may acquire places of leadership, which will give you an opportunity to influence large groups of people. Others may find their chief outlet of usefulness in influencing a few, or perhaps in rearing children who have this balanced concept of life. It is not so much how big a task you perform as the quality of the work which you do. For an alumnus of an institution to be a senator might be a disgrace rather than an honor to that institution, depending on the quality of leadership exhibited in the task which he had accepted. If the quality of the contribution is right, the importance of the positions to which we may fall heir need not be our major concern.

Eight hundred fifty years ago Peter the Hermit organized a crusade of physical force to capture the tomb of Christ from the heathen Turk. We need a new crusade today, a spiritual crusade, to capture the lives and souls of men and women so that they may be given confidence and purpose by a deep faith in a living Christ. Then the arts and sciences will be used for the welfare of man, for they will be given direction by a Christian conscience. Then we may indeed have peace and the four freedoms. Then our foundation will not be of sand, but of enduring rock. You graduates are soldiers trained for just such a crusade. May God strengthen you in your task.

will loyally use our conference lessons helps as much as possible, success in this undertaking can be achieved. This is clearly demonstrated in the case of the S.S. Lektionen and the Christian S.S. Quarterly. May the Mennonite Junior Quarterly receive the same welcome in our Sunday Schools as has been given to the two just mentioned. In unity there is strength.

IF YOU WOULD BE A MASTER

If you would be a master, then master self;
Rule well your spirit; overcome your passion;
Conquer pride by humility, and by love
Overcome hate; and yield not to vain fashion.
If to adorn the body leaves the soul poor,
And needy, and shriveled, and dwarfed, and stinted,
Then be natural; be yourself, not another;
Be not a make-believe, or a dumb mummy;
Be as pure gold—pure as the Lord has minted,
Blessing with your value your fellow-brother.

If you would be a master, master habit,
Lest by habit you are slavishly mastered;
Be a victor over what would conquer you;
Be sound within and not outwardly plastered.
Think not to win by defeating someone else,
And deceiving your fellowmen, you fool God.
You but lay the foundation for your failure,
And lay bare your soul for the chastening rod.

If you would be a master, then foster love;
Let sunshine into your heart; grow sweet flowers;
Sow good seed; cultivate good thoughts, and let your
Days be filled with well-employed hours.
Think not to win by defeating someone else,
Or build your life on the ruin of another;
But you will grow, and glow, and prosper, and be
Your best just as you bless and help your brother.

If you would be a master, then be Christlike;
Be gentle, full of compassion, and be kind;
Be considerate. Go about doing good;
Be feet to the helpless and eyes to the blind;
Be studious, be watchful, and be prayerful;
Let the goodness of God fill your heart and soul;
Wreathe your own laurels by crowning other lives.
Leave a record you'll not be ashamed to meet
Nor shrink to answer at the call of the roll
When your little bark in God's haven arrives.

A TERRIBLE MISTAKE

By L. L. Wightman

It was on a summer evening that Mary was first aware of the arrival of Kathleen Martin. She had heard much about this girl from the city who was reputed to be of great social standing, and her hopes of meeting Kathleen seemed about to be realized. It was the holiday season late in the summer just previous to the opening of schools and colleges. The long deferred visit which Kathleen had promised her Aunt Jane Blake had become an actual fact, and Kathleen was really in the little country village.

Now it happened that Mary lived next door to Mrs. Blake, so as a matter of sequence she could expect to meet Kathleen sooner or later during the week of her visit. And as fortune would have it, she met her the very first night, and was enraptured with the girl from the city. Of course, you know Mary tried to be her very best, so much so that she didn't act at all natural.

That night as Mary lay awake, her mind was busy thinking of the girl she had met. Visions of her floated before her eyes, and Mary determined to make the most of her acquaintance, even to aping Kathleen.

The next morning Mary found it necessary to go down town on several errands, none of which was burdensome. There was some thread to get at one place, and netting at another, and two more small items elsewhere. As she was about to start for home, a cheery voice hailed her from behind.

"Shopping bright and early, aren't you?" asked Kathleen, who had just stepped from her roadster. "I'm getting the fresh morning air, also."

"Yes," replied Mary. "I had a few articles I found it necessary to come after. Beautiful morning, isn't it?"

Just then she saw Mrs. Morgan approaching with her arms loaded down with bundles. Mrs. Morgan lived several houses beyond Mary, and oftentimes Mary had assisted her with her bundles. But this morning it would not do to act too familiar. She was chumming with a society girl who would not condescend to notice anyone as common as Mrs. Morgan. So Mary made up her mind that she would skillfully turn her back on Mrs. Morgan, and thus avoid her. What would Kathleen think of her if she failed to rise above common people? She knew that if Kathleen had not been standing there, she would have offered to assist Mrs. Morgan as always. The next moment she was left dumbfounded and ashamed as well as terribly surprised.

"Why, Mrs. Morgan," exclaimed Kathleen, "you're just the person I want. Aunt Jane wishes to see you, and if you'll just pile your bundles in my car, I will take you home and then bring you back to Aunt Jane's home. Good-by, Mary. I'll see you some other time."

And with that Kathleen helped the old lady in the car. Mary traced her steps homeward, her heart heavy with conflicting emotions. She was glad neither Kathleen nor Mrs. Morgan knew the thoughts which had taken possession of her, because now she realized what a terrible mistake she had made. Several of them, in fact. First, she had misjudged Kathleen Martin and placed her in a wrong position which Kathleen's' action had refuted. Next, she had permitted this wrong judgment to influence her own actions in a wrong attitude toward another, an action which would have hurt Mrs. Morgan's kindly nature but for Kathleen's fortunate interference. Finally, the course of action she had chosen had been condemned by the one she sought favor of.

"I have made a horrible mistake," she condemned herself, "and I'll never do it again. Hereafter, I'll be my own true self, no matter what others do or say. Knowing you have done right is more satisfactory than any favor purchased at the expense of right. It certainly was a just rebuke to me when Kathleen left me to aid Mrs. Morgan. I wonder what they would think of me if they knew exactly what I know?"

And we can leave Mary to answer her own question while we ask the same question regarding the opinions of our acquaintances.

HATING SIN

There is only one thing to do with sin —hate it. Hate it in your life. Hate it in the lives of others. The following selected illustration should encourage us:

"When the Emperor of Constantinople arrested Chrysostom, and thought of trying to make him recant, the great preacher slowly shook his head. The Emperor said to his attendants, "Put him in prison." "No," said one of them "he will be glad to go, for he delights in the presence of his God in quiet." "Well, then let us execute him," said the Emporer. "He will be glad to die," said the attendant, "for he wants to go to heaven—I heard him say so the other day. There is only one thing that can give Chrysostom pain, and that is, to make him sin; he said he was afraid of nothing but sin. If you can make him sin, you will make him unhappy." Oh, that God would make us like Chrysostom.

CARBON COPY

By Prisca Delph

The auditorium at Dean College was packed. Dale Weston, treasurer of the senior class, sat at the end of the front row of seniors on the rostrum. To the audience he was the picture of composure, a virile replica of Sir Galahad—athletic build, clean-cut, handsome features, crowned with a generous crop of auburn hair. Tonight the cowlick above the right temple, stubborn at othertimes, obeyed the stern hairdressing necessary to train out the unwelcome waves, giving Dale a dignified mature look.

While he looked at each speaker Dale's thoughts were elsewhere. True he was to receive his degree that night, but he had also received his notice from the draft board that day. The letter was still in his pocket; no one else knew about it, not even Glenna. He must come to a decision before speaking to her about it. They had planned to meet at their usual nook on the campus after the service.

Without moving his head his eyes found her in the crowd. There she sat, her golden curls almost forming a halo about her happy face. She looked delicate, but capable, a queen among women. And she had promised to be his wife, his to love, to cherish, and to protect! When they made the plans for the wedding he had something to offer. The promised position as head of the Department of Agriculture at Lakeview High had given hopes of deferment.

The speaker took his seat and another was introduced, but Dale continued his musing. Why, oh why, this war? Oh, yes, he was nonresistant, but! Well, he could take noncombatant service. Granddad would be disappointed. Still he would draw at least a small salary. With his education he should advance. Why he could soon have the college debt paid off, and the wedding need be postponed only a short while. If he went as a C. O. he would never be able to marry Glenna. With no salary for an indefinte period he would never get the debt paid. Oh, the future looked hopeless.

Of course in his home community the draft board was deferring men who were willing to do farm work. Farm work! Poor Mom, keeping house for Granddad, could not even come to see him graduate! "Help is so scarce," she had written. "We just started another brooder with a thousand chicks." So that was life on the farm? Too bad that Dad had not lived. But Dale was resolved to pay them back the money for his education some day. How Granddad ever stood the hard work all week and then was able to preach two sermons on Sunday he never could understand. Unconsciously Dale shook his head at the idea. With a start he realized what he had done.

With much effort he pulled his mind together and concentrated on the speaker. Dr. Hanson was giving the commencement address. At that very moment he was addressing the seniors. Dale was conscious enough to hear him saying something about offering the Lord a carbon copy instead of the original. He was encouraging them to make a full surrender and to allow the Lord to direct the plan for their lives to His glory. "The world is passing through a crisis, and we as Christians must do our part." He went on, "We must rise to meet the emergency with every ounce of our resources."

"Carbon copy"—Dale was off to musing again. Could it be possible that he was doing just that? Could it be that the Lord had other plans for him? If he was prepared to teach agriculture why could he not practice it? But there was Glenna, beautiful and protected, brought up in President Hammer's home. She would resent his turning to work the soil. She had promised to be his wife as a professor and not as the tiller of the soil. After listening to Dr. Hanson he could never be anything but a C. O. That much was settled for tonight! If help was so scarce, Granddad would be delighted, and Mom would be glad for the company. Yes, if Glenna did not object too strongly he would soon be helping to produce food!

The rest of the evening Dale went through the service mechanically. He rose when he was expected to and shook hands when he was congratulated. But as soon after the service as was convenient he slipped away from the crowd.

At the entrance Glenna was waiting, and together they made their way down Rainbow Trail. They spoke lightly of this and that until they reached their favorite rock and Dale had spread the blanket which he carried. Then they began to discuss more serious matters, at the same time enjoying the last evening together at their Alma Mater. The moon was shining clearly enough to be able to read large print. Dale removed the letter from his pocket. He just could not tell her.

"I'm so glad you were able to finish your education first," she said, after noting the address and date on the letterhead.

"But it looks as though it were wasted effort and money. But after hearing Dr. Hanson tonight I know that I will never be happy outside of God's will."

"We must be brave," Glenna sighed. "The world needs us so badly we must not give in to our feelings. I was thinking of the missionaries and evangelists. Their home life is often interrupted, and look at how the relief workers' homes are continually being broken up."

"I never thought of it in that way. I always took their lives for granted, since they were of their own choice."

"Yes, I too took their sacrifices for granted, but now that it is our turn and our lives are affected we must face issues as bravely as they. After all, Dale, as Christians are we not all working toward the same goal? And should we not be willing to do our part?"

As he listened a gleam of hope crossed Dale's heart. His pulse quickened. "Glenna," he asked as soon as she had finished, "Did you know that the draft board at Lakeview defers every C. O. draftee who is willing to do farm work? They consider that an adequate alternate service to our country just now."

"I think that is very considerate of them."

"My mother always enjoyed farm life, but she was reared in the country." Dale played with the letter in his hand. "Glenna, I feel it is my duty to return home to my Grandfather's farm. Mother would be glad to let us have part of the house. That is, if you would even consider being a farmer's wife," he hesitated.

"Why, Dale," she looked up at him in honest surprise, "I've already promised to be yours. That included you in all the vocations the Lord saw fit to place you. Of course," she added as an afterthought, "I am not experienced in farm home life, but I could learn."

"Glenna," Dale whispered after a short silence, "I shall spend the rest of my days in thankfulness to God for leading me to you."

THE FIFTH GOSPEL

By R. Judson Wilkins

"Fellows, can you name the five Gospels?" Mr. Sumner asked his class of Sunday-school boys.

"Five?" several voices asked inquiringly.

"Why, there are only four Gospels!" Tom Maxon exclaimed, surprised that his teacher should ask such a question.

"Yes!" a half dozen boys remarked in chorus. "Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John!"

Mr. Sumner laughed, as he explained, "Well, boys, you're right about there being only four Gospels mentioned in the Bible; but, really, there are five. The fifth is the one each of us is writing by our deeds and words. Did you ever stop to realize that? You know, someone has said that 'We are the only Bible a careless world will read,' and how true it is! There are very few unconverted men and women, boys and girls, who ever sit down and seriously read the Bible, as you know. But listen—they do read and study the lives of those who claim to believe and love God and His Word. Yes, sir, fellows! In the second book of Corinthians, third chapter, and second and third verses, the apostle Paul explains to the Corinthian Christians that 'Ye are our epistle written in our hearts, known and read of all men: forasmuch as ye are manifestly declared to be the epistle of Christ—'You understand what I'm driving at, don't you, fellows? You see, there are people that don't know Christ, although they do know about Him. They know He was patient, kind, forgiving, and loving—even to those who hated Him. They also know that we, as His followers, should act that way at all times, for we claim to be Christians, Christlike people. They aren't personally acquainted with Christ, but they hope to see Him in our lives. Therefore, it is up to you and me so to live each day that the beauty of Jesus may be seen in us, for 'Men read what we're writing, whether faithless or true; Say, what is the Gospel according to you?' "

The group of boys were unusually sobed and quiet when Mr. Sumner finished. "I didn't intend to preach to you, fellows, but perhaps you may profit by these words of admonition. Now, shall we bow our heads in prayer?" he smiled pleasantly.

Every boy in the class, as they shook their teacher's hand, and filed out of the classroom, determined to remember what they had heard concerning the fifth Gospel, for they wanted to write a Gospel of which they need never to be ashamed.

THE JUNIOR'S WORLD

By Russell L. Mast

This is written to emphasize the importance of knowing and understanding the world of the juniors whom we would teach. That we should know the Bible thoroughly and have a vital personal faith in God goes without saying. But that we should also know our juniors equally well is a fact too little recognized. It is sad to relate that many a saintly teacher has failed not because of a lack of knowledge of the things of God, but because there was not coupled with such knowledge an appreciative understanding of the juniors who were to be taught. This, of course, applies to those who work with any group of young people, but to juniors its application is imperative.

Adults need to be reminded again and again that the experiences with which they are familiar are not always the experiences which fall within the range of the comprehension of their children. It needs to be said emphatically that unless the teaching which is done actually touches the life and experience of those who are taught, such teaching will prove neither interesting nor successful. For example, we have too long confused mere words about reality with an actual awareness of reality. That is, we may teach children stories about Jesus which they can repeat back to us, which is good so far as it goes. But it is quite another thing to make those children actually aware of Jesus as the loving friend of little children. Now this is not to imply that memory work is unimportant. It does mean, however, that memory work by itself can mean absolutely nothing if what is memorized is not interpreted within the framework of the child's own experience. A boy in the intermediate age told me that for a long time he thought the second statement in the Lord's Prayer was "Howard be Thy name" instead of "hallowed be Thy name." How much reality could there have been in that boy's conception of the Lord's Prayer? Someone failed to interpret it to the boy's own world of experience.

What then is this world which we say is so utterly different from our own? Perhaps, it should be said that the "world" is the same as ours only their reaction to it is so different. God has provided them with such boundless energy which is surging through their bodies. This energy craves release. But as yet, they have not learned to control it so that it can be directed to creative and useful ends. Teachers should realize that much of this apparent restlessness is normal for developing children, and that in time they will outgrow it. It is, however, still the teacher's problem to capture this energy and redirect it. This, we repeat, is to be done by appealing to their own world of experience.

Teachers should know how to discover these experiences. The adage that children should be seen and not heard is a dangerous stumbling block for those who would understand the child's world. If you let them, children will tell you all about their world. They will show you their bicycles, roller skates, and baseball gloves. They will tell you about their pets, what they did in school, how they spent their vacation. As they tell you, their eyes fairly sparkle with enthusiasm. Woe unto that teacher who says these things are not important! Behold, this is an open door to the kingdom of the little child. Unless we enter therein we cannot lead them to that Kingdom for which we both labor and serve.

Let a teacher not only observe the children, but also seek out those books which describe their activities. That, is, books in which children are the chief characters. Furthermore there are those books which can supply biographical material. The world of the juniors is a world in which "heroes" play a major part. They are men of courage, bravery, and valor, men who have sacrificed personal fortune for the sake of a cause. What source material is to be found in the annals of missionary history! There comes to mind such names as Livingstone, Grenfell, and Schweitzer. Then there are those heroes of our own faith such as Felix Manz, or Christopher Dock "who died on his knees in prayer." But let us not despise those heroes who have exhibited bravery and courage in the fields of aviation, sport, and exploration. Of course, such material must be handled skillfully, nor should the application be too far-fetched or symbolic. A child's mind is a literal mind.

There is yet another aspect of the junior world which dare not go unmentioned. It is the group consciousness. "Gangs" and "clubs" assume an important role in the lives of that age group. I knew of a class of boys who met together with their teacher every Saturday in what they called a club meeting. They wrote their own rules which governed their relationships. Such relationships always create problems which need to be handled in a Christian way. I had the privilege of observing that class over a period of three years, and I would not hesitate to say that this was the most successful class in the Sunday School. Through that experience they learned to apply Christian principles to their group relations.

In all this it is my passionate concern that we shall be more successful in appealing religiously to our juniors. Here are laid the foundations of a vital faith in God as He is revealed in Christ. There is nothing in the world which can take the place of "growing up as a Christian," as Horace Bushnell said almost a hundred years ago. Here in the junior department they prepare themselves for that public confession of Christian faith which they make after they have been nurtured in Christian teaching and their minds are more mature. To teachers of juniors I would paraphrase some words of Jesus which I am sure does not destroy the spirit of what he said: "Except ye become as little children ye can in no wise lead them into the kingdom."

CHRIST LIVETH IN ME

By Marvin M. Eck

"I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave Himself for me." Gal. 2:20

It is very appalling that many modern day Christians, so called, no longer do experience and realize this marvelous revelation in their Christian Life. They cannot say, "Christ liveth in me," for if they would the world would brand them as liars and their own conscience would condemn them. They cannot convince themselves that Christ is living His life in and through them, let alone convincing the world. There are too many worldly things in their lives which drown out the faintest hope or desire to give this glowing testimony which God positively desires and longs to have everyone of His own to give.

"Christ liveth in me!" What does that mean? Why that means that Christ is living His very own life through my body, my intellect, my personality, my character; yes, He lives His life through my very being. When people look at a spirit-filled Christian they do not see the life of that individual, but they see Christ who dwells and lives in that tabernacle of clay. As they behold the walk and deeds of the man they see not the manifestations of that man but the manifestations of the very Christ who lives His life in the earthly tabernacle of the man who has been crucified.

"I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live, yet not I, but Christ liveth in me. . . ." We see here in the experience of the Apostle Paul the secret which enables Christ to live His life in and through us. Without this experience in our lives Christ cannot and will not live His life in us. Namely, we must be crucified with Christ; self must be surrendered, put to death. Then, and then only can Christ come in and take possession and live His life. There is not sufficient room in one tabernacle for both Christ and self. Self must be done away with if our life is to be a fragrance of the Christ-life poured out.

Paul had that wonderful experience when his self was crucified, and he knew that he had made this full surrender, the sanctification of his life. When there came to him the realization that he was alive—yes, he was alive, alive more than before—he was in a new world. Old things had passed away. Old habits and old desires were gone. "Therefore if any man be in Christ Jesus, he is a new creation: old things are passed away: behold, all things are become new." II Cor. 5:17. This was life indeed! What peace of heart, what quietness, what rest, what joy, he found in this new world into which he had entered when self was put to death. How beautiful, how abundantly fruitful his life became!

The experience, crucified with Christ, ushers in the realization that we are alive, after which comes the revelation that this new life is not our own, but the very life of Christ our Saviour, our Master, our Lord. O Christian, you who name the name of Christ, is Christ living His life in you? Are the actions and deeds of Christ manifest in your life? Does the world hear the words of Christ through you? Is your life a manifestation of the Christ-life out poured? Is the beauty of Jesus seen in you? Is Christ living in you? If so, then Paul's testimony is your testimony also, "For me to live is Christ, to die is gain." Phil. 1:21.

Effective Evangelism In The Sunday School

By H. J. Dyck

All true evangelism is based on the command of the Lord Jesus: Matt. 28: 19, 20. "Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

To evangelize means to make known the "gospel" the good news. These good news are to go out to every creature as a means of salvation.

A Poor Record

The Sunday school is a rather recently organized branch of the Christian church, whose specific object it is to reach the children and young people. We are told that over one-half of the youth of our country receives no religious instructions at all. Less than 10 per cent of the American homes have a family altar. Of the number who enroll in Protestant Sunday Schools 65 per cent cease to attend before or when they reach adolescent years. More tragic still is the realization that during the years of their attendance at Sunday school, a majority of these boys and girls never are given an opportunity to face the Lord's requirement, "Ye must be born again."

Children Neglected

As we read Matt. 10: 13-16 we are impressed with Christ's attitude toward children. As the deciples at that time refused to let the children come to the Lord Jesus, so the Church for a long time neglected to make any provision to aquaint the children with the Saviour who came to save them.

During my boyhood days in Germany, I knew of no Mennonite or other church Sunday school. However, the Lord had laid it upon the heart of individual Christians to gather children into private homes to instruct them in the word of God. One of these classes was conducted by a Luthern layman in my parental home. Coming to this country fifty years ago, we found a well organized Mennonite Sunday school.

Jesus and Children

In Matthew 18 the apostle relates a similar story of the value the Lord Jesus places upon a child. Giving his disciples an object lesson in humility, he calls a child and sets it in the midst of them saying, "Except ye be converted and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven." Mark relates this incident and adds that after having set this child in the midst of them, took him in his arms. Jesus speaks of, "these little ones which believe in me." So little ones can believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

What age child does a man take in his arms? The answer to this question determines the age of this child. Many audiences have been asked this question. The answer has usually been, "Eight years or younger."

How soon may a child be expected to make a decision for Christ? We know infants are covered by the atoning blood of our Saviour, and should they die before they reach the age of accountability, they will be received by the good Shepherd into the eternal fold. The age of accountability varies with the child. Some children can discriminate right from wrong when they are very young. The child's nature, his environment, his training, his moral capacity, all have an influence upon the age at which he becomes accountable.

Why Child Conversion
